CONCLUSION.....	22

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes Respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and respectfully requests that the Senate dismiss Article I of the Articles of Impeachment lodged against him by the House of Representatives on the ground that it fails to state any cognizable ground for impeachment. In support, Judge Porteous states as follows.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY

Article I charges that Judge Porteous deprived the public and litigants of “honest services” by failing to recuse himself from presiding as a District Court Judge in the case of Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. v. Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc., No. 93-cv-1794 (E.D. La.) (the “Lifemark case”), failing to disclose enough information about his relationship with a lawyer representing one of the parties to that litigation, and later accepting a monetary gift from that lawyer. Article I should be dismissed because it is based on a legal theory that the Supreme Court recently ruled is unconstitutionally vague because it provides no consistent or foreseeable standard of behavior for the accused. At most, the allegations in Article I describe conduct creating the appearance of impropriety, not any actual impropriety. Appearance of impropriety is a poorly-defined standard, applied inconsistently and sometimes even arbitrarily in judicial discipline proceedings, which has never, until now, been urged as impeachable conduct in and of itself. Article I should, therefore, be dismissed in its entirety.

Article I alleges that Judge Porteous, “while a federal judge,”¹ deprived the public and the litigants in the Lifemark case of his “honest services” by (a) denying a motion for recusal while failing to disclose the full extent of his friendship and past financial dealings with his friends and ¹ To the extent that Article I alleges as grounds for Impeachment pre-federal service by Judge Porteous, it should be dismissed as improper. See Judge G. Thomas Porteous Jr.’s Motion to Dismiss Article II of the House of Representatives’ Articles of Impeachment (“Motion to Dismiss Article II”).

former law partners Jacob Amato and Robert Creely, whose firm was counsel for a party in the Lifemark case; and (b) after denying that recusal motion, accepting cash and other “things of value” such as meals and entertainment from Messrs. Amato and Creely while that case was still under advisement.²

The House chose to phrase the allegations in Article I in terms Judge Porteous’s alleged deprivation of the right to honest services, despite the knowledge that the Supreme Court could effectively gut those charges. That is what happened when the Supreme Court issued its decision in Skilling v. United States, No. 08-1394, 2010 WL 2518587 (June 24, 2010), in which the Court ruled that claims of a deprivation of a right to honest services are unconstitutionally vague. While recognizing that this Impeachment is not directly comparable to a criminal proceeding like Skilling, the same concepts of unconstitutional vagueness should be equally, if not more, important in an effort to remove a federal judge.

After the House of Representatives submitted the Articles of Impeachment to the Senate, the Supreme Court ruled in Skilling and two companion cases that the “honest services” crime is limited to cases involving bribery and kickbacks, and it cannot constitutionally encompass other types of financial conflicts of interest, such as the type of conduct alleged in Article I. As a matter of law, therefore, Article I does not allege conduct that could support a criminal “honest services” claim and it must, for much the same reasons, fall short of any impeachable offense. Indeed, if made the basis for removal after the Supreme Court’s rejection, this Article would create an entirely arbitrary and ambiguous standard for impeachment. This is precisely what the Framers sought to avoid – leaving judges to guess what conduct might result in their removal. As discussed below, it would create a new version of the rejected standard of “maladministration” that James Madison objected would be “so vague a term [as to be] the equivalent to a tenure during the pleasure of the Senate.” RAOUL BERGER, IMPEACHMENT: THE CONSTITUTIONAL PROBLEMS 91 (Harvard Univ. Press 1973).

² The House Report regarding this Impeachment emphasized that former state judges Bodenheimer and Green pleaded guilty to honest services charges (see H.R. Rep. No. 111-427 (Mar. 4, 2010), Report of the House Judiciary Committee concerning the Porteous Impeachment (“House Report”) at 86, 89) and that Louis and Lori Marcotte (persons discussed in Article II) pleaded guilty to conspire “to deprive the citizens of the State of Louisiana of the honest and faithful services” of state officers. (Id. at 89, 91). The House Report attempts to tar Judge Porteous with the same brush as these criminally charged and convicted individuals. Yet Article I does not charge Judge Porteous with complicity with Judge Bodenheimer or Judge Green, neither of whom was even involved in the Lifemark case. Article II discusses contacts with the Marcottes, but they had no connection to the Lifemark case. Other deficiencies in the claims regarding the Marcottes are addressed in the Motion to Dismiss Article II.

All that remains in Article I, once the “honest services” claim is debunked, are allegations that Judge Porteous created the appearance of impropriety by not recusing himself from the Lifemark case, not disclosing the full extent of his friendships with counsel, and subsequently accepting gifts and entertainment from those old friends while the case was still pending. Article I does not allege that Judge Porteous provided any illegal quid pro quo, in the Lifemark case or otherwise, in return for those gifts and that entertainment.

The recusal hearing transcript in Lifemark verifies that Judge Porteous repeatedly acknowledged his close friendships with lawyers representing the Liljeberg parties. (See Transcript of Oct. 16, 1996 Hearing on Plaintiff’s Motion to Recuse (“Recusal Tr.”), attached as Exhibit 1, at 6-7.) Indeed, those well-known friendships were the basis for the recusal motion filed by Joseph Mole, counsel for the Lifemark parties, who admittedly understood that they “all are indeed very, very close friends.” (Id. at 6.) Judge Porteous confirmed that they were indeed friends and that they had lunch and socialized. (Id. at 7.) Notably, Mole stated that he was more concerned about the timing of their appearance in the case than the friendship itself. (Id. at 12 (“Your Honor, it is again not the fact of the friendship, it is the timing.”).) Judge Porteous, however, noted that the case had been delayed for years and bounced from judge to judge – with a long list of counsel joining and leaving the case.³ He wanted to see the case tried and resolved. This was consistent with his view in other cases.⁴

What happened next is truly jaw-dropping – though the House (which was fully aware of it) omits it entirely from Article I. After Judge Porteous denied the recusal motion, attorney Mole secretly offered Don Gardner, another of Judge Porteous’s lawyer friends, $200,000 if Gardner would enter his appearance and somehow get Judge Porteous off the Lifemark case ($100,000 retainer up front and $100,000 as a bounty if Judge Porteous recused himself). (See Don Gardner Retainer Agreement, dated Feb. 18, 1997, attached as Exhibit 2.) The offer was made in the form of a written retainer agreement, concealed from Judge Porteous until long after the Lifemark case was over. This appalling document is attached as Exhibit 2. The price Mole was willing to pay for Judge Porteous’s recusal was about 100 times more than the cash gift Judge Porteous allegedly received from his longtime friend, Jacob Amato, three years later. (See House Report at 45-46 (Gardner’s fees), 50-51 (alleged gift from Amato and Creely).) Yet Judge Porteous frustrated this scheme by ruling against Mole’s client – thereby depriving his close friend Gardner of a six-figure bounty – in a decision that was affirmed in part and reversed in part by the Fifth Circuit. In re Liljeberg Enters., Inc., 304 F.3d 410 (5th Cir. 2002).⁵ Not only

⁴ Judge Porteous noted that this was the first recusal motion that he had faced in over a decade of serving as a judge. (Id. at 10-11.) He noted that, when his cousin tried a case before him as a state judge, he simply disclosed the relationship to the jury and told them that they should not read anything into the relationship. (Id. at 17-18.)

⁵ It is worth noting that, when cross-examined by Judge Porteous in the proceedings before the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council, Mole admitted that Judge Porteous was “a very good trial judge” and that he did not feel that Judge Porteous’s evidentiary rulings were terribly unfair. See did the House omit this fact from Article I, it has listed Mole as one of the witnesses to support removal of Judge Porteous based on his involvement in the Lifemark case. Mole was never disciplined for his scheme with Gardner, yet Judge Porteous has been impeached for not recusing himself even when $200,000 was offered to get him to withdraw from the case.

The alleged appearance of impropriety that resulted from socializing with and later accepting a cash gift from friends involved in the Lifemark case is serious, and Judge Porteous has acknowledged that he did not do enough to address it. It is important to note, however, that this appearance of impropriety could have been completely resolved by more disclosure or by a recusal. Such recusal controversies are routine and have been raised in connection from Supreme Court justices like Anton Scalia to municipal court judges. See, e.g., Gina Holland, Justice Scalia: No Apologies for Hunting Trip with Cheney, WASH. POST, Feb. 11, 2005; In re Sybil M. Elias, Judge of the Mun. Court, No. ACJC 2007-096 (N.J. Adv. Comm. on Jud. Conduct, May 19, 2008) (censuring municipal court judge for conflicts of interest in disposing of traffic ticket). They are largely left to the discretion of the court and rarely result in formal inquiries, let alone reprimands. Absent bribery or some other serious actual impropriety – not alleged here – mere failure to recuse has never, until now, been proffered as grounds for the impeachment of a federal judge.

In light of the Supreme Court decisions and the failure to state an impeachable offense, Article I should be dismissed.

ARGUMENT

After hearing the testimony of several witnesses, the House of Representatives concluded that it could not impeach Judge Porteous on the basis of treason or bribery. Instead, it based impeachment on the commission of “other high crimes and misdemeanors.” (See 111 Cong. Rec. S. 1645 (Mar. 17, 2010) (presenting the House’s Articles of Impeachment to the Senate, which state repeatedly that Judge Porteous “is impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors.”).) The Senate, therefore, may only convict Judge Porteous if the House can prove he committed either a “high crime” or a “high misdemeanor.”⁶

I. The Supreme Court in Skilling Rejected the House’s “Honest Services” Theory.

The House framed Article I as a broad “honest services” claim, despite widespread speculation that the Supreme Court might strike down the “honest services” statute in the then-pending Skilling case. The Court proceeded to issue a ruling that directly rejected the theory in Article I and ruled that the statute could only be enforced in a very limited set of cases. Notably, the Skilling decision exposes the type of claim found in Article I as unconstitutionally vague – the very concern of the Framers in crafting impeachment standards. The House alleged that, by purportedly making misleading statements and failing to disclose certain information at the recusal hearing in the Lifemark case, and then denying the motion to recuse, Judge Porteous “deprived the parties and the public of the right to the honest services of his office.” (111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010).) This “honest services” allegation is based on 18 U.S.C. § 1346, which extends the scope of the mail and wire fraud statutes (18 U.S.C. §§ 1341 and 1343, respectively) to include “a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services.” Such sweeping claims are unconstitutional, the Supreme Court held, because they give the accused no way to predict what conduct may violate a criminal statute.

⁶ Under the Constitution, the House alone has the power to decide what alleged bases for conviction and removal from office exist and should be presented to the Senate for trial. (U.S. CONST. art. I, § 2, cl. 5 (providing that the House “shall have the sole Power of Impeachment”).) The Senate, accordingly, has no power to rewrite or reform the House’s articles of impeachment. Instead, it may only consider the articles as presented and either convict or acquit. (U.S. CONST. art. I, § 3, cls. 6-7 (stating that “The Senate shall have the sole power to try all Impeachments”); see also Impeachment Trial of Halstead Ritter, S. Doc. No. 200, at 30 (1936) (noting the House Managers offered amended pleadings to the Senate in recognition that the Senate could only convict or acquit based upon the specific articles presented by the House of Representatives).)

In basing Article I on the criminal honest services provision, the House continued its longstanding practice of framing articles of impeachment in terms analogous to specific crimes.⁷ Such framing serves the important public goal of ensuring that federal judges have no doubt as to the conduct that can result in their removal from office. Article I, as written, does not describe conduct that, after Skilling, could support a “deprivation of honest services” offense or prove any other recognizable crime.

In Skilling, the defendant was accused of denying honest services by “withhold[ing] material information, i.e., information that he had reason to believe would lead a reasonable employer to change its conduct.” Skilling, 2010 WL 2518587, at *12. Rejecting such a vague claim, the Supreme Court ruled that, in order to meet constitutional scrutiny, 18 U.S.C. § 1346 must be narrowly construed and that any claim of criminal honest services would be unconstitutional if it went beyond “fraudulent schemes to deprive another of honest services through bribes or kickbacks.” Id. “[N]o other misconduct falls within [the statute’s] province.” Id. at 26, 30. The Court expressly rejected the notion that “undisclosed self-dealing” and the “non-disclosure of conflicting financial interest,” such as “the taking of official action by [a public official] that furthers his own undisclosed financial interests while purporting to act in the interests of those to whom he owes a fiduciary duty,” can constitute a criminal deprivation of “honest services.” Id. at *28. The Court excluded prosecutions for conflicts of interest and ⁷ See House Report, at 14 n.58 (explaining that the last four judicial impeachments, of Judges Kent (2009), Nixon (1989), Hastings (1988), and Claiborne (1986), followed earlier criminal proceedings, and that in each instance the House’s articles of impeachment “were to a great extent patterned after the Federal criminal charges”).

Justice Scalia wrote a concurring opinion with Justices Thomas and Kennedy that agreed on the narrower interpretation of honest services but would have gone even further to invalidate the entire statutory provision. Id. at *32 (Scalia, J., concurring). Scalia agreed with the defendant that the honest services provision “fails to provide fair notice and encourages arbitrary enforcement because it provides no definition of the right of honest services whose deprivation it prohibits.” Id. (Scalia, J., concurring).

The honest services debate and its resolution in Skilling mirror the debate that occurred in the Constitutional Convention’s discussion of impeachment. In drafting the impeachment provision, some argued for the inclusion of the term “maladministration,” which would have allowed for a far greater range of impeachable acts. BERGER at 78. James Madison and other Framers steadfastly opposed such a term because it lacked clarity as a standard to guide judges. Madison objected that “so vague a term [as maladministration] will be the equivalent to a tenure during the pleasure of the Senate.” Id. The Framers were concerned that adopting general standards would create continuing uncertainty among federal officers of what could be used as the basis for their removal. The chilling effect on judges of unpredictability is precisely what the Framers sought to avoid by creating an independent judiciary. Put simply, “deprivation of honest services” is the modern equivalent of maladministration. Just as the Skilling Court found “honest services” too vague to put criminal defendants on notice, it is equally flawed in giving notice to federal judges in an impeachment setting. This is particularly the case when incorrect recusal decisions are routinely handled as simple matter for review or, at most, judicial discipline and rarely result in formal inquiries, let alone removal.

The Skilling Court reached the same result in the other two cases. While Weyhrauch v. United States, No. 08-1196, 2010 WL 2518696 (June 24, 2010) was simply reversed in light of the ruling in Skilling, the Court issued a stand-alone decision in Black v. United States, No. 08-876, 2010 WL 2518593 (June 24, 2010), that again ruled against the type of theory articulated in Article I. There, the Court reversed the appellate decision on the basis of an improper instruction to the jury “that a person commits honest-services fraud if he ‘misuse[s] his position for private gain for himself and/or a co-schemer’ and ‘knowingly and intentionally breache[s] his duty of loyalty.’” Black, 2010 WL 2518593 at *3. By the House’s own description, Article I alleges “financial entanglements with persons having business before the court.” (House Report at 15.) This is precisely the kind of nebulous misconduct that the Supreme Court held could not support an “honest services” prosecution.

Ironically, the Framers also found “corruption” – a far more ambiguous concept than bribery – to be an unacceptable standard for impeachment as well. The early standard of “malpractice or neglect of duty” was converted by the Committee of Detail into “treason, bribery, or corruption.” BERGER at 78. The Committee of Eleven then dropped “corruption” as a standard. Id. Yet, Article I adopts this very same general claim of “corrupt” practices, specifically rejected by the Framers as a standard for impeachment. The result is an Article of Impeachment that directly contravenes the intent of the Framers and is based on a theory roundly rejected by the United States Supreme Court. While the House acts as a grand jury in bringing charges, it is the Senate that preserves clear lines of impeachable conduct. See generally Jonathan Turley, Congress As Grand Jury: The Role of the House of Representatives in the Impeachment of an American President, 67 GEO. WASH. L. REV. 735 (1999); see also MICHAEL J. GERHARDT, THE FEDERAL IMPEACHMENT PROCESS: A CONSTITUTIONAL AND HISTORICAL

ANALYSIS 205 (Univ. of Chi. Press 2d ed. 2000); Jonathan Turley, Senate Trials and Factional Disputes: Impeachment as a Madisonian Device, 49 DUKE L.J. 1 (1999). Article I is based on an invalid honest services theory and, therefore, fails to state an impeachable offense.⁸

II. The Alleged Appearance of Impropriety, By Itself, Is Not an Impeachable Offense.

Stripped of its “honest services” foundation, little remains of Article I beyond a general claim that Judge Porteous should have recused himself from the Lifemark case, or at least have disclosed more information about past financial dealings with his old friends who were counsel of record in that case.⁹ Article I also asserts that, after denying a recusal motion, Judge Porteous continued to accept gifts and hospitality from Amato and Creely, both of whom had been Judge Porteous’s friends since the 1970s. Article I does not contain any allegation of any actual impropriety. For example, it does not claim that Judge Porteous accepted anything from anyone as a quid pro quo for his decision in Lifemark, which was ultimately upheld in part and reversed in part by the Fifth Circuit.

⁸ Another concern about Article I is that it depends on a “pattern of conduct” allegedly carried out “while a Federal judge” as the alleged basis for removing Judge Porteous from office. The alleged pattern that supposedly justifies removal is based on a hodgepodge of actions, including “deni[al] of a motion to recuse,” “fail[ure] to disclose” all aspects of his relationship with his longtime friends Jacob Amato and Robert Creely, “intentionally misleading statements at the recusal hearing,” and “corrupt conduct after the Lifemark v. Liljeberg bench trial.” Because it depends on such a multiplicity of allegations, Article I also is constitutionally invalid. See Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.’s Motion to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment as Unconstitutionally Aggregated or, in the Alternative, to Require Voting on Specific Allegations of Impeachable Conduct, being filed concurrently herewith.

⁹ The only allegation in Article I that even remotely resembles criminal conduct is the reference to a “corrupt scheme” involving curatorships and Messrs. Amato and Creely, which allegedly began “in or about the late 1980’s” and unquestionably ended when Judge Porteous became a federal judge. Notably, the House has not alleged in Article I that the state court curatorships themselves, or Judge Porteous’s receipt of money or other things of value from Amato and/or Creely while on the state bench, are of themselves a basis for impeachment. Such “pre-federal” conduct cannot be the basis for impeachment, as even the House’s picked experts agree. See Motion to Dismiss Article II, Section III, being filed concurrently herewith.

A. Article I Distorts the Facts of the Lifemark Case.

Judge Porteous's denial of the recusal motion filed by attorney Mole in the Lifemark case is not, in itself, grounds for impeachment. Indeed, the House could only portray the denial of that motion as improper by ignoring the fact that Mole reacted to the ruling by offering a six-figure bounty for Judge Porteous' recusal. Incredibly, Article I does not even mention that, after his recusal motion failed, attorney Mole and his client hired Don Gardner, another long time friend of Judge Porteous, as counsel of record in Lifemark, with a written contract that included a $100,000 retainer and an additional $100,000 contingent fee payable if Gardner could get Judge Porteous to recuse himself. (See Don Gardner Retainer Agreement, dated Feb. 18, 1997, attached as Exhibit 2.) Penalizing Judge Porteous – or any judge – for merely thwarting a party's Machiavellian schemes to remove that judge from a case would shock the conscience. In fact, Mole himself admitted that, during the trial itself, Judge Porteous “was a very good trial judge,” that he was an easy judge to practice before, and that his evidentiary rulings were not unfair. See Testimony of Joseph Mole Before the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council, pp. 187-188 (attached as Ex. 3).

Article I's criticism of Judge Porteous's disclosures in connection with Mole's recusal motion also does not withstand scrutiny. Judge Porteous did not conceal his relationship with Mr. Amato and with another lawyer friend, Leonard Levenson, during the recusal proceedings in the Lifemark matter.¹⁰ Judge Porteous's long-time friendship with Mr. Amato was well known in the New Orleans legal community; indeed, it was such a widely known fact that it served as the primary basis for the recusal motion filed by attorney Mole. (See, e.g., Memorandum in Support of Motion to Recuse, pp. 1, 3, 5, 6, attached as Exhibit 4). Moreover, Judge Porteous expressly confirmed that he had a long-term friendship with Messrs. Amato and Levenson at the very beginning of the October 16, 1996 recusal hearing. (Recusal. Tr. p. 4, attached as Exhibit 1). Judge Porteous also expressly disclosed that he and Mr. Amato had practiced law together over twenty years before the hearing (id.) and that he went to lunch with Messrs. Amato and Levenson, as well as any number of other members of the New Orleans bar. (Id. at 7).

The main nondisclosure allegation in Article I suggests that Judge Porteous should be removed because he failed to disclose that, before he ever became a federal judge, he had assigned administrative curatorships to the Amato & Creely firm and in the same time period received personal gifts from Creely. This is a thinly-disguised effort to base impeachment on the unconstitutional ground of pre-federal conduct – conduct that occurred prior to the respondent’s federal appointment. (See Motion to Dismiss Article II, being filed concurrently herewith.) Although Article I contends that this pre-federal conduct constituted a “pattern,” any such pattern based on the assignment of state court curatorships unquestionably ended when Judge Porteous assumed the federal bench – years before he declined to recuse himself in the Lifemark case.¹¹

The allegation that, after denying the Lifemark recusal motion, Judge Porteous continued to accept hospitality and, on one occasion, cash from his friend and former law partner Amato is more serious. Such conduct creates the appearance of impropriety and cannot be condoned. But the facts are much less sinister than Article I insinuates. Judge Porteous had been friends with Messrs. Amato, Creely, and Gardner – lawyers on both sides of the Lifemark case – for at least twenty years, and had been friends with Mr. Levenson for almost a decade. (House Tr. Part A pp. 20, 99; August 24, 2009 Deposition of L. Levenson, p. 6, attached as Exhibit 5). During the extended course of those friendships, which continued while Judge Porteous was on the state and federal benches, Judge Porteous publicly went to lunch with each of the four attorneys, as well as other members of the bar. Sometimes they took hunting or fishing trips together. These social interactions varied little over the course of the many years of their friendship and there is nothing intrinsically wrong with them.

Furthermore, Article I does not allege that Judge Porteous asked for or received cash from Amato, Creely, Levenson, or Gardner between his appointment to the federal bench in 1994 and June 1999, when it is alleged that he accepted about $2,000 from Amato and Creely to help pay for his son's wedding. Even if this allegation, which has yet to be proven, were true, that transaction would have taken place nearly five years after any previous gifts of money to Judge Porteous from Amato or Creely. There was no "pattern" of "corrupt" transactions between Judge Porteous and any attorney who appeared before him on the Lifemark case.

The use of the terms "things of value" in Article I is remarkably vague given the serious nature of these proceedings. The Article invites the Senate to jump to the conclusion, unsupported by evidence, that while Judge Porteous was a federal judge his friends plied him with secret and illicit gifts. The reality is quite different. The record of this case shows only that Judge Porteous interacted socially with long-time friends, including hunting, fishing, eating meals together and attending major family events spread over many years. (House Tr. Part A p. 26 (Creely attended Porteous's son's bachelor party); pp. 35-36 (Creely and Porteous ate meals and hunted together); pp. 103-04, 117 (Amato and Porteous have eaten hundreds of meals together); p. 108 (Amato and Porteous have hunted and fished together), p. 119 (Amato gave wedding presents to Porteous's children).) If carrying on long-term friendships through ordinary social functions were an impeachable offense, it would open the floodgates to politically motivated impeachments.

The only alleged impropriety to which Article I refers with any specificity is the estimated $2000 that Judge Porteous allegedly requested to defray the costs of his son's wedding. Even if true, such a request was made and fulfilled as a private matter between friends, not as a corrupt request for an illegal favor. (House Tr. Part A, pp. 48-49, 126.)

No matter what the intent, accepting $2,000 in cash from a lawyer with a pending case would be a serious lapse of judgment. However, there is no suggestion from these witnesses that the alleged $2000 gift influenced (or was intended to influence) Judge Porteous's judgment in the Lifemark case. Indeed, even the $200,000 price that Mole offered to Judge Porteous's longtime friend, Mr. Gardner, did not achieve such a purpose.

B. Impeachment Is an Inappropriate Sanction for the Appearance of Impropriety.

Article I forces the question of when a federal judge's non-criminal lapse in judgment becomes grounds for impeachment. In enacting the Judicial Councils Reform and Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980, 28 U.S.C. § 354(b)(2), Congress reaffirmed the Framers' view that impeachment is to be used to rectify only the most egregious cases, those that cannot be remedied by any other means. (See H.R. Rep. No. 96-1313, at 2 (1980) (citing House Hearings before the Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties and the Administration of Justice (96th Cong., 1st and 2d Sess.), at 136 (testimony of Peter W. Rodino, Jr.)).) The House of Representatives Committee on the Judiciary stated at that time: "Impeachment . . . is the heaviest piece of artillery in the congressional arsenal, but because it is so heavy it is unfit for ordinary use. It is like a hundred-ton gun which needs complex machinery to bring it into position, an enormous charge of powder to fire it, and a large mark to aim at.” (H.R. Rep. No. 96-1313, at 2 (1980) (quoting J. Bryce, American Commonwealth 212 (1920)).)

For decades, Congress has abstained from direct involvement in judicial discipline proceedings except in the most egregious cases. Self-regulation preserves the constitutional independence of the judiciary. Determining when recusal is advisable, even where it is not mandatory, is a subject that has traditionally contained many gray areas. See, e.g., Leslie W. Abramson, Appearance of Impropriety: Deciding When a Judge’s Impartiality “Might Reasonably Be Questioned,” 14 GEO. J. LEGAL ETHICS 55 (2000); Keith R. Fisher, The Higher Calling: Regulation of Lawyers Post-Enron, 37 UNIV. OF MICH. J. L. REFORM 1017, 1118 n.395 (2004).

In 1973, Congress adopted a code of conduct for federal judges that provides: “Any justice, judge or magistrate of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned.” 28 U.S.C. § 455(a). The Supreme Court interpreted that statute in Liljeberg v. Health Services Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847 (1988). There, the trial judge claimed that he had forgotten about his position as a trustee of a university that had an interest in the litigation. Noting the legislative history of the statute, the Court stated that its purpose was “to promote public confidence in the integrity of the judicial process.” Id. at 860. The Court cited with approval the Fifth Circuit’s language upholding the importance of a recusal standard based upon the appearance of partiality:

The goal of [the statute] is to avoid even the appearance of partiality. If it would appear to a reasonable person that a judge has knowledge of the facts that would give him an interest in the litigation then an appearance of partiality is created even though no actual partiality exists because the judge does not recall the facts, because the judge actually has no interest in the case or because the judge is pure in heart and incorruptible. The judge’s forgetfulness, however, is not the sort of objectively ascertainable fact that can avoid the appearance of partiality. Under [the statute], therefore, recusal is required even when a judge lacks actual knowledge of the facts indicating his interest or bias in the case if a reasonable person, knowing all the circumstances, would expect that the judge would have actual knowledge.

Id. at 860-61 (quoting Health Servs. Acquisition Corp. v. Liljeberg, 796 F.2d 796, 802 (5th Cir. 1986) aff'd, 486 U.S. 847 (1988)).

The mere appearance of impropriety, without more, has never been enough to justify the extreme and rare measure of impeachment. Rather, impeachment on the basis of a high crime or high misdemeanor has only been imposed where the respondent committed a serious crime (e.g., treason, bribery, tax evasion) or abused or violated the constitutional judicial power entrusted to him, though usually both. Article I would lower the threshold for impeachment far below that applied by the House or enforced by the Senate in any previous case.

When it comes to personal relationships and other conflicts the standards applied to state and federal judges have long been criticized as ill-defined. As Professor Leslie W. Abramson has noted:

For almost three decades, America's state judges have applied the Code of Judicial Conduct to their own conduct as well as to their judicial colleagues. Too often, for lack of guiding principles, reviewing courts and judicial conduct organizations have not analyzed fully the relation between the judge's conduct and the appearance of partiality. It is time for the ABA and the states to review their Codes in order to: (1) add ethical duties not currently addressed, such as a black-letter judicial duty to disclose any known disqualifying circumstances to counsel and parties; (2) broaden existing duties like the judge's duty to inform himself or herself about personal and family financial holdings; and (3) consider new disqualifying conditions to reclassify general appearance of partiality situations as specific per se grounds for recusal. The ABA and the states are capable of providing additional guidance, whether in the form of new black-letter standards or as added commentary language offered as a relevant analytical tool.

Abramson at 55 (citations omitted). An impeachment trial is not the forum to start to regulate or define the relative line for such conduct.

More importantly, judicial conflict prohibitions to prevent appearances of impropriety were never contemplated to justify impeachment. See Reporter's Explanation of Changes: ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct 9 (2007), available at <http://www.abanet.org/judiciaethics/mcjc-2007.pdf> (stating that the appearance of impropriety prohibition was added to Rule 1.2 at the urging of the judiciary and others to establish this standard as an independent basis for discipline; instead, appearances of impropriety were contemplated as run-of-the-mill judicial misconduct that did not warrant extraordinary sanctions such as impeachment); see also Raymond J. McKoski, Judicial Discipline and the Appearance of Impropriety: What the Public Sees Is What the Judge Gets, 94 MINN. L. REV. 1914 (2010) (examining the disciplinary use of the appearance of impropriety standard from a theoretical and practical standpoint and discussing the chilling effect of a disciplinary system based on perceptions).

Sanctions for judicial misconduct have not been uniformly applied, and lack the certainty needed to support impeachment as a constitutionally permissible remedy. For example, when U.S. District Judge James Ware was nominated to serve on the Ninth Circuit in 1998, it was discovered that his public claims to be the relative of an individual killed in Alabama in 1963 were false. The Judicial Council for the Northern District of California publicly reprimanded Judge Ware, but did not seek to remove him from the bench. He still serves as a District Judge. Arthur D. Hellman, The Regulation of Judicial Ethics in the Federal System: A Peek Behind Closed Doors, 69 U. PITT. L. REV. 189, 240 (Winter 2007); Judge Ware Reprimanded by his Peers, PALO ALTO ONLINE, Aug. 26, 1998; Federal Judge Reprimanded for Telling Lies, THE JOURNAL RECORD, Aug. 20, 1998.

The Sixth Circuit publicly reprimanded Judge John Phipps McCalla, currently serving as Chief Judge for the Western District of Tennessee in 2001 for “improper and intemperate conduct” towards members of the bar, including verbal and possibly physical abuse. Judge McCalla was also placed on leave for six months and ordered to undergo counseling, but was not impeached. Hellman at 238-239; see also John Branston, McCalla Put on Leave, MEMPHIS FLYER, Aug. 29, 2001.

In 2005, the Judicial Council admonished esteemed Second Circuit Judge Guido Calabresi for remarks he made at an American Constitutional Society conference, in which he advocated that then-President Bush not be reelected, compared President Bush to Hitler and Mussolini, made comments exhibiting political bias, and publicly disagreed with the Supreme Court’s decision in Bush v. Gore. The Council found that Judge Calabresi had violated judicial canons, but that an apology from the judge was sufficient when paired with an admonishment from the Chief Judge of the Circuit. In re Charges of Judicial Misconduct, Case No. 04-8529 (Jud. Conf. 2d Cir. 2005).

The Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit publicly reprimanded District Judge John H. McBryde in 1997, finding that he had “engaged in a continuing pattern of conduct evidencing arbitrariness and abusiveness that has brought disrepute on, and discord within, the federal judiciary.” In re Matters Involving Judge John H. McBryde Under the Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980, No. 95-05-372-0023 (Jud. Council 5th Cir. Dec. 31, 1997). Judge McBryde’s conduct included the “intemperate, abusive and intimidating treatment of lawyers, fellow judges, and others.” Christine Biederman, Temper, Temper, DALLAS OBSERVER, Oct. 2, 1997; see also McBryde v. Comm. to Review Circuit Council, 278 F.3d 29 (D.C. Cir.), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 821 (2002). Rather than recommending Judge McBryde’s impeachment, however, the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council initially suspended him for a one-year period and disqualified him for three years from presiding over cases involving any of twenty-three lawyers who had participated in his investigation. In re Matters Involving Judge John H. McBryde Under the Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980, No. 95-05-372-0023 (Jud. Council 5th Cir. Dec. 31, 1997). Judge McBryde is currently serving as a U.S. District Judge in the Northern District of Texas.

Congress itself has expressed a strong preference for correcting judicial misconduct with rehabilitative rather than punitive measures. The legislative history of the Judicial Councils Reform and Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980, 28 U.S.C. § 354(b)(2) stressed that most complaints would be handled within the home circuit and that “informal, collegial resolution of the great majority of meritorious disability or disciplinary matters is to be the rule rather than the exception.” (S. Rep. No. 96-362, at 3-4 (1979), reprinted in 1980 U.S.C.C.A.N. 4315, 4317.) Congress did not address the inherent tension between allowing “the great majority of meritorious” misconduct complaints to conclude without any real consequences for the judge and creating a disciplinary system designed “to assure the public that valid citizen complaints are being considered in a forthright and just manner.” (1980 U.S.C.C.A.N. at 4321.)

In March 2008, the Judicial Conference adopted the Rules for Judicial-Conduct and Judicial-Disability Proceedings to create “authoritative interpretive standards” and made them binding on all circuit courts. See Rules for Judicial-Conduct and Judicial-Disability Proceedings R. 1 cmt. (2008). The binding Rules again express a preference for remedial resolutions in judicial misconduct cases. See id. Citing an “implicit understanding that voluntary self-correction or redress of misconduct . . . is preferable to sanctions” (id. at R. 11 cmt.), the mandatory Rules encourage the chief judges of each circuit to “facilitate this process [of selfcorrection] by giving the subject judge an objective view of the appearance of the judicial conduct in question and by suggesting appropriate corrective measures.” Id.

The case law interpreting the Act is generally consistent with the nonpunitive philosophy of the Rules. A long line of precedent holds that “correcting” judicial misconduct without punishment is consistent with the Act’s purpose, which is “essentially forward-looking and not punitive.” In re Complaints of Judicial Misconduct, 9 F.3d 1562, 1566 (U.S. Jud. Conf. Nov. 2, 1993); see also Arthur D. Hellman, Judges Judging Judges: The Federal Judicial Misconduct Statutes and the Breyer Committee Report, 28 JUST. SYS. J. 426, 427 (2007) (stating that the “Rules’ rejection of a ‘punitive’ purpose has been widely influential in the administration of the misconduct statutes”) (quotation marks in original).

Article I does not allege that Judge Porteous’s conduct amounted to anything more than a nonimpeachable appearance of impropriety. As noted in Judge Dennis’s dissent to the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council’s decision recommending impeachment:

They never find that Judge Porteous’s conduct constituted an actual impropriety, much less an abuse or violation of official constitutional judicial power. The special investigating committee’s report finds that none of Judge Porteous’s ethical violations was more egregious than his conduct during the Liljeberg case but concludes 1) that Judge Porteous should have advised the parties of his financial relationship with Amato and the Creely & Amato law firm as soon as the recusal motion was filed; and 2) that Judge Porteous should have granted the motion to recuse or given the parties the choice of keeping him as a trial judge. The committee further found that Judge Porteous’s asking for and receiving Amato’s and Creely’s financial assistance with his son’s wedding and allowing Creely to pay for his hotel room in connection with his son’s bachelor party compounded the appearances of improprieties. But the committee correctly did not find that anything other than appearances of improprieties, rather than actual improprieties, resulted from this conduct under the Code. Thus, the committee found that the failure to recuse, Judge Porteous’s worst ethical offense, was not an irremediable actual impropriety under the Code but rather an appearance of impropriety, which, if disclosed, the parties could have cured by agreement.

In re Complaint of Judicial Misconduct against United States District Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. Under the Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980, Case No. 07-05-351-0085, slip op. at 31-32 (Dennis, concurring) (5th Cir. Jud. Conf. Dec. 20, 2007) (emphasis added).

The Articles of Impeachment in this case do little to distinguish Judge Porteous' alleged misconduct from that of his unimpeached judicial brethren. As in past cases where the Senate has opted to censure an official as an alternative to impeachment, poor judgment should not become the new basis for removal in the federal courts. See Emily Field Van Tassel & Paul Finkelman, Impeachable Offenses, A Documentary History from 1787 to the Present, CONG. Q., at 185-86 (1999).

Judge Porteous has already been severely sanctioned by the Fifth Circuit Judicial Conference. He has accepted that judicial sanctions are warranted for his use of poor judgment and has resolved to retire from the court in roughly one year. He objects, however, to such poor judgments being a basis for impeachment. Article I would create bizarre new precedent by impeaching a federal judge on the basis of an honest services violation that was recently rejected as unconstitutionally vague by the Supreme Court. The United States Senate should not be the new forum for resolving matters of judicial discipline, particularly in a case where a judge has never been subject to any state or federal prosecution, or even to prior bar discipline, during more than a decade of federal service.

For over two centuries, this body has maintained a clear and high standard for removal of a federal judge – often acquitting accused judges or opting for censure over removal. Article I would render this precedent meaningless by basing removal on an alleged failure to recuse oneself from a case where there is no allegation of a bribe or a kickback. It would effectively reintroduce the very standard of maladministration rejected by James Madison and the framers in a new form of “honest service” denial. The cost of such a decision would be borne not just by Judge Porteous, but by the judiciary as a whole.

CONCLUSION

The Supreme Court’s Skilling decision makes clear that Article I fails to allege a viable “honest services” crime – or, for that matter, any crime allegedly committed by Judge Porteous. This places Article I beyond the pale of precedent. All prior impeachment convictions involved judges who committed or, at least, were charged with serious crimes while in federal office.

Article I now threatens all federal judges with impeachment for merely creating the appearance of impropriety. Courts and Congress have struggled for decades to refine a consistent standard for evaluating the appearance of impropriety, with limited success. The appearance of impropriety is no crime. Until now, Congress and the judiciary have sought to correct this type of misconduct with corrective measures rather than the massive and cumbersome machinery of impeachment. This preserves the independence of the judiciary while holding judges to the highest ethical standards.

Judge Porteous does not dispute he should have handled his friendships and the Lifemark case differently. He has been severely sanctioned by the Judicial Conference of the Fifth Circuit for that conduct. But the appearance of impropriety, without more, never has been and never should be an impeachable offense.

Article I should be dismissed.

P R O C E E D I N G S

MORNING SESSION

(Wednesday, October 16, 1996)

1 THE COURT: Let's take up this next matter, which is
2 93-1794 and all consolidated cases also. This is the motion
3 filed with respect to all of the particular cases to recuse.
4 Let me dictate one thing into the record before everybody
5 commences so that everybody is not necessarily on edge as 6 they might think. Bernard v. Coyne, which is 31 F.3d 842
7 involved the request to disqualify a circuit court judge of 8 the 9th circuit. In that decision that Judge wrote, and I
9 cite and "this" (reading) with full acquiescence counsel for 10 a party who believes Judge's impartiality is reasonably 11 subject to question has not only a professional duty to his 12 client to raise the matter but an independent responsibility
13 as an officer of the court. Judges are not omniscient, and 14 despite safeguards overlook a conflict of interest. A 15 lawyer who reasonably believes that the Judge before whom he 16 is appearing should not sit must raise the issue so that it
17 may be confronted and put to rest. Any other course would 18 risk undermining public confidence in our judicial system."
19 I cite that so that everyone understands that I recognize my 20 duty and obligations, and I am fully prepared to listen.
21 All right, go ahead.

22 MR. MOLE: I appreciate your remarks. It is not a very

1 easy thing to confront the federal judge with the suspicion
2 that he probably doesn't want to hear. I am sure that in
3 the course of trying -- I don't know you very well, Judge,
4 and I have gotten to learn about you only through this
5 case --

6 THE COURT: You told me the last time we graduated from
7 Cor Jesu.

8 MR. MOLE: That's about all we have in common. What I
9 learned about you from trying to investigate what I should
10 do about what I have raised that you probably did read
11 briefs and gave it some intelligent thought. So I don't
12 want to go back through everything I have said.

13 What I would like to emphasize is mainly by what has 14 been established in response to my motion to recuse. I have 15 gotten to know Mr. Levenson and Mr. Amato.

16 THE COURT: Let me make also one other statement for
17 the record if anyone wants to decide whether I am a friend
18 with Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson, I will put that to rest for 19 the answer is affirmative, yes. Mr. Amato and I practiced
20 the law together probably 20-plus years ago. Is that 21 sufficient?

22 MR. MOLE: Yes.

23 THE COURT: 20-plus is sufficient. So if that is an
24 issue at all, it is a non-issue.

25 MR. MOLE: What prompted us to file the motion is the

1 timing of what happened. This case is 10 years old, the
2 oldest part is 10 years old. The lawyers who are in the
3 case now are these previous to September 12th when you
4 granted leave to add Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson, who has
5 been in for years. The case was set for trial, and you had
6 an emphasis about keeping the trial date. They were added
7 within two months of the trial date. And the case with that
8 length I don't know Mr. Levenson or Mr. Amato very well. I
9 know they are fun to practice against; they have a sense of
10 humor, and they have given me by doing this quite literally
11 none to my knowledge other than they are your friends. They 12 have been given 11 percent contingency fee in a case that
13 the Liljebergs, everybody -- I disagreed -- value at $140
14 million, at least part of this we have a percentage of. And
15 I think that bears even more weight when you consider Mr.
16 Liljeberg has taken the position that he doesn't give
17 contingency fees. Jim Cobb has sued him in Bankruptcy Court
18 for a fee claiming he had continued standing of plaintiff
19 Liljeberg as a matter of the plaintiff doesn't give those 20 away. This is like how we do it at the last minute. Mr.
21 Levenson in his response to my reply brief says he has been 22 in the case for a lot longer than the time when he showed 23 up. It raises additional questions. Mr. Levenson is also,
24 indeed, your friend: Has he discussed the case with us
25 before at that time he appeared when he was investigating

1 it? Did he wait to see when you would hold on to the case
2 rather than pass it on to Judge Lemmon? Those are the sort
3 of questions that are going to be in the case no matter what
4 happens forever if you be the Judge.

5 Mr. Levenson has accused me and my client of engaging
6 innuendo. I looked up the word. Innuendo is a generally
7 derogatory and witty way of making accusations indirectly.
8 I don't think I have done that. I have been very direct.
9 Mr. Levenson, and I think it is a good tactic, has tried to 10 dare me to say what I think is the nature of the 11 relationship between you and him and you and Mr. Amato, that 12 are the two gentlemen behind me. And if they have something
13 to contradict the statement that I made, which is that you
14 all are indeed very, very close friends, I would have 15 assumed that he would have made it. I am happy to tell the 16 Judge what the public perception is of the relationship.

17 THE COURT: Well, the case you cite by the way involved
18 the judge's wife. So I assume they were fairly close
19 friends, too.

20 MR. MOLE: Probably. You don't have to stipulate.

21 THE COURT: Well, it could be a question sometimes.

22 MR. MOLE: I understand, Your Honor. I don't know what
23 the Court wants to do with that issue, whether or not the 24 Court wants to make a statement or accept the statement.

25 THE COURT: No, I have made the statement. Yes, Mr.

1 Amato and Mr. Levenson are friends of mine. Have I ever
2 been to either one of them's house? The answer is a
3 definitive no. Have I gone along to lunch with them? The
4 answer is a definitive answer yes. Have I been going to 5 lunch with all of the members of the bar? The answer is
6 yes.

7 MR. MOLE: I understand.

8 THE COURT: Bas, in fact, at the last status conference
9 I had I saw Mr. Lane here I think in reality aligned with 10 your side who spoke with me, and Mr. Lane and I have been to 11 lunch together. I mean there is not a hell of a lot of 12 lawyers in this city I haven't maintained a very open,
13 friendly relationship with. So if you want to explore in
14 detail, feel free to explore it. I don't have a problem
15 with exploring it. But I don't know what you want to make 16 with it.

17 MR. MOLE: Well, Your Honor --

18 THE COURT: And I also must say something for the 19 record I think other than connecting the dots that the last 20 status conference I had I virtually told everyone I was 21 continuing this case. So this rush to trial that you
22 suggest I am maintaining, I did all but connect the dots the 23 last time.

24 MR. MOLE: Well, I understand.

25 THE COURT: The lawyers have come to this case like a

1 storm cloud through Louisiana. Look at the list. I ran a
2 chaser sheet. Up until I think maybe Mr. Steeg and Mr.
3 O'Connor. Mr. O'Connor were attorneys and they are out for
4 whatever reason. They had a conflict situation. I have no
5 idea what it was. Then you all got in it. Welcome, jump
6 in. I mean I tried to make it clear at the last conference
7 I don't care how many people are on the side or "X" amount
8 of people are talking. Did I not say that?

9 MR. MOLE: It was pretty clear, Your Honor. Well, I
10 would emphasize, Your Honor, that the standard is what a
11 reasonable person would perceive if they knew all the facts.
12 I think the timing of the appearance of Mr. Amato and Mr.
13 Levenson creates the biggest concern along with the fact
14 that they did not practice law together. All they have in 15 common is that they are your close friends. The public
16 perception is that they do dine with you, travel with you,
17 that they have contributed to your campaigns.

18 THE COURT: Well, luckily I didn't have any campaigns.
19 So I'm interested to find out how you know that. I never 20 had any campaigns, counsel. I have never had an opponent.
21 One time I had an opponent --

22 MR. MOLE: I had a campaign return from the --

23 THE COURT: The first time I ran, 1984, I think is the 24 only time when they gave me money.

25 MR. MOLE: 1990 is what I have.

1 THE COURT: 1990 that was the Justice for All Program
2 where they gave to every judge probably, but I could be
3 wrong there.

4 MR. MOLE: I'm sorry if I'm wrong.

5 THE COURT: I don't know. You got the record. What
6 did it say? Let me see them. Don't hide them if there is
7 something in there that's deeply devious, tell me about it.

8 MR. MOLE: May I approach the bench?

9 THE COURT: Sure.

10 (Counsel Mole hands document to the Court.)

11 THE COURT: Yeah, I think if you look at this, you will
12 find that whatever those numbers total, and I'm not a
13 mathematician, but I think those numbers on these pages
14 total more than $6,794. I am fairly certain adding that up.
15 Did you?

16 MR. MOLE: I did not, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Well, let's go to the, pick a page at 18 random starting with the firm of Anderson Tranthene and 19 Mateern. There is over $200 on that page, one page out of I
20 don't know how many it is. I think you will find that that 21 was a function that was thrown by the entire judiciary of 22 Jefferson Parish for which I received I forget whatever my 23 portion was, but I reported it, which was $6,794 is what it
24 looks like what it says here. And that's what it was. So,
25 yes, I don't doubt that they contributed. I mean I don't

1 know. Maybe it is pertinent. Maybe microscopes and maybe
2 that's why we shouldn't have it. But, yeah, okay, it's
3 there.

4 MR. MOLE: Your Honor, I appreciate the Court's remarks
5 at the beginning. What I have done again is in an effort to
6 represent my client at the risk of offending the Court --

7 THE COURT: You haven't offended me. But don't
8 misstate, don't come up with a document that clearly shows
9 well in excess of $6700 with some innuendo that that means
10 that they gave that money to me. If you would have checked
11 your homework, you would have found that that was a Justice
12 for all Program for all judges in Jefferson Parish. But go
13 ahead. I don't dispute that I received funding from 14 lawyers.

15 MR. MOLE: Right, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: No question.

17 MR. MOLE: If the perception is that my client, and I
18 have it that Mr. Levenson and Mr. Amato are not any more
19 sinister than any other member of the bar, then we would be 20 happy to have them or you dispel that. I think you have
21 been honest with us. There is not much more I can say.

22 THE COURT: I understand. Let me tell you, no, it is a
23 uncomfortable position you find yourself in, counselor. You
24 know, I have been doing this for awhile. With all candor I
25 must admit this is the first time a motion for my recusal

1 has ever been filed. Did it get my attention? Yeah, I
2 guess it got my attention. But does that mean that any time
3 a person I perceive to be friends who I have dinner with or
4 whatever that I must disqualify myself? I don't think
5 that's what the rule suggests. I, likewise, don't think
6 that's what the Court had in mind. And even in your own
7 pleadings and even in the case, it is the Travelers case
8 from the Fifth Circuit published opinion which you gave, me
9 that courts even recognized in citing from Murphy in its 10 cite, and I think it is important to state (reading) "In 11 today's legal culture friendship among judges and lawyers
12 are common. They are more than common, they are desirable.
13 A judge need not cut himself off from the rest of the legal 14 community. Social as well as official communications among 15 judges and lawyers may improve the quality of the legal
16 decisions. Social interaction also makes some on the bench
17 quite isolated and as a rule more tolerable to judges. Well
18 qualified people would hesitate to become judges if they
19 knew that wearing the robe meant either discharging one's
20 friends or risking disqualification in a substantial number
21 of cases. Courts have held that a judge need not disqualify
22 himself just because a friend, even a close friend, appears
23 as a lawyer." And that is a Seventh Circuit case but was 24 cited in the Fifth Circuit decision.

25 Now that's a predicament all of us find ourselves in.

1 Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson have both appeared before me and
2 they have both won and both lost.

3 MR. MOLE: Your Honor, it is again it is not the fact
4 of the friendship, it is the timing. Anyone who you would
5 describe the situation to I think would generally be
6 concerned that the timing is odd that a case of this length
7 amply lawyered when other lawyers appear within the
8 contingency fee in the way they have and that's why we made
9 the motion.

10 THE COURT: I understand it, and it is a perception,
11 clearly it is perception. I agree with you, but again even 12 before this motion was even urged because I believe the 13 status I had before you filed the motion, in fact, I know it
14 was I made it plain that this November 4th date was probably 15 fixed in everybody's mind. I mean I don't know what else to 16 tell you. That was a near fix. We will see what we have 17 got, but I understand, counselor and appreciate your
18 position. And you have to urge these things, and I
19 understand that. I take no animus toward you on that. If 20 you did that, I don't need to repeat that.

21 MR. MOLE: Judge, what you said -- it is the first time
22 I have had to do this myself. I would think one of the 23 lawyers opposing me asked me how many times did you sit
24 around discussing this with your client or your partners,
25 and his answer was to a political extent easy to do. But we

1 convinced ourselves we had to do it.

2 THE COURT: All right.

3 MR. MOLE: Only after great deliberation.

4 THE COURT: All right.

5 MR. LEVENSON: Judge, I feel a little peculiar in this
6 situation as well. I don't recall in the twenty years I
7 have practiced law being in this situation. I think that
8 you must take into consideration the admission by Lifemark
9 in their pleading that they do not question your 10 impartiality. And if they had done any investigation in 11 connection with this matter, they could come up with no
12 other result but that. And that is the test in this type
13 of situation. It is the appearance to a well-informed,
14 thoughtful, objective observer as stated in Jordan. And
15 I think the key point there is well informed. Both well
16 informed about our friendship, well informed about our 17 reputation, well informed about the reputation and
18 experience of Mr. Amato as well as that of myself.

19 Mr. Mole stated that the timing is odd. Well, I
20 think it is correct that from the time that I was 21 originally contacted by the Liljeberg attorneys in
22 connection with this matter the Frilot firm has been
23 involved in this case a very short period of time longer
24 than I.

25 Mr. Mole brought up that when he first learned of that

1 yesterday he questioned why I waited so long to get into the
2 case. Well, when I saw file cabinet upon file cabinet upon
3 file cabinet of the paper, it wasn't candidly a very easy
4 thing to assess for myself nor for Mr. Amato to take and
5 became quite a bit of work to determine whether or not I
6 wanted to dedicate a substantial portion of my future effort
7 to this case which would deprive me of other income and 8 other work as well. Mr. Mole didn't know that because he
9 didn't ask me.

10 The next point Mr. Mole made was that there is nothing
11 in common between Mr. Amato and myself except your 12 friendship. That is incorrect. Another question Mr. Mole
13 should have perhaps inquired into.

14 In Mr. Mole's brief he somewhat criticized my 15 experience or perhaps the lack thereof in his mind in 16 matters of this sort. Mr. Amato and myself have acted as 17 primarily personal injury lawyers. That, of course, is not
18 true. Mr. Amato and myself have tried hundreds if not
19 thousands of cases and rules before juries, judges, state
20 and federal, bankruptcy and federal court and just about
21 every other court I can think of. In fact, at the risk of 22 blowing my own horn, I think that I am probably the only
23 lawyer in this room and maybe the only lawyer with all of 24 the firms combined who has been written up in the WALL
25 STREET JOURNAL in connection with litigation I had handled,

1 and it was not personal injury cases. My experience
2 involves personal injury admittedly in recent years due to
3 the change in the economy this year but also involved
4 commercial litigation, bankruptcy, real estate and title law
5 expertise which I think will become very important in this
6 litigation.

7 Mr. Mole has alluded that in his pleadings that Mr.
8 Amato and myself are your two closest friends. I find it
9 interesting that Mr. Amato and myself are your closest
10 friends that we were not contacted in connection with the 11 background check which must be performed in connection with 12 your appointment. Maybe other people don't think our
13 friendship is viewed the same as Mr. Mole.

14 Finally, Mr. Mole says that we have contributed money
15 to your campaign. Your Honor, as you know I didn't even 16 know you when you ran for office. I only met you in the 17 course of litigating cases in your court. To the best of my
18 knowledge I have never given a campaign contribution to you.
19 To the best of my knowledge you have never had a campaign to 20 which to contribute to. The Justice for All Ball was 21 something that was put together so that all of the judges of
22 the 24th Judicial District Court could have a single fund-
23 raiser, and I think the intent of that was to make it easier
24 on lawyers who contributed to judge's campaigns, and there
25 was some particular form as to how those proceeds were

1 divided up. I don't think they were divided up equally,
2 although how they were distributed I wasn't part of.

3 THE COURT: I don't remember the breakdown, but I do
4 know I was the smallest for what that's worth.

5 MR. LEVENSON: Judge, I think that the rule under
6 Section 455 in the cases make it clear that whether or not
7 we are your friend or even your close friend that is not
8 ground for recusation, and I think that the motion should
9 properly be denied.

10 THE COURT: Mr. Mole anything else you would like to 11 add again?

12 MR. MOLE: Yes, Your Honor. One of the difficult
13 decisions to make is how much of a record should I try to 14 make on this without a balance of the fact that I have to 15 practice law with these gentlemen and before you the rest of 16 my life but that I have a duty to my client. But I think
17 that the record that is made here today is enough, because I
18 don't think Mr. Levenson and Mr. Amato, they have said that 19 they dared me to say what I think are rumors. I don't want
20 to do that. They have not denied what I have said about the 21 relationship between you and them.

22 THE COURT: I have not denied it, and I don't think
23 they deny it.

24 MR. MOLE: Then the fact of the matter is Mr. Levenson
25 could very well deny it if he wanted to, and he has chosen

1 not to do that. That speaks more loudly than anything I
2 could say.

3 THE COURT: Well, you know the issue becomes one of, I
4 guess the confidence of the parties, not the attorneys.
5 Because when it is all said and done you all have been but
6 the spokesperson for the true people in interest and that's
7 the litigants. My concern is not with whether or not
8 lawyers are friends and for whatever value that contribution
9 is to a group as a whole. My concern is that the parties
10 are given a day in court which they can through you present
11 their case, and they can be adjudicated thoroughly without
12 bias, favor, prejudice, public opinion, sympathy, anything
13 else, just on law and facts. That's basically the charge we 14 give juries. We are no longer the juries, but if it was a
15 non-jury trial, we are the trier of fact. And there is a
16 ton of case law that says that I should charge myself
17 according to the same way I would charge a jury.

18 I have always taken the position that if there was ever
19 any question in my mind that this Court should recuse itself
20 that I would notify counsel and give them the opportunity if
21 they wanted to ask me to get off. That includes a case
22 wherein my cousin, Billy, Billy Porteous tries a case in 23 front of me in Gretna, and the plaintiff's lawyer is 24 absolutely delited. And I have got to go fully explain to 25 the jury that I never practiced with him and that they are

1 not to read anything into it. I don't fault you for your
2 filing. I think it is a situation where because of this
3 upward ongoing quick activity of this case because of dates
4 approaching that on its face it appears to be evil or bad or
5 improper. The reality is that none of the above are true.
6 The reality is that if anyone thinks they gain favor from me
7 because someone is in a case need only basically look at 8 what I have done in the past to know that that is a fiction.

9 The question is again in that Bernard case the court
10 said Section 450 requires not only that a Judge be 11 subjectively confident of his ability to be even handed but 12 there is a informed, rational objective observer would not 13 doubt his impartiality. Well, everything we do in the 14 judiciary is under a microscope anyhow. But if the rules
15 were such that every time a contributor and you take a case
16 with current contributions have been made, not 1990
17 contributions, have allowed the Judge to sit where 18 friendship, even "Close friendships are not to be 19 considered," I don't have any difficulty trying this case.

20 Now, after I rule can a party feel that they were
21 wronged? I can't stop that feeling. There is no tie:
22 somebody wins, somebody lose. Are they then upset?
23 Possibly. But that's not for me to concern myself with 24 because again whichever side wins by the evidence and the 25 law will win by the evidence and the law. And as I have

1 told plaintiff lawyers in the past, if 40 percent of zero is
2 zero, I assure you eleven percent of zero is still zero.
3 Now, does that ease your client's mind? I don't know. I
4 can't help you there. Does that make the informed observer
5 satisfied? I don't know. But in my mind I am satisfied
6 because if I had any question as to my ability, I would have
7 called and said, "Look, you're right." Do not think for one
8 moment that this Court went out and solicited this case.
9 This case this Court drew because some other members of the 10 bench couldn't hear it. The pool of judges was very small,
11 and I drew it.

12 Now, I ran the chaser sheet on this, and the reason I
13 talk about a flurry of activity up until the time I drew
14 this case, which was on January 16, 1996, document No. 190
15 or entry 190 in the case re-allotted Judge G.T. Porteous,
16 Jr., since that day when only 190 over a 3-year period
17 entries had been made we have to date, now we have had 102
18 entries made. It always happens that when we get close to 19 trial people get real, real interested. I can't explain it.
20 It just happens. I don't read anything devious or bad about
21 it. In fact, since the time you have come into the case or
22 your firm which was entry No. 210, we have had 82 of them.
23 So there has been a lot of activity, and I will attend to 24 it.

25 I received a multitude of pleadings to find out in

1 taking up other issues today, and I had issued an order and
2 I am hoping everyone got a copy of it. And if they didn't,
3 I don't know what happened. But entry no. 278 says, "Having
4 received the plaintiff's Motion to Recuse, the Court finds
5 it is in the best interest of justice that all motions are
6 deferred pending resolution of the motion to recuse.

7 MR. MOLE: I got that.

8 THE COURT: So I don't know what to tell you all other
9 than I do not believe this is a case where 28 USC 455 is
10 applicable. I don't think a well-informed individual can 11 question my impartiality in this case. Part of me has to 12 sit here and make sure that I don't over help or hurt either
13 one of you. That's always going to be a problem if you know
14 somebody on one side. I'm human, but I assure you I have 15 done this long enough that it won't bother me at all.
16 Saying no is the easiest thing. Saying zero is just a
17 number. Whether it is worth $140 million as you suggest, I
18 don't know. I don't know enough about this case. I don't 19 even know if you all know enough about this case given the 20 rash of pleadings that go back and forth. I'm not even sure
21 it is that complex, but it is sure being made fairly
22 complex.

23 Now, having said all of the above, I tell you now that 24 there is no way on this earth that I can get through any of 25 the motions pending and have a trial date by November 4th.

1 You all can forget it. It is actually impossible, which is
2 exactly what I virtually said when we had the status. I
3 won't be pushing anybody to trial on November 4th. I do
4 want, however, that these things remain in effect. The
5 requirements, those witness lists are cast in stone. I
6 think you all both submitted them. That much is a finished
7 deal. We are not going to be adding witnesses absent a
8 hearing for good cause shown why they should be added. Now,
9 I am not going to say that, I guess something could come up.
10 But that's cast in stone. Both Magistrate Wilkinson and I
11 have told you all that we are available for whatever
12 assistance you need because this is a non-jury trial. I
13 don't intend to enter into any discussions with you all on
14 that. I told you that I believe that Magistrate Wilkinson
15 did. My input is over at that point then. He acts as an 16 arbitrator or mediator if that ever gets to that. If it
17 doesn't, we try your case.

18 Because I know this is an important issue for you and 19 an important issue for your client, I am, in fact, going to 20 issue a judgment denying your motion to recuse myself. It
21 is significant, it is important. If you think it deserves
22 attention by the Fifth Circuit, that's why I am giving you
23 the judgment. If you go there, you do it with no offense to 24 me. And if they disagree with me, then they disagree with 25 me. I don't have a problem with that, counselor. I don't

1 want the issue to be left that you didn't have a mechanism,
2 and I don't think any of you want to do this thing twice.

3 So if you choose to go there, go there. Would I
4 conceive of any grant of a stay? Yes. Would I ask that
5 they expedite it? Probably, yes. And I would hope that you
6 would ask that they expedite it because that does not innure
7 to either side's benefit in this case.

8 MR. MOLE: One of the things that occurred to us and 9 that is that we have a remedy for a writ of mandamus, and we
10 haven't decided to do that.

11 THE COURT: That's why I thought a judgment was 12 necessary, and I don't know if an order would have given you
13 that ability. I am issuing it as a judgment denying your
14 motion to recuse for the reasons I stated on the record,
15 which you can get a transcript of it, of course. But, yes,
16 I told you now that's what I am going to do is give you the 17 guidance to do that.

18 MR. MOLE: One of my concerns is that we have a 19 November 4th trial date. I would have to try to get
20 discovery before then.

21 THE COURT: Does anyone here really believe I can
22 dispose of all of your motions before November 4th? I'm not 23 super human. I have continued all your motions because of 24 this motion to recuse myself.

25 MR. MOLE: We didn't file them to delay things. But I

1 understand Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: I didn't take it for that, but I'm saying I
3 did that on my own motion. Nobody asked me to stay it. I
4 could have done it, but I think whenever somebody asks for a
5 judge to recuse themselves, although technically I can
6 continue a proceeding and particularly in the ruling I had
7 made I think they are entitled for me not to do anything
8 more until we take up the issue. We took the issue up. If 9 you want to go across and do that, I am giving you the 10 procedural tool to do it.

11 MR. MOLE: I appreciate that.

12 THE COURT: Okay, anything else I can dispose of?

13 MR. LEVINSON: On October the 23rd it is scheduled to 14 appear for a pretrial conference.

15 THE COURT: Ignore it. Ignore it. There is no way on 16 earth I am going to do your pretrial. You have got too many 17 motions especially that you would have in the pretrial that 18 the motions are open.

19 MR. LEVENSON: I understand that, Judge. But would you
20 consider making it as a status conference so we can proceed?

21 THE COURT: I will do that as a status conference with 22 you all.

23 MR. MOLE: And no pretrial order?

24 THE COURT: No, obviously not. They will issue an
25 order that the pretrial order is hereby converted to a

1 status conference for whatever time I had it set. Just
2 whatever if that time is blocked out, we keep it at that
3 time.

4 MR. LEVENSON: That's fine, Judge.

5 THE COURT: Discovery I suggest that I believe should
6 be closed at this point in time.

7 MR. MOLE: I think we have everything scheduled that
8 needs to be scheduled, but we still have depositions going
9 on through the last one is October 28th.

10 THE COURT: That's fine. But that's by agreement?

11 MR. MOLE: That's by agreement.

12 THE COURT: That's by agreement. And then as I
13 understand it discovery will be closed?

14 MR. MOLE: Yes, Your Honor. We are cooperating pretty
15 much.

16 THE COURT: Depending on what you do, whether you will
17 be going to go forward and whether there is a stay over
18 there or request for expedited hearing, will depend on when
19 I give you a trial date. Maybe by the 23rd I would ask you
20 and if you are not in position to do it, counselor, I
21 understand. But on the 23rd it is a status conference. If 22 it is your client's desire to proceed with a mandamus or
23 appeal or whatever procedural remedy that is at his disposal
24 with the Fifth Circuit, if you will simply notify me to that
25 effect whether I would or would not set a date. I'm going

1 to set a date with that pending, I am not going to pass on
2 this case while the ruling of mine which may have some
3 impact on whether to recuse myself on this case. So if you
4 could let me know by that date.

5 MR. MOLE: We will do that, Judge.

6 THE COURT: Okay, all right. Thank you all.

7 MR. MOLE: Thank you, Judge.

Re: Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc.
 v. Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.
 Our File: 203-960142

Dear Don:

Lifemark is willing to offer you a fee for assisting with the Liljeberg case as follows:

1. Retainer of $100,000 payable upon enrollment of counsel of record.
2. A fee of $200,000 if after trial there is a judgment allowing Lifemark to terminate the pharmacy agreement with no liability for future damages.

The following sums would be added to the above retainer and fee based upon the level of damages contained in a judgment, provided that the judgment allows Lifemark to terminate the pharmacy agreement with no liability for future damages:

3. A fee $100,000 if the damages for past actions are less than $15 million in principal. (Total fee of $400,000)
4. A fee of $200,000 if the damages are less than $5 million in principal. (Total fee of $500,000)
5. A fee of $300,000 if the damages are zero. (Total fee of $600,000)

Further, Lifemark will pay you $100,000 as a severance fee in the event that Judge Porteous withdraws or if the case settles prior to trial. This would result in a total of $200,000 ($100,000 retainer plus $100,000) if the case settles or if Judge Porteous ceases to be our judge. This is to satisfy your concern that involvement in this time consuming case will harm your present practice. As you explained, if the trial is continued beyond June because Judge Porteous withdraws and gives the case to a new judge, you will not be able to remain involved. Also, Lifemark wants to give you some incentive to be involved, even if the case settles.

To reiterate, Lifemark is willing to offer you an outcome determinative fee. You would receive the following fees based upon the results described:

1. $200,000 if Judge Porteous withdraws, or if the case settles prior to trial ($100,000 retainer plus $100,000 severance).
2. $300,000. This would be the minimum payable for any result that allows Lifemark to terminate the pharmacy agreement with no liability for future damages.
3. $400,000 for a judgment or other result allowing Lifemark to terminate the contract with no liability for future damages, and with damages for past actions in an amount less than $15 million in principal.
4. $500,000. This sum would be payable if the damages are less than $5 million in principal, and Lifemark is able to terminate the contract as described above.
5. $600,000. This fee would be payable if the trial resulted in a judgment allowing Lifemark to terminate the contract and damages are zero.

I look forward to meeting with you later this week.

Very truly yours,

Joseph N. Mole

EXHIBIT 3

Mole

1 JUDGE LAKE: Please be seated.
2 Mr. Woods, you may proceed.
3 MR. WOODS: Thank you, your Honor.
4 JOSEPH MOLE, DULY SWORN, TESTIFIED:
02:47 5 DIRECT EXAMINATION
6 BY MR. WOODS:
7 Q. Mr. Mole, will you state your name to the Special
8 Committee, please?
9 A. My name is Joseph Nicholas Mole, and I am a --
02:48 10 Q. Okay. And how are you employed, sir?
11 A. I'm an attorney here in New Orleans.
12 Q. How long have you been an attorney in New Orleans?
13 A. Thirty years.
14 Q. Are you with a firm?
02:48 15 A. Yes, I am.
16 Q. And which firm?
17 A. The firm is Frilot, LLC -- actually, it's Frilot Partridge.
18 Q. What type of practice do you engage in?
19 A. I've always done principally commercial litigation.
02:48 20 Q. All right. Calling your attention to the years '96 and 21 '97, were you involved in a case -- one of the parties being 22 named Liljeberg?
23 A. Yes, I was. I was retained by Tenet to represent them.
24 Q. What was the case -- what was the style of the case?
25 25 A. Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc. and the St. Jude Hospital of 1 Louisiana, Inc. were the plaintiffs. The defendant was 2 Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, which was a Tenet subsidiary.

3 Q. Okay. And you represented Lifemark, then?
4 A. That's correct.
02:49 5 Q. Okay. Do you recall what month of '96 you became involved
6 in the case?
7 A. I believe it was April of '96.
8 Q. All right.
9 A. The case was set for trial.
02:49 10 Q. Have you had a chance to look over the pleadings, the 11 motion to recuse in that case?
12 A. I have.
13 Q. Okay. And have you looked at the docket sheet?
14 A. Yes, I have. I looked at my own pleadings index.
02:49 15 Q. Okay. You got on the case in April, '96.
16 The case had been active since how long, as you
17 recall?
18 A. Well, it's an interesting question. It began, to my 19 knowledge, as litigation in civil district court, in 02:49 20 New Orleans state court in, I believe, '87. It migrated to 21 federal bankruptcy court when the Liljebergs filed a Chapter
22 11. And, so, it had gone back to '87. The federal court
23 litigation kicked off in 1993, I believe.
24 Q. Okay. And you then got involved in 1996. Is that correct?
25 A. That's correct. Yeah, I enrolled.

1 Q. Now, before we go further, your attorney had requested an
2 immunity order for you; and I want to present that to you.

3 MR. WOODS: It's Exhibit Number 45, your Honors.

4 BY MR. WOODS:

02:50 5 Q. And you have seen a copy of that before, have you not?

6 A. Yes, I have.

7 Q. Okay. And you realize that you're testifying under 8 immunity and that anything you say cannot be used against you,
9 except for any false statements or perjury?

02:50 10 A. I understand.

11 Q. When you were in -- involved in --

12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I would like to get something 13 straight.

14 MR. WOODS: Yes, sir.

02:50 15 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I'm trying to think. There's 16 nothing in any of the reports that we have that suggested that 17 Mr. Mole has done anything wrong.

18 MR. WOODS: No, there's not.

19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But he -- but nonetheless, is it
02:50 20 your position, Mr. Mole, that you will not testify unless you
21 have an immunity order?

22 THE WITNESS: No, it's not, your Honor. My attorney
23 felt that it was best. I testified to the grand jury, and I
24 was interviewed by the FBI in connection with this matter; and 25 you will have to ask him. I don't do criminal work, but he v...51 1 thought it was best that I get -- 2 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, your position is you would 3 testify without the immunity order; you're just doing it at the 4 request of your attorney?

02:51 5 THE WITNESS: At his advice.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
7 MR. WOODS: Thank you, your Honor.
8 BY MR. WOODS:
9 Q. Mr. Mole, when you got on the case in April, '96, was Jake
02:51 10 Amato or Lenny Levenson involved in the case on the other side?
11 A. No, they were not, to my knowledge.
12 Q. And was Don Gardner involved on your side?
13 A. No, he was not.
14 Q. Do you recall approximately when Amato and Levenson became 02:51 15 attorneys of record for the other side?
16 A. I can place it by saying that I think the trial date, when 17 I got in, was sometime in late October, early November of '96.
18 Jake and Lenny signed up or enrolled as counsel about five or 19 six weeks prior to that date.
02:51 20 Q. In September, '96, or so?
21 A. That sounds right.
22 And Don enrolled, I believe, for us in late
23 February, -early March of '97. The trial date was continued.
24 Q. Okay. We'll get to Gardner's involvement; but when the two 12 25 of those became involved in 9 -- September of '96, before an

02:52 1 October or November trial date of '96, did that cause any 2 concern on your part?
3 A. Yes, it did.
4 Q. And would you explain to the Committee what concern you had 02:52 5 with those two individuals entering this complex case at such a 6 late date?
7 A. Well, I felt that it was odd, in a case that was a bench
8 trial, that two lawyers who had no previous involvement would 9 sign up that close to trial. I had gotten involved in April of 02:52 10 '96 and had some idea of how much history there was and how 11 much in the way of complex legal issues were involved in the 12 case. I also had some knowledge that the Liljebergs were very 13 prone to trying to influence the judicial process through 14 whatever means they could. So, it was a concern to me, yes.
02:53 15 Q. All right. What did you do based on that concern?
16 A. I began asking people -- i had some familiarity with -- 17 well, with the legal community and the Jefferson Parish
18 politics. So, I began to call people who knew that world and 19 asked them what they thought. And a lot of people wouldn't 02:53 20 talk to me, but my concerns were substantiated that Jake and 21 Lenny were close to Judge Porteous and that there was a risk 22 that their presence in the case would be a problem for my 23 client.
24 Q. Okay. Had they basically taken over as counsel for that 53 25 client?

02:53 1 A. The client already had numerous lawyers, bankruptcy
2 specialists, Don Richard who was the trial lawyer. Hans
3 Liljeberg was on the case. Doug Draper was a bankruptcy
4 lawyer. And I believe there were other lawyers. So, they 02:54 5 had -- they already had a stable of lawyers involved.

6 In the pretrial proceedings that we had yet to 7 go, they -- they took some interest; but they were never, in my 8 perception, the laboring oar.

9 Q. Okay. When did you file the motion to recuse?

02:54 10 A. I believe in September. I believe it was heard October 16, 11 if I recall, 1996. So, it would have been a few weeks before
12 that.

13 Q. Okay. I'm going to show you what has been marked and 14 admitted into evidence as Exhibit Number 19, which is the 02:54 15 motion to recuse. If you would, take a look at that.

16 Does that refresh -- that's a certified clerk's
17 copy of the motion -- the pleadings in the motion to recuse.

18 A. Yeah, that's my signature and my motion.

19 Q. At the time you filed the motion, were you aware of any 02:54 20 financial relationship between Amato and Levenson and 21 Judge Porteous?

22 A. No.

23 Q. And by "financial arrangement," I include the giving of 24 money or cash to Judge Porteous by Levenson or Amato.

25 15 A. No, I was not aware of that. If I -- if that were the

02:55 1 truth and I had known it, I certainly would have raised it in 2 this motion. I had no such information.

3 Q. And during the pendency of that motion, before it's ruled
4 on, did Judge Porteous mention to you or any of the parties
02:55 5 that he had received cash from Amato or Levenson?

6 A. No, he did not.

7 Q. Who responded to the motion in limine for the other side?

8 A. Looking at the part of the package you handed me as 9 Exhibit 19, I believe there's an opposition signed by Lenny
02:55 10 Levenson. No. That's Jake Amato.

11 I don't know whose signature it is. But the 12 signature block is for Lenny Levenson, and there's a signature
13 that may well be his. And then Ken Fonte, who was another one 14 of the Liljeberg lawyers, is below that.

02:56 15 Q. In that pleading, did they acknowledge that Amato or 16 Levenson had provided cash to Judge Porteous?

17 A. No. I don't recall exactly what they said, but they 18 certainly never reported --

19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I missed that last answer, the one
02:56 20 before that. You went through a list of names, and then you
21 said that seems to be blocked out.

22 Did Amato, in fact, sign that response?

23 THE WITNESS: I cannot read the signature.

24 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But there's a signature line for 02:56 25 Amato with a signature on it?

02:56 1 THE WITNESS: I'm looking at the reply memo, and
2 it's -- there's a signature line for Lenny Levenson and a block
3 with no signature line for Ken Fonte --
4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
02:56 5 MR. WOODS: Judge, I can put it on the Elmo. And it's 6 Exhibit 19 in your books.
7 BY MR. WOODS:
8 Q. Where did you see "Amato"?
9 A. No. If I said "Amato," I misspoke.
02:57 10 Q. Okay. So --
11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, Amato didn't sign it?
12 THE WITNESS: That's my -- my supposition is that's 13 Lenny's signature, because there's three letters of the same 14 sort. And it's Leonard L. Levenson; so, I assume it's his.
02:57 15 BY MR. WOODS:
16 Q. Okay. And there's no acknowledgement in those pleadings of 17 any prior cash being given by Amato or Levenson?
18 A. No. I've never received that information anywhere.
19 Q. And was there a denial in the response that there was any 02:57 20 special relationship between them and Judge Porteous, based on 21 what you raised in your motion to recuse?
22 A. Well, you know, in my motion to recuse, I danced around 23 that issue pretty carefully because I didn't want to accuse the 24 judge that was going to try my case of doing something of which 57 25 I had no evidence. So, it was an act of trying to suggest that

50 1 that was, you know, something that I was concerned about,
2 without actually saying it. So, I don't know that I raised the 3 issue that squarely.

02:58 4 Certainly, there was a denial, to my
5 recollection, from the other side that there was anything like
6 that.

7 Q. Okay.

8 A. But that's a very general answer based on my recollection.

9 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Counsel, if you pardon my 02:58 10 interruption.

11 MR. WOODS: Yes.

12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: At the time that you filed your 13 motion that included the recusal request, did you copy just 14 Levenson and -- or did you copy all the lawyers, including
02:58 15 Amato and Creely, or did you --

16 THE WITNESS: It's my practice to copy all lawyers who 17 are listed.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay. So, you -- you noticed
19 everyone?

02:58 20 THE WITNESS: To my recollection, your Honor.

21 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And prior to that time, were there
22 any pleadings in the case from opposing counsel where Amato
23 signed a pleading as opposed -- in other words, was the way
24 this response was signed, was that consistent with the way
25 pleadings from the other side would have been signed after 59

02:59 1 Amato and Creely came into the case?

2 I'm trying to get as to whether there -- whether

3 there was pleadings before signed by Amato. There's a motion

4 to recuse that's filed that alleges an improper relationship;

02:59 5 and for some reason, the response does not have Amato's

6 signature on it.

7 THE WITNESS: You know, I don't recall, your Honor.

8 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay.

9 THE WITNESS: There were so many lawyers, I never 02:59 10 focused on who signed, to be honest with you.

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Thank you.

12 BY MR. WOODS:

13 Q. And was there a ruling on the motion in limine?

14 A. The motion to recuse?

02:59 15 Q. The motion to recuse. I'm sorry.

16 A. I believe it was heard on October 16. It was denied from 17 the bench and there was a ruling the next day and it was 18 entered into the record.

19 Q. All right. When was that?

02:59 20 A. I believe it was October 17, it seems like, the order.

21 Q. And what did you do in response to that ruling?

22 A. We sought a writ of mandamus from the Fifth Circuit. It

23 was denied.

24 Q. And then what did you do?

00 25 A. We went on with preparing for trial. My client was

Speco 1st two Kersay 174

00:06 1 concerned because they obviously knew what I was concerned with 2 myself and asked if there was someone or some way we could 3 protect them from what I was led to believe could be an 4 unbalanced playing field. And we -- I looked into that. We 03:00 5 ultimately hired Don Gardner for that reason.
6 Q. All right. You mentioned that you were trying to level the 7 playing field. Was that at your insistence or your client's
8 insistence?
9 A. It was my client's insistence.
03:00 10 Q. And how did you go about trying to level the playing field?
11 How would you determine who to hire to level the playing field?
12 A. Well, I made a lot of phone calls. And I used to be 13 partners with Magistrate J. Wilkinson and, through him, members
14 of my firm and -- Tom Wilkinson, who was the parish attorney 03:01 15 for Jefferson Parish, I talked to him. And ultimately, he led 16 me to Don.
17 Q. All right. And what was the recommendation for Don 18 Gardner? Why did you go to Don Gardner? What -- what led you 19 to him?
03:01 20 A. Tom told me that he was a close personal friend of the 21 judge and that for purposes of leveling the playing field that 22 I couldn't do better, that Don was as close as people got to 23 Judge Porteous and if that's what I wanted that Don would be 24 the person.
03:01 25 Q. What did you feel about doing this as an attorney?

1 A. I didn't like it, would not have done it; but my clients
 2 insisted. You know, I've been in situations where I felt --
 3 there was many times where I felt that the other side had an 4 advantage because of a relationship with the Court; and I've 03:02 5 always felt that the best way to deal with that is to stand up
 6 against it, not to play that game.
 7 Q. Okay.
 8 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: You mean this court or just courts
 9 in general?
 03:02 10 THE WITNESS: Jefferson Parish. Never in federal 11 court.
 12 JUDGE LAKE: Can you pull the microphone to you, 13 please?
 14 Thank you.
 03:02 15 BY MR. WOODS:
 16 Q. And, Mr. Mole, did you then meet with Mr. Gardner?
 17 A. I did.
 18 Q. And did you discuss a fee arrangement?
 19 A. In a general sense.
 03:02 20 Q. Okay. And did you discuss his role in the case?
 21 A. I did.
 22 Q. Did you understand what kind of practice he had?
 23 A. I learned that he was primarily a domestic dispute lawyer,
 24 divorce work.
 25 Q. And did this case involve divorce work or domestic 00:03 1 relations?

2 A. It did not.
3 Q. Okay. Did you ultimately end up with a written fee
4 agreement with Don Gardner?
01:03 5 A. I did.
6 Q. I'm going to show you what's marked and admitted into 7 evidence as Exhibit 10. And if you would, take a look at that 8 and see if that is a copy of the fee agreement you entered 9 into.
03:03 10 A. It is.
11 Q. I'm going to show this on the Elmo, Mr. Gardner. If you
12 would explain --
13 A. "Mole." "
14 Q. Yes, sir.
03:03 15 If you would, explain --- see if I can get it here
16 to --
17 This is dated February 18th, '97.
18 A. Yes, sir. I see that.
19 Q. And this is after the motion to recuse has been overruled
03:04 20 and your mandamus to the Fifth Circuit had been denied?
21 A. That is correct.
22 Q. And you're set for trial when?
23 A. I don't recall what the setting was then, but ultimately it
24 was set for June of '97.
14 25 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: I'm sorry. Is there a Bates

03:04 1 number on that exhibit?
2 MR. WOODS: No, your Honor, not on the one I have.
3 But let me see if there is --
4 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: You called it Exhibit 10, and it's 03:04 5 not 10 in my book.
6 Oh, well, maybe -- maybe I --
7 MR. WOODS: It's the last two pages of Exhibit 10,
8 your Honor.
9 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Oh, okay. Sorry.
03:04 10 Thank you. Yes.
11 BY MR. WOODS:
12 Q. Mr. Mole, would you read for the Committee the fee
13 agreement that you had with Mr. Gardner?
14 A. I can just read from the letter. "Lifemark is willing to 03:05 15 offer you a fee for assisting with the Liljeberg case as 16 follows. Retainer of $100,000 payable upon enrollment as 17 counsel of record"; and, then, 2, "a fee of two hundred if 18 after trial there is a judgment allowing Lifemark to terminate 19 the pharmacy agreement with no liability for future damages."
03:05 20 And then it goes on. Do you want me to keep 21 reading?
22 Q. Yes, please.
23 A. "The following sums will be added to the above retainer and 24 fee based upon the level of damages contained in the judgment
25 provided the judgment allows Lifemark to terminate the pharmacy

00:05 1 agreement with no liability for future damages."
2 Number 3 is -- and then it goes on with numbered
3 paragraphs.
4 "3, A fee" should be "of 100,000 if the damages
03:05 5 for past actions are less than 15 million in principal, for a
6 total fee of 400,000; 4, a fee of two hundred if the damages
7 are less than 5 million in principal, for a total fee of 8 500,000; and a fee of 300,000 if the damages are zero, for a
9 total fee of 600,000.
03:06 10 "Further, Lifemark will pay you $100,000 as a 11 severance fee in the event that Judge Porteous withdraws or if 12 the case settles prior to trial. This results in a total of 13 200,000, one hundred retainer plus one hundred if the case 14 settles or Judge Porteous ceases to be our judge. This is to 03:06 15 satisfy your concern" -- I didn't catch the last few words --
16 "concern" --
17 Q. -- "that involvement in --" Other Legal 18 A. -- "this time consuming case will harm your present
19 practice, as you explained, if the trial is continued beyond
03:06 20 June because Judge Porteous withdraws and gives the case to a 21 new judge, you will not be able to remain involved. Also,
22 Lifemark wants to give you some incentive to be involved even 23 if the case settles."
24 And, then, do you want me to keep reading?
07 25 Q. Yes, sir.

07 1 A. "To reiterate, Lifemark is willing to offer you an outcome
2 determinative fee. You would receive the following fees based
3 upon the results described. 200,000 if Judge Porteous
4 withdraws or if the case settles prior to trial; one hundred 03:07 5 retainer plus one hundred severance.
6 "Two, 300,000, this would be the minimum payable
7 for any result that allows Lifemark to terminate the pharmacy
8 agreement with no liability for future damages.
9 "Three, four hundred, for a judgment or other
03:07 10 result allowing Lifemark to terminate the contract with no
11 liability for future damages and with damages for prior -- past 12 actions in an amount less than 15 million in principal.
13 "Four, 500,000, this sum would be payable if the 14 damages are less than 5 million in principal and Lifemark is 03:07 15 able to terminate the contract as described above.
16 "Five, 600,000, this fee would be payable if the 17 trial resulted in a judgment allowing Lifemark to terminate the 18 contract and damages are zero.
19 "I look forward to meeting you -- with you later
03:08 20 this week. Very truly yours." And then it's my name.
21 Q. Now, Mr. Mole, there's some unusual contingencies listed 22 there. Would you explain to the Committee why you had those 23 different fee levels for Mr. Gardner's involvement?
24 A. Well, this was not a negotiated -- this proposal was jo 8 25 accepted by Don as written. So, that was entirely the product

03:08 1 of my way of thinking.

2 We wanted to get him involved and keep him
3 interested. The pharmacy agreement that's alluded to in the 4 letter is -- was a very onerous contract between the 03:08 5 Liljebergs, who ran the pharmacy, and the Kenner Regional 6 Medical Center, which Tenet then owned and which was owned by 7 the subsidiary Lifemark.

8 That pharmacy agreement resulted in having a 9 pharmacy that served the patients of the Kenner Regional 03:09 10 Medical Center, but it had been in litigation with that 11 hospital since 1987. It was a very acrimonious relationship.
12 It hindered the health care in the hospital. The nurses and 13 doctors and staff felt that they were held hostage by the 14 pharmacy. They did not always get the medications from the 03:09 15 pharmacy that they needed, quickly. Or if there was a cost
16 concern, the pharmacy would sometimes hold up the medication.

17 It was a very bad contract. In addition, it cost
18 the hospital, we estimated, between one and a half and two 19 million dollars a year in extra payments above and beyond what 03:09 20 a normal contract would have cost. So, that was the driving 21 motivation for the -- for the fee arrangement, to get rid of 22 that contract. So, that was very important to us.

23 I also had some concern hiring Don, who was a 24 nice guy but I didn't know him. I didn't want me and my client
.0 25 to be made a fool of, and I wanted his loyalty to be a hundred

.. 10 1 percent to us and not -- not distracted. I wanted him to be 2 interested in the outcome.
3 Q. So, several of those provisions were to ensure his loyalty
4 to your side. Is that correct?
03:10 5 A. That's correct. And to a good result.
6 Q. And did you do that because you understood that he was a
7 friend of the judge and he was a friend of the other two 8 lawyers on the other side?
9 A. Yes.
03:10 10 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: This looks as if it's payable 11 whether or not he put in -- in any work.
12 THE WITNESS: Yes. Yes, your Honor, it was.
13 BY MR. WOODS:
14 Q. And did Mr. Gardner take part in the preparation of the 03:10 15 trial or did he merely just sit through the trial as a lawyer
16 at the table and not question witnesses?
17 A. He sat through the trial. He did not -- he did not take 18 any witnesses. I don't believe -- I don't know that he 19 attended any depositions, but he certainly didn't take any or 03:11 20 prepare any pleadings.
21 Q. So, did you ultimately end up paying him a hundred thousand 22 for his role in the case?
23 A. We did. The client did.
24 Q. And that was for the purpose of leveling the playing field?
1 25 A. That's an accurate way to sum up the motivation.

03:11 1 Q. Did Gardner -- during the course of your relationship on 2 this representation, did he ever mention anything concerning
3 Judge Porteous?
4 A. Yeah, we talked about Judge Porteous.

03:11 5 Q. What did he say?
6 A. You know, he gave me some insight into the judge's
7 personality. Don -- I have to say Don was always steadfast in 8 saying that he was not going to be able to influence the 9 judge's determination of the case.

03:11 10 He told me about his social relationship with the 11 judge, that he would drink wine with him, go to his house,
12 entertain him, attend social functions with him, things like 13 that. He offered me the insight that the judge's mother had 14 been a nurse, I think a head nurse at Baptist Hospital, and 03:12 15 that may have created some normal human prejudices or beliefs 16 concerning the issues in how -- a case that involved nurses and 17 hospitals.

18 Q. Do you remember being interviewed by the FBI prior to your 19 grand jury testimony?

03:12 20 A. I do.

21 Q. And you've reviewed that memorandum of interview, have you
22 not?

23 A. I believe in your presence, Mr. Woods, yes.

24 Q. Okay. Do you recall Don Gardner saying anything about 12 25 Judge Porteous' behavior on the federal bench as opposed to the

00:12 1 state bench?

2 A. I don't remember at what point in the proceeding, but I

3 remember him telling me that he felt the judge needed to stop

4 this kind of behavior, that it was okay on the state bench but

03:12 5 now that he was a federal judge he shouldn't be doing it. And

6 I don't remember the precise context."

7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What kind of behavior are you

8 referring to?

9 THE WITNESS: His relationship with Jake and Lenny.

11:59 10 BY MR. WOODS:

11 Q. All right. And there was one other comment you made -- or 12 that you related to the FBI concerning Gardner telling you

13 something about the Jeep leases or the Jeep purchases?

14 A. Apparently -- I have no direct knowledge of this -- the 03:13 15 judge's son or sons had a Jeep or Jeeps; and there was some

16 statement to me from which I inferred that Don had some concern

17 that those had been provided by Jake and/or Lenny in some way.

18 Q. Okay. And you've reviewed your grand jury testimony, and 19 it's true and accurate?

03:13 20 A. As I recall, yes.

21 Q. And the memorandum of interview was true and correct?

22 A. As I recall, yes.

23 Q. Okay.

24 MR. WOODS: Thank you. I pass the witness,

03 25 your Honor.

03:13 1 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: I have a question. What -- how
2 did you develop this one hundred, two hundred -- this sliding
3 scale of payments? Was that totally of your own devising or 4 the client's devising or did somebody suggest those -- that?

03:14 5 THE WITNESS: Those were numbers that were arrived at 6 between my client and myself.

7 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Numbers, yes; but what about the 8 idea of the scale, the contingencies and all that?

9 THE WITNESS: It was -- it was largely my creation, 03:14 10 and it was reflecting my client's concerns that the -- the 11 priorities of what we would reward with fees were their 12 concerns.

13 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What was the -- what was the -- 14 apart from the sliding scale, apparently if Judge Porteous
03:14 15 withdrew then Gardner would get another hundred thousand 16 dollars.

17 THE WITNESS: Don had expressed some concern that he 18 was investing time and that he had a very active practice.
19 And, you know, I have witnessed that. I have been in Jefferson 03:15 20 Parish. And he -- you know, just randomly, where -- he would 21 have to give up a lot of work on small -- relatively smaller 22 cases that he made money on in volume and that was -- it would 23 interrupt the flow of his work.

24 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Well, how would -- how would it take 5 25 more of his time? If he was invested for a hundred thousand

.. 15 1 dollars, what --

2 THE WITNESS: He would lose the opportunity --

3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- why -- why would he get another
4 hundred thousand dollars if Porteous withdrew?

03:15 5 It seems like if Porteous stayed on the case, he 6 would be staying on the case longer for this hundred thousand
7 dollars than getting the hundred thousand dollars if Porteous
8 withdrew. So, I mean, it seems -- it seems just the opposite
9 of his -- of the value of his time.

03:15 10 If this judge -- if this judge never withdraws
11 for the next five or six or seven years, I only get a hundred 12 thousand dollars. If he withdraws, I can go back to my busy -- 13 busy practice and take another hundred thousand dollars with 14 me.

03:15 15 I mean, I'm trying to see the justification for 16 the extra payment if -- if Judge Porteous were to withdraw.

17 THE WITNESS: Well, if the judge withdrew, we would 18 have remaining an agreement with Don. I didn't want him to 19 continue in the case --

03:16 20 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, that would keep --

21 THE WITNESS: Yeah.

22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- keep him -- kind of buy him out
23 of that lawsuit, because it was going to take an extended
24 period of time regardless of whether it was Judge Porteous or 6 25 not. Was that your thinking?

16 1 THE WITNESS: Yes.

2 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Judge Porteous, do you have any

3 questions?

4 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Just a few, your Honor.

03:16 5 CROSS-EXAMINATION

6 BY JUDGE PORTEOUS:

7 Q. Just very briefly. The -- again, you brought in Gardner,

8 you said, to even the playing field?

9 A. Yes, sir.

03:16 10 Q. Why would that then suggest that I would withdraw?

11 A. I'm not sure there's a direct link between those. I think

12 it was Don's concern -- my concern that if you withdrew I would

13 no longer need Don and -- but he would still be on a contract

14 with us, and I wanted some closure to that.

03:17 15 Q. Well, the question is why did you think Don getting in the 16 case would cause me to withdraw?

17 A. I'm not sure that I was --

18 Q. You're bringing him in on your side to even the playing 19 field.

03:17 20 A. Yes, sir.

21 Q. What made you believe that I would withdraw now that Don

22 was in the case? Did you want him to talk to me?

23 A. I thought there might be some concern on your part that it

24 would be difficult for you to decide a case with friends on 25 both sides.

00:17 1 Q. But judges try, traditionally, cases all the time with
2 friends on both sides.
3 A. Yes.
4 Q. During your trial, I think you indicated that I was a
03:17 5 gentlemen, professional, and polite and let you argue as a
6 lawyer evidentiary rules. Is that right?
7 A. That's correct.
8 Q. And I believe you also indicated that -- now, of course
9 trial lawyers always think they have lost when somebody rules
03:18 10 against them.
11 A. Whenever I lose, I think the judge has got it wrong.
12 Q. Of course. Did you also testify that I'm a relatively easy
13 person to appear in front of?
14 A. I don't think I testified, because I wasn't under oath; but 03:18 15 I think I probably said that.
16 Q. Well, under the grand jury, you were under oath, weren't
17 you?
18 A. Oh, okay. Then -- I thought you were reading from the 19 trial transcript.
03:18 20 Q. No, no.
21 A. I would agree with that.
22 Q. Okay. And we didn't waste time or do foolish things that 23 an inexperienced judge would do?
24 A. I thought you were a very good trial judge.
18 25 Q. And you said you "didn't feel he was terribly unfair about 03:18 1 evidentiary rulings"?

2 A. No.
3 Q. You said that, though?
4 A. I would agree with it now. I don't recall my exact words.
03:18 5 Q. Well, do you want me to show it to you?
6 A. No.
7 Q. Okay. Mr. Mole, there was also a point in the trial -- and 8 I think it had been going on awhile, on a Friday, and I lost my 9 temper.
03:18 10 A. It was a Thursday.
11 Q. Whatever it was.
12 And threw some binders. I think we had been in 13 this trial awhile.
14 A. I remember it well.
03:19 15 Q. And is it fair to say that this was a pretty tedious type 16 of trial, where you had a lot of exhibits, a lot of technical 17 stuff going on at all times?
18 A. Yes.
19 Q. You had hundreds, if not thousands, of exhibits, did you
03:19 20 not?
21 A. We had a lot of exhibits, yes, sir.
22 Q. Well, certainly more than a hundred?
23 A. A lot more.
24 Q. Okay. Now, it was after, I believe, you had called a 03:19 25 witness direct, crossed by the other side, direct again by 03:19 1 yourself, and then I asked some questions?

2 A. I recall that.
3 Q. And then you wanted to ask some additional questions?
4 A. I asked if I could follow up.
03:19 5 Q. And I said no?
6 A. You did.
7 Q. And I think words to the effect was I was exceeding my 8 authority?
9 A. Yeah. I think I referenced one of the Federal Rules of 03:19 10 Evidence.
11 Q. And I got --
12 A. You were pissed.
13 Q. And "pissed" is a fair statement.
14 And we shut it down?
03:19 15 A. Yes.
16 Q. Now, if it was a Thursday, we must have been off for -- did 17 we take a day off? Because I don't recall Friday.
18 A. We came back Monday.
19 Q. Monday?
03:20 20 A. I believe, yeah.
21 Q. When we came back, did I, in fact, dictate an order into 22 the record?
23 A. Yeah.. You had what appeared to be a fairly well prepared
24 thought out ruling.
03:20 25 Q. Allowing -- saying that I didn't think I had exceeded my 20 1 authority and allowing myself to follow up. Is that right? Or 2 words to that effect?

3 A. You overruled my objection but allowed me to go ahead and 4 follow up, as I recall.

03:20 5 Q. Right.

6 And not only did I allow you to follow up, I gave 7 you a copy of the questions I had asked that witness, did I
8 not?

9 A. Yes.

03:20 10 Q. And so I did let you, uninterrupted, have additional 11 questions?

12 A. That's correct.

13 Q. Did you think I was fair doing that?

14 A. Yes.

03:20 15 Q. So, I changed my mind because I was wrong?

16 A. I don't know what your thought process was but --

17 Q. But I let you ask them?

18 A. But you did, yes, sir.

19 Q. And after that, I didn't have -- nothing different changed
03:20 20 about my demeanor on the bench, did it?

21 A. Nope.

22 Q. Still finished the trial?

23 A. Yes.

24 Q. Now, isn't it also an accurate statement that this was and 25 had been contentious for years and years and years?

1 A. Extremely.

2 Q. And that -- I think this case may have gone to this court
3 on a couple of occasions and maybe even to the Supreme Court on 4 one occasion.

03:21 5 A. Well, between this and related litigation with Travelers,
6 the case had been to the Fifth Circuit, I think I once counted,
7 four or five times and the Supreme Court at least once or 8 twice.

9 Q. And the Travelers case also had some part and parcel to do
03:21 10 with this case at some point?

11 A. Pretty much, yeah.

12 Q. And you had never really gotten any trial dates that stuck
13 before it came to me?

14 A. Well, there was one trial date when I stepped in; and I 03:21 15 think, at the parties' request and your advice, we moved it to 16 the summer of '07. And that was it.

17 Q. And we kept to a schedule so you folks could get this case
18 tried?

19 A. We got it tried.

03:21 20 Q. That they hadn't been able to do up until that point in 21 time?

22 A. Yes.

23 Q. And it had gone from judge to judge to judge?

24 A. Yeah. It had been with a number of federal judges, but you
25 were the only one I saw.

Q. 22 1 Q. And I believe I said, "I'm the last federal judge you-all
2 are going to see. We're going to get your case tried."

3 A. I believe you said words to that effect, yes.

4 Q. Okay.

03:22 5 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I don't have any additional 6 questions, Judges.

7 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right.

8 MR. WOODS: I have a couple of follow-up.

9 REDIRECT EXAMINATION

10 BY MR. WOODS:

11 Q. Mr. Mole, Judge Porteous had excellent recall as to dates
12 and questions and losing temper. During the course of that, 13 did he ever tell you that he had a financial relationship with 14 Jake Amato?

03:22 15 A. No.

16 Q. Did you become aware or were you ever advised that during 17 1999, while this case was pending -- as I understand, the case
18 was tried in the summer of '97 and a ruling wasn't relayed or 19 wasn't given until April 26, 2000. Is that correct?

03:22 20 A. That is correct.

21 Q. Were you aware that Judge Porteous had received cash from 22 Amato in May or June of '99 of approximately $2,000?

23 JUDGE PORTEOUS: With all due respect, your Honor, I
24 must object. That's well outside the scope of any 25 cross-examination. Nothing in my cross-examination suggested

00:23 1 it. That's an area that counsel certainly could have explored
2 in direct. He chose not to.

3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: That's a very pertinent objection
4 for a man of your limited abilities, sir, that you claim. And 03:23 5 it is overruled because we are not bound by the conventional 6 rules of evidence here and there's clearly been evidence. And 7 if you want to examine him again later, you can do that.

8 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Your Honor, you now have referenced 9 twice to my mental stability. Is your Honor still okay trying 03:23 10 this case?

11 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Absolutely. Every --

12 JUDGE PORTEOUS: You referenced it twice.

13 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Every time you open your mouth, 14 Judge Porteous, I'm more and more convinced of your mental 03:23 15 acuity.

16 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I didn't even know that was part of 17 the hearing today. It's not included in the charge.

18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sir, you may sit down.

19 JUDGE PORTEOUS: All right.

03:24 20 BY MR. WOODS:

21 Q. Were you aware of any cash changing hands in '99 during the 22 pendency of this suit?

23 A. No. I would have been very alarmed to find out that Jake 24 was giving money to the judge during the case as being under 24 25 submission for decision by Judge Porteous.

03:24 1 MR. WOODS: Okay. Thank you.
2 JUDGE PORTEOUS: May I have one potential follow-up?
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
4 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Or just a couple?
03:24 5 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
6 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Not even on that.
8 RECROSS-EXAMINATION
9 BY JUDGE PORTEOUS:
10 Q. Are you aware that, again, while this case was under 03:24 11 advisement, that your counsel Mr. Gardner accompanied me and my 12 family to Las Vegas for a bachelor party?
13 A. No, I did not know that.
14 Q. So, he went -- if I represent to you that he went, do you 15 find anything wrong with that?
03:24 16 A. You know, I find something wrong with the whole system that 17 allows that to happen, Judge Porteous. So, yeah, I do.
18 Q. Okay. But if he -- should I have recused because I went 19 with Gardner?
20 A. Well, I'm not the judge here but --
03:25 21 Q. I'll withdraw that question.
22 A. Yeah, you should. I think you should.
23 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I'll withdraw the question. I don't 24 have any further questions now.
25 MR. WOODS: May he be excused, your Honors?
26 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.

03:25 1 Mr. Mole, thank you for testifying.

2 MR. WOODS: We would call Robert Creely next.

3 Mr. Creely is down the hall in 204. Can you
4 bring him in, please?

03:25 5 (Witness being summoned to the stand)

6 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: What I alluded to earlier,
7 Judge Porteous, is the fact that up until about six weeks ago,
8 you were vigorously asserting through counsel that you were 9 unable to assist in your own defense mentally, that you had 03:26 10 limited memory and limited ability. And I just want you to 11 know that, as far as I am concerned, you're doing a splendid 12 job of representing yourself.

13 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Well, your Honor, when I'm placed in 14 a position where I have to defend myself, no matter what 03:26 15 abilities I actually have, I have to try and assert the 16 minimum, because I've not been allowed to get additional 17 counsel.

18 And I understand your position. But I am dealing 19 with my life in this situation, your Honor. And to suggest 03:26 20 that that in some way reflects other periods of time that I've 21 been seeing this mental healthcare professional, is a mighty
22 microscopic view of my position. So -- but I understand yours.

23 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.

24 MR. WOODS: Your Honor, this is Mr. Creely and his 03:26 25 attorney, Ralph Capitelli.

MOTION TO RECUSE

NOW INTO COURT, through undersigned counsel, comes Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. ("Lifemark"), who respectfully submits that Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.'s ("LEI") last minute enrollment of Jacob Amato and Leonard Levenson as trial counsel in this matter creates an appearance of impropriety prohibited under 28 U.S.C. §455(a).

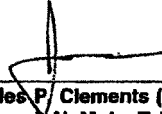

Lifemark is in no way suggesting that this Court could not be impartial in determining this matter. But, as set forth fully in the Memorandum in Support attached hereto, the mere appearance of impropriety requires recusal. Thus, for the foregoing reasons and the reasons set forth in the memorandum, Lifemark respectfully requests that this Court recuse itself from this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §455(a).

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO RECUSE

With great reluctance, Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. ("Lifemark") finds it necessary to request that this Court exercise the discretion granted it under 28 U.S.C. §455 and recuse itself from further handling of this matter.

QUESTION PRESENTED

The question presented by this motion is as follows. The standard of recusal under 28 U.S.C. §455(a) is this: Does the situation at hand create an appearance of impropriety "to the well-informed, thoughtful and objective observer, rather than the hypersensitive, cynical and suspicious person?" United States v. Jordan, 49 F.3d 152, 156 (5th Cir. 1995). This is an objective test - the Court's actual bias is not at issue. Id. The facts of this case that create a §455(a) appearance are these: (1) this litigation has a decade-long history; (2) trial in this matter, without a jury is set for November 4, 1996; (3) the Liljebergs already had five long-standing counsel of record when, on September 12, 1996 they added Jacob Amato and Leonard Levenson, two of the Court's closest friends, as additional counsel; (4) the Liljebergs seek at least $110 million as damages in this extremely complex case, and they gave Messrs.

SC00555

Levenson and Amato an 11% contingency fee for less than three months involvement; and (5) the Liljebergs have a documented and clear history of attempting to use political influence and they have accused others of attempting to acquire improper influence over the judiciary. Given these facts, Lifemark believes that the answer to the §455(a) question as posed by the Fifth Circuit in United States v. Jordan is a clear yes.

BACKGROUND

This lawsuit had its genesis in a lawsuit filed in the Civil District Court in New Orleans in 1987 by Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc. ("LEI") against Lifemark concerning the interpretation of a contract between Lifemark and LEI. When LEI filed bankruptcy in January 1993, it also filed a motion to force assumption of this contract pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §365. Thereafter, Lifemark counterclaimed, removed the CDC litigation to the Bankruptcy Court, and successfully moved for withdrawal of the reference so that the entire controversy concerning LEI and Lifemark moved to the District Court. LEI's original pleading in this case in this Court was filed in May 1993. Thus, if the history of this litigation is measured by the Civil District Court filings, it is almost ten years old. If it is measured by the original pleading filed in Federal Court, it is over three years old. Trial without a jury is scheduled to begin on November 4, 1996. The Liljebergs seek over $110 million in damages from Lifemark and its parent AMI.

LEI has had numerous lawyers during the history of this controversy. As of one month ago, it had five lawyers signed on to this case, most of whom have been involved for years in the specific controversy that is set to go to trial before this Court on November 4, 1996. Nonetheless, on September 12, 1996, LEI sought and was granted leave to add two more attorneys, Jacob J. Amato, Jr. and Leonard L. Levenson. Messrs. Levenson and Amato were given an 11% contingency fee. The Liljebergs have given none of their other lawyers a contingency fee. The Liljebergs also apparently have asked one of their other lawyers, William Connick, to withdraw, leaving six counsel of record. This is an extremely complicated lawsuit involving numerous issues that have been in discovery and litigation for almost ten years. The addition at the very last minute of two lawyers who are unfamiliar with the file is of questionable value as to potential contribution to the preparation and presentation of the evidence. The circumstances of their addition as counsel create concern because of their personal relationship with Your Honor.

Your Honor's relationship with Messrs. Amato and Levenson is well known to the legal community. It needs no elaboration in this memorandum. This would be of no concern were it not for the timing of their addition, and the fact that the Liljebergs and LEI clearly believe that influence with governmental bodies, including judges, can be bought. Attached hereto as Exhibit "A" is the Fifth Circuit's unpublished opinion in the controversy between Travelers and LEI. In that litigation, following an adverse result, LEI accused Judge Mentz of being influenced by his membership in social organizations whose membership included attorneys for Travelers. The Fifth Circuit characterized the Liljebergs' accusations as "lengthy, unsworn, and extremely intemperate (if not contemptuous)" They alleged that Judge Mentz' membership in the Boston Club along with "several attorneys" from law firms representing Travelers supposedly created "a situation in which a reasonable person would question the judge's impartiality, mandating disqualification and vacation of the judgments." See Exhibit A at pp. 7-8. The Liljebergs further attacked Judge Mentz by alleging that "two of the partners of the law firm representing Travelers 'had a reputation in the New Orleans area community as being . . . influential Republican Party patron[s] who had significant contact with party officials responsible for making recommendations for federal appointments.'" Id. at note 5.

Attached as Exhibit "B" is an Affidavit signed by J. Larry Lidell. In 1986, Mr. Lidell was terminated by Lifemark as its director of public relations of the St. Jude Hospital after four months employment. In 1995 he signed the Affidavit attached as Exhibit B while in the offices of the Liljebergs' attorney and before a court reporter. At his deposition, it became obvious that the Affidavit was framed by the Liljebergs and their counsel. Significantly, on the second page of the Affidavit, Mr. Lidell recited the following: "Mr. Scott Athens [an executive of Lifemark's parent, AMI] also bragged repeatedly how well-connected their attorneys, Mr. Harry Hardin and his associate, Mr. Dirk Wegman, both with Jones, Walker, were with the courts and how strong they were with certain judges. Lifemark/AMI was confident they could get a favorable ruling for Lifemark/AMI against the Liljebergs."

Finally, attached as Exhibit "C" is a memorandum authored by John McDaniel, who was employed by Lifemark as the chief executive officer of the hospital from 1985 to 1990. On May 24, 1988 he wrote this memo to Donna Erb, an in-house lawyer at

AMI, concerning the never-ending controversy with the Liljebergs and their multifarious demands, most of which are still part of this litigation. Mr. McDaniel identified the document at his deposition. On page 5 he recited the following:

Donna, Mr. Liljeberg was adamant about negatively impacting AMI if these issues could not be resolved through settlement efforts and indicated his intentions to cause a "public movement" against AMI involving both mayorial and city council resolutions, key community leader and physician support against AMI. He indicated that he would enlist civic organizations, federal, state and parish politicians, and even the Catholic Church in his effort to discredit AMI.

Clearly, the Liljebergs believe that public officials, including judges, can be influenced through social contact. They have accused others of doing it, and they have threatened to do it themselves.

ARGUMENT

Neither Mr. Amato nor Mr. Levenson have any particular expertise in cases of this sort. Both are primarily personal injury lawyers. The case has a long and complicated history, and it is unlikely that they can be of significant assistance at trial. It is respectfully submitted that the Liljebergs ostensibly believe, albeit mistakenly, that they can influence Your Honor by hiring two of Your Honor's closest social, political and professional friends immediately before trial. They seek to gain the Court's favor and achieve partiality, a tactic not foreign to their personal concepts of achieving results by that means. Indeed, they have been the subject of two Fifth Circuit opinions on the subject, one of which has reached the Supreme Court. Travelers Insurance Company v. St. Jude Hospital of Kenner, La., Inc., attached as Exhibit A; Liljeberg v. Health Service Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847; 108 S.Ct. 2194 (1988).

As observed by the Fifth Circuit in Travelers, their litigation tactics are intemperate and they have only contempt for the judicial system. Their cynicism is again on display in this case.

While Lifemark does not suggest that Your Honor could or would be influenced through the last minute hiring of two apparently unnecessary lawyers who are both extremely close to the Court, it is clear, based upon their own incredible record of litigation tactics, that the Liljebergs believe the opposite to be true. Under the circumstances, it is respectfully submitted that Your Honor is duty bound to remove any appearance of impropriety. In spite of Your Honor's attempts to be fair, the obviousness of the Liljebergs' intentions, coupled with the timing of the hiring of these lawyers, will always leave questions in the eyes of any objective observer, the "man in the street", who is aware of the Court's relationships with Messrs. Amato and Levenson and the Liljebergs' attitudes toward the political and judicial systems. See Potashnick v. Port City Constr. Co., 609 F.2d 1101, 1111 (5th Cir. 1980). Under such circumstances, Lifemark suggests that Your Honor, the federal courts, and the litigants in this case (including the Liljebergs) are all best served by Your Honor's recusal.

The legal standard for recusal under these circumstances is set forth in 28 U.S.C. §455:

§455. Disqualification of justice, judge, or magistrate

(a) Any justice, judge, or magistrate of the United States shall disqualify himself in any proceeding in which his impartiality might reasonably be questioned.

As the Fifth Circuit has recently held, the appropriate inquiry under Section 455 "is an objective inquiry." The question is "how things appear to the well informed, thoughtful and objective observer, rather than the hypersensitive, cynical and suspicious person." United States v. Jordan, 49 F.3d 152, 156 (5th Cir. 1995). The Fifth Circuit noted that it has established a body of case law applying the Section 455(a) standard, but that "no case is precisely on point; after all, each Section 455(a) case is extremely fact intensive and fact bound, and must be judged on its unique facts and circumstances more than by comparison to situations considered in prior jurisprudence." As in this case, United States v. Jordan involved a close personal relationship between the judge and a lawyer involved in the case. The Court noted that there was absolutely no question of the judge's bias, but that nonetheless, an objective observer, fully informed of the relationships and facts involved in that case might harbor some suspicion of impropriety. As the Fifth Circuit has noted in another case on this subject:

Because 28 U.S.C. §455(a) focuses on the appearance of impartiality, as opposed to the existence in fact of any bias or prejudice, a judge faced with a potential ground for disqualification ought to consider how his participation in a given case looks to the average person on the street. Use of the word "might" in the statute was intended to indicate that disqualification should follow if the reasonable man, were he to know all of the circumstances, would harbor doubts about the judge's impartiality.

(Emphasis Added)

Potashnick v. Port City Constr. Co., 609 F.2d 1101, 1111 (5th Cir. 1980). In United States v. Jordan, the Fifth Circuit relied heavily upon Liljeberg v. Health Services Acquisition Corp. In that case, the Supreme Court noted that a judge does not even have to have knowledge of the facts that create an appearance of impropriety "so long as the public might reasonably believe that he or she knew." 108 S.Ct. at 2194.

In this case, Your Honor's relationships with Mr. Levenson and Mr. Amato are very well known. It is unfortunate that the Liljebergs have attempted to capitalize on those personal relationships in an apparent attempt to achieve an unfair advantage. An impartial observer aware of the nature of the Court's relationships with these gentlemen, and aware of the implications of the timing of LEI's enrollment of them as counsel in this long and complicated litigation, would understandably believe that the Liljebergs were attempting to acquire influence over the Court. This would be reinforced by the knowledge that the Liljebergs have accused others of using, and have themselves threatened to use, improper judicial and political influence.

One of the reasons cited by the Fifth Circuit for denying the Liljebergs' request for recusal of Judge Mentz in the Travelers litigation was the Liljebergs' timing. "Only after being unsuccessful [in a jury trial in one of three cases they lost] did they seek recusal in all three." The cynicism of the timing of their attack on Judge Mentz reinforced the Fifth Circuit's result. See Exhibit A at pp. 11 and 13. The Fifth Circuit noted that "a party feeling there is a basis for disqualification must make that known to the Court at the earliest possible moment." Id. at pp. 13-14. The Fifth Circuit specifically refused to "reward the Liljebergs" for their calculated timing. Once again, the Liljebergs' "calculated" timing, in this case in hiring two unneeded lawyers at the last minute, has revealed their intent. That timing should not be rewarded. In Travelers, the Liljebergs simply waited too late to alert the judge of their alleged concerns. "Had the Liljebergs acted promptly, the district judge could have considered disqualification before entering judgment" Id. Unlike the Liljebergs, Lifemark has filed this motion as soon as practicable, before the Court has taken any substantive action of which either party could complain.

CONCLUSION

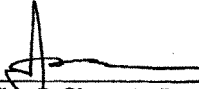

Lifemark regrets that this has occurred, and in the event this motion is granted, believes that the parties have been deprived of a competent judge who is well suited to try this case:

[Our] stringent rule may sometimes bar trial by judges who have no actual bias and who would do their very best to weigh the scales of justice equally between contending parties. But to perform its high function in the best way "justice must satisfy the appearance of justice."

United States v. Jordan, supra, 49 F.3d at 157. Lifemark finds it offensive that because LEI has put Your Honor in this position, it has been forced to file this motion. However, given the standards set forth by the Fifth Circuit and Supreme Court under 28 U.S.C. §455, and given the risk that the result of this case would be questioned by the "average person on the street" regardless of the Court's unbiased decisions, it is necessary that Lifemark ask Your Honor to recuse himself.

1 LEONARD LEVENSON

2 having been first duly sworn, was examined
3 and testified as follows:

4 EXAMINATION

5 BY MR. DUBESTER:

6 Q. Okay. Please state your name and 7 spell your last name.

8 A. Leonard Levenson, L-E-V-E-N-S-O-N.

9 Q. And what do you do for a living
10 and where's your practice?

11 A. I'm an attorney in New Orleans.
12 Louisiana.

13 Q. Okay. And Mr. Levenson, you're 14 here pursuant to a subpoena issued by the 15 House of Representatives in Washington, D.C.
16 signed by John Conyers, Chairman of the 17 Judiciary Committee dated July of 2009. In 18 connection with your testimony you've been 19 served with an order compelling your 20 testimony, and it's calling for an immunity
21 order. You were provided that in connection
22 prior to your testimony here today.

23 A. Yes.

24 Q. Is that correct?

25 A. That's correct, sir.

1 Q. Okay. And you're here with a
2 lawyer; is that correct?

3 A. That's correct.

4 Q. What's his name?

5 A. Franz Zibilich.

6 Q. Okay. If at any point in time you
7 want to stop to consult with Mr. Zibilich
8 about any part of your testimony or to -- 9 simply ask for a break and you'll be 10 afforded a break. Okay?

11 A. Thank you.

12 Q. Okay. Now, Mr. Levenson, some of 13 these matters I'm about to discuss you've 14 discussed on other occasions, but just 15 simply as a way of starting, I'm going to 16 ask you some preliminary questions and we'll 17 go from there. Okay?

18 A. Okay.

19 Q. First of all, just a little bit
20 background. When did you graduate from law
21 school?

22 A. 1976.

23 Q. And where did you go to law
24 school?

25 A. Loyola.

1 Q. And at some point in your legal
2 career did you come to be friends with, I'm
3 going to call him Judge Porteous?

4 A. I did.

5 Q. And just for the record, just 6 describe how that came about.

7 A. I tried a case over in state
8 court, 24th JDC. And I guess it was over a
9 span of a couple of days. And just as a 10 result of being in court and trying that 11 case, we had become friendly.

12 Q. What was the name of that case?

13 A. Egudin versus Carriage Court
14 Condominiums, et al.

15 Q. And will you spell Egudin?

16 A. E-G-U-D-I-N.

17 Q. And was that a win for you?

18 A. Yeah. Yes.

19 Q. Okay. And in what way was it less
20 than a complete win and what way was it a 21 good win?

22 A. It was a good win because my 23 client succeeded in, at least temporarily,
24 obtaining title to a condominium that he had 25 put up the full purchase price in cash as a

1 deposit. However, he was not familiar with 2 the rule of state law, and there was an 3 existing mortgage on the property that was 4 eventually foreclosed. That case then from 5 the State Court ended up in Bankruptcy Court
6 and then in the Federal District Court.

7 Q. Okay. And was that a jury trial
8 or a non-jury trial?

9 A. It was non-jury trial everywhere.

10 Q. So your trial was before Judge
11 Porteous; is that correct?

12 A. The initial trial was in front of 13 Judge Porteous, that's correct.

14 Q. And in connection with that 15 verdict that you won, did Judge Porteous
16 award you legal fees?

17 A. I believe he did.

18 Q. And do you recall the approximate
19 amount of the legal fees?

20 A. I don't recall the amount, but I
21 think someone suggested it was in the 22 neighborhood of like 27,000.

23 Q. Okay. Subsequent to that time did
24 you form a social relationship or a
25 friendship with Judge Porteous?

1 A. I did.

2 Q. And if that case started in 1987,
3 would that basically mark the beginning of 4 your friendship with Judge Porteous?

5 A. Yes. I'm a little surprised it
6 was '87, but yes.

7 Q. And just to put a bookmark on 8 this, did there come a point in time where 9 your friendship with Judge Porteous came to 10 an end?

11 A. Yes.

12 Q. And if you can associate that with 13 a date, do so. If you can associate that 14 with an event, then please do so.

15 A. The event would have been the 16 first time that I received a visit from the 17 Federal Bureau of Investigation, which 18 someone has mentioned was around 2003.

19 Q. Okay. So that's -- whenever that 20 was, whenever the actual date it was, it was 21 approximate -- it was around the time that 22 you were interviewed by the Bureau; is that
23 correct?

24 A. Yes. And on advice of counsel I
25 was to not have any contact with Judge

1 Porteous.

2 Q. Okay. Now, I'm going to ask you
3 about a couple of things that occurred
4 during this period involving your 5 relationship with Judge Porteous. First, I
6 want to ask you about some -- the following:
7 Did you ever go on hunting trips in which
8 Judge Porteous was an attendee?

9 A. I did.

10 Q. And tell me what you recall about
11 the, about those hunting trips. Let me
12 start as follows: How many hunting trips
13 did you go on?

14 A. I only remember going on two 15 hunting trips.

16 Q. Okay. And do you recall aspects
17 of the two trips in chronological order?

18 A. The first trip would have been to 19 a friend's farm in Mississippi outside of 20 Jackson, Mississippi. I don't recall exact
21 name of the town. And it was a weekend
22 trip. And as I recall, I went up for part
23 of a day and an evening.

24 Q. Okay. And who was the friend?

25 A. Allen Usry.

1 Q. How do you spell the last name?

2 A. U-S-R-Y.

3 Q. Is he also an attorney?

4 A. He is.

5 Q. And who else went on that trip?

6 A. My recollection is that it was a
7 gentleman by the name of David, whose last
8 name escapes me, who was a friend and/or 9 neighbor of the judge. Of course, the 10 judge. Allen was there. I believe his son
11 was there. Allen's partner, Pete Matthews,
12 was there.

13 Q. And was there --

14 A. I think Judge Brahney was there.

15 Q. And Judge Brahney is from which
16 court?

17 A. He was a bankruptcy judge in the 18 Eastern District.

19 Q. Who was the host of this trip?

20 A. Allen Usry.

21 Q. And what expenses or costs did you
22 have to assume personally for this trip?

23 A. None. I guess I paid for my 24 driving there and back.

25 Q. Okay.

1 A. Oh. And I think I had to buy a
2 permit to sit in the stand.

3 Q. Do you know -- is it your 4 assumption that Allen Usry also paid for
5 Judge Porteous?

6 A. Well, he was --

7 MR. ZIBILICH: I'm only going to 8 object, I'm only going to object to the 9 question because, paid for what? I don't
10 know if -- do you understand the question?

11 THE WITNESS: I was going to say,
12 he was a guest at his house. I don't know
13 that he paid for anything. I mean, he 14 certainly, I guess, fed him.

15 BY MR. DUBESTER:

16 Q. Now, does the fact that Judge
17 Brahney was present at this trip give you
18 any information as to whether or not this 19 occurred when Judge Porteous was a federal 20 judge or a state judge?

21 A. I think it would have been in the 22 nineties, so he would have been a federal 23 judge.

24 Q. Okay. And also because Judge
25 Brahney is a bankruptcy judge with practice

1 in the federal system; is that right?

2 A. Correct.

3 Q. Okay. Now, the second trip,
4 please describe that.

5 A. That was a trip at a place north
6 of Baton Rouge. Again, I'm not a hunter, so
7 I can't tell you the name of it. I'm sure
8 it's near some small town. I can't tell you
9 that either. It would have been sometime
10 after the first trip. There were several 11 people who were supposed to go, and at the 12 last minute it ended up being just Judge
13 Porteous and myself.

14 Q. And who, who had set up this trip?

15 A. I believe Allen Usry did.

16 Q. And was this at the same property
17 or --

18 A. No.

19 Q. -- a different property?

20 A. This was a different property.

21 This was a property up in, I want to say
22 north Louisiana, but I guess it's more like
23 central Louisiana.

24 Q. Whose property was it? Or was it
25 a property that was rented or leased for the

1 purpose of hunting trips --

2 A. Yeah.

3 Q. -- if you know?

4 A. Well, no. I think it's a place
5 where you go there and you pay to hunt.

6 Q. Okay. And do you know who had,
7 who had leased that property for that
8 purpose?

9 A. I believe Allen set it all up.

10 Q. Okay.

11 A. That's the answer, if that's the
12 question.

13 Q. And was anybody -- did you have 14 to -- was anybody asked to pay the pro rata
15 share of whatever the leasing costs were, or 16 was everybody a guest on this trip as you've 17 described the first trip?

18 A. Well, I thought I was to pay a 19 portion of the trip, but I couldn't find any 20 records where I did. I would have suspected 21 I would have had to pay for myself, which 22 would have been less than, I guess, going
23 there, because I just went there to watch
24 and eat. But because it ended up only being 25 two people, I don't know that I paid

1 anything and couldn't find any record where
2 I paid anything.

3 Q. Okay. Now, you've indicated that
4 this was the second of the two trips
5 chronologically; is that right?

6 A. I believe. Yes.

7 Q. So did you -- so on this trip it
8 was just you and Judge Porteous; is that
9 right?

10 A. By the time the smoke cleared,
11 that was it.

12 Q. Did you drive to this location
13 together?

14 A. Yes.

15 Q. And who drove?

16 A. I drove.

17 Q. And how long were you there?

18 A. Maybe two days.

19 Q. And what did you do during these 20 two days?

21 A. I brought some work with me. I
22 rode the property. I ate. I drank. I
23 don't think I got to sit in a stand there,
24 which was okay with me.

25 Q. Who provided the food?

1 A. Well, they do where this place is.

2 Q. I see. So it's, is it a lodge or 3 some facility which has meals and that sort
4 of thing?

5 A. Yeah, it wasn't very fancy, but
6 lodge would be, I guess, a good term. It
7 was like cabins.

8 Q. Right. Did you spend -- did you
9 share a room with Judge Porteous in the 10 cabin?

11 A. Yes.

12 Q. And so you -- and that was for two 13 nights?

14 A. I'm going to guess two nights. It
15 was more than one.

16 Q. And can you give your best
17 estimate of when this occurred?

18 A. In the nineties.

19 Q. Just as a marking point in time,
20 you became an attorney -- you were brought 21 into the Liljeberg case in September of '96,
22 if you just accept that as a date. On 23 either the first trip or the second trip,
24 were those before or after you were an 25 attorney, after the Liljeberg case had

1 commenced with you being an attorney? I'm
2 sorry. That was awkwardly phrased.

3 Neither the first trip or the 4 second trip had you already started
5 representing the Liljebergs?

6 A. I'm not certain. But if there was 7 another sentinel date in there, I could 8 probably answer that better. I mean, '96 is 9 when I got into the Liljeberg case?

10 Q. Accept that for purposes of this
11 question.

12 A. So that would have been...

13 MR. ZIBILICH: Counsel, if you
14 wouldn't mind reminding him about when Judge
15 Porteous arrived over at Federal Court, that 16 might help him.

17 BY MR. DUBESTER:

18 Q. Judge Porteous became a federal
19 judge in October '94.

20 A. And what was the question? Was 21 it, the hunting trips, after my involvement
22 with the Liljeberg case?

23 Q. Yes.

24 A. If I had to guess, I would guess
25 yes.

1 Q. So it was while the Liljeberg case
2 was pending. Is that correct?

3 A. If I had to guess, I would think
4 yes.

5 Q. Okay. Are there records that 6 exist anywhere which would clarify the 7 precise dates of those trips to the best of 8 your knowledge?

9 A. I don't think I had any records,
10 but whatever records I had, I've previously
11 turned over subject -- in response to a 12 subpoena.

13 MR. ZIBILICH: So the record is 14 clear, turned over to whom?

15 THE WITNESS: Either the Federal 16 Bureau of Investigation or the Department of 17 Justice.

18 BY MR. DUBESTER:

19 Q. Now, were there occasions that you
20 went to Las Vegas either as part of a group
21 or individually in which Judge Porteous was 22 present either as part of that same group or 23 as coincidentally or for other reasons and 24 you happened to meet him in Las Vegas?

25 A. Yes.

1 Q. Okay. So I'm going to ask you
2 this at a very general level. Can you
3 describe what you recall about the separate
4 trips and the circumstances where that --
5 the circumstances surrounding those trips?
6 And then from there my next set of questions
7 is going to be, what specifically do you
8 recall your contacts were with Judge
9 Porteous and what meals and/or entertainment
10 you provided to Judge Porteous on those 11 trips?

12 A. I can recall going on at least
13 one, what has been referred to as Bill Hall
14 trips --

15 Q. Okay.

16 A. -- which were the fundraising
17 trips for Bill Hall who had run for office
18 and lost. And I think he was trying to pay
19 back his campaign debt. I went on at least 20 one of those, maybe two, that Judge Porteous 21 was on.

22 Q. Okay. So these would have been
23 when Judge Porteous was still a state judge?

24 A. I know one for sure was when he 25 was still a state judge. The second one I'm

1 not certain.

2 Q. Okay. And when you say the second
3 one, you're saying if there is a second one?

4 A. Yes, if there was a second one.

5 But it seems there was another trip that
6 sounded to me based upon some of the facts
7 that I've heard, would have been a Bill Hall
8 trip, because it involved the Riviera Hotel
9 or Hotel Riviera, whatever they call it.
10 And I think that's where he did his trips.

11 Q. Do you remember going to the 12 Riviera Hotel?

13 A. I went to the Riviera Hotel. I
14 remember it.

15 Q. Okay. And in one of the trips
16 which we've called the Judge Hall trips, do
17 you remember whether or not you shared a
18 room with Judge Porteous?

19 A. I shared a room with Judge
20 Porteous at the Riviera on one trip at 21 least.

22 Q. And on that trip, did you pay for 23 any meals or entertainment for Judge
24 Porteous?

25 A. I don't have any specific

1 recollection, but I can tell you that
2 certainly we probably took turns buying
3 drinks and dinner and things, people who 4 were on the trip, other lawyers who were on 5 the trip.

6 Q. Okay. And you say by the word we,
7 who are you talking about?

8 A. Other people who would have been 9 on the trip.

10 Q. Name some of the people who would 11 have been part of the group providing buying
12 drinks.

13 A. I believe that Chip Forstall was 14 on at least one trip, maybe Don Gardner.
15 That's kind of a stretch, but I think maybe
16 he was on a trip.

17 Q. Do you remember that on the trip
18 that you roomed with Porteous, Forstall
19 roomed with Giacobbe?

20 A. That's correct.

21 Q. And when you say you don't have a
22 specific recollection of what you paid for,
23 can you state with confidence that you're 24 confident that you paid for some aspects of 25 drinks or meals or other entertainment --

1 A. Yes.

2 Q. -- for which Judge Porteous would
3 have been a beneficiary?

4 A. Yes.

5 Q. And, okay. On a subsequent -- 6 describe any --

7 A. Okay.

8 Q. -- any subsequent trip you took to 9 Las Vegas in which Judge Porteous would have 10 been present.

11 A. I remember a trip, but for some 12 reason the year 1999 comes to mind. I'm not 13 confident it's 1999. I think maybe some 14 records we turned over may have referred to 15 that. It seems that I was in Las Vegas in 16 1999 with my wife, and Judge Porteous was in 17 Las Vegas with his wife in 1999. I don't
18 recall traveling with him. I do remember
19 going to a national bull riding championship
20 with him out there. I remember going to 21 dinner one time with him out there. I don't 22 want to use the word concert, but we went to 23 something at, I think it was at Caesars
24 Hotel that he had access to, like Tracy
25 Lawrence or somebody was playing.

1 Q. On any of these events you've
2 described, national bull riding, a dinner at 3 Caesars, and a concert, did you pay for
4 Judge Porteous?

5 A. I paid for the dinner. I don't 6 recall where the dinner was. I paid for the 7 dinner.

8 Q. Who else was at this dinner in 9 addition to Judge Porteous?

10 A. His wife and my wife.

11 Q. And if this was in '99, to the 12 best of your recollection, then that would 13 have been during the pendency of the 14 Liljeberg case; is that correct?

15 A. Yes. Also there may have been 16 other trips that involved the Jefferson Bar
17 Association where we would have been in Las 18 Vegas together sometime during the period of 19 the state bench in 1999. Excuse me, the 20 state bench. My first trip out there on the 21 Bill Hall excursion in 1999.

22 Q. And if you were out there and 23 Judge Porteous was out there on one of these 24 Jefferson Bar Association trips, again are 25 you confident that at some point you would

1 have been picking up meals and/or other,
2 and/or drinks and other entertainment for
3 Judge Porteous?

4 A. I would expect that probably,
5 probably a meal. If not a meal, certainly
6 drinks.

7 Q. Okay. I want to turn to trips to 8 D.C. for the D.C. Mardi Gras. Did you ever
9 come to Washington, D.C. for an event called 10 the D.C. --

11 A. Mardi Gras Ball.

12 Q. -- Mardi Gras in D.C.?

13 A. Yes, twice.

14 Q. And the first time, what were the 15 circumstances of that trip?

16 A. Judge Porteous' daughter was a 17 princess in the Mardi Gras Ball. And many 18 of his friends, including myself, went up to 19 D.C. for the event.

20 Q. And in Washington, D.C., tell --
21 would you describe some of the festivities
22 or what occurred?

23 A. Well, there's the ball, and I want
24 to say there was a, another event. Maybe it 25 was a dinner or maybe the dinner was part of

1 the ball. But there's at least one or two
2 events that you go to, including the ball,
3 where you buy tickets and you attend. And I
4 would have attended those.

5 Q. When you mentioned Judge Porteous'
6 friends went up for Judge Porteous'
7 daughter, who were some of his other friends
8 who went to Washington?

9 A. I know, I think his name is John
10 Gordon, is a friend of his, Dr. Finan who I 11 think is a John. That's why I'm a little 12 hesitant on the first name.

13 Q. How do you spell the last name?

14 A. Finan, F-I-N-A-N, Gordon,
15 G-O-R-D-O-N, I believe.

16 Q. Are those two, are those, are 17 those --

18 A. Non-lawyers?

19 Q. Yes.

20 A. Non-lawyers. Dr. Finan is an 21 Ob/Gyn.

22 Q. And was there a Dr. Cenac,
23 Christopher Cenac, who had something to do
24 with these parties in Washington?

25 A. Dr. Cenac was the king when my

1 daughter was the princess.

2 MR. ZIBILICH: Tell him how to 3 spell Cenac.

4 THE WITNESS: C-E-N-A-C.

5 BY MR. DUBESTER:

6 Q. How did he get to be the king?

7 A. I don't know. I would guess he's
8 selected by who runs the Mardi Gras. Back
9 then would have been Senator Breaux who runs
10 the Mardi Gras Ball.

11 Q. When you were in Washington for 12 Judge -- for the D.C. Mardi Gras associated 13 with Judge Porteous' daughter, did you pay 14 for any meals or other entertainment for 15 Judge Porteous?

16 A. I don't think I would have paid
17 for any meals, because I think back then
18 almost all the meals were provided. But I'm 19 sure we probably had a round of drinks, 20 several of us at the bar, that I would have 21 paid for.

22 Q. Do you have any -- what is your 23 best estimate of the date, if you have one,
24 for Judge Porteous' daughter?

25 A. Three or four years before my

1 daughter's maybe.

2 Q. Okay. And we'll go to the next
3 one. Was there a second time you came to 4 Washington for one of these events?

5 A. Yes, there was.

6 Q. And tell me about that.

7 A. My daughter was a princess in the 8 Mardi Gras Ball, and I went up there for
9 that.

10 Q. And how did it come to be that 11 your daughter became the princess?

12 A. My daughter wanted to be the 13 princess in the Mardi Gras Ball, which leads 14 me to believe that my daughter perhaps may 15 have gone on the first trip with us up
16 there. Otherwise, I don't know how she 17 would have known about it and wanted to do 18 it. And I had --

19 MR. ZIBILICH: Maw.

20 THE WITNESS: Huh?

21 MR. ZIBILICH: It's called Maw.

22 THE WITNESS: Yeah. No, it wasn't
23 her mother. It was her. And I remember
24 asking Rhonda and Judge Porteous if they 25 could see if my daughter could do it.

1 BY MR. DUBESTER:

2 Q. And what happened next?

3 A. She got selected.

4 Q. Do you know what either Rhonda or 5 Judge Porteous did to help your daughter get 6 selected?

7 A. Exactly, no. But I think they
8 spoke to John Breaux's aide, Kyle France.

9 Q. And how do you spell Kyle?

10 A. K-Y-L-E, I think.

11 Q. And did you have personal
12 conversations with Judge Porteous about this 13 or with Rhonda about this or with both?

14 A. I would say both. There wouldn't 15 have been many conversations other than, "MY 16 daughter would like to do this."

17 Q. You have used the term Rhonda.
18 Who is she?

19 A. Rhonda Danos was Judge Porteous'
20 secretary.

21 Q. To the best of your recollection,
22 can you -- do you have any sense of when 23 that was? And if you don't know the actual 24 date, is there any event that you associate 25 that with?

1 A. Yeah. I can tell the event. The
2 event, the day of the actual Mardi Gras
3 Ball, which was probably on a Saturday, was 4 the day that the space shuttle exploded.
5 Because I remember going down to have to get 6 some tickets. Senator Breaux and some 7 people were in the room watching the 8 television. I was unaware this had just 9 happened. It was a very somber mood.
10 Actually I think they had talked about 11 canceling the ball.

12 Q. So the second -- and in connection
13 with the second event, did you provide meals
14 and/or entertainment or anything else of 15 value to Judge Porteous?

16 A. Again, I certainly would have 17 bought a round of drinks. I remember one
18 night we went out to dinner with my friends
19 who had come up there. And I don't really 20 recall if he would have been there or not.
21 He certainly was invited.

22 Q. Okay.

23 A. But he would have known many, many
24 people there, so I can't say with absolute
25 certainty that he came to dinner.

1 Q. Now, did you ever purchase tickets
2 or arrange travel through Rhonda Danos?

3 A. I did.

4 Q. And how is it that she being Judge
5 Porteous' secretary would be a person that 6 you would go to to arrange tickets for 7 travel?

8 A. She was a travel agent on the 9 side.

10 Q. And why did you purchase travel
11 through her as opposed to having your own
12 secretary do it or just do it yourself?

13 A. Well, I usually schedule my own
14 travel and depo -- I handle my own calendar.
15 So when there's a mistake, I get to yell at 16 no one but myself.

17 Q. Did you, when you have to make 18 travel, did you call her at her office in 19 Judge Porteous' chambers?

20 A. I probably would have called her
21 there and at her house.

22 Q. Well, you were never specifically 23 told you can't call me at work, you have to 24 only call me at home or anything like that?

25 A. No.

1 Q. So you would have just called her
2 where you could reach her --

3 A. Yes.

4 Q. -- in order to accomplish whatever
5 you needed to do --

6 A. Yes.

7 Q. -- is that right? When you
8 were -- when Judge Porteous was a state
9 judge, just ask you to list the, just list
10 the restaurants that you would take him to.

11 A. Mandina's, M-A-N-D-I-N-A, the Beef
12 Connection, Ruth's Chris.

13 Q. Red Maple?

14 A. Oh, Red Maple.

15 Q. Bon Ton?

16 A. Bon Ton maybe.

17 Q. Okay. And who were some of the 18 other attorneys or other persons who you
19 would see around the courthouse who you
20 would see taking Judge Porteous to lunch?

21 A. Dick Chopin, Don Gardner, Ray
22 Pelleteri.

23 Q. Creely and Amato?

24 A. Creely and Amato. And I'm sure
25 there's others that I'd give some thought

1 to.

2 Q. Now, when you would see Judge
3 Porteous with Dick Chopin, would that be 4 when Judge Porteous was a federal judge or 5 when he was a state judge?

6 A. If -- I would say probably both.

7 Q. What restaurants do you remember
8 seeing Chopin at with Judge Porteous?

9 A. Oh, another restaurant might have 10 been The Rib Room.

11 Q. What other --

12 A. Probably.

13 Q. What restaurants do you recall
14 seeing --

15 A. Probably, you know, restaurants
16 that I told you that we frequented. It was 17 probably the same restaurants, some of the 18 same restaurants.

19 Q. Were you invited to Las Vegas for 20 his, in 1999, for his son's bachelor party?

21 A. I don't remember the year, but 22 yes, I was.

23 Q. Did you go?

24 A. I did not go.

25 Q. Do you know if you went to that

1 son's wedding?

2 A. I remember going to the reception.

3 Q. Well, you've had several cases in 4 Federal Court with Judge Porteous. I'm just 5 going to read off the name of the case.

6 Just tell me what you remember about that.

7 This is just sort of to establish what they
8 were or to the best of your recollection. I

9 understand there's several. The Alliance
10 General Insurance Company versus Louisiana
11 Sheriff's Association?

12 A. That was a lawsuit involving an 13 excess insurer suit against numerous
14 sheriffs and the sheriffs' underlying self 15 insurance fund to attempt to rescind an 16 excess insurance policy or policies. And I
17 was -- there were several defendants on the 18 defense side. Did I say several defense
19 attorneys? Let me rephrase that. I don't 20 know what I said. There were several 21 lawyers who represented various defendants
22 in that case.

23 Q. Okay. Were you one of the lead
24 defense lawyers on that?

25 A. I was certainly one of the 1 lawyers. I guess I was -- I believe the 2 sharp defendant was -- yes.

3 Q. And what was the disposition of
4 that?

5 A. Summary judgment was granted in 6 favor of all defendants.

7 Q. Did Judge Porteous grant you that?

8 A. He did. He granted in favor of 9 all defendants.

10 Q. And was Mr. Usry one of the 11 attorneys who was also representing the 12 defendants?

13 A. It was either he or his partner,
14 Pete Matthews.

15 Q. If the records from the court show
16 he was the named person who had submitted
17 his appearance in the case, does that tell
18 you who actually was doing the work or not?
19 I mean, does that, does that tell you who 20 actually appeared in court, or, or is
21 that --

22 A. Not necessarily. Pete Matthews
23 and Allen Usry sometimes interchanged in 24 these type of cases.

25 Q. Would one of them sometimes appear

1 for a party and then at a subsequent --

2 A. It will be the other one, yeah. I
3 mean, when I say they're interchangeable,
4 you may have Allen there today, Pete there
5 tomorrow, Allen there the next day, Pete
6 there. They're, they're literally
7 interchangeable.

8 Q. The hunting trips that you've 9 talked about, do you know whether or not 10 these occurred prior to, during, or 11 subsequent to the pendency of the Alliance
12 General case? And to help you with that, it 13 appears that went from March of '96 to 14 roughly May of '99.

15 A. If I had to guess, I would say
16 prior to and/or pending.

17 Q. Okay. The First National Bank of 18 Chicago versus Evans, it appears -- and this 19 will refresh your recollection. Do you
20 recall being somehow appointed or named as a
21 curator for a missing defendant or missing
22 party named Paulette Weber Evans?

23 A. I remember being appointed to 24 locate an absentee defendant, and I believe
25 that was the case.

1 Q. And who appointed you?

2 A. Judge Porteous.

3 Q. If the court records show that you
4 received $473.32 as payment in 5 reimbursement, does that sound about right?

6 A. I wouldn't dispute it.

7 Q. Would you have gotten any other
8 fees from representing this --

9 A. No, not --

10 Q. -- missing defendant?

11 A. Excuse me. I didn't mean to cut
12 you off.

13 Q. Would you have received anything
14 else from representing any missing party in 15 a case like that?

16 A. No.

17 Q. Okay. Do you recall a case,
18 Joseph versus Sears Roebuck and Company, in 19 front of Judge Porteous?

20 A. I do not.

21 Q. Do you recall a case Siddiqui
22 Group versus Shell Oil Company which was in 23 front of Judge Porteous?

24 A. I remember being involved in the 25 Siddiqui case. And certainly if the record

1 shows that it was in front of Judge
2 Porteous, I wouldn't dispute it.

3 Q. And what was the Liberty Mutual
4 Fire Insurance Company versus Ravannack
5 case?

6 A. It was my neighbor's case that 7 involved a lawsuit against his builder that 8 we filed in state court. And I believe 9 Liberty Mutual then filed some type of 10 declaratory action in federal court under 11 the homeowner's policy to deny coverage, and 12 I think to demand access to the property by 13 an expert engineer that I opposed.

14 Q. This was -- this ended up being a 15 very complicated piece of litigation which 16 went on for years; is that correct?

17 A. One of them, yes.

18 Q. And it went on -- it was filed in 19 April 2000. It was pending up until 2006
20 when it was reassigned to Judge Barbier; is 21 that correct?

22 A. That's correct.

23 Q. Do you remember the Holmes versus 24 Consolidated Companies, Inc. case in which
25 you represented Consolidated Companies

1 involving -- in their defense of an
2 employment discrimination case?

3 A. I do now, yes.

4 Q. And tell, tell me what -- or state
5 for the record what that was about.

6 A. That was a -- actually I think
7 there were, I actually think there were two 8 cases. Maybe one was in another court. And 9 I was brought in for Conco because they were 10 afraid that their lawyer, who although was 11 very good at employment discrimination and 12 knew what he was doing, in the event he was 13 not going to be successful in summary
14 judgment, that they wanted somebody with 15 more trial experience, because he didn't 16 have very much jury appeal. And so I was 17 being brought in to get up to speed to try 18 the case to the jury. It settled. They 19 both settled after I became involved for a
20 minimal amount.

21 Q. Was that a winner for you?

22 A. It was certainly a winner for the 23 client, and they were able to settle it and 24 stop the bleeding of attorneys' fees.

25 Q. Did, in that case, did Judge

1 Porteous dismiss the plaintiff's claims,
2 which I guess were retaliatory discharge,
3 constructive discharge, intentional
4 infliction of emotional distress?

5 A. I'm going to tell you my 6 recollection was it was settled, and it was 7 voluntarily dismissed. I think the summary
8 judgment was filed on behalf of the 9 defendants, and the summary judgment was 10 denied, is my recollection.

11 Q. Okay.

12 A. Is that wrong?

13 MR. ZIBILICH: Today you don't get 14 to ask questions.

15 THE WITNESS: Okay.

16 MR. ZIBILICH: Sorry.

17 THE WITNESS: I mean, my, my 18 recollection of that case was that the 19 summary judgment was a foot and a half, two 20 foot, two feet thick that was denied. And 21 then we sat down and settled the case for a
22 minimal amount.

23 MR. ZIBILICH: Can we go off the 24 record for a second?

25 (Off-the-record discussion.)

1 BY MR. DUBESTER:

2 Q. What about the Loehn versus Hardin
3 case? Loehn is spelled L-O-E-H-N.

4 A. I don't remember the case. Tommy
5 Loehn is a friend of mine who I went to law
6 school with. I represented him in other
7 cases. I remember one case that was in the 8 state court proceeding that we did a whole
9 lot of work in.

10 Q. What about Salatich,
11 S-A-L-A-T-I-C-H, versus America Online?

12 A. That was a case that I was brought 13 into that was going to be an MDL in 14 California, and I ended up getting out of 15 the case.

16 Q. Okay. What about Morales V.
17 Trippe?

18 A. I believe Morales was a friend of 19 my secretary's, and I believe it was a 20 personal injury case that may have been 21 removed to federal court.

22 Q. Now --

23 A. And I believe settled.

24 Q. And who did you represent,
25 plaintiff or the defendant?

1 A. The plaintiff.

2 Q. And were you satisfied with the 3 settlement?

4 A. I think there was a limitation,
5 because I think there was an insufficient
6 amount of insurance coverage. So I think
7 that the -- we probably, if I recall the 8 case right, I think we had policy limits.
9 But the case would have been worth more
10 because of the nature of the industry --
11 injury. But if my recollection is right, it
12 was settled for the policy.

13 Q. Now, during the course of any of 14 these cases that we've gone over, do you
15 recall Judge Porteous formally alerting
16 counsel who is on the other side of you to 17 any facts or circumstances surrounding his 18 relationship with you?

19 A. I do not recall that.

20 Q. Okay. And if he had, if he had 21 done so, I take it that's something which 22 you would recall? In other words, if he had 23 sat down with parties and said, by the way,
24 you should know this about Mr. Levenson,
25 we're old friends, I helped his daughter

1 become a princess at the Mardi Gras, we've
2 shared rooms on hunting trips, we've shared
3 rooms in Las Vegas, he's taken me out to 4 many, many, many meals including meals at 5 high end restaurants, you should know that 6 as we proceed down the road of this 7 litigation, if he had done that to any -- in 8 any case in which you were one of the 9 attorneys, that's something which would 10 stand, which would stand out and you would 11 remember well? Isn't that right?

12 A. I think I would recall that.

13 Q. Okay. Can we go off the record
14 for one second?

15 (Off-the-record discussion.)

16 BY MR. DUBESTER:

17 Q. Okay. Was Judge Porteous a friend
18 of Leonard Cline's?

19 A. I believe so.

20 Q. And what is it that causes you to 21 have that recollection?

22 A. I think that maybe I saw him and 23 Lenny out at lunch one day, or maybe Lenny
24 told me they were friends or something.
25 Lenny and I were close friends in law

1 school, and we still speak from time to 2 time. We're cordial when we see each other.
3 And, you know, I'm not sure how I learned
4 that, but yeah, they were friends.

5 Q. Do you, by the way, do you know if 6 Judge Porteous presided over some big
7 verdicts for Lenny Cline?

8 A. I don't know that.

9 Q. You mentioned in the Egudin case
10 that Judge Porteous awarded attorney's fees?

11 A. Correct.

12 Q. Do you recall that?

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. And assuming the amount, some 15 amount over $20,000, roughly what portion of 16 that did you end up collecting because of 17 problems with the plaintiff and/or problems
18 with the defendant?

19 A. A small portion. I'm trying to 20 find some records on that. But I would --
21 if -- it's certainly less than half, way
22 less than half. Because remember now, I got 23 to go to Bankruptcy Court and I got to go to 24 Federal District Court, all of which I don't
25 believe I was paid for either.

1 Q. I appreciate that you didn't get
2 paid in full. I'm just asking on the amount
3 that Judge Porteous awarded, the $27,000,
4 how much of that do you think you got to the 5 best of your recollection?

6 A. I'd say less than half.

7 Q. Okay.

8 A. Subject to my finding something.

9 Q. And in the Liljeberg case, do you
10 ever remember an incident where Judge
11 Porteous lost his temper at the opposing 12 counsel, Mr. Mole?

13 A. I do.

14 Q. Tell, please state and please just 15 describe that.

16 A. As I recall, there was a witness
17 on the stand. And at the conclusion of the 18 witness being examined, I believe the judge
19 asked the witness some questions. And then
20 Mr. Mole wished to ask some follow-up
21 questions. And at this point I don't 22 remember whether the witness was on the 23 stand or not. Judge Porteous said he would 24 not allow the follow-up questions because 25 they were not proper. And Mr. Mole kind of 1 lost his temper or became perhaps curt. And

2 I think the judge became very angry and made
3 it known he was angry and adjourned for the 4 day. If my recollection is correct, it was 5 on the afternoon of a Friday.

6 And then on Monday morning when we 7 went back into court, my recollection is 8 that the judge either apologized to Mr. Mole
9 or said that he had re-thought the matter,
10 and he would allow him to question the 11 witness further.

12 Q. But in addition to just getting 13 mad verbally, is there anything else Judge
14 Porteous did?

15 A. There were lots of bench books on 16 his bench. And I don't know if he knocked 17 them over intentionally or they -- because 18 he was doing -- leaving the bench, they fell
19 over. It made a loud noise, and it caught
20 everyone's attention.

21 Q. And did you -- have you ever given
22 Judge Porteous any significant amount of 23 cash directly or paid for any significant 24 financial obligations of his?

25 A. No.

1 Q. I'm talking about anything of the 2 following nature: Helping provide vehicles
3 for him or his family, paying tuition bills,
4 paying home mortgage payments, giving him
5 cash in the amounts of some amount because 6 he claimed he needed it for various personal 7 purposes?

8 A. No.

9 Q. Okay. I think with that, we're 10 done.

11 MR. ZIBILICH: No questions.

CONCLUSION.....	29

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes Respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and files this Motion to Dismiss Article II of the Articles of Impeachment.¹

Article II alleges that, as a state court judge, Judge Porteous engaged in conduct with certain bail bondsmen – Louis Marcotte and Lori Marcotte (brother and sister) – whereby he “solicited and accepted numerous things of value” and also took “official actions that benefitted the Marcottes.” (111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010), hereinafter “Article II.”)²

If sustained by the Senate, Article II would create a new and dangerous precedent that would allow Congress to remove judges and other federal officials on the basis of their alleged conduct prior to assuming federal office. Such a standard would be a direct threat against the independence of the judiciary and would allow for reciprocal removals of judges by rivaling parties. Even in the absence of a prior indictment of such conduct, Article II expressly relies on conduct going back decades before federal service to claim a basis for removal. This clearly was not the intent of the Framers in their careful crafting of the impeachment clauses of the Constitution. From the beginning of this Republic, impeachments have been limited to conduct

¹ This Motion should be considered as a Motion to Dismiss under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 12(b)(6), and assumes the facts alleged in Article II. As stated, however, the allegations in Article II, and in the underlying Report of the House of Representatives, as prepared by House Impeachment Counsel, are factually incorrect, or contain overstatements, half-truths, and over-statements. This Motion takes the position that, putting all of that aside, the allegations in Article II do not state charges that are properly the subject of an impeachment.

² The allegations in Article II were raised repeatedly over a ten-year period. The FBI looked into the allegations before Judge Porteous’s confirmation. The Metropolitan Crime Commission, an independent body, also examined these issues. According to documents from the Metropolitan Crime Commission, the FBI reportedly also looked into the allegations again soon after confirmation, including review under the Hobbs Act. Then, Judge Porteous was investigated with other Jefferson Parish judges as part of the Wrinkled Robe investigation. None of these investigations produced evidence to support a charge against Judge Porteous – as opposed to the Marcottes, who were indicted and ultimately agreed to plea deals offered by the government.

occurring while an individual was in the subject federal office as opposed to conduct that occurred prior to taking that position. As recognized by the Congressional Research Service, the Senate has never before applied the powers of impeachment to conduct occurring before the tenure in the office held at the time of the impeachment investigation.³ Indeed, in prior cases, the Senate specifically has declined to convict on articles of impeachment based on conduct that was alleged to have occurred before the accused assumed the office that is the subject of the impeachment.

Despite this long-standing precedent, Article II focuses on conduct alleged to have occurred prior to Judge Porteous taking the federal bench. Indeed, in crafting Article II, the House reached back over 25 years (including 10 years before Judge Porteous took the federal bench) to find alleged impeachable conduct. Not only was the House contradicted by the precedent of this body, it was contradicted by the testimony of its own expert witnesses who warned that “[t]he State court stuff, well, that’s arguably just State Court stuff” and that “there’s not been any successful impeachment; that is to say, moved through the House and the Senate” based on events that took place prior to the person being a federal officer. (Hearing Before the Task Force on Judicial Impeachment of the House Committee on the Judiciary, December 15, 2009, at 47, 51-52, hereinafter “Dec. 15th Hearing.”) The reasons for this are obvious. If the

³ The Congressional Research Service concluded, in reviewing the issues underlying this case, that:

...it does not appear that any President, Vice President, or other civil officer of the United States has been impeached by the House solely on the basis of conduct occurring before he began his tenure in the office held at the time of the impeachment investigation, although the House has, on occasion, investigated such allegations.

Elizabeth B. Bazan & Anna C. Henning, Impeachment: An Overview of Constitutional Provisions, Procedure, and Practice, Congressional Research Service, April 26, 2010.

Constitution could be used to impeach judges for conduct occurring prior to taking the federal bench, then impeachment could be wielded as a dangerous weapon for partisan or other improper purposes by effectively re-litigating, on a random basis, a judge's qualifications to hold office.

The House does little to disguise the fact that Article II depends entirely on "pre-federal" conduct, or conduct alleged to have occurred prior to Judge Porteous taking the federal bench. After its own constitutional experts failed to support a pre-federal article, the House added a brief, vague statement that "while on the State bench and on the Federal bench, Judge Porteous used the power and prestige of his office to assist the Marcottes in forming relationships with State judicial officers and individuals important to the Marcottes' business." (Article II.) This is the only misconduct in Article II alleged to have occurred during Judge Porteous's federal judgeship.⁴ The House Report concedes that, while on the federal bench, Judge Porteous could no longer set bonds for the Marcottes but nevertheless argues that because Judge Porteous conversed with the Marcottes at a cocktail reception, ate several restaurant meals with the Marcottes, and introduced the Marcottes to other State Court Judges on various occasions, he used the "strength" and "power" of his office improperly. (See Report 111-427 at 80-85, hereinafter "House Report.")

The House invites the Senate to convict Judge Porteous for nothing more than socializing and networking with friends whom the House finds disreputable. This sets a very dangerous precedent. If federal judges must fear impeachment merely for associating with people of whom the House disapproves, the risk of partisan abuse of the impeachment process increases exponentially. This could revive the specter of the "Impeach Earl Warren" campaign in the ⁴ Article II also alleges that one of the bail bondsmen, Louis Marcotte, "made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench." That, however, is not even alleged to be an action taken by Judge Porteous. Moreover, the exact language is also used in Article IV.

1950s and 1960s, in which the Chief Justice of the United States was threatened with impeachment because of his rulings on desegregation.

In effect, the House alleges that Judge Porteous's supposed attendance at a handful of lunches – over the course of seven years⁵ – totaling an overall gift of approximately $246 (or an average of about $40 per lunch)⁶ – amounts to an impeachable offense. As the House would have it, a half-dozen lunches with state bail bondsmen would be placed on a par with treason. Such an allegation makes a mockery of the constitutional standard and impeachment process.

Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate dismiss Article II in its entirety as failing to state an impeachable offense.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Judge Porteous was elected Judge of the 24th Judicial District Court in the State of Louisiana in 1984 and remained in that position until October 1994. In August 1994, Judge Porteous was nominated by President Clinton to serve as United States District Court Judge for ⁵ It is not at all clear that Judge Porteous even attended four of the six lunches the House Report alleges he attended where he supposedly exerted his “power and prestige” with other state judges. See House Report at 81. For four of the lunches, the best evidence the House presents is that the lunch bill includes a reference to “Abs” or “Abso” which the House believes references an order for Absolut vodka – a drink Judge Porteous is claimed to favor. This appears to require the Senate to take some form of judicial notice that so few people in Louisiana drink Absolut that an appearance of a reference to that libation on a lunch bill inevitably leads to the conclusion that Judge Porteous must have attended the lunch.

⁶ The $246 figure was calculated based on the total bill divided by number of people who reportedly attended these lunches:

- (1) 8/6/1997 Lunch $287.03 total bill – five attendees – Porteous's alleged share = $57;
- (2) 8/25/1997 Lunch $352.43 total bill – ten attendees – Porteous's alleged share = $35;
- (3) 11/19/1997 Lunch $395.77 total bill – ten attendees – Porteous's alleged share = $39;
- (4) 8/5/1998 Lunch $268.84 – nine attendees – Porteous's alleged share = $29;
- (5) 2/1/2000 Lunch $328.94 – eight attendees – Porteous's alleged share = $41;
- (6) 11/7/2000 Lunch $635.85 – fourteen attendees – Porteous's alleged share = $45.

These receipts are attached as Exhibit I to this Motion.

the Eastern District of Louisiana. Judge Porteous was confirmed by the Senate on October 7, 1994 and began serving in that position on October 28, 1994.

Article II begins by vaguely alleging that Judge Porteous “engaged in a longstanding pattern of corrupt conduct....” (Article II.) Article II states that this conduct began “in or about the late 1980s while he was a State court judge in the 24th Judicial District Court in the State of Louisiana....” (Id.) (emphasis added). Article II further defines this conduct, alleging that Judge Porteous “solicited and accepted numerous things of value, including meals, trips, home repairs, and car repairs, for his personal use and benefit....” (Id.) The Article alleges that while Judge Porteous solicited and accepted these things of value, he took “official actions that benefitted the Marcottes...while on the State bench.” (Id.) (emphasis added).

Article II fails to make a single specific claim regarding federal bench activity, but explicitly details the actions Judge Porteous is alleged to have taken while on the State bench (i.e. accepted “meals, trips, home repairs, and car repairs” and “setting, reducing, and splitting bonds...and improperly setting aside or expunging felony convictions...”). (Id.) The House then attempts to salvage the Article from purely pre-federal office allegations by tangentially alluding to the federal bench at various points in the Article. The Article alleges that the “pattern of corrupt conduct” continued while Judge Porteous was on the federal bench, but fails to allege any act other than that “Judge Porteous used the power and prestige of his office to assist the Marcottes in forming relationships with State judicial officers and individuals important to the Marcottes’ business.” (Id.) The Article does not provide any additional information regarding this use of “power and prestige.” (Id.) As discussed above, the House Report provides only a handful of vague references to Judge Porteous interacting with the Marcottes on several occasions over the course of seven years.

Finally, Article II attempts to attribute the alleged bad conduct of Louis Marcotte to Judge Porteous by alleging that “Judge Porteous well knew and understood” that Louis Marcotte “made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench.” (Id.) The Article does not allege that Judge Porteous suborned false statements or made a single false statement himself. Even accepting as true the bizarre speculation that Judge Porteous was somehow privy to the FBI agents’ full interview with Marcotte, such an allegation, if successful, would make impeachment the sanction for merely suspecting false statements made by others – a standard that would defy limitation or logic.

ARGUMENT

Article II should be dismissed for several reasons. First, as a matter of precedent, the Senate has never convicted an individual on the basis of conduct which occurred prior to the individual taking the office for which he was being impeached. Article II would create new and dangerous precedent – endorsing a standard that would allow judges to be removed for alleged conduct that occurred decades before federal confirmation. Worse yet, this new precedent would be forged in a case where the defendant has not even been indicted, let alone convicted, of such wrongdoing. The House has made such allegations in past impeachments, but the Senate has specifically declined to convict on such pre-office conduct grounds, recognizing that such allegations would directly contradict the intentions of the Framers and untether the standard of impeachment from its constitutional moorings.⁷ In fact, the House’s own constitutional experts revealed that they do not believe that the conduct alleged in Article II can give rise to a conviction in the Senate.

Once the pre-federal conduct is removed, Article II is trivial, alleging that Judge Porteous, in some unspecific manner, engaged in a supposedly “high Crime” or “high Misdemeanor” by accepting no more than a half-dozen lunches averaging about $40 apiece over roughly a seven-year period. Article II should be dismissed in its entirety.

I. By Alleging Pre-Federal Conduct, Article II Violates the Language and Intent of the Impeachment Clauses of the United States Constitution.

The Framers struck a delicate balance in crafting the impeachment provisions to allow for the removal of a president or a judge. Some delegates to the Constitutional Convention opposed such a power, particularly with regard to the President. The concern was that the legislative branch could usurp the needed independence of the Executive and Judicial branches. To avoid mischievous and arbitrary action by the Congress, the Framers adopted a high standard for removal, making it difficult, both procedurally and substantively, to remove a federal judge. In this system, the House and Senate have manifestly different functions, with the House serving more as a grand jury and the Senate serving as the adjudicatory body. See generally Jonathan Turley, Congress As Grand Jury: The Role of the House of Representatives in the Impeachment of an American President, 67 GEO. WASH. L. REV. 735 (1999); see also MICHAEL J. GERHARDT, THE FEDERAL IMPEACHMENT PROCESS: A CONSTITUTIONAL AND HISTORICAL ANALYSIS 205 (Univ. of Chicago Press, 2d ed. 2000); Jonathan Turley, Senate Trials and Factional Disputes: Impeachment as a Madisonian Device, 49 DUKE L.J. 1, 99 (1999). In this capacity, as discussed below, the Senate has often rejected articles of impeachment that do not satisfy the constitutional standard or that contain insufficient facts upon which to base removal. The Senate has historically strived to maintain certain bright-line rules of impeachment. One of those lines has been to confine impeachment of a federal judge to conduct while serving in the position for which the judge is being impeached, as opposed to “pre-federal” or “pre-office” conduct. This is an obvious and necessary distinction since Article III of the Constitution guarantees judges life tenure “during good behaviour” in office. (U.S. CONST. art. III, § 1.) Likewise, under Section 4 of Article II of the Constitution, the standard for impeachment refers to acts directly violating the oath of office in the cases of treason or bribery – neither of which is alleged in this case. Similarly, the meaning of “other high crimes and misdemeanors” historically has been confined to misconduct which occurred during a judge’s tenure in office.

The record from the Federal Constitutional Convention reflects an intent by the Framers to confine impeachment to acts committed in office. Early language was tied directly to an officer’s performance in office, allowing impeachment only for “malpractice or neglect of duty” which became, in the Committee of Detail, “treason, bribery, or corruption.” RAOUL BERGER, IMPEACHMENT: THE CONSTITUTIONAL PROBLEMS 78 (Harvard Univ. Press 1973). Ultimately, “corruption” was dropped by the Committee of Eleven.⁸ Id. The additional Constitutional language, “high Crimes and Misdemeanors,” was added after George Mason suggested on the floor of the Convention that “maladministration” be added to allow impeachment beyond the narrow categories of treason and bribery. Id. Madison remarked that “so vague a term [as maladministration] will be the equivalent to a tenure during the pleasure of the Senate,” whereupon Mason substituted “high crimes and misdemeanors,” which was adopted without demur. Id. at 91. Justice James Wilson, who had been a leading Framer, referred to ⁸ Although Article II alleges that a basis for impeaching Judge Porteous is a purported “longstanding pattern of corrupt conduct” – after witnesses specifically denied he had been bribed – the Framers expressly rejected the concept of “corruption” as a proper ground for impeachment.

“malversation in office, or what are called high misdemeanors.” Id. at 78. Alexander Hamilton, in Federalist No. 65, observed that:

[t]he subject [of the Senate’s] jurisdiction [in an impeachment trial] are those offenses which proceed from the misconduct of public men, or, in other words, from the abuse or violation of some public trust. They are of a nature which may with peculiar propriety be denominated POLITICAL, as they relate chiefly to injuries done immediately to the society itself.⁹

The result was the current standard of “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” (U.S. CONST. art. II § 4.)

The record from the Constitutional Convention reveals an exclusive focus on conduct in office. While it is accepted that the standard is not just limited to the abuse of judicial functions, it is limited to conduct during office.¹⁰ The only exception recognized by one of the House’s own expert witnesses – Professor Akil Amar – is the act of concealing facts during confirmation, which forms the purported basis for Article IV. (See Dec. 15th Hearing at 17-18, 45-47.) The impeachable act, in such an example, is concealment in the run-up to confirmation and not the substantive acts (all pre-federal) which are being concealed. Article II would combine the rejected “corruption” standard with pre-federal acts in direct contradiction of the language and underlying intent of Section 4 of Article II of the Constitution. If allowed, judges would be faced with precisely the open-ended standard that Madison wanted to avoid, serving “tenure during the pleasure of the Senate” since, on an arbitrary fashion dictated by partisan interests, they could be removed for acts going back decades before they became federal judges.

¹⁰ Some have suggested a “judicial function” doctrine limiting impeachment to official acts. Pollitt, Sex in the Oval Office and Cover-up Under Oath: Impeachable Offense?, 77 N.C. L. REV. 259, 268-77 (1998).

II. The Senate Has Convicted Judges Only For Misconduct Committed During Federal Service.

One of the House Managers' own experts stressed previously that "no one has ever been impeached, much less removed from office, for something he or she did prior to assuming an impeachable position in the federal government." GERHARDT, THE FEDERAL IMPEACHMENT PROCESS: A CONSTITUTIONAL AND HISTORICAL ANALYSIS, at 108. Throughout the history of the United States, only fifteen federal judges have been impeached by the House of Representatives.¹¹ Of these fifteen, only seven have been convicted and removed from office by the Senate. An analysis of their cases shows that the Senate has removed from office only those judges who explicitly abused the official federal constitutional powers bestowed upon them while in the office for which they were being impeached:

1. Judge John Pickering was impeached in 1803 and convicted by the Senate in 1804 for allegedly rendering judgment on the merits of a case while refusing to hear relevant testimony offered by the attorney general, disregarding and attempting to evade federal law, and refusing to permit an appeal; further, he appeared on the bench while intoxicated. (See generally 13 Annals of Cong. 319-368 (1852).)
2. Judge West H. Humphreys was impeached and convicted by the Senate in 1862 for actions most akin to treason, incitement to revolt, and rebellion while sitting as a federal judge. Humphreys joined the Tennessee secession and served as a District Court Judge

¹¹ The following judges have been impeached by the House of Representatives: (1) John Pickering, Judge, District of New Hampshire; (2) Samuel Chase, Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the United States; (3) James H. Peck, Judge, District of Missouri; (4) West Hughes Humphreys, Judge, Eastern, Middle, and Western Districts of Tennessee; (5) Mark W. Delahay, Judge, District of Kansas; (6) Charles Swayne, Judge, Northern District of Florida; (7) Robert W. Archbald, Associate Justice, United States Commerce Court and Judge, Third Circuit Court of Appeals; (8) George W. English, Judge, Eastern District of Illinois; (9) Harold Louderback, Judge, Northern District of California; (10) Halstead Ritter, Judge, Southern District of Florida; (11) Harry E. Claiborne, Judge, District of Nevada; (12) Alcee Hastings, Judge, Southern District of Florida; (13) Walter Nixon, Chief Judge, Southern District of Mississippi; (14) Samuel B. Kent, Judge, Southern District of Texas; and (15) Thomas Porteous, Judge, Eastern District of Louisiana. See generally EMILY FIELD VAN TASSEL & PAUL FINKELMAN, IMPEACHABLE OFFENSES: A DOCUMENTARY HISTORY FROM 1787 TO THE PRESENT, (Congressional Quarterly 1999).

in the Confederate States of America without retiring from the federal bench. (See generally Cong. Globe, 37th Cong., 2d Sess. 1062-2953 (1862).)

3. Judge Robert W. Archbald was impeached in 1912 and convicted by the Senate in 1913 for bribery and abuse of his position as a federal judge by inducing numerous litigants to allow him profitable financial deals, and hearing cases as a federal judge in which he had a financial interest. (See generally 62 Cong. Rec. S1105-1678 (1913).)
4. Judge Halsted L. Ritter was impeached and convicted by the Senate in 1936 for creating kickback schemes while a federal judge, continuing to work on a case as a lawyer while already a federal judge, evading federal income tax while a federal judge, bartering his federal judicial authority for a vote of confidence, and bringing his court into scandal and disrepute. (See generally 74 Cong. Rec. S1-684 (1936).)
5. Judge Harry Claiborne was impeached and convicted by the Senate for tax evasion in 1986. Prior to his impeachment, Claiborne had been convicted in court of criminal tax evasion for substantially under-reporting his income in 1979 and 1980 while he was a federal judge. The income he failed to report was the profit gained from bribes that Judge Claiborne had received. (See generally 99 Cong. Rec. S2-31 (1986).)
6. Judge Alcee L. Hastings was impeached in 1988 and convicted by the Senate in 1989 for conspiracy to solicit a bribe and perjury while a federal judge. (See generally 101 Cong. Rec. S1-77 (1989).)
7. Judge Walter L. Nixon was impeached and convicted by the Senate in 1989 for perjury while a federal judge. Prior to his impeachment, Nixon had been convicted in court on federal criminal charges of perjury and was serving a five-year sentence. Nixon's perjury conviction arose out of statements he made to a grand jury, which was investigating bribery charges alleging that Nixon accepted a gratuity in exchange for attempting to influence a state's drug prosecution against a business partner's son. (See 101 Cong. Rec. S10,673 (1989).)

Records of past impeachment proceedings also demonstrate that evidence relating to misconduct in a prior office falls outside the proper scope of an impeachment inquiry. The closest analogous precedent, Robert W. Archbald's impeachment in 1912, shows a clear rejection by the Senate of claims that a judge can be impeached for pre-office conduct, especially if the former office was in state court.

Archbald served as a district court judge in the Middle District of Pennsylvania from 1901 to 1911. See ELEANORE BUSHNELL, CRIMES, FOLLIES, AND MISFORTUNES: THE FEDERAL IMPEACHMENT TRIALS 217-18 (Univ. of Illinois Press 1992). In 1911, Archbald was assigned to a circuit judgeship on the United States Commerce Court, a federal judgeship. Id. at 218. During his time on the Commerce Court, Archbald was also appointed to, and confirmed for, a seat on the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Id.

In 1912, the House of Representatives filed thirteen Articles of Impeachment against Archbald, alleging misconduct in his then-current circuit judgeship (Articles 1 through 6) as well as in his prior district judgeship (Articles 7 through 12).¹² The Senate convicted Archbald on Articles 1, 3, 4, 5, and 13, but acquitted Judge Archbald on the articles relating solely to Archbald's former office (Articles 7 through 12).¹³ In so doing, many Senators formally denounced impeachment based on pre-office misconduct. For example:

- Senator Bryan (D-FL) stated that he was “convinced that articles of impeachment lie only for conduct during the term of office then being filled.” (S. Doc. No. 1140, 62d Cong., at 1635 (1913).)
- Senator Brandegee (R-CT) stated: “I vote ‘not guilty’ on article 13 because it alleges offenses some of which are alleged to have been committed by the respondent while he was... [in an] office he does not hold at present and did not hold at the time the articles were adopted[.]” (Id. at 1647.)
- Senator du Pont (R-DE) stated: “My vote of ‘not guilty’ upon the articles of impeachment against Judge R.W. Archbald numbered 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13 was based, in the main, upon the fact that the offenses therein charged were alleged to have been committed...when he was not holding his present office.” (Id. at 1647.)
- Senator Works (R-CA) stated: “I am of the opinion that the respondent can not be impeached for offenses committed before his appointment to his present office.” (Id. at 1635.)

¹³ See 62 Cong. Rec. S1647 (1913) at Index p. XIV (listing “guilty” and “not guilty” votes for each of the rejected articles).

- Senator M'Cumber (R-ND) stated: "[Articles 7-12] charge offenses committed while Judge Archbald was holding another and distinct official position...I therefore voted 'not guilty' on each and all of said articles[.]" (Id. at 1659-60.)
- Senator Catron (D-NM) stated: "[t]he charges (Nos. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12) against Judge Archbald of acts committed during the time that he was a district judge and before he became a circuit judge, in my opinion, have no validity in them...I do not believe that the House of Representatives had the right to go back of the present office held by Judge Archbald to hunt up any of his acts to charge against him so as to remove him from the office he now holds." (Id. at 1661.)
- Senator Crawford (R-SD) stated: "I find respondent guilty of misconduct, but it occurred before he became the incumbent of his present office...I do not believe impeachment can be sustained...for the reason stated." (Id. at 1655.)

Several Senators concluded that impeachment for pre-office conduct would violate the Constitution. Senator M'Cumber (R-ND) framed the issue as one of improper jurisdiction:

[T]he purpose of the Constitution in providing for impeachment proceedings was to purge the official roll of the country of improper officers, and nothing further. The Constitution therefore provided that the judgment of the Senate should not go beyond removal from office [T]herefore impeachment proceedings can not lie against a person for an act committed while holding an official position from which he is separated.

(Id. at 1660) (emphasis added). Various Senators likewise held that the Constitution expressly precludes impeachment for pre-office conduct:

- Senator Catron (R-NM) stated: "Section 4 of Article II of the Constitution is restricted by the terms of that section to the actual President, Vice President, or any civil officer who is actually such at the time the charges are made, and, in my judgment, is limited to the acts done by him in that particular office." (Id. at 1661.)
- Senator Works (R-CA) stated: "[t]he Constitution provides, in express terms, that judges appointed 'shall hold their offices during good behavior.' Therefore if a judge has maintained his good behavior during that time he has done nothing to forfeit his office . . . [n]either can such misbehavior, committed before his appointment, warrant a judgment disqualifying him from holding office[.]" (Id. at 1635-36.)
- Senator Bryan (D-FL) stated that "the 'good behavior' required by the Constitution relates to the future and not to the past; to what the officer does after, and not to what the citizen had done before, he is nominated and confirmed." (Id. at 1635.)

Senators in the Archbald trial also noted that impeachment for pre-office conduct could lead to extreme partisan abuses. As Senator William J. Stone (D-MO) emphasized, impeaching Archbald on Articles 7-12 would create precedent subjecting all civil officers to impeachment for minor pre-office misconduct regardless of how long ago it occurred:

It would not be difficult to conceive . . . [a case] where one who had been a district judge had been appointed to the Supreme Bench...who thereafter had served for many years . . . [and] under great pressure, when the country was in a state of high political excitement and when some supposed political exigency was influencing a partisan public opinion, a hostile partisan majority might hark back to some alleged misbehavior of the judge when he held the former minor judicial position.

See id. at 1652. Senator du Pont (R-DE) reiterated this point by stating: “[t]he legality of the impeachment, so far as such offenses is concerned, is questionable, and in any event a precedent fraught with danger is created.” Id. at 1647; see also id. at 1634 (Senator Borah (R-ID), voting not guilty on Articles 7-12 “because of a doubt I entertain as to the law”); id. at 1675 (Senator F.M. Simmons (D-NC), voting not guilty on Articles 7-12 because “I felt it my duty to give the respondent the benefit of this doubt”).¹⁴

By impeaching Judge Porteous for pre-federal conduct, the House of Representatives seeks to reverse the Senate’s long-standing precedent as set in the Archbald impeachment. (See H.R. Res. 1031, 111th Cong., at 18 (2010).) Indeed, if Judge Porteous is convicted on the basis of Article II, it would repudiate the Senate’s vote of “not guilty” on each and every article relating exclusively to Judge Archbald’s pre-office conduct (Articles 7-12) and over-rule 206 years of Senate precedent.

¹⁴ Other Senators expressed similar doubt, but chose to excuse themselves rather than vote not guilty. (See S. Doc. No. 1140, at 1632 (Senator Stone (D-MO), requesting excusal because “I have not reached a conclusion satisfactory to myself as to whether these alleged offenses [in Articles 7-12] could be reached by impeachment”); id. at 1634 (Senator Smith (D-GA), same); id. at 1636 (Senator Newlands (D-NV), same).)

Amazingly, the House Report ignores this persuasive and relevant history. Instead, it actually cites the Archbald precedent to support the notion that pre-office conduct is impeachable despite the Senate's express refusal to convict on the basis of such claims on constitutional grounds. (See House Report at 17, stating that ("[i]ncluding [pre-federal] conduct as a basis for impeachment is consistent with the impeachment of Judge Archbald...").) The House Report states: "The Archbald Impeachment Report specifically addressed the fact that Articles 7 through 12 were based on judicial conduct that occurred prior to Judge Archbald being appointed to the Circuit Court (from which removal was sought)." (Id. at 18.) What the House Report failed to emphasize was that the Senate declined to convict on those grounds; instead, the fact that Judge Archbald was acquitted of Articles 7-12, is buried in a footnote. (Id.)

Given the acquittal on Articles 7-12, the House Report urges reliance on Judge Archbald's conviction under Article 13 – described by the House as the "catch-all" Article. (Id. at 18, n. 72.) Article 13 in the Archbald impeachment proceedings read, in relevant part, as follows:

That during the time in which the said Robert W. Archbald has acted as such United States district judge and judge of the United States Commerce Court he...sought wrongfully to obtain credit from and through certain persons who interested in the results of suits then pending and suits that had been pending in the court over which he presided as judge of the district court, and in suits pending in the United States Commerce Court, of which [he was] a member.

That the said Robert W. Archbald, being United States circuit judge and being then and there a judge of the United States Commerce Court...did undertake to carry on a general business for speculation and profit...for a valuable consideration to compromise litigation pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and in furtherance of his efforts to compromise such litigation...willfully, unlawfully, and corruptly did use his influence as a judge of the said United States Commerce Court to induce [relevant individuals]...to enter into various [] contracts and agreements in which he was then and there financially interested....¹⁵

The House Report's reliance on the conviction on the basis of Archbald's Article 13 is misleading, because several Senators expressly stated that their votes of "guilty" on Article 13 were based solely the Commerce Court misconduct. See S. Doc. No. 1140, at 1660 (Senator M'Cumber (R-ND), voting "not guilty" on Articles 7-12 because pre-office conduct is not impeachable, but voting "guilty" on Article 13 because "in doing so my vote was intended to express my conviction only as to those specific charges included in Article 13 upon which I had already voted 'guilty'"); see also id. at 1675 (Senator Simmons (D-NC), voting not guilty on Articles 7-12 because there was "doubt as to whether [senators] had the right to impeach the respondent for acts committed in an office which he no longer held," but voting guilty on Article 13 because "the charge contained therein was sustained if he was guilty of some of the material acts of misconduct therein charged while he was holding the office of circuit judge").¹⁶ In regard to Article 13, Senator George Sutherland (R-UT), discussed the dilemma created by voting on an Article so general that it touched upon most of the charges leveled against Archbald. (Id. at 1642.) Sutherland noted that Article 13 included the various articles that preceded it, on some of which he had voted guilty and on some not guilty: "It occurs to me that I can not consistently vote upon this article one way or the other." (Id.) Eight other senators asked to be excused on the same grounds. Id.

¹⁵ Report No. 946, dated July 8, 1912, at 32.

¹⁶ It should be noted that Article 13 barely had the requisite two-thirds majority vote, and thirty-two senators were absent or abstained from voting. Id. at 1646-47 (listing 42 "guilty" votes, 20 "not guilty" votes, and 32 "absent or not voting"). In fact, if the votes of Senators M'Cumber and Simmons were switched for the reasons stated above, Judge Archbald would have been acquitted on Article 13.

The House Report also misconstrues the Archbald precedent by analogizing Archbald's pre-office conduct in a federal office to Judge Porteous's pre-federal conduct in a State office. The House Report argues that "the 'prescribed functions' of Judge Porteous's prior office as State court judge were 'of the same general nature' as the office of district court judge that he presently occupies, and were thus 'susceptible to the same malversations and abuse.'" (House Report at 18.) In contrast to Judge Porteous's position as a state court judge before becoming a federal judge, the Brief on Behalf of the House of Representatives for Archbald's impeachment emphasized the interchangeability of the federal district and circuit court offices, and noted that the senior circuit judge could "designate and appoint any circuit judge of the circuit to hold said district court." See S. Doc. No. 1140, at 1063 ("There is such a close interrelation between the duties and powers of United States district and circuit judges as to make the two offices substantially the same within the contemplation of the constitutional provisions relating to impeachments") (emphasis added). The Archbald Impeachment Report accordingly argued that Archbald held "civil office, within the meaning of the Constitution, of the same judicial nature as the office held by him at the time of the commission of the offenses." Id. This commonality of function and office is obviously different under our Constitutional system when the office in which the questioned conduct allegedly took place was a state judgeship and the office from which the impeachment occurs is a federal judgeship. (See, e.g., LA. CONST. art. V, § 22 (requiring Louisiana States judges to be elected, rather than appointed.) The effort to fudge the difference between federal and state offices and requirements of conduct is both transparent and unavailing. To cross this constitutional rubicon would allow future judges to be impeached for any prior conduct that suggests some failing that, while expressly not treason or bribery, could be claimed to show a corrupt tendency.

III. The House's Own Experts Rejected Pre-Federal Conduct as a Proper Basis For Impeachment.

Realizing that impeachment of a federal judge for pre-federal conduct would be unprecedented, the House sought the support of three different law professors – Charles G. Geyh, Michael J. Gerhardt, and Akil Reed Amar – to testify that the alleged conduct “provides a sufficient basis for impeachment.” (Dec. 15th Hearing at 1.)¹⁷ The House labeled these witnesses their “experts” and used their testimony as the basis for passing the Articles. (Id.) While endorsing the theoretical basis for Article IV’s impeachment for concealing prior bad acts at confirmation, the witness testimony directly refuted the premise of Article II that pre-federal conduct may be a proper basis for impeachment.

In his testimony, Professor Gerhardt notes that “whether or not somebody may be subject to impeachment conviction and removal for conduct done prior to occupying that particular position...can be a difficult question.” (Id. at 24.) In fact, Professor Gerhardt, upon questioning by Judge Porteous’s counsel conceded that “there’s not been any successful impeachment; that is to say, moved through the House or the Senate” based on events that took place prior to the person being a federal officer. (Id. at 52.) Professor Gerhardt broke down such pre-federal into “three kinds of misconduct . . .”

1. Misconduct that is committed prior to becoming a Federal judge and that is both inconsequential and unknown (or undisclosed) at the time of a judge’s confirmation proceeding;
2. Misconduct that is known at the time the judge is confirmed; and
3. Misconduct that is egregious but not known at the time of the judge’s confirmation proceedings.

(See id. at 29.) Professor Gerhardt concludes that “the Constitution clearly permits impeachment in the third circumstance but not necessarily in either of the other two.” (Id. (emphasis added).) Gerhardt suggests that the first type of misconduct is by definition “unimportant, innocuous, or trivial,” and, “[a]s such it is the kind of misbehavior (if one wants to use that term) which no one would expect a nominee to disclose or that would, if disclosed, make any difference to the outcome.” (Id.) In fact, much of what is alleged in Article II falls into this first category of misconduct that Professor Gerhardt identifies, including the acceptance of six lunches – valued at or less than $50 apiece – over a seven year period.¹⁸ These lunches after Judge Porteous took the federal bench are among the variety of disparate allegations contained within Article II – a constitutional defect in and of itself¹⁹ – intended to aggregate a series of acts which, individually and together, were not deemed sufficient to warrant any investigation, let alone a sanction, from the Louisiana State courts or the Louisiana State Bar.

In his testimony, Professor Gerhardt continued to explain that the “second type of misconduct is likely not to be impeachable, because the proper authority – the Senate – effectively ratifies the misconduct at the time it decides to confirm the judge.” (Id. at 30.) Professor Gerhardt finishes by arguing that only the “third kind of misconduct” – misconduct that is “egregious and not known at the time of confirmation” – is impeachable behavior because it is bad behavior that by itself demonstrates a level of “moral depravity and bad judgment that is completely incompatible with the responsibilities of a judge.” (Id.) Professor Gerhardt states that it is his understanding “that Judge Porteous has been charged with misconduct that falls into this third circumstance.” (Id.) Later Professor Gerhardt states “I’m pretty confident that they [the Senate] didn’t know anything about this.” (Id. at 46.) Moreover, Professor Gerhardt stated that “I don’t think the Senate knew this information. I’m confident had the Senate known it, it would not have done what it did.” (Id.)

¹⁹ The aggregation of claims inherent in Article II and the other Articles is discussed in great detail in Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.’s Motion to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment as Unconstitutionally Aggregated or, in the Alternative, to Require Voting on Specific Allegations of Impeachable Conduct, being filed concurrently herewith.

Contrary to Professor Gerhardt’s supposition, discovery in this case shows that the underlying allegations in Article II were reported to and investigated by the FBI and submitted to the Senate before confirmation,²⁰ but were correctly found to be unsubstantiated and not warranting further action. Beginning on June 24, 1994, during its background investigation of Judge Porteous for his federal judgeship nomination, the FBI interviewed numerous witnesses. A review of the results of that background investigation, which was undertaken for the purpose of review by the Senate, reveals that the government was informed of the allegations of improper state court conduct contained in Article II. For example, the FBI was clearly aware that Judge Porteous maintained a relationship with the Marcottes. The FBI specifically interviewed Louis Marcotte during its background investigation of Judge Porteous, and Marcotte explained that he had known the Judge professionally and socially for the past ten years and that he sometimes went to lunch with Judge. (See PORT000000471, attached as Exhibit 2.) Moreover, confidential informants told the FBI that “Louis Marcotte has told people that they ‘kick back’ money to Judge Porteous for reducing the bonds.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 3.) Based on this information, the FBI conducted additional interviews and further investigation and specifically sent an additional “note to DOJ” – all of which was provided to the Senate. (See PORT000000530, attached as Exhibit 4.) The additional information known to the Senate prior to Judge Porteous’s confirmation is detailed in the chart below.

Claim in Article II	Information in FBI Background Investigation of Judge Porteous Provided to Senate Prior to Confirmation
Judge Porteous knew and was associated with the Marcottes.	Prior to confirmation, the FBI interviewed Louis Marcotte, who told the FBI that “he has known the candidate for approximately ten years” and that he “knows the candidate professionally and socially.” (PORT000000471, attached as Exhibit 2.) Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his/her identity remain anonymous, but who stated that “Judge Porteous works with certain individuals in writing bonds, specifically . . . Louis and Lori Marcotte.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 3.) (The Justice Department has refused to reveal the identity of this source to the defense.)
Judge Porteous dined with the Marcottes	Prior to confirmation, the FBI interviewed Louis Marcotte, who told the FBI “that he sometimes goes to lunch with the candidate and attorneys in the area.” (PORT000000471, attached as Exhibit 2.)
Judge Porteous accepted things of value from the Marcottes, including meals, trips, home repairs, and car repairs	Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his/her identity remain anonymous, but who stated that the Marcottes “frequently give the judge and his staff cakes, sandwiches, booze, and soft drinks” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 3.) (The Justice Department has refused to reveal the identity of this source to the defense.)
Judge Porteous set, reduced, and split bonds as requested by the Marcottes	Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that their identity remain anonymous, but who stated that “Louis Marcotte has told people that they ‘kick back’ money to Judge Porteous for reducing the bonds.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 3.) This information was highlighted in a separate “note” to the Department of Justice, sent on August 19, 1994, months before Judge Porteous was confirmed. (PORT000000530, attached as Exhibit 4.) (The Justice Department has refused to reveal the identity of this source to the defense.) Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his/her identity remain anonymous, but who stated that Judge Porteous “frequently sign[ed] bonds ahead of time for bondsmen.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 3.) (The Justice Department has refused to reveal the identity of this source to the defense.) Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that their identity remain anonymous, but who stated that the candidate “indirectly received $10,000 from an individual in exchange for the candidate reducing his bond.” (PORT000000463, attached as Exhibit 5); the FBI interviewed an individual, whose identity has been redacted from discovery documents, who reported that Louis Marcotte told the girlfriend of an individual who had been arrested that it would take $12,500.00 to get [the boyfriend] out of jail” and that “$10,000.00 of this would go to Judge Porteous for the bond reduction.” (PORT000000524, attached as Exhibit 6.) This information was highlighted in a separate “note” to the Department of Justice, sent on August 19, 1994, months before Judge Porteous was confirmed. (PORT000000530, attached as Exhibit 4.) (The Justice Department has refused to reveal the identity of this source to the defense.) Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his/her identity remain anonymous, but who stated that “Porteous was “paid to reduce a bond” in a different case and “had been given $1,500 to reduce a bond” in that matter.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 3.) This information was highlighted in a separate “note” to the Department of Justice, sent on August 19, 1994, months before Judge Porteous was confirmed. (PORT000000530, attached as Exhibit 4.) (The Justice Department has refused to reveal the identity of this source to the defense.)
Judge Porteous improperly set aside or expunged felony convictions	Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his/her identity remain anonymous, but who stated that Judge “Porteous had transferred a case from another division to his [Porteous] to help [redaction follows].” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 3.) (The Justice Department has refused to reveal the identity of this source to the defense.)

Professor Gerhardt is not alone in believing that what the Senate knew prior to the confirmation would be material to impeachment proceedings based on pre-federal conduct. One of the House Managers, Congressman Gonzalez, stated that he was concerned about “[w]hat was the Senate was privy to.” (Dec. 15th Hearing at 45.) He asked rhetorically, “How much did the Senate know?” (Id.) This concern was well founded and appears to be of even greater import in light of the information that House Impeachment Counsel now has made available to the defense, despite failing to cite it in the House Report.

Thus, even if the Senate were to conclude that the Porteous case did not fall into either of the first two Gerhardt categories, the case would not qualify for impeachment under the testimony of the House’s own witnesses. Indeed, putting aside the fact that these allegations were known before confirmation, the Senate, according to Professor Gerhardt, would need to determine that the alleged misconduct rose to the level of “moral depravity,” a high standard that would seemingly not apply to the alleged receipt of things of small value like meals, car maintenance, and the like. If accepting occasional lunches from professional associates in the small and closely connected legal community of Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, is a case of “moral depravity,” not just courts but legislatures must be considered dens of depravity. In fact, both the House and Senate rules currently provide a general de minimis exception for gifts from private sources and allow for the acceptance of a gift (including the gift of a meal) if the gift has a value of below $50. House Rule 25, cl. 5(a)(1)(B); Senate Rule 35, para. 1(a)(2). In fact, prior to 1996, there were no limits on the acceptance of free meals by members of Congress. (See House Ethics Manual, Cmte. on Standards of Official Congress, (2008 ed.), at 27-28.²¹) Judge

²¹ The gift rules have changed repeatedly over the last several decades:

Porteous's acceptance of the gifts from the Marcottes each appeared to be of a value below or close to $50.00. As such, to convict Judge Porteous for the acceptance of these gifts, if they occurred, would assert evolving ethical standards that the Senate, acting as a jury in this matter, has rejected in its own ethical rules.

Finally, even if it is assumed that the acceptance of such gifts and other allegations in Article II did occur and was not disclosed to the Senate prior to confirmation, the third (and only impeachable) category for pre-federal conduct described by Professor Gerhardt would be the basis not of Article II, but Article IV. Professor Gerhardt concludes that "fraudulent suppression or misrepresentation of prior misconduct" is the most logical type of pre-federal behavior that would give rise to an impeachment of a federal officer. (Dec. 15th Hearing at 52.) Article IV alleges the failure to disclose such conduct. Article II seeks to remove Judge Porteous based on the underlying conduct itself. There is a fundamental difference. One act – the failure to disclose information about these acts – allegedly occurred during confirmation, as described in

- From 1968 to 1990, the gift rules restricted the ability "to accept gifts from persons with a direct interest in legislation" but otherwise did not place a limit on meals or gifts received by members of Congress.
 - From January 1, 1992, through December 31, 1995, the gift rules prohibited the acceptance "of gifts worth a total of more than $250 from any source in any one year." Exempted from this limitation, however, were "gifts of food and beverages consumed not in connection with gifts of lodging, i.e., local meals, without any restriction as to cost or the source of the payment."
 - In 1996, the House approved a new gift rule "that imposed significant, new limitations" on the acceptance of gifts, including the elimination of the meal exemption. The Senate gift rule included a provision that "generally allowed the acceptance of any gift valued below $50, with a limitation of less than $100 in gifts from any single source in a calendar year." In 1999, the House amended its gift rule to incorporate this provision of the Senate rule, allowing acceptance of gifts, including meals, if valued below $50.

See House Ethics Manual, Cmte. On Standards of Official Congress, (2008 ed.), at 27-29. See also, Robert F. Bauer et al., Lobbying Under the New Disclosure and Gift Ban Requirements (Am. Law. Inst.- Am. Bar Assoc. Course of Study, Feb. 21, 1997).

Article IV. The other acts, described in Article II, allegedly occurred over the course of a decade-long State judgeship. Notably, Professor Gerhardt recognized that even the third category presents “a difficult question,” but it is a question that is raised only by Article IV, not Article II. (Id. at 24.)

The House Managers’ other expert, Professor Akhil Reed Amar, also identified only a couple of specific circumstances in which a judge can be impeached for pre-federal conduct: (1) an individual “who bribes his very way into [the impeachable] office,” and (2) “a person who procures a judgeship by lying to the President and lying to the Senate.” (Id. at 18.)

Like Professor Gerhardt, Professor Amar focuses on whether information was falsified at confirmation as opposed to the underlying pre-federal conduct. Indeed, when pressed, Professor Amar states that “the State court stuff, well, that’s arguably just State Court stuff,” indicating he did not believe that it, on its own, rose to the level of an impeachable offense. (Id. at 47 (emphasis added).)

Professor Amar does not identify any additional pre-federal or pre-office conduct that amounts to an impeachable offense and notably does not substantively discuss or apply his own standards to the conduct alleged in Article II. The House Managers probed whether Professor Amar would agree that an article of impeachment could be based solely on the pre-federal conduct as opposed to the failure to disclose information at confirmation. Professor Amar tellingly answered by describing Article IV, rather than Article II, in this exchange with Congressman Schiff:

Congressman Schiff: But let’s remove the affirmative duty to disclose and the questions of the Senate, and let’s just focus on the conduct that took place before he was on the Federal bench. Do you believe that conduct in and of itself would be a basis for impeachment? Is there ample precedent or any precedent that conduct that solely predates the Federal bench in and of itself is a sufficient basis to impeach?

Professor Amar: His concealment of this – if he had told everyone about it and been confirmed anyway, then in effect there is a kind of res judicata in the Senate itself that, having been given the facts and fairly adjudicating whether they want this person to hold office.... He could have come forward, but he concealed it. And that undercuts his ability to be a judge.

(Dec. 15th Hearing at 35.) What Professor Amar described is the claim under Article IV relating to omission of disclosure, as opposed to the claim under Article II relating to the actual commission of the pre-federal acts. Moreover, like Professor Gerhardt, Professor Amar recognized that even an Article IV claim would be invalid if the allegations were known to the FBI or Senate, as they were in this case. Accordingly, both of the experts who focused on impeachment rejected the basis for Article II, just as the Senate has historically rejected such pre-office claims.

IV. The Post-Federal Conduct Alleged in Article II – Socializing and Networking – Involved No Dishonesty and Is Not an Impeachable Offense.

As discussed above, the only federal bench misconduct alleged in Article II is that Judge Porteous “used the power and prestige of his office to assist the Marcottes in forming relationships with State judicial officers and individuals important to the Marcottes’s business. ... Accordingly, [he] has engaged in conduct so utterly lacking in honesty and integrity that he is guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors, is unfit to hold the office of Federal judge, and should be removed from office.” (Article II.)

The House alleges that Judge Porteous allegedly “attend[ed] meals with the Marcottes and other judicial officers,” “receive[ed] the benefit of those free meals,” and “provided the opportunity for the Marcottes to show off their relationship with him” thus constituting behavior “utterly lacking in honesty and integrity.” (House Report at 20, 4.) In fact, Judge Porteous conferred no judicial benefit upon his longtime friends, the Marcottes, for their occasional appearances with and gifts to him. The only benefit he is even alleged to have conferred on the Marcottes as a federal judge is the benefit of socializing and networking. (See House Report at 20 (premising the discussion of Judge Porteous's federal-bench conduct on the statement that his conduct "did not involve taking judicial actions to benefit the Marcottes" and conceding that "there is no evidence that Judge Porteous specifically communicated to these judges that he sought or intended for the Marcottes to form corrupt relationships with them") (emphasis added).) They simply went to lunch together.

In Article II, therefore, Judge Porteous is being impeached because the House disapproves of his personal associations, a remarkably slippery slope for a new standard of impeachment. It is a unsettling small step from penalizing a judge for his social interactions to penalizing him for his politics or his religion, if such were to be distasteful to some Members of Congress. This is not a far-fetched idea. The Senate has, at least, entertained movements such as the "Impeach Earl Warren" campaign over de-segregation.

For centuries, the Senate has maintained clear lines on the limits of impeachable conduct. Allowing Article II to go forward would render all of the precedent meaningless by allowing a judge to be removed on the basis of his role in forming unpopular social relationships. What is striking about this is that the House does not cite any specific violation of judicial ethics rules in Jefferson Parish or any past removal of a judge for similar social events or "unsavory" friends. Thus, the House would have the Senate remove a federal judge for conduct that occurred decades ago which the forum state does not deem worthy of sanction.

The most damning federal conduct that the House Report can allege is that Judge Porteous merely "brought strength to the table" when accompanying Louis Marcotte in business settings, a fact that may well have been lost on Judge Porteous who simply believed he was dining with friends and acquaintances. (House Report at 79.) The House does not, and could not, claim a direct violation of any federal ethical rule for Judge Porteous to accept a handful of lunches from the Marcottes who were personal friends and had no business before his federal court.

To conclude that having poor judgment in one's personal relationships constitutes an impeachable offense would create a fluid and arbitrary line for future impeachments, making them subject to partisan mischief and mortally challenging judicial independence. Such a standard, potentially, would have subjected some of the leading jurists of the last two centuries to impeachment. For example, Justice Anton Scalia was criticized for accepting hunting trips with former Vice President Dick Cheney before ruling on a case in which Cheney's office was a party. See Gina Holland, Justice Scalia: No Apologies for Hunting Trip With Cheney, WASH. POST (Feb. 11, 2004) (quoting Justice Scalia as stating "It's acceptable practice to socialize with executive branch officials when there are not personal claims against them. That's all I'm going to say for now. Quack, quack."). Likewise, Justice Felix Frankfurter and some of his colleagues were accused of ex parte communications and other conflicts in leading cases. See generally Jonathan Turley, Tribunals and Tribulations: The Antithetical Elements of the Military Justice System in a Madisonian Democracy, 70 GEO. WASH. L. REV. 649, 737 (2002); see also David J. Danelski, The Saboteurs' Case, 1 JOURNAL OF SUP. COURT HIST. 61, 69 (1996). As Professor Stempel has summarized, the use of the power and prestige of one's office and the showing of favoritism, along with breaches of intra-bench confidentiality, have been deployed routinely by the most respected judges in American history:

Justice William Johnson, President Jefferson's first appointment to the Court, regularly engaged in lengthy correspondence with Jefferson in which Jefferson sought to influence the internal functioning of the Court. In many of these letters, Jefferson sought to convince Johnson to work to return the Court to the earlier practice of seriatim opinions rather than the single majority opinion pioneered by Jefferson's arch-rival, Chief Justice John Marshall....

Justice Samuel Chase, appointed by President Washington in 1796, began his political career as a Republican but converted to the Federalist cause with such enthusiasm that while on the Court he actively and publicly campaigned for the presidency of John Adams. This and some celebrated episodes of intemperance on the bench sufficiently angered Congress that Chase was impeached and tried, but acquitted....

Justice Joseph Bradley, who served on the Court from 1870 until 1892, was... criticized for hearing a petition for appointment of a receiver brought by an old friend acting as counsel for the petitioner. His choice of receiver was also criticized by some who alleged misfeasance in the sale of the debtor's properties....

Justice Willis Van Devanter, a 1910 Taft appointee, delivered two opinions in cases involving former client the Union Pacific Railroad. Harding appointee Pierce Butler also delivered court opinions involving his former railroad client, the Great Northern Railroad....

A perhaps even more suspect extracurricular activity of Justice Frankfurter recently attained considerable attention when his protégé and former law clerk Philip Elman revealed in an interview that he and Justice Frankfurter had numerous conversations regarding internal court discussions. Justice Frankfurter was, in essence, informing Elman, then an Assistant Solicitor General for civil rights cases, of the positions of the Justices regarding segregation, and advising Elman as to how best involve the Government in the litigation chapter of the civil rights movement of the 1940s and 1950s....

Justice Abe Fortas's close 'kitchen cabinet' relationship with President Lyndon Johnson demonstrated that the problem of the advisor-Justice did not end with Justices Brandeis and Frankfurter. The weight of authority suggests that Justice Fortas was frequently advising the President on matters ranging from Vietnam War strategy to re-election planning. This seemingly was widely known in Washington and tolerated until Justice Fortas's financial dealings brought him under an unfavorable spotlight.

See Jeffrey W. Stempel, Rehnquist, Recusal, and Reform, 53 BROOKLYN L. REV. 589, 622-24 (1987) (internal citations omitted).

Here, the House is seeking a conviction of Judge Porteous for acts that Congress has previously recognized do not constitute impeachable offenses. See Hastings v. Judicial Conference of the U.S., 593 F. Supp. 1371, 1382 (D.D.C. 1984) (“Congress therefore did not intend to authorize investigation and formal proceedings against a judge for one or two isolated instances of possibly unethical or inappropriate official conduct unless such conduct, by itself, could amount to an impeachable offense.”). To seek impeachment and conviction here is to return to the prior English standard that allowed impeachment for ill-defined “divers deceits.”²² See Leon R. Yankwich, Impeachment of Civil Officers Under the Federal Constitution, 26 GEO. L.J. 849, 853 (1938); see also Jonathan Turley, Senate Trials and Factional Disputes: Impeachment as a Madisonian Device, 49 DUKE L.J. 1, 11 (1999). The guarantee of life tenure and judicial independence means nothing if removal can occur on the basis of poor judgment in social acquaintances or, in the instant case, a small number of lunches during federal service.

CONCLUSION

Article II represents a new and dangerous precedent on many levels. It would erase centuries of precedent where the Senate has confined removal offenses to federal or in-office conduct. It would contradict the House’s own experts on what constitutes an impeachable offense. It would remove a federal judge for alleged ethical misconduct as a state judge that Louisiana has never sought to punish. Finally, it would use impeachment to address acts that Congress, itself, has stressed should be dealt with in informal proceedings. Such a new standard would leave judges with little idea of what acts over decades of pre-federal conduct could be used as the basis for removal. It would produce the very situation that the Framers sought to avoid: judges serving at the pleasure of Congress, which can impeach for conduct not limited to their federal office or even period of federal service.

²² “Diver deceits” appeared to refer to an alleged pattern of untrue or misleading statements or actions. Leon R. Yankwich, Impeachment of Civil Officers Under the Federal Constitution, 26 GEO. L.J. 849, 853 (1938).

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate dismiss Article II in its entirety.

NO T-6 further advised that he/she had heard that DIANE BOURG, in the Clerk's office, had told people that PORTEOUS was signing the bonds in blank. (NO T-6 advised that he/she believed this practice was illegal). NO T-6 also heard that BOURG was reprimanded for signing the bonds with just a judge's signature without verifying the property.

NO T-6 also advised that he/she had heard of another case where PORTEOUS was paid to reduce a bond. NO T-6 advised that he/she heard that PORTEOUS had been given $1,500 to reduce a bond in a matter which he/she believed involved a TRACY IRELAND who had been arrested for theft. According to the person with whom NO T-6 spoke, PORTEOUS reduced the bond from $500,000 cash to $50,000 property in return for the payment of $1,500. NO T-6 further commented that he/she has heard that Judge PORTEOUS works with certain individuals in writing bonds, specifically Bondswoman ADAM BARNETT, Attorney RALPH BARNETT (Adam's father), PAUL BOUDOUSQUE, and other bonding people such as LOUIS and LORI MARCOTTE. Apparently LOUIS MARCOTTE has told people that they "kick back" money to Judge PORTEOUS for reducing the bonds. They also frequently give the judge and his staff cakes, sandwiches, booze, and soft drinks. NO T-6 has also heard from various court personnel that DIANE BOURG is still signing the bonds that the judges give to her, even though they are not properly filled out.

NO T-6 advised that he/she had also heard that PORTEOUS had transferred a case from another division to his (PORTEOUS') to help

E

When the case was reassigned to PORTEOUS, he (PORTEOUS) gave the individual probation. NO T-6 advised that he/she had not heard whether PORTEOUS had ever taken any money for cases and he/she advised that he/she did not think he had but that he did frequently sign bonds ahead of time for bondsmen.

NOTE TO DOJ:

RE: GABRIEL THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.
BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION
PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENT WITH SENATE CONFIRMATION

The background investigation on Mr. Gabriel Thomas Porteous was opened on June 24, 1994. Mr. Porteous is currently a judge in Gretna, Louisiana. Mr. Porteous is being considered for a Presidential appointment as a United States District Court Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana, a position which requires Senate confirmation. Partial investigations were furnished to your office on July 29, 1994, and August 8, 1994.

An individual who requested total confidentiality, characterized as NO T-6, advised that he/she has heard that the candidate was once paid $10,000 to reduce a bond for an individual named Keith Kline. T-6 advised that an unknown female approached a bail bondsman named Lewis Marcotte to arrange for Kline's immediate release. Marcotte allegedly contacted a lawyer named Phillip Boudousque, who subsequently approached the candidate to get a bond reduction for Kline. T-6 advised that Boudousque delivered $10,000 to the candidate from the unknown female to secure the bond reduction. T-6 further advised that he/she heard that the candidate was paid $1500 to reduce the bond of an individual named Tracy Ireland. T-6 also stated that Lewis Marcotte has told people that the candidate receives "kick backs" for reducing bonds.

T-6 also advised that he/she heard that an individual named Jolene Aoy had smoked marijuana with the candidate and had also been at a party on a yacht allegedly owned by the candidate where cocaine and marijuana was used.

Several individuals were interviewed to include Boudousque, Marcotte, and Aoy. All denied the allegations put forth by T-6 and favorably recommended him.

T-2 was recontacted and could provide no examples of how the candidate lives beyond his means.

The candidate was reinterviewed and denied all the allegations put forth by T-6.

The background investigation is complete.

NO T-6, who requested that his/her identity be protected from anyone outside the FBI, was contacted regarding his/her knowledge of the candidate.

NO T-6 advised that he/she had heard from an individual whom he/she declined to identify but described as reliable that THOMAS PORTEOUS was paid $10,000 to reduce a bond. NO T-6 advised that this unnamed individual told him that when KEITH KLINE was arrested by the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office (JPSO) for a cocaine-related charge, KLINE's girlfriend, whose name NO T-6 could not remember, had approached LOUIS MARCOTTE at MARCOTTE's bail bond office on Derbigny Street in Gretna to arrange bail for KLINE.

NO T-6 heard that this unknown female wanted MARCOTTE to get KLINE out of jail immediately. MARCOTTE telephoned a lawyer named PHILLIP J. BOUDOUSQUE, Gretna, Louisiana. BOUDOUSQUE came over to the office and talked to MARCOTTE with the unknown female. NO T-6 advised that during part of the conversation, BOUDOUSQUE told KLINE's girlfriend and MARCOTTE that he would approach Judge THOMAS PORTEOUS and attempt to get a bond reduction for KLINE.

The female left and came back later that evening with a large amount of cash in a shoe box. NO T-6 heard that MARCOTTE told KLINE's girlfriend that it would take $12,500.00 to get KLINE out of jail. He (MARCOTTE) advised that $10,000.00 of this would go to Judge PORTEOUS for the bond reduction and the other $2,500.00 would go directly for the bond. He (MARCOTTE) stated that BOUDOUSQUE would write up the $10,000.00 as attorney's fees in order to protect the judge.

CONCLUSION	23

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes Respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and respectfully requests that the Senate dismiss Article III of the Articles of Impeachment for failure to state an impeachable offense. In support, Judge Porteous states as follows.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY

Article III alleges improprieties and errors in connection with Judge Porteous's personal bankruptcy proceeding. That misconduct – even if it occurred exactly as alleged – does not constitute an impeachable offense. Placed in the context of the full facts and real-world bankruptcy practice, Judge Porteous's conduct did not materially affect any creditor and did not warrant so much as a reprimand from the bankruptcy trustee or the bankruptcy court. While Judge Porteous made errors, his conduct constitutes no more than common problems frequently found in personal bankruptcy cases, which rarely merit formal action, even at the bankruptcy court level, let alone elevation to constitutional impeachment. If conduct of this sort were to rise to the level of a high crime or high misdemeanor for impeachment, countless similar errors in filings by public officials could be used as grounds for removal.

The Department of Justice conducted an extensive investigation into the conduct alleged in Article III, and ultimately declined to pursue any criminal charges against Judge Porteous. Indeed, the Justice Department specifically declined to prosecute Judge Porteous because of its concern that it would be unable to prove "materiality" and "intent," as well as to provide consistency in charging decisions concerning bankruptcy and criminal contempt matters." (See Exhibit I hereto.) Given that decision, as well as the bankruptcy court's decision not even to criticize Judge Porteous, who faithfully repaid his creditors as ordered by that court, Article III is shockingly out of step with past definitions of impeachable conduct. The bankruptcy trustee in Judge Porteous's case was well aware of the allegations against Judge Porteous, having met and corresponded with the FBI on several occasions. He determined that the facts alleged in Article III provided no grounds either to modify or reject Judge Porteous's bankruptcy discharge – let alone sanction him. The bankruptcy court agreed. Article III thus invites the Senate, in effect, to take a nonjudicial appeal from the order discharging Judge Porteous in bankruptcy, and overrule the bankruptcy court by imposing the ultimate sanction of impeachment – for conduct that the bankruptcy court and bankruptcy trustee found to be of little concern.

Judge Porteous is not seeking to have the Senate condone inaccuracies in bankruptcy filings. However, such errors occur frequently and, while he oversees the work of bankruptcy judges, Judge Porteous is not personally an expert in that area. The errors and inaccuracies in his bankruptcy were addressed appropriately at the bankruptcy court level as part of the bankruptcy process. Bankruptcy courts and trustees regularly address such issues in the management their own dockets and are uniquely qualified to judge whether such conduct is sanctionable. Perfection never has been, nor should it be, the standard by which bankruptcy filings are judged. Judge Porteous's bankruptcy conduct should not be held to such a ridiculously high standard. Article III should be dismissed.

ARGUMENT

I. Even If All of the Actions Set Out in Article III Occurred as Alleged, that Conduct Does Not Constitute an Impeachable Offense

A. The Misconduct Alleged in Article III is Common in Chapter 13 Bankruptcy Filings and Does Not Normally Warrant Either Civil or Criminal Penalties

All of the misconduct alleged in Article III revolves around the bankruptcy case that Judge Porteous and his late wife filed in 2001. (See 111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010), exhibiting the House's Articles of Impeachment against Judge Porteous (hereinafter the "Articles" or "Articles of Impeachment").) The Porteouses, exercising their rights as private citizens,¹ sought bankruptcy protection as a result of an untenable financial situation stemming from years of poor financial planning, record-keeping, and discipline. As happens with so many Americans, Judge Porteous's expenses, including those associated with raising and educating his four children, simply outstripped his income. This situation was exacerbated by Judge Porteous's (and his late wife's) penchant for gambling. Ultimately, after trying unsuccessfully to reorganize their debt and finances informally, Judge and Mrs. Porteous sought shelter in the bankruptcy process. In so doing, Judge Porteous joined the nearly 1.5 million American debtors who in 2001 sought such protection, and an opportunity for a fresh start.²

In their review of the perceived shortcomings in Judge Porteous's bankruptcy filing, the Fifth Circuit and the House took an overly simplistic view of the process involved in filling out bankruptcy schedules and seeking bankruptcy protection. As a result, each made a mountain out of the proverbial mole hill. Bankruptcy judges throughout the country have long recognized that bankruptcy schedules prepared and filed by or on behalf of consumer debtors are rife with problems.³ Additionally, bankruptcy commentators have expressly recognized that completed bankruptcy forms often contain errors.⁴ In fact, shortly before Judge Porteous and his wife filed their bankruptcy case, the Honorable Steven W. Rhodes, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge for the Eastern District of Michigan, undertook a review of the bankruptcy schedules filed in 200 randomly selected consumer cases pending in his court. Judge Rhodes's analysis revealed errors in 99% (198 of 200) of the schedules reviewed. See Steven W. Rhodes, An Empirical Study of Consumer Bankruptcy Papers, 73 Am. Bankr. L.J. 653, 678 (1999).

What all these bankruptcy judges, scholars, and experts have recognized is that preparing bankruptcy schedules is an inherently difficult process, where even experts in the field routinely make mistakes. Nevertheless, the Fifth Circuit and the House viewed the preparation of bankruptcy schedules by Judge Porteous and his late wife as a black-and-white exercise, instead of the complex field of grey that it is in reality. When one considers the complexity of the bankruptcy schedules and the stress that debtors are under as they prepare such schedules, it is easy to understand why errors occur, even when the debtors are represented by counsel. It is equally easy to understand why bankruptcy courts and federal prosecutors regularly decline to prosecute such errors. Were this not the case, and if bankruptcy courts and federal prosecutors adopted the view taken by the Fifth Circuit and the House in this case, virtually every consumer bankruptcy filing would be followed shortly thereafter by a criminal prosecution.

Following past precedent, the House framed Article III in terms of a criminal offense, specifically 18 U.S.C. § 152, which makes concealment of assets and false oaths and claims bankruptcy crimes. Key elements for each of these crimes, for which the House has failed to account, are the requirements that the debtor act knowingly and fraudulently and that the misconduct be material. As discussed in detail below, the House cannot establish any of these requirements with regard to Judge Porteous.

The only appropriate sanction for the alleged improprieties in Judge Porteous's bankruptcy should stem from the Bankruptcy Code itself, and not from impeachment and removal under the Constitution. As the House is well aware, both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Justice investigated Judge Porteous's bankruptcy filings. Numerous interviews were convened, including with William Greendyke, the U.S. Bankruptcy Judge who presided over Judge Porteous's bankruptcy case, and S.J. Beaulieu, the Chapter 13 trustee who oversaw that bankruptcy. In addition, extensive testimony was taken in connection with the Fifth Circuit's investigation into Judge Porteous. Despite this intense scrutiny, Judge Porteous has neither been indicted nor otherwise charged with a bankruptcy crime. Indeed, the Criminal Division of the U.S. Department of Justice advised – more than three years ago – that “it will not seek criminal charges against Judge Porteous.” (See Letter from J. Keeney to E. Jones dated May 18, 2007, labeled SC00767-88, and attached as Exhibit 1, at 1.) Among the reasons cited by the Justice Department in support of its decision not to prosecute Judge Porteous for bankruptcy misconduct are “concerns about the materiality of some of Judge Porteous's provably false statements,” “the special difficulties of proving mens rea and intent to deceive beyond a reasonable doubt in a case of this nature,” and “the need to provide consistency in charging decisions concerning bankruptcy and criminal contempt matters.” (Id.; emphasis added.)

Simply put, the House's allegations of misconduct by Judge Porteous in connection with his personal bankruptcy filing are exceedingly common and do not warrant civil or criminal penalty, much less the ultimate consequence of conviction in an impeachment trial and removal from office.

B. Judge Porteous's Bankruptcy and Alleged Misconduct

Early in the summer of 2000, Judge Porteous sought out a referral for a consumer bankruptcy attorney to assist him and his late wife with their financial difficulties. Judge

Porteous was referred to Claude Lightfoot, a respected and experienced bankruptcy practitioner in the New Orleans area. (See H.R. Rep. No. 111-427 (2010), Report from the House Judiciary Committee concerning the Impeachment of Judge Porteous (the “House Report”), at 96.) Between August 2000 and mid-March 2001, Judge Porteous and Mr. Lightfoot worked together extensively to address the Porteouses’ financial issues. Although Judge Porteous, like other District Court judges, supervises the work of bankruptcy judges in his judicial district, he and his wife had little to no personal experience with bankruptcy and were reliant on their counsel to provide them with counseling and advice related to their financial situation.⁵ Initially, Judge Porteous and his wife provided Mr. Lightfoot with copies of their credit card statements, invoices, and other bills. (Id.) Judge Porteous also provided Mr. Lightfoot with a copy of his pay stub, which detailed his income. (Id.) Finally, Judge Porteous filled out a set of bankruptcy worksheets provided to him by Mr. Lightfoot. (Id.)

Using the information provided by the Porteouses, Mr. Lightfoot attempted to negotiate an out-of-court restructuring agreement between the Porteouses and their creditors. (Id. at 96-97.) Ultimately, these negotiations were unsuccessful and the Porteouses decided to file a joint voluntary petition for relief under Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code. (Id. at 97.)

In Article III, the House has alleged five instances or categories of bankruptcy misconduct – none of which is sufficiently material or egregious to merit impeachment. Indeed, under relevant bankruptcy law and practice, these allegations rise only to the level of common mistakes, do not constitute criminal or impeachable acts, and are normally dealt with exclusively by the bankruptcy court – as they were in Judge Porteous’s case.

1. Use of Incorrect Names and a Post Office Box Address

Prior to filing for bankruptcy protection – on the advice of his bankruptcy counsel – Judge Porteous opened a post office box for himself and his wife. Mr. Lightfoot then used this new post office box address and the information previously provided to him to put together the Porteouses’ bankruptcy petition, schedules, and statement of financial affairs. In preparing those documents, Mr. Lightfoot recommended the use of fictitious names for Judge Porteous and his wife, so as to avoid or limit press coverage of the filing. (House Report at 100, noting that, before the Fifth Circuit, Mr. Lightfoot testified that the suggestion to file the Porteouses’ bankruptcy petition under false names was his (Mr. Lightfoot’s) idea.) While Judge Porteous knew the names listed on his bankruptcy petition were incorrect, he relied on his attorney’s advice that such action was permissible and justifiable given the Porteouses’ intent to amend the petition shortly after filing to insure that all noticed creditors received only accurate information concerning the Porteouses’ identities. True to this intent, less than two weeks after filing their bankruptcy petition, the Porteouses filed an amended petition correcting their names and listing their residential address. (Id. at 101.) As a result, all notices provided to creditors accurately named the Porteouses as the debtors. The Porteouses’ creditors were never provided with inaccurate information regarding Judge Porteous and his late wife’s names or address.

As noted above, Judge Porteous had little to no experience with bankruptcy at the time he retained Mr. Lightfoot. Accordingly, Judge Porteous relied heavily on the advice of Mr. Lightfoot in matters relating to his bankruptcy filing. Mr. Lightfoot advised Judge Porteous that there was nothing wrong with filing a petition with a fictitious name, so long as the error was corrected in time to ensure creditors received proper notice of the bankruptcy filing. Moreover,

Judge Porteous never had any intention of utilizing a fictitious name and a post office box to deceive his creditors. Instead, Judge Porteous simply, and in hindsight foolishly, sought to minimize the media attention and embarrassment to his family due to his bankruptcy filing. The case authority in the Fifth Circuit is clear: a debtor is entitled to rely on the advice of his counsel, and a conviction for false oath cannot be founded on a debtor's following the advice of counsel. Hibernia Nat'l Bank v. Perez, 124 B.R. 704 (E.D. La. 1991), aff'd, 954 F.2d 1026 (5th Cir. 1992).

Moreover, the Chapter 13 bankruptcy trustee overseeing the Porteouses' bankruptcy case (Mr. S.J. Beaulieu) was specifically informed of the Porteouses' use of incorrect names on their initial petition and elected not to take any action. (See Letter from M. Adoue to W. Horner dated April 1, 2004, labeled JC200268, and attached as Exhibit 2.) In January 2004, while the Porteouses' bankruptcy case was pending and prior to their receipt of a discharge, agents with the FBI met with Mr. Beaulieu concerning the Porteouses' bankruptcy filing. (Id. at 1.) According to a letter sent by Mr. Beaulieu's attorney following that meeting, the FBI advised Mr. Beaulieu that (1) they were conducting an investigation into the Porteouses' bankruptcy and (2) the Porteouses had used incorrect names on their original bankruptcy petition. (Id.) Though specifically empowered to investigate and address such issues, Mr. Beaulieu, through his attorney, explained that he did not intend to take any action with regard to the Porteouses' temporary use of incorrect names. (Id.) Asked again about this issue during the Fifth Circuit's investigation, Mr. Beaulieu stated that, since the Porteouses amended their petition quickly and prior to the meeting of creditors, all unsecured creditors received notice of the true identities of the debtors. (See Memorandum from L. Finder to R. Woods dated July 29, 2007, labeled JC200251-53, and attached as Exhibit 3, at 2.) Accordingly, Mr. Beaulieu decided to take no action because he viewed the situation as one of “no harm, no foul.” (Id.)

2. Omission of Certain, Small Assets

Judge Porteous’s bankruptcy petition and associated schedules disclosed assets totaling more than $263,000, and included all of his significant assets such as his home, financial accounts, and personal property. The House alleges that Judge Porteous failed to disclose a tax refund of $4,143.72, less than $1,000 in his Bank One account,⁶ several hundred dollars in a money market checking account, and $173.99 of income per month. (House Report at 101-05.) As discussed herein, these omissions were inadvertent, clearly not done with an intent to defraud, and immaterial.

Consumer bankruptcy petitions are rarely perfect. In fact, those individuals that keep perfect records rarely file for bankruptcy protection. Judge Porteous and his late wife were no exception. They scheduled the vast majority of their debt and liabilities save for four items identified by the House. Had all of these disclosures been made, creditors would not have received materially more on account of their claims.

Tax refund

Judge Porteous filed his tax return on March 23, 2001. He claimed a refund, but it had not been received on the date of filing his bankruptcy petition. Indeed, the Internal Revenue Service had not yet processed or approved the return at the time of his bankruptcy filing. Judge Porteous received his tax refund on April 13, 2001, several weeks after filing for bankruptcy and more than two months prior to confirmation of his proposed Chapter 13 plan on June 28, 2001. Judge Porteous did not believe that the tax refund was an asset of his Chapter 13 case because, on the date of filing for bankruptcy protection, only the return had been filed; the refund had not yet been received. That return may have been rejected by the IRS. Moreover, as Judge Porteous was operating on a cash basis and the cash had not been received, it is unclear whether the pending request for a tax refund represented an asset as of the date of his filing. Finally, after consultation with his counsel, Judge Porteous believed that disclosure was unnecessary – a conclusion with which the Chapter 13 trustee (Mr. Beaulieu) agreed.⁷

⁶ The House is imprecise concerning the amount of the allegedly undisclosed funds, stating in the House Report that, “the opening balance in Judge Porteous’s Bank One account for the time period of March 23, 2001 to April 23, 2001 was $559.07, and the closing balance for the same time period was $5,493.31.” (House Report at 103.) The Porteouses’ petition date was March 28, 2001. (Id. at 99.)

Account balances

Judge Porteous filed his bankruptcy schedules using what he believed to be his and his wife's current bank balance. He did this by reviewing his wife's checkbook (as she wrote many of the family checks), taking into account checks that had already been written but which had not yet cleared, and discussing the issue with his wife. Unfortunately, he did not accurately reconcile the true balance of the bank account with his wife's checkbook. While Judge Porteous's Bank One bank account balance may have exceeded the amount reported on the petition date, this was not the result of intentional misconduct, but rather, poor record-keeping and miscommunications with his wife.

Judge Porteous's bankruptcy schedules also inadvertently omitted his Fidelity money market checking account. That omission appears to have been the result of a miscommunication between Judge Porteous and his counsel, as he recalls including the Fidelity account within the list of financial accounts supplied to Mr. Lightfoot. Judge Porteous denies, and there is no evidence to the contrary, that this account was intentionally omitted from his bankruptcy filing. Moreover, while the account should have been included, its omission was immaterial. In fact, on March 28, 2001, the day that the Porteouses filed their bankruptcy petition, the Fidelity checking account had a total balance of $283.42. (See Fidelity money market account statement dated April 20, 2001, labeled SC00611, and attached as Exhibit 4; see also House Report at 104 n.42.)

Understated income

Judge Porteous's bankruptcy counsel, Mr. Lightfoot, prepared the Porteouses' bankruptcy schedules. In disclosing the Porteouses' income, Mr. Lightfoot inadvertently used a stale pay stub for Judge Porteous. That pay stub was attached to the Porteouses' bankruptcy filing, and thus openly available for inspection by the bankruptcy judge, the Chapter 13 trustee, and all creditors. (See Exhibit 1 in the Fifth Circuit proceedings, labeled SC00108-09.) Using this stale pay stub was an innocent mistake by counsel. It does not evidence an intent by Judge Porteous to deceive his creditors. Absent proof of such improper intent, impeachment is clearly not warranted. In fact, the only likely repercussion from such an error would be for Judge Porteous's Chapter 13 repayment plan to be amended to add additional payments, or, at worst, denial of his discharge. As it happened, however, the FBI brought this issue to the Chapter 13 trustee's attention in early 2004, before the Porteouses received a discharge in their bankruptcy case, and the trustee elected not to take any action with regard to the understated income. (Exhibit 2, at 1.)

Notwithstanding the alleged omissions, Judge Porteous made each payment due under his Chapter 13 repayment plan and received a discharge. Moreover, his plan provided for a higher percentage recovery to Chapter 13 creditors than typical Chapter 13 plans in the Eastern District of Louisiana in 2001.

The lack of materiality in any failure of disclosure by Judge Porteous is definitively established by the letter written by the Chapter 13 trustee's counsel to the FBI. (Exhibit 2.) After meeting with the Bureau and being advised of certain "potential bankruptcy improprieties" involving misspelled names, undisclosed income, income tax refunds, the use of credit cards, transfers of property, and lifestyle activities, the Chapter 13 trustee's lawyer stated that the undisclosed income "would not substantially increase the percentage paid to unsecured creditors," and explained, therefore, that the trustee did not intend to take further action. (Id.) Given the Chapter 13 trustee's position as monitor and interested party in this case, his decision to take no action should end any further inquiry.

3. Omission of Certain, Minor Pre-Petition Payments

The House alleges that Judge Porteous made payments to creditors prior to his bankruptcy case. (House Report at 106-07.) Every debtor makes pre-petition payments, and Judge Porteous is no exception. The simple fact is that there is nothing inherently wrong, evil, or sinister about pre-petition payments. See In re Huber Contracting, Ltd., 347 B.R. 205, 215 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2006) (citations omitted) (noting that numerous courts have long recognized that there is nothing inherently wrong with "preferring" a particular creditor, so long as that preference is not made with fraudulent intent). The reason pre-petition payments are important is that, in certain circumstances, the Chapter 13 trustee is given avoidance powers under Section 549 of the Bankruptcy Code to retrieve such payments. Given the small size of the alleged undisclosed pre-petition payments in this case, however, it is highly unlikely that the trustee would have pursued those payments – given that the costs of collection would have greatly exceeded any payments returned to the bankruptcy estate. Moreover, there is absolutely no evidence to suggest Judge Porteous's failure to disclose these payments was anything other than poor record-keeping. Certainly, there are no facts to support intentional nondisclosure, deceit, or fraudulent intent.

The three pre-petition payments allegedly made by Judge Porteous are as follows (House Report at 103, 106-07):

- $1,500.00 to the Treasure Chest on March 27, 2001;
- $1,088.42 to Fleet on March 23, 2001; and
- $2,000.00 to Bank One, as a checking account deposit, on March 27, 2001.⁸

None of these payments are sufficiently material to justify a Chapter 13 trustee bringing a cause of action to seek their recovery. The policy for pursuing pre-petition payments is to prevent creditors from taking advantage of debtors while they are insolvent and to promote equality in the treatment of unsecured creditors. It is beyond reason to think that the Chapter 13 trustee in the Porteouses' bankruptcy would have pursued such transfers, as there would have been no economic benefit to the creditors – since the costs of collection would have far outstripped the recovery. As a result, the alleged nondisclosure of pre-petition payments is immaterial.

4. Non-Disclosure of Gambling Losses and Debts

The House alleges that Judge Porteous failed to disclose gambling losses. (House Report at 107-08.) While the calculations in the House Report are suspect on their face,⁹ it should be noted that most if not all of Judge Porteous's pre-bankruptcy gambling was done using credit

⁸ This deposit into his Bank One account on March 27, 2001, was intended to ensure that the account contained sufficient funds to cover a marker that Judge Porteous had taken out on February 27, 2001, and which came due 30 days later (on March 27, 2001). While the timing of this repayment, one day before he ultimately filed his bankruptcy petition, can be made to seem sinister, the evidence will show that Judge Porteous had not yet made a final decision on whether to file his Chapter 13 at the time this deposit was made.

card advances. Thus, the creditors with an interest in recovering money for such advances were on clear notice that gambling debt had been incurred. In fact, the evidence of such gambling was included in the very credit card statements that Judge Porteous's creditors created and issued to him monthly. This allegation again does not warrant impeachment. It fails to demonstrate anything other than poor record-keeping, and is utterly lacking in any factual support for intentional nondisclosure.

5. Allegations of Incurring New Debt in Contravention of Bankruptcy Court Order

The House has alleged that Judge Porteous committed bankruptcy misconduct by "incurring new debts while [his bankruptcy] case was pending, in violation of the bankruptcy court's order." (Article III, no. (5).) This allegation is exceedingly vague and non-specific. Indeed, to understand what conduct the House is alleging to be improper, it is necessary to refer to the House Report.¹⁰ In that Report, the House asserts that Judge Porteous incurred post-petition debt during three distinct time periods following his bankruptcy filing: (i) March 28, 2001, through May 9, 2001; (ii) May 10, 2001, through June 28, 2001; and (iii) June 29, 2001, through July 22, 2004. (House Report at 108-15.) The House implies that Judge Porteous violated federal bankruptcy law by incurring debt during the first two time periods, and that Judge Porteous knowingly violated the bankruptcy court order confirming his repayment plan by incurring debt during the third time period. The House's allegations and analysis are overly formalistic and, when analyzed critically, unavailing.

¹⁰ This is itself improper and unconstitutional. The Constitution provides that the House of Representatives "shall have the sole Power of Impeachment." U.S. CONST. art. I, § 2, cl. 5. Under the House's own rules, "a majority vote is necessary" to adopt articles of impeachment. See Wm. Holmes Brown & Charles W. Johnson, House Practice: A Guide to the Rules, Precedents and Procedures of the House, 108th Congress, 1st Sess. (2003), Chapter 27 – Impeachment, § 8 Consideration in the House; Voting (available at http://frwebgate.access.gpo.gov/cgi-bin/getdoc.cgi?dbname=108_house_practice&docid=hp-27.pdf). By omitting its specific allegations from the Articles voted upon by the House, and instead including that information in the House Report, the House has attempted to circumvent this constitutional requirement. This, the Senate should not allow. In addition to violating the Constitution, burying the true allegations in the House Report, rather than including them in the Articles of Impeachment, deprives the accused of knowing with certainty what charges have been leveled against him. To remedy this defect, the Senate should bar the House from presenting evidence of alleged misconduct that is not specifically included within the Article of Impeachment properly voted upon, and passed, by the House.

With regard to the first two time periods, it is not at all clear that Judge Porteous's actions constituted the incurrence of debt. Even if they did, however, such actions did not violate either the Bankruptcy Code or any applicable bankruptcy order. With regard to the third time period, it is unclear whether Judge Porteous was aware of the bankruptcy court's prohibition on the incurrence of new debt. What is clear, however, is that Judge Porteous's actions during the third time period constitute, at most, minor mistakes or errors – for which impeachment and removal from office is not warranted.

First Time Period – Initial Filing to Creditors Meeting

The first time period discussed by the House runs from the Porteouses' initial bankruptcy filing, on March 28, 2001, to the date of Judge Porteous's creditors meeting, on May 9, 2001. (House Report at 108.) During this period, the House Report asserts that Judge Porteous requested additional credit from, and took out a series of markers at, casinos. The House acknowledges, however, that "there was no official court order during this time period prohibiting Judge Porteous from incurring new debt" and that the bankruptcy trustee had not "instructed Judge Porteous that he may not incur new debt...." (Id. at 108 n.515.) Nevertheless, the House questions Judge Porteous's good faith in seeking bankruptcy protection and insinuates that he was somehow gaming the system.

Rhetoric aside, there is simply nothing improper about Judge Porteous's conduct during this first time period. As the House concedes, there was no order during this time frame instructing Judge Porteous not to incur new debt. Moreover, the House has mischaracterized the act of taking out markers as the incurrence of debt. It is not. Under Louisiana law, markers are not considered debt. They are instead considered checks. See TeleRecovery of Louisiana, Inc. v. Gaulon, 738 So. 2d 662, 664-66 (La. Ct. App. 1999) (examining the features and attributes of casino markers and concluding that markers constitute checks under Louisiana law). This is the same understanding that Judge Porteous had with regard to markers – that they are checks (which are used to “buy” chips from the casino, and which can be cashed at any time by the casino via electronic money transfer), not debt.

Second Time Period – Creditors Meeting to Confirmation

The second time period defined by the House runs from Judge Porteous’s creditors meeting, on May 10, 2001, until the entry of Judge Greendyke’s order confirming the Porteouses’ proposed Chapter 13 repayment plan, on June 28, 2001. (House Report at 109-11.) The only distinction between the first time period and the second is that at the May 9, 2001 creditors meeting Judge Porteous received a pamphlet containing general bankruptcy information and had a short discussion with the Chapter 13 trustee. In that discussion, the trustee told Judge Porteous that “[a]ny charge cards that you may have you have [sic] you cannot use any longer. So basically you on [sic] a cash basis now.” (See Transcript of creditors meeting, labeled SC00595-98.) The House alleges that Judge Porteous violated these instructions by, over the course of more than five weeks, taking out four markers, totaling only $2,000, all but $100 of which was repaid on the same day that it was taken out.

Here again, there is nothing improper about Judge Porteous’s conduct during the second time period. There was no bankruptcy order in place at the time. And, as discussed above, markers are considered checks under Louisiana law, not debt. TeleRecovery, 738 S.2d at 664-66.

Moreover, as the FBI agents testified before the Fifth Circuit, casino records regarding markers are “very confusing” and subject to “certain nuances [at] each casino,” thus creating some definitional confusion concerning markers. (See Testimony of W. Horner before the Fifth Circuit, transcript p. 296.) Even if markers did constitute debt, however, Judge Porteous’s actions in taking them out did not violate the Bankruptcy Code notwithstanding the admonition in the pamphlet provided by the Chapter 13 trustee to the contrary. See In re Jemison, No. 07-40761, 2007 WL 2669222, at *4 (Bankr. N.D. Ala. Sept. 6, 2007) (“There are no restrictions in the code prohibiting a chapter 13 debtor from incurring ordinary consumer debt after the commencement of the case and before the debtor is granted a discharge.”).

Third Time Period – Confirmation to Discharge

The third time period framed by the House runs from the entry of the confirmation order, on June 28, 2001, until final discharge in the Porteouses’ bankruptcy case, on July 22, 2004. (House Report at 111-15.)

On June 28, 2001, Judge Greendyke held a hearing concerning confirmation of the Porteouses’ proposed Chapter 13 repayment plan. According to Judge Greendyke’s testimony before the Fifth Circuit, on typical confirmation days, he considered between 120 and 150 proposed Chapter 13 plans for confirmation. (See Testimony of W. Greendyke before the Fifth Circuit, transcript p. 387.) Judge Greendyke further testified that he never met or spoke with Judge Porteous. (Id. at 380.)

Following that hearing, Judge Greendyke signed an order confirming the Porteouses’ Chapter 13 repayment plan on June 28, 2001, which was entered on July 2, 2001. (See Order introduced before the Fifth Circuit (“Confirmation Order”), labeled SC00050-52.) The Confirmation Order provided that: “The debtor(s) shall not incur additional debt during the term of this Plan except upon written approval of the Trustee. Failure to obtain such approval may cause the claim for such debt to be unallowable and non-dischargeable.” (Id. ¶ 4.) This particular provision of the Confirmation Order was not mandated by, and did not enact or enforce any particular provision of the Bankruptcy Code.

The House Report charges that Judge Porteous violated Judge Greendyke’s order by taking out additional markers at casinos and by obtaining a new credit card with a $200 limit without the trustee’s permission. As set forth above, neither Louisiana law nor Judge Porteous understood markers to constitute debt. TeleRecovery, 738 S.2d at 664-66. Even if markers had violated that order, the violation would have been minor and should have been dealt with in the bankruptcy context, with contempt serving as the maximum punishment. Moreover, the Confirmation Order itself stated what consequences may flow from its violation, namely that “the claim for such [new] debt [would] be unallowable and non-dischargeable.” (Confirmation Order, ¶ 4.)

The House Report further alleges that Judge Porteous applied for and received a new Capital One credit card. This new card provided an extremely limited credit line of $200 (which was later increased to $400 and then $600). While this card does constitute new credit, and its use incurred new debt, it was necessary for Judge Porteous to function in today’s society, in which a credit card is frequently required (for such things as buying an airline ticket, renting a car, and making purchases over the internet). Admittedly, Judge Porteous should have asked for the Chapter 13 trustee’s permission prior to obtaining this new card. His failure to do was a mistake. It is a gross injustice, however, to contend that the punishment for that mistake should be impeachment and removal from office. It should be instead be limited to the non-dischargeability specifically set out in the Confirmation Order.

II. Compared with Prior Impeachments, Article III's Allegations of Private, Minor Bankruptcy Misconduct Do Not Justify Removal

In the history of the Republic, no federal judicial officer has been impeached and convicted for purely private conduct that does not constitute an actual abuse of constitutional power. Article III, however, seeks to deviate from this precedent and do just that. The allegations set out in Article III are novel (as well as grossly insufficient to warrant removal) in that they all relate to Judge Porteous's purely private conduct in connection with this personal bankruptcy filing. There is no allegation in Article III that Judge Porteous actually abused the power entrusted to him as a federal judge in connection with his bankruptcy. Moreover, the Justice Department specifically investigated Judge Porteous's conduct in connection with that bankruptcy and formally declined to bring any criminal charges. (Exhibit 1.) Accordingly, Article III – even if all its allegation were true – should not constitute an impeachable offense for which Judge Porteous can be removed from office.

Since the ratification of the Constitution, only fifteen federal judicial officers have been impeached by the House of Representatives. Of those, seven have been convicted by the Senate and removed from office. In every case resulting in conviction, the House has alleged, and the Senate has found, that the former judge actually abused the power entrusted to him as a federal judge. Specifically:¹¹

- In 1804, the Senate convicted Judge John Pickering for extreme misconduct on the bench, including rendering judgment after refusing to hear relevant evidence, disregarding and attempting to evade federal law, refusing to permit an appeal, and appearing drunk on the bench. (See generally 13 Annals of Cong. 319-368 (1852).)
- In 1862, the Senate convicted Judge West Humphreys for conduct amounting to treason and incitement to revolt and rebellion, all of which was inimical to his position and authority as a U.S. federal judicial officer. During the Civil War, Humphreys joined the Tennessee secession and, without retiring from his U.S. federal judgeship, served as a District Judge in the Confederate States of America. (See generally Cong. Globe, 37th Cong., 2d Sess. 1062-2953 (1862).)

¹¹ The history, context, and outcomes of prior impeachment proceedings are further discussed in the Motions to Dismiss Articles I and II that Judge Porteous filed concurrently with this Motion. Judge Porteous incorporates those discussions herein by reference.

- In 1913, the Senate convicted Judge Robert Archbald for bribery and significant misconduct relating to cases pending before him, including using his position as a judge to induce litigants to allow him to participate in profitable financial deals and hearing cases in which he had a financial interest. (See generally 62 Cong. Rec. S1105-1678 (1913).)
- In 1936, the Senate convicted Judge Halsted Ritter for lacking the fitness to hold judicial office on the basis that he, among other things, abused the power of his office, engaged in kickback schemes stemming from his misuse of his judicial authority, and evaded the federal tax laws by not reporting the money that he received from such schemes. (See generally 74 Cong. Rec. S1-684 (1936).)
- In 1986, the Senate convicted Judge Harry Claiborne for tax evasion. (See generally 99 Cong. Rec. S2-31 (1986).) The Senate's action to remove Claiborne from office followed his federal criminal trial, in which a jury found him guilty of falsifying his income tax returns by failing to report as income bribes that he received while a federal judge.
- In 1989, the Senate convicted Judge Alcee Hastings for conspiracy to solicit a bribe in connection with a case before him and perjury before the grand jury investigating allegations of his judicial misconduct. (See generally 101 Cong. Rec. S1-77 (1989).)
- Also in 1989, the Senate convicted Judge Walter Nixon for perjury stemming from false statements that he made to the grand jury investigating bribery allegations charging that he accepted a gratuity in exchange for attempting to influence a state judicial proceeding. (See generally 101 Cong. Rec. S10,673 (1989).)

This precedent is clear, and it should guide the Senate in this trial. Specifically, the Senate has previously voted to convict judges in impeachment trials only when their conduct is found to constitute an actual abuse of constitutionally entrusted judicial power. The House's Article III in this case, however, alleges no such actual abuse of official power by Judge Porteous. Instead, Article III seeks to convict and remove Judge Porteous solely on the basis of his private conduct in connection with his personal bankruptcy filing.

Of the bases for past Senate impeachment convictions, tax evasion (charged by the House against Judges Ritter and Claiborne) is the most analogous to the bankruptcy misconduct alleged in Article III. Both federal tax and bankruptcy laws require full disclosures under oath. Likewise, both filing tax returns and seeking bankruptcy protection are private financial activities, which occur wholly apart from one's employment. Thus, the viability of the House's Article III, which is novel and not supported by prior precedent, can be evaluated by analogy to prior tax evasion impeachment allegations. Such allegations were raised in the Ritter and Claiborne impeachments, and the Senate's treatment of both should guide it here.

The House impeached Halsted Ritter in 1936 on the basis of seven articles. The first six such articles alleged various acts of misconduct in connection with Judge Ritter's actions on the bench, including kickbacks,¹² practicing law while a judge, exhibiting favoritism in connection with cases before him, and tax evasion. With regard to tax evasion, the House alleged that Ritter filed two tax returns that improperly omitted income that he received in connection with his judicial misconduct (i.e., bribes or other gratuities). The seventh article was a catch-all, alleging that Ritter's various acts of misconduct rendered him unfit to serve as a federal judge. Following trial, the Senate acquitted Ritter on each of the first six articles – including the two articles that sought his removal on the basis of tax evasion. The Senate then turned, however, to the seventh, catch-all article and voted to convict.

The Ritter impeachment precedent is instructive in how the Senate deals with articles of impeachment directed at private financial conduct. First, the Senate acquitted Ritter on both articles of impeachment that alleged solely personal conduct unrelated to his official position: tax evasion. Those articles omitted any reference to Ritter's abuse of his judicial authority and alleged instead simply that he received income that he failed to report. This result significantly undercuts the House's novel assertion in Article III that purely private, off-the-bench conduct in connection with a personal bankruptcy filing (or, by analogy, a personal tax return) can be the proper basis for an impeachment conviction. Indeed, in the first instance where the Senate considered removing a judicial officer for private conduct not specifically alleged to relate to an actual abuse of official power, the Senate rejected the theory and voted to acquit.

Second, the Ritter impeachment presented a significantly stronger case for removal on the basis of private conduct than that alleged in Article III, and yet it was rejected. In Ritter, the House alleged that there was a nexus between the alleged private misconduct (tax evasion) and the alleged abuse of judicial power (kickbacks). Indeed, the income that Ritter failed to report, which led to the tax evasion charge, consisted of bribes or other gratuities paid in connection with Ritter's actual abuse of his judicial authority. Ritter's private misconduct in connection with his tax returns was, thus, just an extension and continuation of his official misconduct. Nevertheless, the Senate voted to acquit. There is no such nexus in this case; indeed, the House does not allege that Judge Porteous's private bankruptcy misconduct was in any way connected with the allegations of official misconduct contained in Articles I and II. Lacking any such a link, the allegations against Judge Porteous in Article III, which are far weaker than those asserted – and rejected – against Ritter, should be likewise dismissed for failure to state an impeachable offense.

The Claiborne impeachment is similarly instructive. In that case, both the House and Senate's impeachment proceedings followed Claiborne's federal conviction for tax fraud. Indeed, the Claiborne articles of impeachment specifically alleged that the "facts [relating to tax fraud] set forth in [Claiborne Articles I and II] were found beyond a reasonable doubt by a twelve-person jury in the United States District Court for the District of Nevada." S. Hrg. 99-

819, pt. 1, at 7-8 (1986). In addition to the fact that his criminal conduct had already been conclusively determined by a federal jury, the Claiborne impeachment presented the unique circumstance that Claiborne had refused to resign his judgeship, was collecting his federal judicial salary while in prison, and intended to return to the federal bench after completing his two-year criminal sentence. These circumstances differ significantly from the Article III allegations against Judge Porteous, who has been neither criminally charged nor convicted of any misconduct in connection with his personal bankruptcy. Quite to the contrary, after conducting an extensive investigation, the Justice Department specifically declined to bring any criminal charges against Judge Porteous. (Exhibit 1.) Thus, the Senate's action in the Claiborne impeachment, which effectively ratified his prior criminal conviction and was necessary to prevent a convicted felon from retaking the bench, does not support the House's attempt in Article III to remove Judge Porteous from office on the basis of allegations of private bankruptcy misconduct that even the Justice Department concluded did not warrant criminal prosecution.

CONCLUSION

The Senate has never before countenanced the use of the impeachment mechanism to police the purely private conduct of federal judges, and it should not start now. In essence, Article III seeks to castigate and remove Judge Porteous for minor mistakes made in connection with his personal bankruptcy filing. As there is no allegation of actual abuse of official power,¹³ discipline for such conduct should be meted out exclusively by the bankruptcy court and, if appropriate, the judicial disciplinary process. Such minor misconduct, however, should not be the subject of a Senate impeachment trial. Such a lowering of the standard for impeachment would allow judges and civil officers to be removed for a wide array of inaccurate financial statements – allowing a party in power to mine the records of federal officials to seek their removal.

The Senate clearly should not try, let alone remove, judges for conduct that even the bankruptcy courts treat as, at best, de minimis. Indeed, to remove a judge for acting on the advice of counsel in some of these matters would be absurdly out of step with the language and intent of the impeachment clauses. The Senate should dismiss Article III and reaffirm its long-standing position that conviction in impeachment trials is appropriate only where the subject judge has committed truly egregious acts while in federal service.¹⁴

The alleged errors and omissions in Judge Porteous’s bankruptcy that the House points to as justification for his removal from office are, in reality, merely minor mistakes that occur in the vast majority of personal bankruptcy filings. While regrettable, such conduct is simply not a valid basis for the conviction and removal of a federal judge. The Constitution does not contemplate that impeachment will be used as a mechanism to police the purely private conduct of federal judges. Instead, impeachment is reserved for only the most serious offenses, namely “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4. Since Article III fails to allege conduct that meets this exacting standard, it should be dismissed.

¹⁴ Moreover, given the Constitution’s mandate that judges be removed only for “Treason, Bribery, or other High Crimes and Misdemeanors,” it is not at all clear that the Senate has the constitutional authority to remove federal judges for purely private, minor misconduct. U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4.

Re: Complaint of Judicial Misconduct Concerning the Honorable
G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

Your Honor:

The United States Department of Justice respectfully submits this complaint referring allegations of judicial misconduct concerning the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 351-64 and the Rules Governing Complaints of Judicial Misconduct or Disability (amended July 15, 2003).¹

For the past several years, the Federal Bureau of Investigation ("FBI") and a grand jury empanelled in the Eastern District of Louisiana investigated whether Judge Porteous and other individuals bribed or conspired to bribe a public official in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 201 and 371, committed or conspired to commit honest services mail- or wire-fraud in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 371, 1341, 1343, and 1346, submitted false statements to federal agencies and banks in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1001 and 1014, and filed false declarations, concealed assets, and acted in criminal contempt of court during his personal bankruptcy action in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 152 and 401.

The Department has determined that it will not seek criminal charges against Judge Porteous. Although the investigation developed evidence that might warrant charging Judge Porteous with violations of criminal law relating to judicial corruption, many of those incidents took place in the 1990s and would be precluded by the relevant statutes of limitations. In reaching its decision not to bring other available charges that are not time barred, the Department weighed the government's heavy burden of proof in a criminal trial, and the obligation to carry that burden to a unanimous jury; concerns about the materiality of some of Judge Porteous's provably false statements; the special difficulties of proving mens rea and intent to deceive beyond a reasonable doubt in a case of this nature; and the need to provide consistency in charging decisions concerning bankruptcy and criminal contempt matters. The Department also gave careful consideration -- as it must -- to the availability of alternative remedies for Judge Porteous's history of misconduct while on the bench, including impeachment and judicial sanctions administered pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 351-64.

Despite the Department's decision not to charge Judge Porteous with violations of federal criminal law, the investigation has uncovered evidence of pervasive misconduct committed by Judge Porteous. The Department also is aware that Judge Porteous and his medical examiners have concluded that he is mentally and psychologically unfit to serve as a federal judge, and that his incompetency is permanent. Collectively, the evidence indicates that Judge Porteous may have violated federal and state criminal laws, controlling canons of judicial conduct, rules of professional responsibility, and conducted himself in a manner antithetical to the constitutional standard of good behavior required of all federal judges. Further, it has come to the Department's attention that Judge Porteous is scheduled to return to the federal bench in June 2007, at which time he may seek to preside over matters involving the Department. The Department accordingly refers this evidence to Your Honor for possible disciplinary proceedings and, if warranted, certification of the allegations to Congress for impeachment.

BACKGROUND

On October 11, 1994, G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., was confirmed by the United States Senate as a United States District Court Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana. Before his elevation to the federal bench, he served as a judge on the 24th Judicial District Court of the State of Louisiana ("24th JDC") for ten years, from 1984 to 1994.

The New Orleans Division of the FBI conducted an investigation into allegations of judicial corruption in the 24th JDC. That investigation resulted in the convictions of fourteen defendants, including several 24th JDC judges, the owners of a bail bonding business, and other state court litigants and officials. During the investigation, the FBI was informed that Judge Porteous had in the past accepted, and as a federal judge continued to accept things of value, including payments and trips, from local attorneys, allegedly in exchange for favorable rulings. The FBI also was informed that Judge Porteous maintained an improper relationship with Louis and Lori Marcotte, the owners of a bail bonding business, who allegedly provided Judge Porteous as well as other state judges and employees various things of value in exchange for access and assistance on bond-related matters.

In March 2001, Judge Porteous and his wife, Carmella Porteous, filed for bankruptcy under Chapter 13. Gabriel and Carmella Porteous signed and filed a declaration that their bankruptcy schedules and statement of financial affairs were true to the best of their knowledge, information, and belief. Subsequently, the bankruptcy court confirmed a repayment plan based on the information the Porteouses submitted to the court. The bankruptcy judge issued an order providing for repayment to the creditors over a 36-month period and prohibiting the Porteouses from accruing further debt during the bankruptcy. The repayment plan was satisfied and the bankruptcy discharged in July 2004.

EVIDENCE OF MISCONDUCTI. Evidence that Judge Porteous Violated the Order of the Bankruptcy Court

Judge Porteous and his wife Carmella Porteous filed for bankruptcy on March 28, 2001. The Porteouses' financial records show that they sought protection in bankruptcy in large part because of their substantial gambling activities. For example, between June 1995 and July 2000, while Judge Porteous served on the federal bench, over $66,000 in gaming charges appear on Judge Porteous's credit card statements. Along with those credit card charges, between January 1996 and May 2000 Judge Porteous wrote checks or made cash withdrawals at casinos for an additional $27,739.

Judge William Greendyke, sitting by designation on the Bankruptcy Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, issued an Order confirming the bankruptcy repayment plan on June 28, 2001. Among other things, Judge Greendyke ordered that "[t]he debtor(s) shall not incur additional debt during the term of this Plan except upon written approval of the Trustee. Failure to obtain such approval may cause the claim for such debt to be unallowable and non-dischargeable."

Judge Porteous violated this order on multiple occasions. Among other debts, he obtained gambling markers and loans from casinos during the pendency of the bankruptcy proceeding.² Judge Porteous obtained the following short-term debts from casinos in the aggregate amount of $31,900 in violation of the court's order:

- on August 20 and 21, 2001, Porteous borrowed $8,000 from Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana;
- on September 28, 2001, Porteous borrowed $2,000 from Harrah's Casino in New Orleans, Louisiana;
- on October 13, 2001, Porteous borrowed $1,000 from Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana;
- on October 17 and 18, 2001, Porteous borrowed $5,900 from Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana;
- on October 31, 2001, Porteous borrowed $3,000 from Beau Rivage Casino in Biloxi, Mississippi;
- on November 27, 2001, Porteous borrowed $2,000 from Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana;

² A "marker" is a form of credit extended by a casino that enables a customer to borrow money while authorizing the casino to draw any unpaid balance after a fixed period of time from the customer's bank account. Typically, markers are deposited after a few days, but Judge Porteous obtained an agreement from at least one casino that he would be afforded thirty days to repay his markers before the casino would deposit them.

- on December 11, 2001, Porteous borrowed $2,000 from Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana;
- on December 20, 2001, Porteous borrowed $1,000 from Harrah's Casino in New Orleans, Louisiana;
- on February 12, 2002, Porteous borrowed $1,000 from Grand Casino in Gulfport, Mississippi;
- on April 1, 2002, Porteous borrowed $2,500 from Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana;
- on May 26, 2002, Porteous borrowed $1,000 from Grand Casino, Gulfport, Mississippi; and
- on July 4 and 5, 2002, Porteous borrowed $2,500 from Grand Casino, Gulfport, Mississippi.

In addition, the evidence shows that Judge Porteous violated the order prohibiting new debt on several other occasions. On July 4, 2002, Judge Porteous applied successfully to increase his credit limit at Grand Casino Gulfport from $2,000 to $2,500. Judge Porteous and his wife accrued new debt on a credit card in violation of the order, including $734.31 in new charges between May 16 and June 18, 2001; $277.74 in new charges between June 15 and July 18, 2001; and $321.32 between July 16 and August 17, 2001.³ Further, Judge Porteous and his wife obtained new, low-limited credit cards during the course of the bankruptcy without obtaining trustee approval, also in violation of the order. On several occasions, Judge Porteous signed the checks paying off the debts on credit cards that were obtained in his wife's name.

The evidence indicates that Judge Porteous intended to violate the order of the bankruptcy court. First, Judge Porteous is a federal judge who issues similar orders, and unquestionably expects that they will be obeyed. Claude C. Lightfoot, his bankruptcy attorney, testified that both he and the bankruptcy judge told Judge Porteous that he could not obtain new debt, that the requirement was well known to Judge Porteous, and that it was very clear to Judge Porteous that he would need approval to obtain new debt.⁴ During a May 9, 2001 creditors meeting, Judge Porteous was further admonished by the trustee that he could not obtain new debt. The trustee also provided Judge Porteous with a written statement that reiterated the restriction on obtaining debt during bankruptcy, including credit card debt. Finally, Judge Porteous's actions in the bankruptcy show that he knew about the order's prohibition, and violated it willfully: not only did several of the violations occur soon after the confirmation order was issued, but he complied with the no-debt provision of the order in other instances that he knew were likely to come to the attention of the trustee. Specifically, the Porteouses requested permission from the bankruptcy trustee to refinance their home, which the trustee granted on December 20, 2002, and to obtain two new car leases, which the trustee granted on January 2, 2003. That Judge Porteous knew to request permission for other debts during the pendency of the bankruptcy makes clear that his failure to request permission for gambling and credit card debts was intentional and willful.

⁴ The district court overseeing this grand jury investigation ruled that the attorney-client and work product privileges did not bar Lightfoot from testifying or producing records about his representation of Judge Porteous, both because the privilege did not apply to much of the requested information and also because the government satisfied its burden of showing that the crime-fraud exception defeated the claim of privilege.

II. Evidence that Judge Porteous Filed False Pleadings and Concealed Assets in Bankruptcy

Judge Porteous included numerous false statements in bankruptcy pleadings signed under penalty of perjury and submitted to the court -- statements that closed avenues of inquiry and undermined the administration of the bankruptcy by, among other things, concealing assets and income that potentially could have been made available to creditors, but were not.

A. False Initial Petition

The evidence indicates that Judge Porteous intentionally filed his initial bankruptcy petition using a false name to protect himself from public embarrassment. The docket and various documents from the bankruptcy of Gabriel Thomas Porteous, Jr., and Carmella Porteous, case number 01-12363 in the Eastern District of Louisiana, indicate that a petition was filed on March 28, 2001, listing the debtors as "G.T. Ortous" and "C.A. Ortous" and their "street address" as "P.O. Box 1723, Harvey, LA 70059-1723." The social security numbers listed correspond to Gabriel Thomas Porteous, Jr., and Carmella Porteous. The petition was signed by Gabriel and Carmella Porteous in two places, once each directly over the printed name "Ortous." Those signatures were made under penalty of perjury.

Bankruptcy records also indicate that an amended petition was filed in the same case number on April 9, 2001, providing the debtors' names "Gabriel T. Porteous, Jr.," and "Carmella A. Porteous" and the street address "4801 Neyrey Dr., Metairie, LA 70002." United States Postal Service records include a PS Form 1093 Post Office Box assignment for P.O. Box 1723 in Harvey, Louisiana, which indicates that Gabriel T. Porteous, Jr., rented that box on March 20, 2001, just days before filing for bankruptcy.

The Porteouses' bankruptcy attorney testified that he and Judge Porteous specifically devised this scheme to sign under penalty of perjury an initial petition using a fabricated name and newly-acquired post office box address. The attorney testified that their purpose in falsifying the initial filing was to avoid publicity and humiliation by preventing Porteous's name from being listed in the local newspaper among other bankruptcies filed that week.

B. Concealed Assets and Income

The investigation also obtained evidence that Judge Porteous concealed assets and income during his bankruptcy proceeding. The Chapter 13 Schedules and Plan were signed by Gabriel and Carmella Porteous and Claude Lightfoot and were filed on April 9, 2001. The Porteouses signed a declaration filed with the Schedules indicating that, under penalty of perjury, the Schedules were true to the best of their knowledge, information, and belief. Judge Porteous also stated under oath in a hearing before the bankruptcy trustee on May 9, 2001, that the materials submitted were true to the best of his knowledge. However, the bankruptcy schedules and other Porteous financial records indicate that the Porteouses concealed from the bankruptcy court several assets and sources of income, including those described below.

1. Concealed Tax Refund – In response to question 17 of Schedule B, filed April 9, 2001, which asks for “other liquidated debts owing debtor including tax refunds,” Judge Porteous stated that there were “None.” For question 20 of Schedule B, which asks for “other contingent and unliquidated claims of every nature, including tax refunds,” Judge Porteous likewise responded, “None.” However, records provided by Bank One for accounts of Gabriel and Carmella Porteous indicated that a $4,143.72 tax refund was deposited approximately one week later, on April 13, 2001. In an interview, the bankruptcy trustee indicated that the Porteouses did not notify him about their calendar year 2000 tax refund and did not turn the refund over to him even though they were required to do so. Their attorney, Claude Lightfoot, testified that the Porteouses never told him they were expecting a refund for calendar year 2000 when he went over each line of their schedules with them before signing and filing them.

2. Understated Bank Account Balance – In response to question 2 of Schedule B, which asks for “checking, savings, or other financial accounts, . . . or shares in banks, savings and loan, thrift, building and loan, and homestead associations,” the Porteouses listed “Bank One Checking Account No. 002379554” with a current value of $100. However, the Porteouses’ Bank One statement for that account, covering the period March 23 to April 23, 2001, indicates that the balance in that account on March 28, 2001, the date the bankruptcy petition was filed, was more than $1,800. The balance on April 9, 2001, the date the schedules were filed, was more than $3,000. Another bank account, which had a balance of more than $280 at the time, was not included in the bankruptcy filings at all. Judge Porteous’s bankruptcy attorney testified that the only account Judge Porteous told him about was the account listed in the schedules, and that the $100 figure for that account came from Judge Porteous. By providing counsel with false and incomplete information, Porteous prevented his lawyer from rendering considered advice on what amounts to include, and by failing to disclose the full amount of assets in his bank account, Judge Porteous obstructed the trustee’s task of accurately providing a full accounting of the Porteouses’ financial condition to the bankruptcy court and interested creditors.

3. Carmella Porteous’s Employment – Schedule I requires debtors to list, among other items, current income, occupation, and name of employer for the individual debtors. On Schedule I, the Porteouses listed the employer and take-home pay for Judge Porteous, but provided no employer name or income for Carmella Porteous. However, the Porteouses’ bank records indicate that Carmella Porteous worked sporadically for several established employers both before and after the bankruptcy petition was filed. For instance, in the year 2000, she earned at least $864 from Adecco Employment Services and $327 from New Orleans Metropolitan Convention and Visitors, and in 2001, she earned $3,109.50 from R&M Glynn, Inc., and $915 from New Orleans Metropolitan Convention and Visitors. None of this income was indicated on the bankruptcy petition or schedules, nor was it subsequently brought to the attention of the trustee or the court.

C. Concealed Preferred Creditors

The bankruptcy schedules and other Porteous financial records also indicate that the Porteouses apparently concealed from the bankruptcy trustee and creditors the existence of several additional creditors who were paid in full immediately before the bankruptcy was filed.

Gabriel and Carmella Porteous signed under penalty of perjury their Statement of Financial Affairs on April 9, 2001. Question 3 of the Statement stated, "List all payments on loans, installment purchases of goods or services, and other debts, aggregating more than $600 to any creditor, made within 90 days immediately preceding the commencement of this case." The Porteouses answered, "Normal installments." That statement was false, as they failed to list full repayments made to Fleet Credit Card Services and Grand Casino Gulfport shortly before they declared bankruptcy. These creditors therefore appear to be secretly preferred creditors, preferences that allowed the Porteouses to retain a credit card and protect their line of credit with a casino during the pendency of their bankruptcy repayment plan.

1. Fleet Credit Card -- Credit card records of Carmella Porteous from Fleet Credit Card Services obtained pursuant to a grand jury subpoena indicate that Carmella Porteous held Fleet credit card account # 5447195123210658 prior to the filing of the Porteouses' bankruptcy on March 28, 2001. The records further indicate that the balance on that account, $1,088.41, was paid in full with a March 23, 2001 check from Judge Porteous's secretary, Rhonda Danos. His secretary testified that she made that payment at Judge Porteous's direction. Accordingly, Fleet Credit Card Services was fully paid off, in contrast to the creditors included in the bankruptcy, and the Porteouses retained the Fleet credit card for their own use, all without any disclosure to the bankruptcy trustee, judge, or creditors. Indeed, the Porteouses subsequently used this credit card in violation of the bankruptcy court's order prohibiting them from accruing new debt.

2. Grand Casino Markers -- Records obtained from Grand Casino Gulfport pursuant to a grand jury subpoena indicated that Gabriel Porteous obtained two $1,000 markers from the casino on February 27, 2001. According to casino and bank records and interviews, Grand Casino Gulfport attempted to deposit the markers, which Judge Porteous had not repaid, in March 2001, but was unsuccessful due to a change in the ownership of Judge Porteous's bank. Casino records further show that Porteous contacted the casino and provided the new bank information before filing his Statement of Financial Affairs. On April 4, 2001, the markers were successfully deposited. Grand Casino Gulfport was therefore fully paid off, in contrast to the creditors included in the bankruptcy, all without any notification to the bankruptcy trustee, judge, or creditors. In addition, as noted above, Judge Porteous subsequently raised his credit limit with Grand Casino Gulfport during the pendency of his bankruptcy.

D. Undisclosed Gambling Losses

On the Statement of Financial Affairs, Question 8 states, "List all losses from fire, theft other casualty or gambling within one year immediately preceding the commencement of this case or since the commencement of this case." The Porteouses checked the box for "None." However, analyses of casino records indicated that Judge Porteous's gambling losses exceeded $12,700 during the preceding year, or at least $5,700 in net losses. According to the trustee, had he known about the Porteouses' gambling losses he may have scrutinized more carefully the income and expense figures reported by the Porteouses in their filings.

E. Impact of False Statements and Concealed Assets in Bankruptcy

Judge Porteous, in the series of false statements set out above, subverted the bankruptcy court's ability to properly administer his bankruptcy. His use of a false name and his concealment of his gambling losses in the year preceding his bankruptcy prevented the public from learning about the nature of his public bankruptcy and prevented the trustee, court, and creditors from learning a relevant aspect of his financial condition. His false statements about expected tax refunds, bank accounts, his wife's income, and the existence of preferred creditors all concealed from the court income or assets that could have been distributed to creditors in the bankruptcy or been used to calculate the Porteouses' obligations in the event their assets were to be liquidated. The Porteouses filed a Chapter 13 bankruptcy, in which payments to creditors are based on prospective income. Carmella Porteous's income would have been directly relevant to the calculation of income available to repay creditors. Moreover, in order to determine a fair recovery for creditors under Chapter 13, courts compare the amount that a debtor would pay under Chapter 13 with the amount they would pay were the debtor's assets liquidated. The creditors must fare at least as well in Chapter 13 as they would if the assets were liquidated under Chapter 7. Accordingly, depending on how they were treated by the trustee and bankruptcy judge, concealed assets such as the Porteouses' expected tax refund, money in bank accounts, and money paid to preferred creditors (which the court could order repaid and distributed among all creditors) could have affected the comparative liquidation value of his estate, the amount of the monthly payments the Porteouses were required to make, or the percentage of debt the Porteouses were ultimately obligated to repay.

Even if the value of the hidden assets would not ultimately have affected the amount recovered by any individual creditors, Judge Porteous's false statements nonetheless undermined the bankruptcy process generally. "Debtors have an absolute duty to report whatever interests they hold in property, even if they believe their assets are worthless or are unavailable to the bankruptcy estate." In re Yonikus, 974 F.2d 901, 904 (7th Cir. 1992). This is because allowing debtors "the discretion to not report exempt or worthless property usurps the role of the trustee, creditors, and the court by denying them the opportunity to review the factual and legal basis of debtors' claims." In re Bailey, 147 B.R. 157, 163 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1992). Judge Porteous's concealment of assets and his filing of a false petition, schedules, and his statement of financial affairs precluded other interested parties from asserting their rights and enjoying a full and fair hearing on any claims they may have made against the estate.⁵

⁵ Despite the evidence recited above, the Department ultimately concluded that it would not seek to charge Judge Porteous with violations of federal criminal law under 18 U.S.C. § 152(1) and (3) (concealed assets and false statements in bankruptcy) and 18 U.S.C. § 401(3) (criminal contempt of court). Several factors informed that decision, including the burdens of proving beyond a reasonable doubt to a unanimous jury the materiality of Judge Porteous's misconduct in the bankruptcy proceeding. The burdens on the government in a criminal prosecution, however, do not apply in judicial misconduct or impeachment proceedings. An

III. Evidence that Judge Porteous Submitted Additional False and Misleading Statements

The investigation obtained evidence that numerous signed documents filed prior to or contemporaneously with the initiation of bankruptcy on which Judge Porteous had a duty to be truthful -- including government financial disclosure reports, a casino credit application, and a bank loan renewal application -- also contained false or misleading information.

Porteous's financial disclosure report for calendar year 2000, filed with the Administrative Office in May 2001 just over a month after he filed for bankruptcy, failed to list numerous credit accounts he was obligated to disclose, including most of those listed on his bankruptcy documents. Further, on that disclosure report Judge Porteous indicated liabilities of $15,000 or less on each of two credit cards, while Schedule F to his bankruptcy filings from the same time period reflects that Judge Porteous in fact owed approximately $196,000 in unsecured debt, most of it credit card debt. Judge Porteous also failed to disclose on his annual financial disclosure forms the travel, cash, and gifts he received while a federal judge from attorneys and others with matters before him, as discussed further below. In addition, Judge Porteous reported "0" indebtedness on an April 30, 2001, credit application filed with Harrah's casino just weeks after he noted in his petition to the bankruptcy court that he had incurred $196,000 in unsecured debt.

The investigation also uncovered evidence that Judge Porteous intended to mislead Region's Bank about his financial condition in order to ensure that a $5,000 single-payment loan scheduled to become due shortly before the bankruptcy would be extended and, thus, discharged among other unsecured debts in the bankruptcy. In response to a grand jury subpoena, Claude Lightfoot, the Porteouses' bankruptcy attorney, produced a letter from him to the Porteouses dated December 21, 2000, which discussed additional letters he had sent to all but one of the unsecured creditors that later were included in the bankruptcy. Lightfoot stated, "I enclose a copy of the letters and one copy of the attachments I included with each that I have sent to all of the unsecured creditors, with the exception of Regions Bank which we wanted to exclude, proposing the workout of the debts to each" (emphasis added). These "workout" letters proposed a 21% payment of the debts the Porteouses owed to each of 13 unsecured creditors "[i]n an effort to provide all of my clients' unsecured creditors with immediate payment now and to avoid the necessity of a Chapter 7 bankruptcy filing." (emphasis added). Region's Bank, to whom the Porteouses owed $5,000 on an unsecured "single payment" loan scheduled to come due January 13, 2001, was not sent a workout letter, nor was the $5,000 Regions loan amount included in the schedule of debts provided in the workout letters to other creditors. Another document Lightfoot produced was a list of the Porteouses' creditors and debts that had been prepared by Judge Porteous and his wife, and which Lightfoot used, along with other worksheets, during his efforts to reduce the Porteouses' debts short of bankruptcy as well as in preparing the bankruptcy petition and schedules. That list includes an entry in what has been identified as Judge Porteous's handwriting that states, "Regions Bank $5000 unsecured loan due 1/13/01."

impeachable offense is any misconduct that damages the State and the operations of governmental institutions; it is not limited to criminal misconduct.

On January 16, 2001 -- shortly after the workout letters were sent to the unsecured creditors -- Judge Porteous signed an application with Region's Bank to renew his loan and extend the date of repayment on the loan six months. On the application Judge Porteous certified that he was not "in the process of filing bankruptcy" and signed under the acknowledgment that there had been "no material adverse change" in his financial condition "as disclosed in my most recent financial statement to lender." (The relevant loan applications with Region's Bank submitted in January and July 2000 included financial statements, but neither of those statements appears to have been completed.) The loan renewal was approved, and the repayment date was extended to July 17, 2001. The Porteouses then filed their initial voluntary petition for bankruptcy approximately two months later, on March 28, 2001, and the loan from Region's Bank was discharged in the bankruptcy.

The December 21, 2000, letter from their attorney to the Porteouses establishes that Judge Porteous's decision not to disclose his actual financial condition and impending bankruptcy to Region's Bank in the loan renewal application was intentional. Indeed, the letter states that the Porteouses and their attorney decided not to send the workout letter to Region's Bank in particular. As a result, Judge Porteous was able to obtain an extension under the false pretense that his financial condition had not materially worsened and that he was not on the brink of bankruptcy, and was able to include the Region's Bank loan in the bankruptcy even though it was originally set to mature before he filed.

IV. Evidence that Judge Porteous Solicited and Accepted Things of Value from Attorneys and Litigants with Matters Before Him

Among the attorneys identified by FBI sources as the group most closely linked to the corruption allegations surrounding Judge Porteous were Donald Gardner, Robert Creely, Leonard Levenson, and Warren Forstall. Each of those attorneys was interviewed or compelled to testify before the grand jury about their financial dealings with the Judge. The evidence obtained from those witnesses shows that Judge Porteous accepted cash, expensive meals, travel, and other benefits from them, gifts that the Judge failed to disclose to the Administrative Office on his annual financial disclosure reports or to litigants and opposing counsel in cases in which those attorneys were engaged. The Department also has obtained evidence that Judge Porteous received unreimbursed travel and sport hunting trips from litigants with matters before him in federal court, also without disclosing his apparent conflicts to interested parties and counsel.

A. Cash Payments from Attorneys

Robert Creely and Jacob Amato, who represented clients with matters before Judge Porteous in state and federal court, testified that Judge Porteous solicited and accepted cash payments from them while he was a state and federal judge. According to their testimony, none of the payments occurred after 1999.

Robert Creely is a lawyer in New Orleans, Louisiana. He met Judge Porteous in high school, and practiced at the same firm as Judge Porteous for a year after law school. Creely then left the firm with another local attorney, Jacob Amato. Creely and Amato practiced together in the law firm of Creely & Amato for 29 years. Creely describes himself as a very close personal friend of Judge Porteous, as does Amato.

Creely testified that, beginning in the late 1980s and early 1990s, while Judge Porteous was a state court judge, he began to solicit cash payments from Creely. Creely and Amato had matters before Judge Porteous in state court at that time. Creely testified that he and Amato would each take draws for half the amount from their joint law firm account. Creely would give that money to Judge Porteous in cash. Creely indicated that Judge Porteous would always ask for the money to pay urgent, unforeseen expenses related to his family. However, Creely stated that Judge Porteous drank and gambled excessively, and Creely was concerned he was paying for the Judge's extravagant lifestyle. Creely testified that, as a result, he eventually told Judge Porteous he could not continue to give him money.

After Creely decided to cut off further payments to Judge Porteous, the Judge began to designate Creely as the curator on executory interests in mortgaged property in actions over which he presided as a state court judge. Creely testified that he received approximately $175 from the state court system for each curatorship, and that those cases required very little time or effort on his part. In return, Judge Porteous asked Creely for the money he was paid by the court. Creely testified that he paid Judge Porteous in cash the amount he received, minus his minimal costs, which usually involved simply sending a letter and posting public notice of the pending executory actions. Although PACER records indicate Judge Porteous appointed Creely as the representative for an absent party in at least one forfeiture action in federal court — that is, United States v. Rateliff, Civ. No. 95-00224 (filed Jan. 19, 1995) — Creely testified that the kick-back scheme he described came to an end when Judge Porteous moved from state to federal court in 1994. Jacob Amato also testified about the curatorships and stated that he was aware that Judge Porteous asked Creely for money and explicitly tied those payments to the many cases in which the Judge appointed Creely as a curator.

Creely testified that, in May 1999, Judge Porteous once more asked his law partner, Jacob Amato, for a payment of $2,000, this time to help defray the cost of a wedding for one of his children. This request was made while Amato was counsel on the Litjeberg matter, a multi-million dollar civil action pending before Judge Porteous in federal court, described further below. Jacob Amato also testified about that request for money from Judge Porteous. Amato gave Porteous the money he asked for in cash, again splitting the payment with Creely through personal draw-downs from their law firm account. Creely testified that Judge Porteous has not solicited, and he has not given him, any additional cash since the May 1999 payment of $2,000. Creely testified that Judge Porteous instructed him to give the cash to his secretary, Rhonda Danos, who would pick it up from his office. Creely says he put the money in a sealed envelope and gave it to Danos. Danos testified that she does not recall receiving an envelope with cash in it, although she stated that she did pick up items from time to time for the Judge from Creely's office.

Jacob Amato corroborated Creely's claims that they made cash payments to Judge Porteous both while he was a state and a federal judge. Between them, Creely and Amato represented parties in four actions over which Judge Porteous presided on the federal bench according to the PACER electronic court records system.⁶ Creely testified that in total they may have given Judge Porteous as much as $10,000 over time.

Donald Gardner is also an attorney in New Orleans, Louisiana and a close personal friend of Judge Porteous. Although Gardner testified he does not gamble often, he stated that on occasions when he was at casinos with Judge Porteous, the Judge would ask for money to gamble, and he would give it to him. Gardner testified Judge Porteous would request amounts in the range of $100 to $200. He also testified that he provided Judge Porteous approximately $200 to purchase a gift for his wife. Gardner also paid $300 to a contractor on behalf of Judge Porteous. Gardner testified that his payments to or on behalf of Judge Porteous occurred prior to him taking the federal bench. According to Gardner, he estimated that over the course of their friendship he did not give Judge Porteous more than $3,000 in total. Although the FBI developed sources who believed that Gardner regularly paid Judge Porteous, the investigation was ultimately unable to disprove his testimony about the extent of his cash payments to Judge Porteous.

In addition to cash payments to Judge Porteous, several attorneys testified that they gave money to his secretary, Rhonda Danos, to help support Judge Porteous's son during his externship in Washington, D.C., while Judge Porteous was a federal judge. Leonard Levenson is another local attorney who has been friends with Judge Porteous since the early 1980s. Levenson testified that, although he never gave cash directly to Judge Porteous, he may have contributed a few hundred dollars to Rhonda Danos to be used for Judge Porteous's son's externship. Don Gardner also testified that he gave a couple hundred dollars for the externship.⁷

B. Travel, Meals, and Hunting and Fishing Trips from Lawyers and Litigants

The investigation of the FBI into alleged judicial corruption also led to the discovery of evidence that, on a regular basis, Judge Porteous accepted gifts of travel, expensive meals, drinks, and hunting and fishing trips from attorneys and businesses with matters before him both in state and federal court, and that Judge Porteous failed to disclose his receipt of those benefits to interested counsel and litigants and, for all but two hunting trips, in his financial disclosure reports to the Administrative Office.

Several attorneys who were compelled to testify admitted that they paid for travel for Judge Porteous. In May 1999, Judge Porteous and several others traveled to Las Vegas, Nevada for his son's bachelor party. Credit card records and Caesar's Hotel records indicate that Robert ⁷ Gardner also testified that he, like Creely, was designated by Judge Porteous as a curator in numerous state cases then pending before the Judge. He claimed, however, that the Judge never asked for money in connection with those appointments.

Creely paid $421.90 with his credit card for Porteous's room from May 20 to May 23, 1999. Judge Porteous's credit card records indicate that he took out more than $5,000 on his credit cards at Caesar's Hotel during the trip. Caesar's Hotel records estimate that Judge Porteous lost $1,200 gambling over the course of his stay. Judge Porteous's bank records indicate that he deposited $5,000 into his money market account days after he returned from the trip. The source of that money is unknown. Don Gardner, the New Orleans attorney representing the opposing party in the Liljeberg cases that were then pending before Judge Porteous, also attended the May 1999 Las Vegas bachelor party trip.

In grand jury testimony and an interview with the FBI, Robert Creely admitted that he attended the bachelor party trip, but did not recall paying for Judge Porteous's room. He said that he and two other non lawyers present on the trip also split the bill for an expensive steak dinner for many of the people in attendance, including Judge Porteous. He claimed that he did not give Judge Porteous any money during or immediately following that trip.

Robert Creely also testified that he has taken Judge Porteous on many fishing trips over the years, including while Judge Porteous was a federal judge, and on two or perhaps three hunting trips while Porteous was on the state bench. Creely valued the hunting trips at the time at around $1,500 per person plus airfare, all of which he covered on Judge Porteous's behalf. Judge Porteous never covered any of the costs related to the hunting or fishing trips.

Warren Forstall, Jr. is a lawyer who practices in New Orleans, Louisiana. He and Judge Porteous have been friends for about 20 years. Forstall testified that in September 1999, at Judge Porteous's invitation, Forstall purchased tickets for both of them to San Francisco to attend an attorney conference together. They later cancelled the trip, and Forstall did not know what became of the ticket he purchased for Judge Porteous. Credit card and travel agency records for Forstall show that he paid $238 with his credit card for the airline tickets for Judge Porteous to San Francisco on September 18, 1999, with a return flight from Reno-Tahoe to New Orleans on September 22, 1999, along with an accompanying ticket for himself. Travel records indicate that Judge Porteous traded his California plane ticket for a ticket to Las Vegas in October 1999. Judge Porteous failed to disclose his acceptance of an airline ticket from Forstall on his financial disclosure forms or in any litigation in which Forstall had an interest.⁸

In an interview with the FBI, Leonard Levenson stated that he has paid for hunting trips with Judge Porteous both while the Judge was on the state and federal bench. In October 1999, Levenson and his wife accompanied Judge Porteous to Las Vegas, Nevada. Porteous obtained his airfare for that trip by trading in the unused ticket to San Francisco that he previously had obtained from Warren Forstall. Judge Porteous's secretary, Rhonda Danos, paid for the ⁸ The Court's PACER records indicate that Forstall's firm represented parties in at least six federal actions before Judge Porteous. See Everage v. Fisher, Civ. No. 98-00451 (filed Feb. 11, 1998); McAfee v. Ayers, Civ. No. 98-01415 (filed May 12, 1998); Ford v. United States Postal Serv., Civ. No. 98-02170 (filed July 24, 1998); Wingate v. Brock, Civ. No. 98-03290 (filed Nov. 6, 1998); Coleman v. United States Postal Serv., Civ. No. 99-02017 (filed June 30, 1999); and Minnifield v. Drug Trans. Inc., Civ. No. 02-02516 (filed Aug. 13, 2002).

Levensons' airfare, and was reimbursed by them in November 1999. Levenson has been counsel in at least eleven matters over which Porteous presided in federal court.⁹ It does not appear that Judge Porteous provided notice to any party of his acceptance of gifts and benefits from Levenson.

According to evidence obtained from attorneys who were interviewed or testified before the grand jury, Judge Porteous also made it his regular practice to receive gifts of meals and drinks at expensive restaurants from lawyers with matters before him while he was a judge in both state and federal court. Robert Creely, Jacob Amato, Leonard Levenson, Donald Gardner, and Warren Forstall all admitted that they frequently bought meals for Judge Porteous that he did not reimburse. Creely testified that Judge Porteous always expected that the lawyers would pick up the tab, and that the Judge would never offer to pay. Ronald Bodenheimer, a former 24th JDC judge who agreed to be interviewed and testify after pleading guilty to honest services fraud in connection with the investigation of judicial corruption in the 24th JDC, stated that when he was elected to the state bench, Judge Porteous told him that since he was a judge he would never again need to pay for his own lunch. Each of the attorneys who routinely bought meals for Judge Porteous had matters before him both in state and federal court. Judge Porteous apparently never disclosed to any litigant or counsel his receipt of benefits from these lawyers, nor did he disclose any meals valued over $100 in any financial disclosure report filed with the Administrative Office.¹⁰

The FBI and other investigative agencies also have obtained evidence that, on at least three occasions, Judge Porteous accepted free travel and hunting trips from the Rowan Company and Diamond Offshore. Rowan and Diamond are each frequently named as defendants in maritime actions brought in the Eastern District of Louisiana and, on many occasions, in actions assigned to Judge Porteous. The hunting trips included free air transportation by private plane from New Orleans, Louisiana to Falfurrias, Texas, and sport hunting on property owned or ¹⁰ For example, although it is difficult to reconstruct the record with certainty, Amato's financial records and testimony indicate that he may have spent at least $1,500 in 1999 and $2,250 in 2000 for dining and beverage expenses at restaurants at which he entertained Judge Porteous. Judge Porteous was required to report to the Administrative Office gifts of food and drink valued at more than $100 on his annual financial disclosure reports. However, Judge Porteous has never reported the receipt of any gift from Amato or any other attorney with matters before him.

controlled by Rowan near the Mariposa Ranch in Falfurrias. The government has also obtained evidence that Judge Porteous traveled from the Falfurrias camp by private plane to a similar hunting camp near San Antonio, Texas owned or controlled by Diamond. Further evidence indicates that, on at least one of the trips paid for by Rowan, Judge Porteous was accompanied on the trip by litigation counsel for Rowan.¹¹

Judge Porteous disclosed two of these hunting trips in financial disclosure reports filed with the Administrative Office. On his report for calendar year 2004, filed May 12, 2005, in response to Part V, "Gifts," Judge Porteous reported that he received a hunting trip from Rowan Company, for which he reported a fair market value of $1,000. On his report for calendar year 2005, filed July 24, 2006, in response to Part V, "Gifts," Judge Porteous reported that he received a hunting trip from Diamond Offshore, which he also valued at $1,000. Judge Porteous has yet to file his financial disclosure report for calendar year 2006. Judge Porteous's reports appear to understate the fair market value of the hunting trips. Evidence indicates that the cost to operate the private plane used to transport Judge Porteous to Falfurrias, Texas itself was approximately $1,000 an hour. According to commercial sports hunting locations in the same area, the fee for merely observing a hunt is approximately $200 a day in addition to the cost of the full hunting package for the other hunt participants, while the fee to participate in a Whitetail Buck hunt, which evidence shows was the subject of at least one of the hunting trips, would cost approximately $3,000 to $3,500 per participant. Together, the evidence suggests the total fair market value for each hunting trip would have been in excess of the $1,000 reported by Judge Porteous.

In addition to apparently understating the fair market value of his trips on financial disclosure reports submitted to the Administrative Office, Judge Porteous apparently failed to disclose his receipt of the trips to counsel and parties adverse to Rowan and Diamond in the actions over which he presided. The Court's PACER electronic records system indicates that, since the late 1980s, the Rowan Companies, Inc. and its related companies have been parties in more than a hundred cases filed in the Eastern District of Louisiana. Judge Porteous has presided over at least six such actions.¹² Of those cases, Hanna was an open matter during all of 2004, and therefore was pending when Judge Porteous received a hunting trip from Rowan. About one week after returning from his January 2006 trip with Rowan, he was assigned to preside over the Thomas matter. Despite his obligation to do so, Judge Porteous apparently failed to disclose the benefits he received from Rowan to counsel and the opposing parties in each of those cases.

¹¹ There is evidence that one other federal district judge attended at least one of the hunting trips Rowan sponsored.

Likewise, Diamond and its related companies were frequent litigants in the Eastern District of Louisiana, also parties in more than a hundred actions filed since the early 1990s. According to the PACER system, Judge Porteous presided over seven matters in which Diamond was a party.¹³ Of those seven, Johnson was pending for part of, and Jones during all of 2005, the year in which Diamond provided Judge Porteous one of the trips according to Judge Porteous's financial disclosure report. The docket in each case does not reflect that Judge Porteous provided notice to the parties or counsel of the trip he received from Diamond.

C. Effect of Judge Porteous's Misconduct on the Administration of Justice

Judge Porteous's apparent misconduct has had a derogatory effect on the administration of justice in the Eastern District of Louisiana. That impact can be illustrated by the effect his conflicts had specifically on the litigation surrounding the Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing of Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc., and the cloud of suspicion those undisclosed conflicts raised about the validity of Judge Porteous's rulings in that matter. See In re Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc., Civ. Nos. 93-1794, 93-4249, 95-2922, and 94-3993. The bankruptcy action was commenced in 1993, and the matter was transferred and consolidated with related cases before Judge Porteous on January 16, 1996. On September 19, 1996, after Judge Porteous's assignment to the litigation and just weeks before the complex matter was scheduled to be tried to the bench, Liljeberg Enterprises moved to substitute Jacob Amato and Leonard Levenson as counsel of record. Judge Porteous signed the order granting the substitution on September 23, 1996. Amato handled the representation of Liljeberg on behalf of the Creely & Amato law firm. Levenson testified that he was told when he was hired by Liljeberg that he was being retained for strategy and assistance during the trial of the matter. However, based on recent public statements made by his client, Levenson now believes that his apparent close relationship with Judge Porteous influenced his client to hire him. Jacob Amato testified that he also believed his connection to Judge Porteous played a role in his client's decision to engage him.

One of several parties adverse to Liljeberg in these actions was LifeMark Hospitals, Inc. After Amato and Levenson were retained by Liljeberg, Lifemark in turn sought to associate a long-time friend of Porteous, Donald Gardner.

Gardner testified that he did not have experience handling federal litigation matters, and that Lifemark had competent local counsel. Gardner stated that the reason he was asked to associate himself on the case was his known relationship with Judge Porteous. LifeMark's counsel, Joseph Mole, testified that he hired Gardner because his client believed it was necessary to "level the playing field" following the retention by Liljeberg of Amato and Levenson – whose close connections to Judge Porteous were also well known among local attorneys. Indeed, prior to hiring Gardner, counsel for LifeMark filed a motion seeking Judge Porteous's recusal because of the appearance of partiality created by the close personal relationship among Porteous, Amato, Creely, and Levenson. LifeMark's counsel testified that he was not aware that Porteous had received cash payments from Amato or his partner Creely, and trips and other benefits from Amato, Creely, and Levenson. He testified that, had he known about those dealings, he would certainly have included that information in his motion to recuse. Judge Porteous denied the motion. In his opinion, Judge Porteous failed to disclose his solicitation and acceptance of cash, travel, and other things of value from Amato, Creely, and Levenson. Counsel for LifeMark filed a mandamus action with the Fifth Circuit, but the Circuit denied LifeMark's requested relief as well -- also without being informed of Judge Porteous's financial dealings with Liljeberg's counsel. Amato testified that his and his partner's gifts of cash and other benefits to Judge Porteous were never disclosed in the litigation, and admitted that they "probably" would have been a basis for recusal. As noted, three years later, while Liljeberg was still pending before him, Judge Porteous again solicited and received $2,000 in cash from Creely and Amato, which Porteous also failed to disclose to the counsel or litigants in the Liljeberg action, as well as the Administrative Office.

The written fee agreement between Gardner and LifeMark provided that Gardner would be paid a $100,000 flat fee for associating himself on the case. The agreement included a provision that, if the case was transferred to another judge, Gardner's engagement would end, but he would be paid an additional $100,000 severance. The fee agreement also contained a sliding-scale of additional fees contingent on various measures of LifeMark's success at trial. According to LifeMark's lead counsel, Joseph Mole, he included that contingent fee component to create an incentive for Gardner to deal honestly with LifeMark and not collude with Amato and Levenson. Mole saw Gardner as part of a circle of friends surrounding Judge Porteous, a circle that included opposing counsel Amato and Levenson. When asked whether Gardner was expected to give any part of his fee to Judge Porteous, both Gardner and Mole testified that he was not. Both also testified that Gardner informed LifeMark up front that he would not be able to influence Judge Porteous to do anything unethical or improper.

Mole testified that Gardner was retained solely because of his close relationship with Judge Porteous, and that his only active role in the case was to attend the bench trial. Gardner testified that he offered advice on how he thought Judge Porteous might react to LifeMark's evidence and strategies, but that counsel for LifeMark disregarded most of that advice. When questioned about the perceived need to pay $100,000 -- and potentially many hundreds of thousands more -- to an attorney who had no relevant federal experience but who was a friend of the Judge so that he would file an appearance and observe the bench trial, Mole testified that he thought his client was a victim of a broken system.

The non-jury trial before Judge Porteous commenced June 16, 1997 and continued with breaks over several weeks until July 23, 1997. Following the bench trial, Judge Porteous failed to rule for nearly three years. During the time that Judge Porteous's judgment was pending, the evidence reflects, as recounted above, that Judge Porteous asked for and received cash payments from Creely and Amato, and was the beneficiary of numerous meals, trips, and other gifts from Creely, Amato, Levenson, and Gardner.¹⁴

On April 26, 2000, Judge Porteous ruled in favor of Amato and Levenson's client, Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc., on most of the important contested issues.¹⁵ Porteous's ruling in favor of Liljeberg was partially reversed by the Fifth Circuit in an unusually critical opinion. Regarding Porteous's finding that LifeMark had breached a fiduciary duty it owed to Liljeberg by, among other things, failing to reinscribe a collateral mortgage and mitigate harms caused by not doing so, the Circuit excoriated Judge Porteous:

... The extraordinary duty the district court imposed upon LifeMark ... is inexplicable. ...

... The right of LifeMark to unilaterally release any part of the property from the mortgage is wholly at odds with the district court's discovery of a "duty" to reinscribe the collateral mortgage. ...

... [Judge Porteous's theory that LifeMark consequently owed a duty to mitigate] is a mere chimera, existing nowhere in Louisiana law. It was apparently constructed out of whole cloth.

In re Liljeberg Enters., Inc., 304 F.3d 410, 428-29 (5th Cir. 2002). Similarly, in finding that Judge Porteous clearly erred in his ruling that the judicial sale of the hospital must be overturned in favor of Amato and Levenson's client, Liljeberg, the Court censured the unsupported conclusions drawn by the Judge:

... the district court's findings of a "conspiracy" to wrest control of the hospital and medical office building from St. Jude and Liljeberg Enterprises border on the absurd. ...

The district court's "conspiracy theory" conclusion is based, in part, on the view that Liljeberg Enterprises's or St. Jude's losses were caused by Lifemark. ...

¹⁴ On May 28, 1999, Judge Porteous granted summary judgment in favor of Levenson's client in Alliance Gen. Ins. Co. v. Louisiana Sheriff's Auto. Risk Prog., Civ. No. 96-00961.

¹⁵ According to American Express credit card records, Amato paid $130 at Commander's Palace -- a fine dining restaurant in New Orleans -- on April 25, 2000, the day on which Judge Porteous signed his long-pending judgment in favor of Amato's client. The judgement was filed on the docket on April 26, 2000. Amato has informed the government that Rhonda Danos, Porteous's secretary, was present with him at Commander's Palace on April 25, 2000, and that he paid that bill. Danos testified that the pending judgment was not discussed during the April 25, 2000 rendezvous at Commander's Palace, that she never received any cash or bribe from Amato, and that the timing of her meeting with Amato at Commander's Palace on the day the judgment was signed was a coincidence.

These findings turn on the remarkable but largely implicit conclusion . . . that, under Louisiana law, a second mortgagee . . . cannot initiate foreclosure proceedings. The district court and Liljeberg Enterprises offer no statutory or case law support for this proposition, for the simple reason that this is not the law.

V. Evidence that Judge Porteous Accepted Things of Value from Bail Bonds Unlimited and Louis and Lori Marcotte in Exchange for Access and Assistance

Louis and Lori Marcotte operated Bail Bonds Unlimited, a bail bonds company with business before the 24th JDC. As a result of the FBI investigation into corruption in the 24th JDC, both Louis and Lori Marcotte pleaded guilty to bribing Louisiana state judges in addition to other offenses. In interviews following their guilty pleas, the Marcottes said they paid for expensive meals, trips, and other benefits for Judge Porteous in exchange for favorable treatment when he was a state judge in the early 1990's, and that they continued to pay for meals while he was a federal judge. The Marcottes estimated the cost of weekly Friday lunches they provided for Judge Porteous and his staff and other invitees at about $500 each. They also stated that they paid for innumerable additional meals and drinks at expensive restaurants that cost hundreds of dollars each. In addition, the Marcottes said they paid for numerous car repairs for Judge Porteous and his family, paid for a fence to be built for him, gave parking privileges to Porteous's son at their office near the courthouse, and provided business to his son's legal courier service.

Other witnesses confirm that Louis Marcotte did numerous favors for and gave many gifts to Judge Porteous while he was a state court judge. Former Marcotte employees say that Marcotte paid for car repairs for Judge Porteous and a fence for Judge Porteous' house. Other witnesses report that Marcotte paid for many meals for Judge Porteous and at least one trip to Las Vegas, Nevada for Judge Porteous. Additional sources report, and the FBI in one instance observed, that Louis Marcotte continued to take Judge Porteous out for meals when he was a federal judge.

In 1992, the Marcottes invited Judge Porteous to Las Vegas with them, but he was unable to attend. Several months later, around August 1992, Rhonda Danos called the Marcottes to inform them that Judge Porteous "was ready to go" to Las Vegas with them. The Marcottes and two local attorneys paid to take Judge Porteous and another state judge to Las Vegas. Danos booked the trip on her credit card and then sought reimbursement from Louis Marcotte. The Marcottes stated that the arrangement was designed to disguise the fact that they and other lawyers were paying for the trip. They also stated that they invited the other attorneys and judge to provide cover for Judge Porteous.

In July 1999, the Professional Bail Agents of America paid $206.80 for lodging for Judge Porteous at their conference at the Beau Rivage in Biloxi, Mississippi. Judge Porteous spoke at the conference. Judge Porteous did not report this payment on his financial disclosure form (there is no minimum value for required reporting of travel reimbursements). The charge for Porteous's lodging was paid by the PBAA out of its "master account." In turn, the Marcottes made a $7,000 contribution to cover expenses on that master account. The Marcottes also provided the PBAA with a list of people whose charges should be credited against the Marcotte's credit card. That list included Porteous's secretary, Rhonda Danos.

The Marcottes asserted that they also paid for Porteous's secretary to go to Las Vegas, Nevada for many years with them when they were attending annual bail bonding conventions there. This began in 1992 and continued through the first few years Judge Porteous was a federal judge. The Marcottes have provided the FBI with pictures that show the Judge's secretary in their company in Las Vegas. They claimed that they covered all of Danos's costs during the trips. For several years, the Marcottes also provided Danos and Judge Porteous with five to ten tickets each year to an annual police fund-raising party, valued at $100 per ticket. The expenses borne by the Marcottes on behalf of the Judge's secretary tend to corroborate their claim that they provided gifts to Judge Porteous in exchange for access. The Marcottes explained that Danos was the gatekeeper for access to Judge Porteous, and that it was therefore essential to their purpose that they kept Danos happy by plying her with gifts as well.

According to the Marcottes, in exchange for their generosity with Judge Porteous and Danos, while Judge Porteous was a state court judge he gave the Marcottes immediate access to him on bonding whenever they needed him. The Marcottes say he granted most of their requests. Louis Marcotte told the FBI that Judge Porteous was more likely to grant a problematic request after a lunch or a car repair. Judge Porteous also made introductions for the Marcottes to other state judges and lent his support by vouching to other judges that Louis Marcotte was a good person to deal with on bond issues. He also spoke to other state judges about the benefits to the court system of split bonds, a practice that was extremely beneficial to the business of Bail Bonds Unlimited. Following his own agreement to plead guilty to honest services fraud and to cooperate with the government, former 24th JDC judge Ronald Bodenheimer corroborated much of what the Marcottes told the FBI concerning the assistance Judge Porteous provided around the courthouse for their business interests in the 24th JDC.

In addition to making himself accessible and assisting the Marcottes on bonding matters, at Louis Marcotte's request Judge Porteous expunged the felony convictions of two Marcotte employees shortly before Judge Porteous left the state bench in 1994. This permitted the employees to work for the Marcottes in the bail bonding business, which otherwise was prohibited under Louisiana law. It appears that Judge Porteous decision to expunge the convictions was contrary to law. Nonetheless, Porteous claimed in an interview with the New Orleans Metropolitan Crime Commission that an Assistant District Attorney was present during the hearing and failed to object on the record. Even if true, there is no indication that the Assistant District Attorney was aware that Porteous was the recipient of a stream of things of value from the Marcottes, all of which the Marcottes claim they provided with the specific intent to influence Judge Porteous.

Although the Marcottes have made many allegations of improprieties involving Judge Porteous, they have pleaded guilty to charges of extensive fraudulent conduct. They also admit that they never obtained an explicit agreement with Judge Porteous that he would grant bond requests in exchange for favors. They claim instead that the agreement was implicit in the relationship, and that the Judge knew very well why they lavished him and his long-time secretary with food, drinks, trips, favors, and other things of value.

VI. Further Circumstantial Evidence that Judge Porteous Engaged in Corrupt Activities

The investigation has uncovered large amounts of unexplained cash being deposited in Judge Porteous's accounts. Financial records reveal that Judge Porteous deposited more than $57,000 in cash into his checking account between 1998 and 2000. Additional records received from Fidelity Homestead Association show that five separate deposits of currency totaling approximately $20,000 were also made into the Judge's money market account from 1998 to early 2000. This account was not reported on Judge Porteous's bankruptcy petition. In addition, one of the deposits, made two days after Judge Porteous returned from his Las Vegas trip, was in the amount of $5,000, roughly the amount he withdrew over the "bachelor party" weekend, despite casino records that estimated a $1,200 loss during that trip.

In addition, the investigation has revealed that Judge Porteous's secretary, Rhonda Danos, paid for many of his expenses from her own bank account. While Judge Porteous did write checks to her, the FBI was not able to establish that he fully reimbursed her. In 1999 and 2000, for example, Danos paid $41,621.15 for credit card bills and other expenses for Judge Porteous; during the same period, she received $32,554.51 in checks from him. Over the same two year period, Danos also made $60,027.80 in cash deposits, a greater sum than her payroll and other sources of income for the same period. Focusing on year 1999 in particular, her financial records indicate that she may have received as much as thirty to forty thousand dollars in unexplained deposits. In addition, in her testimony about her 1999 financial activities, Danos could not account for nearly ten thousand dollars in excess of her admitted sources of income that year, even giving her the benefit of dubious, post-hoc explanations for some sources of funds. Together, these facts evidence that Danos -- on whom Judge Porteous relied for payment of many of his own expenses -- received additional, unexplained cash during the period that the judgement in Liljeberg was pending. Indeed, the Marcottes stated in interviews with the FBI that Danos was used specifically to disguise their payments in connection with the 1992 trip to Las Vegas for Judge Porteous.

VII. Evidence that Judge Porteous Is Incompetent to Serve

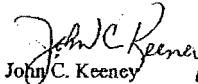

During the course of this investigation the Department has learned that Judge Porteous has obtained the reports of medical examiners concluding that he is incompetent to render decisions as a federal judge because of permanent mental and psychological impairments. In correspondence with Your Honor, Judge Porteous stated that he believes he no longer can meet the responsibilities that fall to him as a judge, and that the reports of a psychologist and psychiatrist confirm that every day he sits on the bench is a disservice to his fellow judges, to the parties who appear before him, and to the people of this country who put their trust in the judiciary. This mental impairment follows a history of alcoholism and reckless gambling, demonstrated in financial records and attested to by witnesses with whom he has had personal relationships. Therefore, in addition to the many allegations of judicial misconduct recited above, Judge Porteous's self-professed inability to render competent and fair decisions as a federal judge and the chronicle of his reckless and dishonorable personal behavior while on the federal bench also serve as a basis for possible disciplinary action by the Court or referral to Congress for impeachment.

CONCLUSION

As noted earlier, issues of statute of limitations, the materiality of the alleged false statements, the government's twin burdens of proof and unanimity at trial, and the availability of alternative remedies persuaded the Department that criminal prosecution was not warranted. The results of the FBI's investigation into allegations of misconduct concerning Judge Porteous, however, raise serious doubts about his suitability for office under the constitutional standard of good behavior on which that service is contingent. The instances of Judge Porteous's dishonesty in his own sworn statements and court filings, his decade-long course of conduct in soliciting and accepting a stream of payments and gifts from litigants and lawyers with matters before him, and his repeated failures to disclose those dealings to interested parties and the Court all render him unfit as an Article III judge. Based on the evidence of pervasive misconduct described herein, the Department respectfully submits this complaint for any further action Your Honor may deem warranted.

Sincerely,

John C. Keeney

Case No.: 01-12363

Dear Mr. Horner:

I am Staff Attorney for S. J. Beaulieu, Jr., Chapter 13 Trustee. This letter is to respond to a conversation of Mr. Beaulieu with one of the FBI agents earlier this month.

In January, 2004, at the request of the FBI, Mr. Beaulieu met with you and several other agents. Prior to that meeting, the FBI refused to divulge why the meeting was needed or what would be discussed at the meeting. During the meeting, it was disclosed that Mr. Beaulieu was being interviewed with respect to an ongoing investigation into the captioned Chapter 13 case and debtors' activities regarding same. Also, during the meeting, the agents discussed some allegations concerning potential bankruptcy improprieties involving debtors related to: filing the original petition with their name misspelled, undisclosed income, income tax refunds, the use of credit cards, transfers of property, and lifestyle activities that might not be consistent with the debtors' schedule "J" disclosures.

In the conversation this month, the FBI agent advised Mr. Beaulieu that he should pursue further investigation into debtors' activities in this case. However, the only allegation that the Trustee has evidence of relates to debtor's FICA tax withholding which should have stopped after the FICA withholding limits were met. The additional income to debtor was not taken into account in evaluating debtors' disposable income to fund the Chapter 13 plan over three (3) years. In Mr. Beaulieu's opinion, extending the plan at this late date to recoup the difference in disposable income would not substantially increase the percentage paid to unsecured creditors.

Regarding the other allegations, the FBI has refused to provide the Trustee with any evidence of improprieties by debtors. Since Mr. Beaulieu has no evidence to support the suspicions expressed by the FBI agents, he does not intend to take further action related to these allegations.

I am enclosing a copy of the Final Account prepared in this case. The case is currently set for a Final Account hearing on May 18, 2004, at 8:40 a.m. You may file an objection to the

MEMORANDUM

To: File
Ron Woods

From: Larry Finder

Date: July 29, 2007

Subject: Interview of S. J. Beaulieu, Jr.

Privileged and Confidential
Attorney-Client Communication

On July 25, 2007, S. J. Beaulieu was interviewed by Ron Woods and Larry Finder in a conference room within the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Mr. Beaulieu ("the witness") confirmed that he is a Chapter 13 Trustee in the New Orleans area. He met Judge Porteous one time early in the Chapter 13 (the 341 hearing), and did not know him prior to then. A 341 hearing is the first meeting of creditors, but often no creditors are present. The witness said the only preferential treatment he provided to Porteous was to hold his 341 meeting on the docket from morning to afternoon to reduce the chances of Porteous being seen by bankruptcy lawyers. The witness added that had any creditors appeared for the morning 341 hearing, the hearing would not have been held to the afternoon.

Mr. Woods provided the witness a copy of the recorded transcript from the 371 hearing, and the witness reviewed it, saying it appeared to be accurate. The witness explained that a typical 341 hearing takes between three and five minutes. The witness is acquainted with attorney Claude Lightfoot, and considers him one of the top filers for Chapter 7 and 13 cases. He added that Mr. Lightfoot is also a Chapter 7 Trustee.

Mr. Woods provided the witness with a copy of the booklet that the witness sends out to new Chapter 13 debtors. The witness said he used to hand it to debtors, but now he mails each debtor a copy [NOTE: the witness's docket is in excess of 3,000 cases]. The witness affirmed that according to the booklet, a debtor is warned against incurring additional debt post-petition. Use of additional credit cards would be a type of debt that is prohibited. Furthermore, twenty days following the 341 hearing, a confirmation hearing is held. Thereafter, the Bankruptcy Court enters an order of confirmation of the plan. That order also provides that the debtor should not take on more debt.

Attorney-Client Communication

Mr. Woods then shifted the discussion to the FBI 302 of the witness's interview, dated January 22, 2004. The witness was afforded approximately 15 minutes to review the seven page 302.

Tax return (302 p. 3, ¶ 2, 3). The witness took issue with ¶ 2, saying he thought he recalled conferring with William Heitkamp, Chapter 13 Trustee for then Bankruptcy Judge William Greendyke, to determine if tax refunds must be reported and/or turned over to the Court. The witness said it was his recollection that Mr. Heitkamp stated that in Texas the practice is not to notify or provide the court with the tax refund. [CHECK THIS OUT WITH BILL HEITKAMP]. Mr. Woods asked the witness whether he would have wanted to know that Porteous had filed for a tax refund of $4,143.72 just five days before filing for bankruptcy. The witness replied that such knowledge could have affected his analysis of the funds available for creditors in a Chapter 7 versus a Chapter 13.

Gaming and Markers. (302 p. 7, ¶ 1). The witness considers a casino marker to be a debt. Mr. Woods asked whether the witness was aware that Porteous took out $31,900 in markers during the period from 2001 – 2002. The witness replied in the negative.

Carmella Porteous income. (302 p. 7, ¶ 3). Had the witness later learned about Mrs. Porteous' unreported income, he believes he would have recommended a conversion to a Chapter 7, rather than a dismissal of the Chapter 13. A conversion to Ch. 13 would have benefited the creditors better than an outright dismissal of the Ch. 13.

The witness agreed that the remainder of the 302 was generally accurate.

Pay stub. Mr. Woods discussed the pay stub Porteous provided to the witness as proof of income, alerting the witness that the stub was pre-FICA and over a year prior to the bankruptcy. The witness replied that he was at error for neither asking about nor catching the FICA adjustment. The witness agreed that if there was also a COLA bump in 2001 (which could have accounted for the greater monthly income than that reflected by the year-old pay stub Porteous provided), that fact should have been disclosed to the Trustee. The witness agreed that a current pay stub, disclosing greater income (from COLA or other source) should have been used and disclosed to him.

False names. Mr. Woods asked the witness about the false names provided by Porteous on the original petition, and whether the witness felt he had any responsibilities in light of the false statement. The witness replied that had he known of this deliberate falsehood, he would have reported it to the U.S. Trustee. Having said that, the witness added that the amended petition (with false names) had been filed prior to the 341 hearing, meaning that the unsecured creditors all received notice of the actual identities of the debtors. In other words, no harm, no foul.

Gambling losses. Mr. Woods asked the witness about the effect of Porteous' gambling losses, as follows: $12,800 in gross losses; gross wins of $5,312; net loss of almost $7,500 – and how that fact would have affected the witness's handling of the Porteous bankruptcy had it been made known to him. The witness replied that the gambling loss would not have affected his judgment in any way. He explained that many, if not most, of the debtors that come before him have gambling problems. The income and expenses analysis is viewed by the witness in the aggregate, and if some expenses are understated while others are overstated, it all averages out.

Preferred payments. Mr. Woods advised the witness about a $1,088 credit card payment to Fleet on March 23, 2001, by Rhonda Danos in payment of Mrs. Porteous' bill - days prior to the filing of the Porteous bankruptcy - and asked the witness about the effect of this transaction. The witness stated that the payment created debt without court approval, but that this was not a preferred payment in his opinion because the petition had not yet been filed. On the other hand, continued use of the use of the credit card should have been disallowed as it created new debt post-petition. [NOTE: ask Bill Heitkamp for his opinion].

The witness stated that earlier in his career, he was a Chief Deputy Clerk in the Bankruptcy Court. He held that job for approximately 12 years. Prior to that, he was a deputy clerk in the U.S. District Clerk's Office working in the financial section, and when the Bankruptcy Courts were created, he was one of the few people with a financial background to be able to move over to the new position.

Mr. Woods reminded the witness of the date of the hearing, and promised to try to give the witness a short window of time to attend the hearing.

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and files this Motion for Dismissal of Article IV of the Articles of Impeachment because it states improper grounds for impeachment.

INTRODUCTION

Article IV alleges that Judge Porteous “knowingly made material false statements about his past” by failing to state affirmatively that he (1) received a portion of curatorship fees given to the law firm Amato & Creely while a state judge (as alleged in Article I of the Articles of Impeachment); and (2) accepted “things of value” while benefiting the Marcotte bail bonds company while a state judge (as alleged in Article II of the Articles of Impeachment). Additionally, Article IV alleges that Judge Porteous should be removed from office because he failed to state affirmatively that he suspected that Louis Marcotte may have given misleading statements to the FBI in a conversation in which Judge Porteous was not a party.

Article IV alleges that Judge Porteous omitted information in response to general questions asking him whether he could identify any matters that: (1) “could cause an embarrassment” to him or President Clinton if publicly known; (2) could be used to “influence, pressure, coerce,” “blackmail,” or “compromise” him; (3) would “impact negatively on his character, reputation, judgment, or discretion;” or (4) would unfavorably “affect his nomination” as a federal judge. (111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010.), hereinafter “Article IV.”) Article IV concludes by arguing that Judge Porteous’s failure to disclose this information deprived the Senate and the public of information that would have had a material impact on his confirmation. (Id.)

Article IV is nothing more than the House's effort to employ a belt-and-suspenders strategy, reasoning that if they cannot convince the Senate that the pre-federal conduct alleged in Articles I and II provides valid grounds for impeachment, they surely can persuade the Senate that Judge Porteous's omission of these alleged offenses during the nomination process is, on its own, an impeachable offense.¹ The House's effort in Article IV to force the Senate to reconsider the same allegations raised elsewhere in the Articles of Impeachment in a different context demonstrates the House's own uncertainty of the viability of the charges in Articles I and II.²

Impeachment standards were designed to create objective and clear lines of what conduct would require removal of a federal judge. The standards raised in Article IV are purely subjective and provide no means by which judges can gauge whether their conduct is proper or could become the subject of an impeachment. In the criminal context, such charges have been found to be unconstitutionally vague. Article IV is nothing more than a statement by the House that, in the House's view, Judge Porteous should have been embarrassed by the facts alleged in Articles I and II.

If Judge Porteous were convicted on the basis of Article IV, the Senate would be asserting the right to remove a judge because it believes that a judge should have viewed an uncharged and unproven allegation to be “embarrassing” – and it would make such an act of omission the constitutional equivalent to treason.³ While full disclosure is to be encouraged, there is a long list of prominent government office holders who have failed to disclose information that someone else may have considered to be embarrassing or unfavorable. None of them has ever been sanctioned, let alone impeached, in the past.⁴ Imposing the sanction of removal from office for failing to disclose information that someone else later considers to be embarrassing would set a standard of conduct for office holders that is both impossible to adhere to and a goldmine for partisan mischief. Such a hopelessly vague standard would gut the well-crafted language of the impeachment clauses and directly contradict the intent of the Framers in limiting removal to a showing of “high crimes and misdemeanors.” (U.S. CONST. art II, § 4.) Moreover, such a move would directly subject millions of federal employees to the impeachment process through their simple failure to fully catalog all embarrassing moments in their lives during their own background checks.

² For an example of the House attempt to reach, through Article IV, what they doubt they can reach through Articles I and II, see the last charges in Article IV which allege that “[a]s Judge Porteous well knew and understood, Louis Marcotte also made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench.” (Article IV.) This exact language is also used in Article II.

Finally, the premise of Article IV is factually and logically flawed. The alleged false statements cannot – given the nature of the allegations – be readily proven by the House. Moreover, much of the information that the House alleges that Judge Porteous failed to disclose was made available to the Senate by the FBI and other sources, in connection with Judge Porteous’s confirmation. Thus, Article IV’s claim that the Senate was “deprived” of this information is incorrect.

³ As the Senate is aware, the Constitution enumerates the following offenses as being impeachable – “treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.” (U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4.)

⁴ In addition, counsel for Judge Porteous is unable to locate any decisions upholding a false-statement prosecution predicated on the amorphous request for disclosure of “embarrassing” information.

Article IV suggests that Judge Porteous concealed facts that the House readily admits took place in the open – lunches at high-profile restaurants, trips with other judges and lawyers, and the assignment of curatorships through official Court activities.⁵ If Judge Porteous believed these alleged activities were inherently corrupt, embarrassing, or would have subjected him to some type of improper pressure, he would have seemingly concealed these activities.⁶ Instead, the fact that Judge Porteous specifically took no action to conceal these alleged activities suggest that, if they occurred, he did not find them embarrassing or that which might negatively impact his character and reputation.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND ON ARTICLE IV

Article IV alleges that “[i]n 1994, in connection with his nomination to be a judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana,” Judge Porteous “knowingly made material false statements about his past to both the United States Senate and to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in order to obtain the office of United States District Court Judge.” (Article IV.) The House then defines the alleged false statements:

(1) On his Supplemental SF-86, Judge Porteous was asked if there was anything in his personal life that could be used by someone to coerce or blackmail him, or if there was anything in his life that could cause an embarrassment to Judge Porteous or the President if publicly known. Judge Porteous answered ‘no’ to this question and signed the form under the warning that a false statement was punishable by law.

⁵ The House is likely to admit that these alleged activities took place in the open but that Judge Porteous concealed the fact that (1) he received money from Amato & Creely in the same time frame as the assignment of the curatorships, and (2) he took official actions on behalf of the Marcottes in the same time frame as the receipt of things of personal value. The House has not alleged in the Articles of Impeachment, however, that the alleged receipt of things of value from Amato & Creely or the Marcottes are related on any type of quid pro quo basis to Judge Porteous’s official actions. As such, the House should not be allowed to backend their way into a bribery or kickback allegation after specifically choosing not to pursue one through the Articles.

(2) During his background check, Judge Porteous falsely told the Federal Bureau of Investigation on two separate occasions that he was not concealing any activity or conduct that could be used to influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise him in any way or that would impact negatively on his character, reputation, judgment, or discretion.

(3) On the Senate Judiciary Committee's "Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees," Judge Porteous was asked whether any unfavorable information existed that could affect his nomination. Judge Porteous answered that, to the best of his knowledge, he did "not know of any unfavorable information that may affect [his] nomination." Judge Porteous signed that questionnaire by swearing that "the information provided in this statement is, to the best of my knowledge, true and accurate." (Id.)

The House argues that these statements were, in fact, false because Judge Porteous was well aware of and should have responded to the questions above in the affirmative in light of the following information:

- His relationship with Jacob Amato and Robert Creely;
- That he had appointed Robert Creely as a curator in "hundreds of cases and thereafter requested and accepted from Amato & Creely a portion of the curatorship fees which had been paid to the firm";
- His relationship with Louis and Lori Marcotte;
- That he had solicited and accepted numerous things of value from the Marcottes while at the same time taking official actions that benefitted the Marcottes;
- That Louis Marcotte made false statements to the FBI in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the federal bench.

(See id.) The Senate argues that Judge Porteous's failure to disclose these facts "deprived the United States Senate and the public of information that would have had a material impact on his confirmation." (Id.)

Judge Porteous is not accused of hiding much of this information, which was publicly known, but of not finding it "embarrassing" or the potential subject of coercion. He has publicly acknowledged his friendship with these individuals, and the curatorships he granted to Creely &

Amato – and a number of other lawyers in Jefferson Parish – were also in the public record. Moreover, these basic allegations were not only raised in his background investigation but also were inquired into in two known FBI investigations, including the Wrinkled Robe investigation that resulted in the conviction of two Jefferson Parish judges.⁷ Judge Porteous was never indicted for any unlawful conduct or subject to bar charges in Louisiana.

The alleged Marcotte conversation with the FBI (which the House claims Porteous knew of and knew to be false), referenced in Article IV, took place after Judge Porteous filled out his SF-86 form, supplemental SF-86 form, and Senate questionnaire, and after he spoke with agents in his first background check. Judge Porteous signed his SF-86 on April 27, 1994.⁸ He signed a supplemental SF-86 on April 27, 1994. He completed his initial interview with the FBI on July 8, 1994. It was not until August 1, 1994, however, that Louis Marcotte was interviewed by the FBI, and he allegedly claimed he told Judge Porteous that he had given him a “clean bill of health” shortly after the FBI Interview.⁹ Thus, Judge Porteous has been impeached for withholding information about an alleged conversation that had not even occurred when he filled out the forms referenced in Article IV.

ARGUMENT

I. A Federal Judge Cannot Be Impeached Based on His Subjective View That Prior Associations Were Not Relevant to His Confirmation.

The impeachment standard resulted after multiple drafts and focused debate by the Framers, who specifically sought to avoid ambiguous standards for removal of a president or a

⁷ In addition to Wrinkled Robe, Metropolitan Crime Commission records indicate that the FBI looked into the allegations with the Marcottes for possible Hobbs Act violations. (See October 25, 1994 Intelligence Report, attached as Exhibit 1.)

⁸ Reference to the initial SF-86 is not included in Article IV.

judge. They were reacting to the English standard by which the Parliament could impeach individuals for such vague terms as “divers deceits.”¹⁰ See Leon R. Yankwich, Impeachment of Civil Officers Under the Federal Constitution, 26 GEO. L.J. 849, 853 (1938); see also Jonathan Turley, Senate Trials and Factional Disputes: Impeachment as a Madisonian Device, 49 DUKE L.J. 1, 11 (1999). The Framers first crafted the impeachment standard to allow removal for “malpractice or neglect of duty.” RAOUL BERGER, IMPEACHMENT, THE CONSTITUTIONAL PROBLEMS, Harvard Univ. Press, 78 (1973). The Committee of Detail, however, narrowed the standard to “treason, bribery, or corruption.” Id. Ultimately, “corruption” was considered too ambiguous a term and was dropped by the Committee of Eleven. Id. George Mason then suggested that the term “maladministration” be added, but James Madison objected that such a term was dangerously vague. Id. Madison remarked that “so vague a term [as maladministration] will be the equivalent to a tenure during the pleasure of the Senate,” whereupon Mason substituted “high crimes and misdemeanors.” Id.

Article IV would return the Senate to the unpredictability of the English standard of “divers deceits.” It invites this and future Senates to remove a judge based on whether the Senate believes a specific judge should have believed a fact to be embarrassing to the President or to himself. If an allegation based on someone else’s concept of embarrassment would support impeachment, the specificity of “treason,” “bribery,” and “high crimes and misdemeanors” would be lost. Any judge could be accused of divers deceits in failing to list every possible allegation that might be raised even when he did not consider them relevant to the confirmation.

¹⁰ “Diver deceits” appeared to refer to an alleged pattern of untrue or misleading statements or actions. Leon R. Yankwich, Impeachment of Civil Officers Under the Federal Constitution, 26 GEO. L.J. 849, 853 (1938).

Courts have rejected as the basis for criminal prosecutions the type of vague, untethered allegations that make up Article IV. For example, in United States v. Kerik, Bernard Kerik, the former New York City Police Commissioner and nominee for Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, was charged in a fifteen count indictment, which included allegations that Kerik lied to the White House when he sought membership in the Academe & Policy Research Senior Advisory Committee to the White House Office of Homeland Security, among other positions.¹¹ See 615 F. Supp. 2d 256 (S.D.N.Y. 2009). The questions to which Kerik allegedly provided false answers to included:

- [W]hen asked whether there was anything embarrassing that he [Kerik] wouldn't want the public to know about, Kerik told a White House official, "Nope! It's all in my book."
- Similarly, when asked whether there was any other information, including information about other members of his family, that could be considered a possible source of embarrassment to him, his family, or the President, Kerik stated, "Not to my knowledge."

Id. at 272 n.19. The U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, in framing its analysis, noted "[w]here a question is so vague as to be fundamentally ambiguous, [] it cannot be the predicate of a false statement, regardless of the answer given." Id. at 271 (citing United States v. Watts, 72 F. Supp. 2d 106, 109 (E.D.N.Y. 1999) (noting an answer to a fundamentally ambiguous question "may not, as a matter of law, form the basis of a prosecution for perjury or false statement").) The court further noted that "[t]his proscription holds even where the answer is unquestionably false or fraudulent." Kerik, 615 F. Supp. 23 at 271.

¹¹ On December 3, 2004, Kerik was nominated by President Bush to succeed Tom Ridge as United States Secretary of Homeland Security. On December 10, 2004, after a week of press scrutiny, Kerik withdrew acceptance of the nomination. Kerik stated that he had unknowingly hired an undocumented worker as a nanny and housekeeper who had used someone else's social security number. See Mike Allen and Jim VandeHei, Homeland Security Nominee Kerik Pulls Out, WASH. POST (Dec. 11, 2004).

Because the word “embarrassing” was used in several of the questions, the court in Kerik analyzed the meaning an application of the term in the context of background checks and applications for federal employment:

Plainly the meaning of the term “embarrassing,” . . . is open to interpretation. What is embarrassing to one person may not be embarrassing to the next. If an individual withheld some innocuous but potentially embarrassing secret -- such as one's contentious divorce or one's prescription medication -- it is hard to believe that a federal prosecution [let alone an impeachment] would follow.

Id. at 273. The court then delved into a more specific analysis, stating:

this Court agrees that the term “embarrassing” is not fundamentally ambiguous per se. For example, a question about “embarrassing educational history” or “embarrassing business dealings” would not be fundamentally ambiguous because it provides the answerer with clarity about the specific information sought by his examiner.

Id. The court then stated that the more general questions posed to Kerik, such as “whether there was anything embarrassing that he would not want the public to know about,” were more troubling. Id. at 273-74. “In contrast” to the more specific questions listed above, the court stated that “this level of abstraction renders the term ‘embarrassing’ fundamentally ambiguous.”

Id. at 274. The court pointed out:

The question does not explicitly limit the context to “associations” or specific affiliations. Rather, the question is more like a fishing expedition, seeking anything that might embarrass an applicant. Despite the laundry list of answers the Government wishes Kerik would have supplied, it does not follow that Kerik necessarily understood the question in precisely this way.

Id. The court concluded that the two questions posed to Kerik provided “no greater clarity.” Id. Thus, the court found that these two questions were “fundamentally ambiguous.” Id.

The questions posed by Article IV as the basis for Judge Porteous’s allegedly false answers or omissions are largely identical to the “fundamentally ambiguous” questions posed to Kerik, which the court in that case found so troubling.

In order to refute the Southern District of New York's decision in Kerik, the House may point to United States v. Cisneros, 26 F. Supp. 2d 24 (D.D.C. 1998), which predates Kerik. In that case, Henry Cisneros, the former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, was indicted for making false statements to federal officials in connection with his nomination to the cabinet post. Id. at 24. When Cisneros was asked whether there was "anything" in his "personal life that could be used by someone to coerce or blackmail" him and whether there was anything "that could cause an embarrassment to [him] or to the President if publicly known," Cisneros replied that "that there was no basis upon which he would be subject to coercion or blackmail." Id. at 32. At that time, Cisneros was allegedly making payments to his former mistress in order to ensure her public silence about the extramarital affair and his previous payments to her. Id.

Cisneros moved to dismiss the claims related to the alleged false statements on the ground that the question in SF-86 was vague because it did not define the terms "coerce," "blackmail," or "embarrassment." Id. at 40. Judge Stanley Sporkin of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia found that "[t]he meaning of Cisneros' statements is a matter that is within the province of a jury to determine." Id. at 42.

The Kerik court distinguished the statements at issue in Kerik with those present in Cisneros. The Kerik court noted that "this issue must be done on a case-by-case basis" but stated that:

[t]he Cisneros court spent the overwhelming bulk of its analysis on the terms "coerce" and "blackmail," and rightly so given the facts of that case. However, the false statement charges against Kerik are cloaked only in terms of "embarrassment," and, absent any further clarifying context, those questions are impermissible as a matter of law.

615 F. Supp. 2d at 274 n.24. Ultimately, in September 1999, Cisneros negotiated a plea agreement, under which he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor count of lying to the FBI, and he was fined $10,000. The jury was never asked to consider whether the questions posed to Cisneros were deficient due to vagueness. Cisneros did not receive jail time or probation. The House never began impeachment proceedings against Cisneros. Notably, Cisneros was pardoned by President Bill Clinton in January 2001. Judge Porteous was also asked about items that might be used to coerce or blackmail him but the facts of his case are far different than that of Cisneros. Cisneros was allegedly making payments to a secret lover for the purpose of keeping her quiet – the epitome of a case ripe for blackmail. In the instant matter, it is unclear who would have attempted to blackmail or coerce Judge Porteous and for what reason. Many of the alleged acts of misconduct occurred in the open, as opposed to the private confines of a hotel room, as in Cisneros.

Thus, not only is Article IV based on a highly subjective test of what constitutes embarrassing or noteworthy facts, but also it relies on language that the federal courts have rejected as unconstitutionally vague. While this is not a criminal proceeding, the standard for removal must be sufficiently clear to give adequate notice to federal judges of what conduct would justify removal. Judges should not be removed from office on the basis of vague charges that they, as judges, would find an inadequate basis on which to convict a person standing before them at the bar. The Framers made it both procedurally and substantively difficult to remove a federal judge – specifically rejecting vague terms and standards for impeachment. Absent such bright-line standards, Federal judges would be left at the mercy of the shifting views and allegiances of Congress. No judiciary can long remain independent when its members can be removed based on such subjective and politicized claims.

II. Given the Nature of the Alleged False Statements, the House Cannot Prove that They Were Demonstrably False.

Furthermore, the false statements that Article IV alleges Judge Porteous made in connection with his nomination to the federal bench, given their vague, ambiguous, and nebulous nature, are incapable of being proven false by the House. As such, Article IV should be dismissed.¹²

Both the Supplemental SF-86 and the Senate Questionnaire pose very specific questions. (See Supplemental SF-86, attached as Exhibit 2, asking "Please list all of your interests in real property"; see also Senate Questionnaire, attached as Exhibit 3 asking "Were all of your taxes current as of the date of your nomination?"). There is no allegation in Article IV that Judge Porteous answered any of these questions incorrectly or incompletely. Instead, Article IV is based on the most generally worded and subjective questions in either document.

On his Supplemental SF-86, Judge Porteous was asked whether there was anything in his personal life that could cause embarrassment to him or President Clinton.¹³ (See Supplemental SF-86, attached as Exhibit 2.) This vague question necessarily asks for Judge Porteous's subjective opinion and speculation regarding the meaning and application of the term "embarrassment" or what causes any particular individual to feel "self-conscious or ill at ease." See The American Heritage Dictionary (4th ed. 2001). The Senate has every right to ask about ¹² Such a dismissal would also help ameliorate the fact that Judge Porteous has been limited to just a five-day evidentiary hearing – a fraction of the time afforded prior nominees like ex-Judge Alcee Hastings. If this proceeding is to be conducted in such an abbreviated fashion, it would be highly beneficial to eliminate one or more Articles that are facially invalid. Judge Porteous recognizes that, in the past, certain Motions to Dismiss were not resolved until after the evidentiary hearings. It is unclear if that is the Senate's intention in this proceeding.

criminal or unethical acts, as well as to inquire generally about other items of interest that the subject may find or believe to be embarrassing to himself or to others. But if a nominee is asked for his subjective view of what might prove embarrassing to the nominee himself or to the President or which could be used exert influence over the nominee, the Senate should be prepared to accept the nominee's own view of what may be embarrassing to him or others. The Senate should not remove a judge holding a lifetime appointment merely because the Senate disagrees with the nominee's own interpretation of such open-ended and subjective questioning.

As the Kerik court noted, this question is "fundamentally ambiguous" as there is no act that is definitively "embarrassing" – embarrassment is a subjective belief that differs from person to person. As such, there is no proof that the House has produced or can elicit that will show that Judge Porteous had the opinion or belief at the time of his confirmation that any given act would be embarrassing to him or to President Clinton.

Judge Porteous was also asked, on his Supplemental SF-86, whether there was anything in his personal life that could be used by someone to coerce or blackmail him. (See Supplemental SF-86, attached as Exhibit 2.) Similarly, during his background check, an FBI agent reported that Judge "Porteous said he is not concealing any activity or conduct that could be used to influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise him in any way or . . . would impact negatively on [his] judgment, or discretion"¹⁴ (collectively, these activities will be referred to generally as "influence"). (See FBI Interview of Judge Porteous, dated July 6, 1994, bates labeled PORT000000291-96, attached as Exhibit 4.) Notably, neither question qualifies the inquiry by including "attempts" by a third-party to influence Judge Porteous. Instead they require Judge

Porteous to have known or believed that he would, in fact, be influenced if a third-party knew and used such information. Judge Porteous responded to both questions by not identifying any activity or conduct. Therefore, for the House to be successful in proving that these responses were actually false, it would have not only to prove the underlying allegations (contained in Article I and II), but also to show that Judge Porteous held the belief that his own actions, judgments, or rulings would be influenced. There is no basis in the House's evidence to substantiate such allegations.

Finally, Judge Porteous was asked, on the Senate Judiciary Committee's "Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees" to "advise the Committee of any unfavorable information that may affect your nomination." (Senate Questionnaire, attached as Exhibit 3.) Judge Porteous responded with a qualified answer, stating "To the best of my knowledge, I do not know of any unfavorable information that may affect my nomination." Id. Contrary to the House's apparent view of what he should have believed, Judge Porteous simply did not view his past associations with his former partners or with the Marcottes to be unfavorable. He openly dined with the Marcottes and was open about his friendship with Amato & Creely both as a state and federal judge. (See e.g., Transcript of Hearing regarding Lifemark Hospital's Motion to Recuse, where Judge Porteous stated in open Court, "Let me also make one statement for the record if anyone wants to decide whether I am a friend with Mr. Amato [], I will put that to rest, for the answer is affirmative, yes" attached as Exhibit 5.) He was never charged with, and has not been accused of, any illegal act before or after his confirmation. Indeed, the FBI was aware of the basic allegations raised years later by the House and did not deem them to raise material problems for the confirmation. Like the questions regarding "embarrassment," this query asks for Judge Porteous's subjective belief regarding the impact any certain information may have on his own nomination.

Asking a nominee what information "may affect" a nomination is maddeningly vague. While it may generate information not otherwise disclosed, it leaves it in the hands of the nominee to determine what may or may not affect that person's nomination. Such a question runs the gamut of potential political and legal issues. As explained by the Kerik court, "[w]here a question is so vague as to be fundamentally ambiguous, . . . it cannot be the predicate of a false statement, regardless of the answer given." 615 F. Supp. 2d at 271.

Article IV is an open invitation to the Senate to substitute its collective judgment for Judge Porteous's evaluation of what he found to be embarrassing or inappropriate. It invites the Senate to aspire to levels of insight of which no ordinary person is capable. No trial of impeachment should hinge on such pure speculation.

III. Congress Has Never Instituted Impeachment Proceedings Against Individuals For Failing to Disclose Information.

As discussed in other motions being filed concurrently herewith, Congress has applied the meaning of "high crimes and misdemeanors" by voting to impeach judges only when their alleged conduct has included abuses of constitutionally entrusted powers. No one has ever been convicted by the United States Senate in an impeachment for failing to disclose facts during the nomination process. There have been numerous occasions where previously undisclosed information, potentially embarrassing to a federal civil officer (including Supreme Court Justices, federal judges, and cabinet secretaries), has been discovered after confirmation, but for which no impeachment proceedings were instituted:

- In 1937, President Roosevelt nominated Hugo Black for an opening on the United States Supreme Court. See Howard Ball, Hugo L. Black: Cold Steel Warrior, Oxford Oxfordshire: Oxford University Press 5 (1996). During the confirmation hearings, rumors swirled regarding Black's prior membership in the Ku Klux Klan. Id. at 94-95. Senator William E. Borah, Republican of Idaho, made the only statement in Black's behalf on the Klan question. "There has never been at any time one iota of evidence that Senator Black was a member of the Klan," Borah told his colleagues. He said that Black, in private discussion before the nomination, had stated that he was not a member of the Klan. No one, Borah said, had suggested any source from which evidence might be obtained. For himself, the Idaho senator said he would vote against any man whom he knew to be a member of a secret organization of the nature of the Klan. After six hours of debate, the Senate voted 63-16 to confirm Black. See Ball at 94. The next month, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette investigated Black's KKK past and definitively revealed Black's involvement in the Klan. Id. at 96. Vacationing senators were tracked down and asked whether they would have voted for Black if they had known of his former membership. Some said they had been "misled"; others passed it off as a "tempest in a teapot." Weeks later, Black addressed the nation by radio, admitting that "I did join the Klan." The Congress never instituted impeachment proceedings against Justice Black, who continued to serve on the Court for the next thirty-four years.

- Prior to his appointment to the Supreme Court, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist purchased properties in Arizona and Vermont which contained discriminatory deed restrictions. See Alan S. Oser, Unenforceable Covenants are in Many Deeds, N.Y. TIMES, Aug. 1, 1986. The restriction on the Vermont property prohibited the sale or lease of the property to "members of the Hebrew race." Id. The Arizona property contained a restrictive covenant barring sale to "any person not of the White or Caucasian race." Id. This was not discovered until he was already a member of the Supreme Court. Id. The Chief Justice was called to testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee and stated that he would get rid of the covenants. Id. Chief Justice Rehnquist was never impeached. See Chief Justice Rehnquist has Died, <http://www.cnn.com/2005/LAW/09/03/rehnquist.obit/index.html> (last visited July 18, 2010).
- In March 2010, it was discovered that Attorney General Eric H. Holder, Jr. had failed to disclose during his confirmation hearings his work on several briefs, including one on behalf of enemy combatant Jose Padilla,. See David Davenport, Hard Questions for Holder, WASH. TIMES, Mar. 19, 2010. Holder characterized this as an oversight. Id. Holder has not been impeached. See Office of the Attorney General, <http://www.justice.gov/ag/> (last visited July 18, 2010).
- Andrew Cuomo was the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development under President Clinton. See Sam Dealey & James Ring Adams, Banking on Andy Cuomo: HUD Secretary and Rising Democratic Star Andrew Cuomo Wants to Go Places – Assuming He Can Leave Some Baggage Behind, THE AMERICAN SPECTATOR, Jan. 1999. Cuomo neglected to list a suit brought by a savings and loan association and settled only two months before his confirmation hearing, in response to a question on the Senate Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee Statement for Completion by Presidential Nominees. Id. The question read: "Give the full details of any civil or criminal proceeding in which you were a defendant, or any inquiry or investigation by a Federal, State or local agency in which you were the subject of an inquiry or investigation.” Id. In the suit, federal banking regulators had investigated Cuomo and fellow investors for possible change-in-control violations. Id. Cuomo was confirmed (id.) and was never impeached. See Andrew Cuomo, <http://www.andrewcuomo.com> (last visited July 18, 2010).

- Gerald Carmen was the head of the General Services Administration under President Reagan. See Gregory Gordon, GSA Head Says He Forgot to Mention Loan, UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL, Jul. 16, 1982. Carmen did not include a $425,000 federal loan in stating his finances to a Senate committee before he was confirmed. Id. William Roth, Chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, demanded an explanation from Carmen, who claimed it was an oversight. Id. Carmen was never impeached, and served as Administrator until 1984, when President Reagan appointed him U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations in Geneva. See Gerald P. Carmen, <http://people.forbes.com/profile/gerald-p-carmen/31618> (last visited July 18, 2010).
- Jay Bybee was confirmed to the Ninth Circuit by the Senate on March 13, 2003. See Sen. Leahy Issues Statement on Nomination of David Nahmias, U.S. FED NEWS, Sept. 30, 2004. After his confirmation, it was discovered that Judge Bybee had signed a controversial memo advising President Bush to ignore laws forbidding torture. Id. Senator Patrick Leahy indicated that had Judge Bybee’s role in sanctioning cruel, inhumane, and degrading treatment and abandoning the rule of law been known before his confirmation, the Senate would not have accepted his promise to follow the law. Id. Judge Bybee has not been impeached.
- William F. Baxter was the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division in 1982. See Andrew Pollack, Baxter Role Upheld in I.B.M. Case, N.Y. TIMES, June 18, 1982, at D1. Baxter dismissed a thirteen-year old antitrust case against I.B.M. Id. Baxter did not disclose his past dealings with I.B.M. during his Senate confirmation hearings, which included aiding the evaluation of expert witnesses in a different case, research funded with an I.B.M. grant, and arguing on I.B.M.’s behalf before officials of the European Economic Community, which also had an antitrust suit pending against the company. Id. Baxter was never impeached. See Michael M. Weinstein, W.F. Baxter, 69, Ex-Antitrust Chief, is Dead, N.Y. TIMES, Dec. 2, 1998.
- G. William Miller served as both Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and Treasury Secretary under President Carter. See Lawrence L. Knutson, THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, Feb. 1, 1980. It was revealed that a corporation of which Miller was chairman spent $600,000 to entertain Pentagon officials without informing stockholders, as required by federal law. Id. Miller claimed the payments were not improper because they were not illegal, but the SEC claimed that Miller knew at the time that the firm had failed to disclose the spending. Id. Although the expenditures were not illegal in themselves, Pentagon officials operate under regulations prohibiting them from being on the receiving end of such entertainment from potential defense contractors. Id. This matter did not come up during his confirmation hearings to head the Federal Reserve Board.

Id. Miller was never impeached, and resigned at the end of President Carter's term. See G. William Miller, <http://www.ustreas.gov/education/history/secretaries/gwmliller.shtml> (last visited July 18, 2010).

- William J. Casey, Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, did not disclose his stock holdings in three corporations in the financial disclosure report he filed with the Senate Select Committee on Ethics during his confirmation proceedings in 1981. See Edward T. Pound, Casey Tells Federal Ethics Agency He Omitted Three Stock Holdings, N.Y. TIMES, July 31, 1981, at A11. His interest in the companies were valued at approximately $75,000, and he claimed his failure to report was "just an oversight." Id. Casey was never impeached, and he resigned as director of the CIA because of his failing health. See Shultz Among Mourners at Casey's Wake, L.A. TIMES, May 8, 1987.
- Federico Pena had already been confirmed as Transportation Secretary when he acknowledged that he had failed to pay Social Security taxes for a baby-sitter who looked after his children in 1991. See Michael J. Sniffen, Nominees Sunk by Tax and Nanny Problems for Years, ASSOCIATED PRESS, Jan. 14, 2009. He promised to pay back taxes, was never impeached, and kept his position for President Clinton's first term. Id. Pena was then tapped as Energy Secretary, and resigned after one year to return to private life. See Matthew L. Wald, Pena Resigns as Energy Secretary, Citing Concerns for Family, N.Y. TIMES, Apr. 7, 1998.

There are also numerous other instances where a federal nominee failed to disclose certain information at the initial stages of his or her nomination, only then to have the information discovered by a third-party and disclosed by that party or whereby sufficient pressure was apparently placed on the nominee so that nominee disclosed the information at a later date. In each of the examples listed below, the Senate confirmed the individual despite the lack of full and timely disclosure of relevant material:

- Justice Stephen G. Breyer was a candidate to succeed Justice Byron White in 1993. See Aaron Epstein & Angie Cannon, Consensus-Building Skills Gave Nominee the Edge, THE MIAMI HERALD, May 14, 1994 at A13. Prior to a nomination, it was revealed that he had failed to pay Social Security taxes for a household helper. Id. Justice Breyer later paid the tax, but President Clinton nominated Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg instead. Id. Justice Breyer was subsequently nominated and confirmed the next year as Justice Harry A. Blackmun's replacement. Id.
- Justice Sonia Sotomayor failed to disclose to the Senate Judiciary Committee a document she had authored arguing that the death penalty was "racist" and a violation of the present "humanist" thinking of society. See Pete Winn, Sotomayor Failed to Disclose to Senate Memo in which She Argued Death Penalty is "Racist", June 5, 2009, <http://www.cnsnews.com/news/print/49218> (last visited July 18, 2010). The Judicial Confirmation Network stated that the memo should have been disclosed as required under Question 12(b) of the Senate questionnaire. Id. Justice Sotomayor also did not reveal that she was a member of an allegedly gender-exclusive club – from which she subsequently resigned. See Sotomayor Resigns from Women's Club, <http://www.cnn.com/2009/POLITICS/06/19/sotomayor.womens.club/index.html> (last visited July 18, 2010). Republican senators had called for more information about her participation in the club. Id. Justice Sotomayor was subsequently confirmed by the Senate. See Amy Goldstein and Paul Kane, Sotomayor Wins Confirmation, WASH. POST, Aug. 7, 2009.

- Timothy Geithner was confirmed as Treasury Secretary despite his failure to pay payroll taxes for four years. See Jack Kelly, Culture of Corruption II: What Happened to Obama's Promise to Clean Up Washington?, PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE, Feb. 8, 2009. These errors were discovered by the IRS in an audit and during the vetting process. See Jonathan Weisman, Geithner's Tax History Muddles Confirmation, THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, Jan. 14, 2009. He also employed an immigrant housekeeper whose work-authorization papers expired during her tenure working for Geithner. Id.
- Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg initially failed to list as a gift on her financial disclosure forms a $25,000 initiation fee for a country club near Washington. See Neil A. Lewis, Ginsburg Hearings End in a Secluded Meeting, N.Y. TIMES, July 24, 1993. The Woodmont Country Club routinely waived fees as a courtesy to members of the federal bench. Id. Justice Ginsburg said that she regretted not listing the waived fee as a gift on the form. Id. Justice Ginsburg was subsequently confirmed. See #48 Ruth Bader Ginsburg, The 100 Most Powerful Women, Aug. 19, 2009, http://www.forbes.com/lists/2009/11/power-women-09_Ruth-Bader-Ginsburg_D8D7.html (last visited July 19, 2010).
- Griffin B. Bell won confirmation as Attorney General from the Senate in 1977. See Spencer Rich & John M. Goshko, Bell Wins Approval in 75-21 Vote; Bell is Confirmed as Attorney General; Attorney General May Face Clash on Ousting Kelley, WASH. POST, Jan. 26, 1977 at A1. Some senators had questioned Bell's civil rights record and challenged his judicial ethics. Id. Bell's nomination was vigorously opposed by several civil rights groups. Id. Bell was criticized for failing to disclose for six years that he had received free memberships in two Atlanta clubs that excluded blacks and other minorities and for failing to disqualify himself from a 1976 case involving a similar club. Id.
- Judge Alex Kozinski was a nominee in 1985 to the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. See Chris Chrystal, Levin: Kozinski Lacks Judicial Temperament, United Press International, Nov. 2, 1985. Senate confirmation stalled because of allegations by former employees that he was harsh, cruel and demeaning. Id. Senator Carl Levin stated Judge Kozinski misled the Judiciary Committee by claiming an excellent working relationship with his former staff when six people had filed affidavits that he treated employees unfairly. Id. Another allegation stemmed from his lack of disclosure about the circumstances surrounding his firing of Mary Eastwood, his predecessor at the Office of Special Counsel. Id. Eastwood testified that Judge Kozinski was “less than honest” with the panel by implying she had dropped her appeal of the firing when she had not, and by failing to disclose that she eventually won with back pay. Id. The Senate still confirmed Judge Kozinski. See Robert L. Jackson & Philip Hager, Senate Narrowly Confirms Kozinski as Appeals Judge, L.A. Times, Nov. 8, 1985.

- John Dalton was Secretary of the Navy from 1993 to 1998. See Secretary of the Navy The Honorable John H. Dalton, <http://www.navy.mil/navydata/people/secnav/dalton/daltbio.html> (last visited July 18, 2010). When the White House announced his nomination, it concealed his leadership role in a savings and loan failure that cost taxpayers more than $100 million. See Editorial, Senate Secrecy and Secretary Dalton, N.Y. Times, July 27, 1994 at A20. The Senate confirmed him unanimously, without debate, even though he had been charged by federal regulators as having shown “gross negligence” in running the bankrupt Seguin Savings Association. Id. While the Senate executive committee may have known some of this information, it was never shared with most Senators prior to the confirmation hearing. Id. Dalton was never impeached, and retired in 1998. See New Navy Secretary Selected, Sources Say, L.A. TIMES, July 22, 1998.
- Prior to her confirmation, Secretary of Labor Hilda Solis failed to disclose her ties to the pro-labor union organization, American Rights at Work. See Sen. Kyl Issues Statement on Rep. Solis Confirmation as Secretary of Labor, U.S. FED NEWS, Feb. 25, 2009. She corrected her House disclosure forms only after the issue came to light, raising questions about her motivations to set the record straight, according to Senator Kyl. Id. Solis was confirmed by the Senate. Id.

As these examples highlight, the Senate has routinely dealt with nominees who failed to fully disclose information that the Senate as a whole, or individual Senators, believed to be relevant and material. Moreover, the Senate had previously determined, on numerous occasions that if they were privy to certain material prior to a nomination, even if its was not fully disclosed by the nominee, the confirmation of that individual would not necessarily be denied. Logically, impeachment is an inappropriate remedy for omissions that would not prevent confirmation.

Despite the fact that the non-disclosures of other nominees listed above range from the failure to fully list stock holdings to the failure to admit prior membership in the Ku Klux Klan,

Congress has never sought to use the extreme measure of impeachment. No one excused such failures to disclose and indeed they were rightfully rooted out. Such failures of disclosure have occurred with regularity and illustrate how easy removal from office could become if Members could reach back into confirmation documents and remove an unpopular judge or civil official for an alleged failure to disclose. Notably, the failure of disclosure alleged in this case pales in comparison to some of the allegations listed above. The House's own self-selected expert, Professor Akhil Reed Amar, agreed: "not all evasive or even downright false statements in the nomination and confirmation process deserve to be viewed as high misdemeanors." (Dec. 15th Hearing at 18.)

IV. Prior to His Confirmation, the Senate Was Aware of Many of the Alleged Facts the House Claims Judge Porteous Failed to Disclose.

Article IV concludes by arguing that "Judge Porteous's failure to disclose these corrupt relationships deprived the United States Senate . . . of information that would have had a material impact on his confirmation." 111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010). As such, the House premises the impeachability of the alleged false statements on the importance they would have played during the confirmation process. The House's argument fails, however, if the omissions were not material or if the Senate was otherwise aware of the facts in question.

In fact, prior to Judge Porteous's confirmation, the Senate was well aware of many of the facts or allegations that Judge Porteous purportedly failed to disclose. For example, the House alleges that Judge Porteous's alleged false statements by way of omission resulted in the Senate being deprived of the following information:

- Judge Porteous "accepted numerous things of value, including meals, trips, home repairs, and car repairs for his personal use and benefit."
- Judge Porteous took "official actions that benefitted the Marcottes."

- Judge Porteous “appointed Creely as a curator in hundreds of cases.”¹⁵

(Article IV.) In fact, the Senate was made aware, or purposefully chose not examine these facts.

For example:

Accepted Things of Value

- Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his/her identity remain anonymous, but who stated that the Marcottes “frequently give the judge and his staff cakes, sandwiches, booze, and soft drinks.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 6.) This information was passed on to the Senate prior to Judge Porteous’s confirmation.
- Prior to confirmation, the FBI interviewed Louis Marcotte, who told the FBI “that he sometimes goes to lunch with the candidate and attorneys in the area.” (PORT000000471, attached as Exhibit 7.) This information was passed on to the Senate prior to Judge Porteous’s confirmation.
- Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his identity remain anonymous, who stated that the candidate “indirectly received $10,000 from an individual in exchange for the candidate reducing his bond.” (PORT000000463, attached as Exhibit 8.) Also, the FBI interviewed an individual, whose identity has been redacted from discovery documents, who reported that Louis Marcotte told the girlfriend of an individual who had been arrested that it “would take $12,500 to get [the boyfriend] out of jail” and that “$10,000 would go to Judge Porteous for the bond reduction.” (PORT000000524, attached as Exhibit 9.) This information was passed on to the Senate prior to Judge Porteous’s confirmation.

Took Official Actions that Benefitted the Marcottes

- Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that their identity remain anonymous, but who stated that “Judge Porteous works with certain individuals in writing bonds, specifically . . . Louis and Lori Marcotte.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 6.) This information was passed on to the Senate prior to Judge Porteous’s confirmation.

¹⁵ There was also no reason for Judge Porteous to raise his alleged receipt of a portion of curator funds because it is simply not true. More importantly, Creely specifically testified that there was not a quid pro quo relationship between the curatorships and the gifts of cash that he provided to Judge Porteous. (See Creely Fifth Circuit Testimony at 209-210, stating “It had nothing to do with ‘Look, why don’t you give me these and I’ll give you that back,’ or ‘Do something for me and – you know, and I’ll give you this back.’”)

- The FBI was also told by an anonymous source that “Louis Marcotte has told people that they ‘kick back’ money to Judge Porteous for reducing the bonds.” (Id.) This information was highlighted in a separate “note” to the Department of Justice, sent on August 19, 1994, months before Judge Porteous was confirmed. (PORT000000530, attached as Exhibit 10.) This information was passed on to the Senate prior to Judge Porteous’s confirmation.
- Prior to his confirmation, the FBI interviewed an individual, who asked that his/her identity remain anonymous, but who stated that Judge Porteous “frequently sign[ed] bonds ahead of time for bondsmen.” (PORT000000526, attached as Exhibit 6.) This information was passed on to the Senate prior to Judge Porteous’s confirmation.

Appointed Creely as a Curator in Hundreds of Cases

- These appointment of curatorships were public documents. Creely represented these individuals in public proceedings.

Assuming that Article IV must be given its plain meaning, then it is not the basis for an impeachment because the Senate was aware of these allegations or facts at the time of Judge Porteous’s confirmation vote. This is precisely the element discussed by the House’s own expert witnesses in describing the rare and narrow basis under which pre-federal conduct could be used to remove a judge. Professor Michael Gerhardt testified that “there’s not been a successful impeachment; that is to say, moved through the House and the Senate based on events that took place prior to the person being a federal officer.” (Dec. 15th Hearing at 51-52.) He specifically said that pre-federal conduct could be used as a basis for impeachment only if the conduct is “egregious but not known at the time of the judge’s confirmation proceedings.” He noted that if the Senate had knowledge of allegations before confirmation “the Senate . . . effectively ratifies the misconduct at the time it decides to confirm the judge.” (Id. at 30.) In the case of Article IV, while there is a question whether the conduct alleged is egregious, but there can be no doubt that it was known before confirmation.

CONCLUSION

Article IV would effectively gut the impeachment standard to allow removal of a federal judge for his subjective view on what was material in responding to generally worded questions during the confirmation process. It is a back-door effort to do what the Senate has historically declined to do: remove a federal judge for pre-federal conduct. In this case, the alleged non-disclosure is virtually identical not only to non-disclosure by a long list of prior nominees (all of whom were confirmed and none of whom were impeached) but also to similarly ambiguous questions found by federal courts to be unconstitutionally vague. The consequences of adopting such a potentially mischievous standard could be extraordinary in terms of future office holders and impeachments. It makes little sense to cross that Rubicon for a judge who will be leaving the bench in roughly a year anyway. The Senate has traditionally maintained the line of a clear impeachment standard, often rejecting Articles that are vague or based on pre-federal conduct. Article IV is one such article that should be dismissed in its entirety.

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate dismiss Article IV in its entirety.

2. Louis Marcotte W/M
3. Bail Bonds Unlimited, 221 Derbigny St., Gretna, La.
4. Judge Thomas G. Porteous, Jr., 24th Judicial Court,
Jefferson Parish

On Tuesday, October 25, 1994 at 8:00 a.m., investigator and C. I. #420 met with FBI Special Agent Charlie McGinty at the FBI office on Poydras Street. C. I. advised agent McGinty of the facts surrounding his knowledge of Aubry Wallace's relationship with Louis Marcotte, and Marcotte's relationship with Judge Porteous.

McGinty advised that he had passed on information on the relationship between Marcotte and Porteous to the FBI agent that was doing the background check on Porteous for the Federal judgeship. McGinty had no idea if the lead was followed up by the agent.

McGinty advised the Bureau was looking into Porteous' activity as a possible violation of the Hobb Act, but would have to check with Washington every step of the way.

I was re-elected without opposition in 1990 for the term commencing January 1, 1991.

The 24th Judicial District Court is a state trial court of general civil and criminal jurisdiction. However, juvenile proceedings and traffic violations are not included in our jurisdiction. Other specific courts dispose of these two areas.

(2) a short summary of and citations for all appellate opinions where your decisions were reversed or where your judgment was affirmed with significant criticism of your substantive or procedural rulings;

State v. Abadie, 612 So.2d 1 (LA 1993). Defendant made a statement implicating himself in the murder of a seven year old girl, Raquel Fabre. The issue of right to counsel was involved on appeal from ruling that the statement was admissible. The Supreme Court found that defendant sufficiently invoked right to counsel by unsuccessfully attempting to obtain legal advice on telephone, and defendant did not "initiate " or "reopen" interrogation by expressing his possible willingness to talk to particular officer in response to police's chief's request that he submit to lie detector test.

State v. Lindsey, 491 So.2d 371 (LA 1986). LSA-R.S. 14:71 (A)(2) Issuing worthless checks - presumption. The statute provides that a presumption exists, as follows: if an offender fails to pay a check within ten days after notice of its nonpayment, it shall be presumptive evidence of his intent to defraud. Prior rulings by the Supreme Court led me to believe that this presumption would be a mandatory presumption, as opposed to a permissive presumption, hence, unconstitutional. The Supreme Court ruled that the statute was ambiguous as to whether it created a mandatory or permissive presumption; therefore, it is interpreted as constitutional and with lenity toward the defendant. The Court recognized that its holding in this case was in conflict with its prior holdings in State v. Williams, 400 So.2d 575, (LA 1981) and State v. McCoy, 395 So.2d 319 (La. 1980). It explained how those cases could be reconciled and interpreted. My lower court ruling was vacated and the matter remanded.

Yount v. Maisano, 616 So.2d 1382, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1993); 620 So.2d 823 (LA 1993). Jury award against homeowner's policy reversed. Exclusion in policy for bodily injury "expected or intended by the insured." Supreme Court reversed, finding the actions of defendant to be an intentional act and excluded from coverage.

Marshall v. Citicorp Mortgage, Inc., 601 So.2d 669, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1992). Summary judgment reversed finding issue of material facts existed. Issue of decreasing credit life for less than loan balance when combined with rule of '78's in rebating finance charge.

Succession of Ziifle, 595 So.2d 776, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1992). Protracted litigation since 1978. A default judgment, taken before Judge Price, the previous judge of Division A, was found to be a nullity; hence, subsequent judgments were set aside.

Tracy v. Travelers Ins. Companies, 594 So.2d 541, (La. App. 5 Cir 1992) reversed trial court on exclusion of coverage on comprehensive general liability policy.

Wills v. State Farm Auto, 578 So.2d 1006, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1991). Reversed granting of summary judgment on whether insured had offered choice of limits for uninsured motorist coverage and affirmatively selected lower limits.

Kuebler v. Martin, 578 So.2d 113, (LA 1991). This is one of two cases argued before me on the same day. In the first, Autin v. Martin, I granted the defendant's relief on all claims and dismissed plaintiff's claims against the banks. The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed my decision at 576 So.2d 72, writs were denied by the Louisiana Supreme Court on April 11, 1991.

The second case is the one cited. In that case I granted the bank's motions. Likewise, this was affirmed by the appellate court but reversed by the Supreme Court only as to one of the banks finding the general language in plaintiff's petition did state a cause of action as to that one bank.

American Motorist Ins. Co., 579 So.2d 429, (LA 1991); 566 So.2d 121, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1990). Court of Appeals changed the amount of quantum on portions of the award. Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeals, in part, and the trial court, in part, on different elements of damage award.

Lutz v. Jefferson Parish School, 565 So.2d 1071, (La. App. 5. Cir 1990); 503 So.2d 106, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1987). Judgment granting reduction in workman compensation payments based upon claimant receiving disability retirement benefits. Reversed, finding statute was prospective only.

Cabral v. National Fire Ins.Co., 563 So.2d 533, (La. App. 5 Cir 1990); writ denied, 567 So.2d 1129. Reversed default judgment because insufficient trial record made by plaintiff.

Succession of Austin, 527 So.2d 483, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1988). Foreign will modified by the trial court to reduce the portion that impinged on the legitime. Court of Appeals reversed finding that subsequent birth and legitimation of children revoked the will.

Augustine v. Griffen, 525 So.2d 540, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1988); writ denied, 532 So.2d 118. Twelve-year old on bike hit by auto. I reduced award by 20% for comparative negligence of child. Court of Appeals changed percentage of negligence on child to 80%.

First National Bank v. Verheugen, et al., 527 So.2d 453, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1988); writ denied 530 So.2d 576. Reversed in part on issue of attorney's fees.

Thibodeaux v. Burton, 525 So.2d 1103, (La. App. 5 Cir.1988); 531 So.2d 767, (LA 1989). Plaintiff left a quadriplegic after an auto accident. Pacific Employer Insurance Company failed to answer. Plaintiff obtained default judgment. Court of Appeals upheld default judgment and refusal of new trial. Supreme Court reversed with 3 dissents, finding an incomplete record was made by plaintiff when he confirmed the default.

Southern States Masonry, Inc. v. J.A. Jones Construction Co., et al., 507 So.2d 198, (LA 1987). Granted exception of prematurity. "Pay when paid" clause of contract between contractor and subcontractor.

Cooper v. Brownlow, 491 So.2d 693, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1986). Ruled Levee District was immune from liability under provision of LSA-R.S. 9:2791 and 2795, on a summary judgment. Court of Appeals ruled question of material facts in dispute which precluded summary judgment.

Administration of Tulane Education, 497 So.2d 27, (La. App. 5, 1986). Suit on tuition. Directed verdict for defendant was reversed finding university's records admissible. Remanded.

Markey v. Howard, 484 So.2d 165, (La. App. 5 Cir. 1986). Jury's assessment of 30% negligence to plaintiff driver was manifestly erroneous. Appellate Court removed this allocation, in all other particulars affirmed.

(3) citations for significant opinions on federal or state constitutional issues, together with the citation to appellate court rulings on such opinions. If any of the opinions listed were not officially reported, please provide copies of the opinions.

State v. Manuel Caballero, 472 So.2d 85, (La. App 5 Cir., June,1985); 492 So.2d 1215

State v. Edward Parr, 498 So.2d 103, (La. App 5 Cir., Nov.,1986); writ denied 532 So.2d 113

1. Tellepsen Construction Co., et al v. M/S SANTISTA, et al
Civil Action #75-2249, U.S. District Court, Eastern Dist. of Louisiana
Section "C", Honorable Alvin Rubin

This matter was tried for the most part; a settlement was reached during trial and an agreement to dismiss was filed prior to rendition of judgment, August 9, 1976.

Capsule summary of case: Ship collision. I handled this case through all pre-trial discovery and pleadings and participated in all conferences with Judge Alvin Rubin with respect to the case. The dock was constructed by my clients, Tellepsen Construction Company and Lagradeur International. This case was noteworthy because it was major litigation involving issues of negligence, and limitation and remoteness of damage claims.

Final Disposition: Settled to my clients' satisfaction.

 Citation: 406 So.2d 135, (La. 1981)

Jury Trial, November 26, 27, 28, 29th, 1979.

Chief Counsel: Assistant District Attorney G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

Capsule summary of case: Defendant charged with: Count 1 aggravated rape; Count 2, aggravated crimes against nature. This case required the testimony of a ten-year old victim. Case preparation was crucial. This necessitated many visits and meetings with the child in order to gain her trust and confidence which was essential to her trial testimony. When I initially met the victim and her mother, she would not comment. Then, she later made only isolated statements. The child had to be shown the courtroom, where she would be seated and where all the lawyers, defendant and judge would be seated. In advanced preparation for trial, D.A. personnel were placed in the courtroom to simulate the public. Great efforts were made to make the child understand what was about to happen and to make her comfortable and responsive. Final Disposition: Jury Verdict - Guilty as charged; Affirmed.

Division "J", Judge Patrick E. Carr
Citation: None, defendant died while out on bond prior to appeal.

Jury Trial, December 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 19th, 1977.

Chief Counsel: Assistant District Attorney G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

Capsule summary of case: Defendant charged with: Second Degree Murder. This was a major case involving a prominent local lawyer; it received a lot of public attention. The case was made more complex because of the health of defendant. Medical support was provided during trial in the event the defendant required treatment. The appearance of defendant on a stretcher invoked the emotions of the jury and it took considerable perseverance to prevent the jury from being swayed by sympathy. My participation was from the inception of this case. This matter required appearances in Federal Court, prior to trial in State District Court, because of defendant's claim of denial of due process based on his state of health. The Federal District Court denied defendant's claim and favorably commended our procedures and precautionary measures.

Final Disposition: Verdict - Guilty as charged; No appeal; defendant alleged to have committed suicide, body found in trunk of car.

Citation: 468 So.2d 1142, (La. May,1985); 475 So.2d 314,(La. Sept.,1985)

Jury Trial, November 2, 3, 4, 5, 6th, 1981.

Chief Counsel: Assistant District Attorney G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

Capsule summary of case: Defendant charged with: Second Degree Murder and Aggravated Battery. The defendant in this case was a New Orleans policeman. Major question concerning use of certain statements and hypnotic procedures used on the victim/wife by the police. I handled this matter from the initial motion to reduce the bond. This was critical because at this stage we were able to positively connect the defendant with the weapon. Trial preparation was very time consuming because out of state trips were required to secure the presence of a witness. An appearance before a District Court Judge in Annapolis was required to secure the immediate apprehension and transportation of the witness to Louisiana, along with returning this witness to Annapolis.
Final Disposition: Jury Verdict - Guilty as charged; Affirmed.

 Criminal # 81-4045, 24th Judicial District Court
 Division "J", Judge Jacob Karno
 Citation: 461 So.2d 1073 (La. App. 5th Cir 1984)

Jury Trial, August 12, 13, 14, 15th, 1982.

Sole Counsel: Assistant District Attorney G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

Capsule summary of case: Defendant charged with: Aggravated rape case involved a vicious attack on a young woman. Defense put the victim's credibility at issue because she voluntarily left with the attacker and she was employed as a bartender. Throughout the trial the defendant remained belligerent, this compelled the trial judge to issue warnings. Use of restraints were later necessitated in order to maintain appropriate trial decorum.

Final Disposition: Jury verdict - Guilty as charged; 5th Cir. Ct of Appeals - Affirmed.

 Citation: 318 So.2d 27 (LA 1975)

Jury Trial, April 10, 11th, 1972.

Chief Counsel: Assistant District Attorney G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

Capsule summary of case: Defendant charged with: Murder. This was the first capital case I tried. The trial involved complex issues of law and fact. Multiple motions to suppress were argued. A photographic line up was suppressed, but the victim's in-court identification was allowed because a sufficient predicate was established to show an independent basis for the identification. Final Disposition: Jury verdict - Guilty of Murder, Death Sentence; Supreme Court - Affirmed conviction, death sentence annulled and set aside per: Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238; remanded, life imprisonment.

8. State v. Christopher J. Rebstock

Criminal # 82-67, 24th Judicial District Court
Division "A", Judge Roy A. Price
Citation: 413 So.2d 510, (April, 1982); 418 So.2d 1306, (La. Sept 1982)

Motion to Suppress Confession: April 13, 1982.

Chief Counsel: Assistant District Attorney G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

Capsule summary of case: Defendant charged with: 2nd Degree Murder. The case involved a sixteen year old. Issues of law involving the statements he made to police. There were two statements involved. The Supreme Court held that the boy's arrest was not illegal and the statement obtained as result of the arrest was admissible since the boy and his father had a short private conversation in police station, free from presence of police. A second recorded confession was suppressed because the court found the defendant did not knowingly and intelligently waive his constitutional rights.

Final disposition of case: Defendant pled guilty to manslaughter and received 21 years.

Instructor: Criminal Law/Criminal Procedure

For three years, I taught at St. Mary Dominican College. The class was a required course in the Criminal Justice program.

Co-instructor: Civil Procedure.

In conjunction with another attorney, I volunteered my time to teach third-year law students at Loyola School of Law. The emphasis was not only on the written and codified law, but also on the practical application of the law during trial proceedings. I taught the course during the Spring term in 1990 and 1991.

Speaker - Continuing Legal Education. I appeared as a speaker for numerous CLE programs, such as: the Jefferson Bar Association, Louisiana Judicial College and Louisiana State Bar Association Summer School for Lawyers

II. FINANCIAL DATA AND CONFLICT OF INTEREST (PUBLIC)

1. List sources, amounts and dates of all anticipated receipts from deferred income arrangements, stock, options, uncompleted contracts and other future benefits which you expect to derive from previous business relationships, professional services firm memberships, former employers, clients, or customers. Please describe the arrangements you have made to be compensated in the future for any financial or business interest.

Louisiana State Employee Retirement System. If I am appointed prior to the end of my term, i.e., December 31, 1996, the benefits can only be drawn when I attain age 60.

2. Explain how you will resolve any potential conflict of interest, including the procedures you will follow in determining these areas of concern. Identify the categories of litigation and financial arrangements that are likely to present potential conflicts-of-interest during your initial service in the position to which you have been nominated.

I will follow the mandates of the Federal Rules of Civil & Criminal Procedure. I will also follow the guidelines of the Code of Judicial Conduct. I will also consider the model codes and recommendation of the ABA which are pertinent.

The only possible areas of conflict of interest would be reviewing cases from Louisiana State Court, 24th Judicial District Court, Division A, during the time I sat or a challenge to the Louisiana State Employee Retirement System. As to the retirement, a conflict could arise only if I remained on the Jefferson bench twelve (12) years, until 1996. If I took the Federal bench prior to this point, I would not be eligible for retirement proceeds until age sixty (60).

Do you have any plans, commitments, or agreements to pursue outside employment, with or without compensation, during your service with the court? If so, explain.

No.

4. List sources and amounts of all income received during the calendar year preceding your nomination and for the current calendar year, including all salaries, fees, dividends, interest, gifts, rents, royalties, patents, honoraria, and other items exceeding $500 or more (If you prefer to do so, copies of the financial disclosure report, required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, may be substituted here.)

See Attachment "C"

5. Please complete the attached financial net worth statement in detail (Add schedules as called for).

See Attachment "D"

6. Have you ever held a position or played a role in a political campaign? If so, please identify the particulars of the campaign, including the candidate, dates of the campaign, your title and responsibilities.

Only the campaign wherein I was elected District Court Judge.

III. GENERAL (PUBLIC)

1. An ethical consideration under Cannon 2 of the American Bar Association's Code of Professional Responsibility calls for "every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, to find some time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." Describe what you have done to fulfill these responsibilities, listing specific instances and the amount of time devoted to each.

Speaker - Continuing Legal Education. I appear as a speaker for numerous

CLE programs, such as: the Jefferson Bar Association, Louisiana Judicial College and Louisiana State Bar Association Summer School for Lawyers

Since I took the bench, I invited field trips to Division "A", 24th J.D.C. for school children about once a month. The students would observe the docket and I then speak with them on the working of the court system. Afterwards, I entertain questions to explain either the particular case or the function of the courts.

I have also visited many schools in Orleans and Jefferson Parish to speak on the court systems, the functions and the duties of a judge.

Judging Moot Court Competitions on numerous occasions at Tulane School of Law and Loyola Law School.

I recently participated in the National Institute of Trial Advocacy program at Louisiana State University School of Law

At Loyola School of Law, I volunteered as co-instructor for Civil Procedure for two terms.

To serve the community, since 1978, I continue to be active with the Recreation Department for the Parish of Jefferson in coaching and refereeing.

2. The American Bar Association's Commentary to its Code of Judicial Conduct states that it is inappropriate for a judge to hold membership in any organization that invidiously discriminates on the basis of race, sex, or religion. Do you currently belong, or have you belonged, to any organization which discriminates -- through either formal membership requirements or the practical implementation of membership policies? If so, list, with dates of membership. What you have done to try to change these policies?

No.

3. Is there a selection commission in your jurisdiction to recommend candidates for nomination to the federal courts? If so, did it recommend your nomination?

No.

Please describe your experience in the entire judicial selection process, from beginning to end (including the circumstances which led to your nomination and interviews in which you participated).

Initially, I met with Senator John Breaux to discuss the possibility of being recommended for the federal bench. Both Senators Breaux and Johnston sent my name to the White House and I was recommended.

After completing multiple questionnaires, I was interviewed in Washington by members of the Justice Department, Office of Policy Development.

The FBI and the ABA have also conducted extensive reviews of my credentials and qualifications, along with conducting interviews.

On August 25, 1994, I was officially nominated by the President for the United States District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana.

4. Has anyone involved in the process of selecting you as a judicial nominee discussed with you any specific case, legal issue or question in a manner that could reasonably be interpreted as asking how you would rule on such case, issue, or question? If so, please explain fully.

No.

5. Please discuss your views on the following criticism involving "judicial activism."

The role of the Federal judiciary within the Federal government, and within society generally, has become the subject of increasing controversy in recent years. It has become the target of both popular and academic criticism that alleges that the judicial branch has usurped many of the prerogatives of other branches and levels of government.

Some of the characteristics of this "judicial activism" have been said to include:

- a. A tendency by the judiciary toward problem-solution rather than grievance-resolution;
- b. A tendency by the judiciary to employ the individual plaintiff as a vehicle for the imposition of far-reaching orders extending to broad classes of individuals;
- c. A tendency by the judiciary to impose broad, affirmative duties upon governments and society;
- d. A tendency by the judiciary toward loosening jurisdictional requirements such as standing and ripeness; and
- e. A tendency by the judiciary to impose itself upon other institutions in the manner of an administrator with continuing oversight responsibilities.

Our country, with its three separate and distinct branches of government, has withstood the test of time and the criticism of some. Even though the branches are separate, there will always be occasions when there is interaction among them while still preserving the separation of powers.

We, in the judiciary, have a duty to listen to the facts of a case and render a decision according to law pertinent to those issues. The presentation of the facts are for the litigants and we should always guard against participating in that presentation. A trier of fact should in no way devise, invent or concoct facts; it should rule on the case before it. Unless a question is certified before the court by the Louisiana Supreme Court or any other tribunal properly, it may not render an advisory opinion. Novel questions of law occasionally arise, and they must be dealt with according to the facts before the court. The judiciary must decide cases according to the facts and law as an impartial arbitrator.

In performing our duties there are occasions when our judgments may be interpreted as judicial activism. When we declare a law unconstitutional and unenforceable that may be interpreted by some as interfering with the legislative function. However, such action is part of our duty and responsibility and is far different from actually legislating.

When we deal with individual grievances, we must be ever mindful to follow judicial precedent and constitutional interpretation. The personal feelings of a judge should never replace sound, established judicial precedent and constitutional interpretation. In instructing juries, I always remind them that "your decision must not be based on bias, prejudice, sympathy or public opinion." We in the judiciary must be ever mindful of this guideline when we are the trier of the facts.

Once a matter is before a court on a trial on the merits, the judiciary's duty is to render our decision solely based on the law and evidence. Prior to trial, a judge may be called upon to counsel or intervene as an unbiased peacemaker, encouraging the parties to be open minded and understanding.

If we attempt to go beyond our role, we may in fact infringe on areas reserved to the other branches of government. If we attempt to do less, we will not be adhering to our oaths and weakening the judicial branch of government. It is always a careful balance.

PORTEOUS was advised that he was being interviewed as a result of a request for the FBI to conduct a background investigation concerning his candidacy for U.S. District Judge, Eastern District of Louisiana. PORTEOUS was advised that the scope of the questions asked during the interview was not necessarily limited to the timeframe on the SF-86 and that his response to each question should cover his entire adult life, since age 18. It was also pointed out the PORTEOUS that Question 23 on the SF-86, pertaining to "Police Record," covers activities since his 16th birthday.

PORTEOUS currently resides at 4801 Neyrey Drive, Metairie, Louisiana, which is the only property he owns at this time. PORTEOUS attended LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY AT NEW ORLEANS (LSU-NO), from September, 1964, to May, 1968, while he resided with his family at 2218 Madrid Street, New Orleans, Louisiana. LSU-NO is known as the UNIVERSITY OF NEW ORLEANS (UNO) today. PORTEOUS was employed by BAKER'S SHOE STORES as listed in his application the summer after his graduation from high school and during his attendance at LSU-NO.

After graduation from LSU-NO in May, 1968, PORTEOUS continued to work for BAKER'S SHOE STORES during the summer. PORTEOUS said that after graduation from law school in May, 1971, he was preparing for the Bar examination which he took in late June or early July, 1971. PORTEOUS said that the only back payment of taxes he has had to make was either in 1974, 1975, or 1976 when he was with the firm EDWARDS, PORTEOUS & LEE. He advised that upon an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) audit, the firm was advised that advances the firm paid for filing fees could not be considered expenses, as the firm had indicated on their tax returns. The firm paid the taxes on the difference of taxable income excluding the filing fees as expenses.

PORTEOUS stated that other than the civil suits listed on the supplement to his SF-86, he has not been involved in any civil suits as a plaintiff or defendant, to include divorces. PORTEOUS said that he has had no involvement in criminal matters as a suspect or subject or any criminal charge, arrest, or conviction.

PORTEOUS stated that he has had no professional complaints or any non-judicial disciplinary action against him, to include Bar Association grievances, Better Business Bureau complaints, student or military disciplinary proceedings, Equal Employment Opportunity complaints, and Office of Professional Responsibility inquiries. PORTEOUS said that in his official capacity, he, along with all judges in the 24th Judicial District Court, was sued by SHURMAINE DE GRANGE and IDA WILLIAMS for alleged discrimination. Associations, American Judicature Society, Louisiana District Attorney's Association, 4th and 5th Circuit Judges Association, Chateau Golf and Country Club, and St. Clement of Rome Men's Club. PORTEOUS has held the office of President of the 4th and 5th Circuit Judges Association within the last five years but does not currently hold that position. PORTEOUS advised that St. Clement is the church which he attends. He said that within the church there is a women's and men's club which have different functions in the church.

PORTEOUS advised that sometime between 1979 and 1982, he was a member of the Mardi Gras krewe of CAESAR for two years. The Mardi Gras krewe is an organization which sponsors a parade and other festivities during Mardi Gras. He advised that this was an all-male krewe at the time, but he is not sure what its membership consists of currently. PORTEOUS did not hold an office in this organization.

PORTEOUS advised that he has not written any articles for publication or made any major speeches. He said that he gives a presentation annually to the Jefferson Bar Association on topics such as conflicts of interest and medical malpractice. He has given presentations to the Louisiana Bar Association and the Louisiana Judicial College as well. These presentations consist of an outline, a short synopsis, and case examples for the continuing legal education of these organizations' members.

PORTEOUS said that he has been taking out student loans for his son through a "Parent-Plus" Program at FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE (FNBC), New Orleans, each semester. Repayment of these loans had been deferred until his son's graduation until recently. PORTEOUS advised that on March 7, 1994, he received his first notice that payment on the loan was due. By this time, it was overdue. In April, 1994, he received forms to fill out for deferment of payment until his son's graduation. He filled the forms out, and the school signed them on April 14, 1994. On May 3, 1994, PORTEOUS received a letter of ineligibility for deferment since the parent is paying back the loan. On May 25, 1994, he sent the lending institution a request for forbearance on the debt because of the confusion over eligibility for deferment. PORTEOUS then paid $96.83 to FNBC which covered accrued interest and, on June 28, 1994, commenced making payments as scheduled. PORTEOUS said this loan is now current.

(Wednesday, October 16, 1996)

THE COURT: Let's take up this next matter, which is 93-1794 and all consolidated cases also. This is the motion filed with respect to all of the particular cases to recuse. Let me dictate one thing into the record before everybody commences so that everybody is not necessarily on edge as they might think. Bernard v. Coyne, which is 31 F.3d 842 involved the request to disqualify a circuit court judge of the 9th circuit. In that decision that Judge wrote, and I cite and "this" (reading) with full acquiescence counsel for a party who believes Judge's impartiality is reasonably subject to question has not only a professional duty to his client to raise the matter but an independent responsibility as an officer of the court. Judges are not omniscient, and despite safeguards overlook a conflict of interest. A lawyer who reasonably believes that the Judge before whom he is appearing should not sit must raise the issue so that it may be confronted and put to rest. Any other course would risk undermining public confidence in our judicial system." I cite that so that everyone understands that I recognize my duty and obligations, and I am fully prepared to listen. All right, go ahead.

MR. MOLE: I appreciate your remarks. It is not a very

1 easy thing to confront the federal judge with the suspicion
2 that he probably doesn't want to hear. I am sure that in
3 the course of trying -- I don't know you very well, Judge,
4 and I have gotten to learn about you only through this
5 case --

6 THE COURT: You told me the last time we graduated from
7 Cor Jesu.

8 MR. MOLE: That's about all we have in common. What I
9 learned about you from trying to investigate what I should
10 do about what I have raised that you probably did read
11 briefs and gave it some intelligent thought. So I don't
12 want to go back through everything I have said.

13 What I would like to emphasize is mainly by what has 14 been established in response to my motion to recuse. I have 15 gotten to know Mr. Levenson and Mr. Amato.

16 THE COURT: Let me make also one other statement for
17 the record if anyone wants to decide whether I am a friend
18 with Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson, I will put that to rest for 19 the answer is affirmative, yes. Mr. Amato and I practiced
20 the law together probably 20-plus years ago. Is that 21 sufficient?

22 MR. MOLE: Yes.

23 THE COURT: 20-plus is sufficient. So if that is an
24 issue at all, it is a non-issue.

25 MR. MOLE: What prompted us to file the motion is the

1 timing of what happened. This case is 10 years old, the
2 oldest part is 10 years old. The lawyers who are in the
3 case now are these previous to September 12th when you
4 granted leave to add Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson, who has
5 been in for years. The case was set for trial, and you had
6 an emphasis about keeping the trial date. They were added
7 within two months of the trial date. And the case with that
8 length I don't know Mr. Levenson or Mr. Amato very well. I
9 know they are fun to practice against; they have a sense of
10 humor, and they have given me by doing this quite literally
11 none to my knowledge other than they are your friends. They 12 have been given 11 percent contingency fee in a case that
13 the Liljebergs, everybody -- I disagreed -- value at $140
14 million, at least part of this we have a percentage of. And
15 I think that bears even more weight when you consider Mr.
16 Liljeberg has taken the position that he doesn't give
17 contingency fees. Jim Cobb has sued him in Bankruptcy Court
18 for a fee claiming he had continued standing of plaintiff
19 Liljeberg as a matter of the plaintiff doesn't give those 20 away. This is like how we do it at the last minute. Mr.
21 Levenson in his response to my reply brief says he has been 22 in the case for a lot longer than the time when he showed 23 up. It raises additional questions. Mr. Levenson is also,
24 indeed, your friend: Has he discussed the case with us
25 before at that time he appeared when he was investigating

1 it? Did he wait to see when you would hold on to the case
2 rather than pass it on to Judge Lemmon? Those are the sort
3 of questions that are going to be in the case no matter what
4 happens forever if you be the Judge.

5 Mr. Levenson has accused me and my client of engaging
6 innuendo. I looked up the word. Innuendo is a generally
7 derogatory and witty way of making accusations indirectly.
8 I don't think I have done that. I have been very direct.
9 Mr. Levenson, and I think it is a good tactic, has tried to 10 dare me to say what I think is the nature of the 11 relationship between you and him and you and Mr. Amato, that 12 are the two gentlemen behind me. And if they have something
13 to contradict the statement that I made, which is that you
14 all are indeed very, very close friends, I would have 15 assumed that he would have made it. I am happy to tell the 16 Judge what the public perception is of the relationship.

17 THE COURT: Well, the case you cite by the way involved
18 the judge's wife. So I assume they were fairly close
19 friends, too.

20 MR. MOLE: Probably. You don't have to stipulate.

21 THE COURT: Well, it could be a question sometimes.

22 MR. MOLE: I understand, Your Honor. I don't know what
23 the Court wants to do with that issue, whether or not the 24 Court wants to make a statement or accept the statement.

25 THE COURT: No, I have made the statement. Yes, Mr.

1 Amato and Mr. Levenson are friends of mine. Have I ever
2 been to either one of them's house? The answer is a
3 definitive no. Have I gone along to lunch with them? The
4 answer is a definitive answer yes. Have I been going to 5 lunch with all of the members of the bar? The answer is
6 yes.

7 MR. MOLE: I understand.

8 THE COURT: Has, in fact, at the last status conference
9 I had I saw Mr. Lane here I think in reality aligned with 10 your side who spoke with me, and Mr. Lane and I have been to 11 lunch together. I mean there is not a hell of a lot of 12 lawyers in this city I haven't maintained a very open,
13 friendly relationship with. So if you want to explore in
14 detail, feel free to explore it. I don't have a problem
15 with exploring it. But I don't know what you want to make 16 with it.

17 MR. MOLE: Well, Your Honor --

18 THE COURT: And I also must say something for the 19 record I think other than connecting the dots that the last 20 status conference I had I virtually told everyone I was 21 continuing this case. So this rush to trial that you
22 suggest I am maintaining, I did all but connect the dots the 23 last time.

24 MR. MOLE: Well, I understand.

25 THE COURT: The lawyers have come to this case like a

1 storm cloud through Louisiana. Look at the list. I ran a
2 chaser sheet. Up until I think maybe Mr. Steeg and Mr.
3 O'Connor. Mr. O'Connor were attorneys and they are out for
4 whatever reason. They had a conflict situation. I have no
5 idea what it was. Then you all got in it. Welcome, jump
6 in. I mean I tried to make it clear at the last conference
7 I don't care how many people are on the side or "X" amount
8 of people are talking. Did I not say that?

9 MR. MOLE: It was pretty clear, Your Honor. Well, I
10 would emphasize, Your Honor, that the standard is what a
11 reasonable person would perceive if they knew all the facts.
12 I think the timing of the appearance of Mr. Amato and Mr.
13 Levenson creates the biggest concern along with the fact
14 that they did not practice law together. All they have in 15 common is that they are your close friends. The public
16 perception is that they do dine with you, travel with you,
17 that they have contributed to your campaigns.

18 THE COURT: Well, luckily I didn't have any campaigns.
19 So I'm interested to find out how you know that. I never 20 had any campaigns, counsel. I have never had an opponent.
21 One time I had an opponent --

22 MR. MOLE: I had a campaign return from the --

23 THE COURT: The first time I ran, 1984, I think is the 24 only time when they gave me money.

25 MR. MOLE: 1990 is what I have.

1 THE COURT: 1990 that was the Justice for All Program
2 where they gave to every judge probably, but I could be
3 wrong there.

4 MR. MOLE: I'm sorry if I'm wrong.

5 THE COURT: I don't know. You got the record. What
6 did it say? Let me see them. Don't hide them if there is
7 something in there that's deeply devious, tell me about it.

8 MR. MOLE: May I approach the bench?

9 THE COURT: Sure.

10 (Counsel Mole hands document to the Court.)

11 THE COURT: Yeah, I think if you look at this, you will
12 find that whatever those numbers total, and I'm not a
13 mathematician, but I think those numbers on these pages
14 total more than $6,794. I am fairly certain adding that up.
15 Did you?

16 MR. MOLE: I did not, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Well, let's go to the, pick a page at 18 random starting with the firm of Anderson Tranthene and 19 Mateern. There is over $200 on that page, one page out of I
20 don't know how many it is. I think you will find that that 21 was a function that was thrown by the entire judiciary of 22 Jefferson Parish for which I received I forget whatever my
23 portion was, but I reported it, which was $6,794 is what it
24 looks like what it says here. And that's what it was. So,
25 yes, I don't doubt that they contributed. I mean I don't

1 know. Maybe it is pertinent. Maybe microscopes and maybe
2 that's why we shouldn't have it. But, yeah, okay, it's
3 there.

4 MR. MOLE: Your Honor, I appreciate the Court's remarks
5 at the beginning. What I have done again is in an effort to
6 represent my client at the risk of offending the Court --

7 THE COURT: You haven't offended me. But don't
8 misstate, don't come up with a document that clearly shows
9 well in excess of $6700 with some innuendo that that means
10 that they gave that money to me. If you would have checked
11 your homework, you would have found that that was a Justice
12 for all Program for all judges in Jefferson Parish. But go
13 ahead. I don't dispute that I received funding from 14 lawyers.

15 MR. MOLE: Right, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: No question.

17 MR. MOLE: If the perception is that my client, and I
18 have it that Mr. Levenson and Mr. Amato are not any more
19 sinister than any other member of the bar, then we would be 20 happy to have them or you dispel that. I think you have
21 been honest with us. There is not much more I can say.

22 THE COURT: I understand. Let me tell you, no, it is a
23 uncomfortable position you find yourself in, counselor. You
24 know, I have been doing this for awhile. With all candor I
25 must admit this is the first time a motion for my recusal

1 has ever been filed. Did it get my attention? Yeah, I
2 guess it got my attention. But does that mean that any time
3 a person I perceive to be friends who I have dinner with or
4 whatever that I must disqualify myself? I don't think
5 that's what the rule suggests. I, likewise, don't think
6 that's what the Court had in mind. And even in your own
7 pleadings and even in the case, it is the Travelers case
8 from the Fifth Circuit published opinion which you gave, me
9 that courts even recognized in citing from Murphy in its 10 cite, and I think it is important to state (reading) "In 11 today's legal culture friendship among judges and lawyers
12 are common. They are more than common, they are desirable.
13 A judge need not cut himself off from the rest of the legal 14 community. Social as well as official communications among 15 judges and lawyers may improve the quality of the legal
16 decisions. Social interaction also makes some on the bench
17 quite isolated and as a rule more tolerable to judges. Well
18 qualified people would hesitate to become judges if they
19 knew that wearing the robe meant either discharging one's
20 friends or risking disqualification in a substantial number
21 of cases. Courts have held that a judge need not disqualify
22 himself just because a friend, even a close friend, appears
23 as a lawyer." And that is a Seventh Circuit case but was 24 cited in the Fifth Circuit decision.

25 Now that's a predicament all of us find ourselves in.

1 Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson have both appeared before me and
2 they have both won and both lost.

3 MR. MOLE: Your Honor, it is again it is not the fact
4 of the friendship, it is the timing. Anyone who you would
5 describe the situation to I think would generally be
6 concerned that the timing is odd that a case of this length
7 amply lawyered when other lawyers appear within the
8 contingency fee in the way they have and that's why we made
9 the motion.

10 THE COURT: I understand it, and it is a perception,
11 clearly it is perception. I agree with you, but again even 12 before this motion was even urged because I believe the 13 status I had before you filed the motion, in fact, I know it
14 was I made it plain that this November 4th date was probably 15 fixed in everybody's mind. I mean I don't know what else to 16 tell you. That was a near fix. We will see what we have 17 got, but I understand, counselor and appreciate your
18 position. And you have to urge these things, and I
19 understand that. I take no animus toward you on that. If
20 you did that, I don't need to repeat that.

21 MR. MOLE: Judge, what you said -- it is the first time
22 I have had to do this myself. I would think one of the 23 lawyers opposing me asked me how many times did you sit
24 around discussing this with your client or your partners,
25 and his answer was to a political extent easy to do. But we

1 convinced ourselves we had to do it.

2 THE COURT: All right.

3 MR. MOLE: Only after great deliberation.

4 THE COURT: All right.

5 MR. LEVENSON: Judge, I feel a little peculiar in this
6 situation as well. I don't recall in the twenty years I
7 have practiced law being in this situation. I think that
8 you must take into consideration the admission by Lifemark
9 in their pleading that they do not question your 10 impartiality. And if they had done any investigation in 11 connection with this matter, they could come up with no
12 other result but that. And that is the test in this type
13 of situation. It is the appearance to a well-informed,
14 thoughtful, objective observer as stated in Jordan. And
15 I think the key point there is well informed. Both well
16 informed about our friendship, well informed about our 17 reputation, well informed about the reputation and
18 experience of Mr. Amato as well as that of myself.

19 Mr. Mole stated that the timing is odd. Well, I
20 think it is correct that from the time that I was 21 originally contacted by the Liljeberg attorneys in
22 connection with this matter the Frilot firm has been
23 involved in this case a very short period of time longer
24 than I.

25 Mr. Mole brought up that when he first learned of that

1 yesterday he questioned why I waited so long to get into the
2 case. Well, when I saw file cabinet upon file cabinet upon
3 file cabinet of the paper, it wasn't candidly a very easy
4 thing to assess for myself nor for Mr. Amato to take and
5 became quite a bit of work to determine whether or not I
6 wanted to dedicate a substantial portion of my future effort
7 to this case which would deprive me of other income and
8 other work as well. Mr. Mole didn't know that because he
9 didn't ask me.

10 The next point Mr. Mole made was that there is nothing
11 in common between Mr. Amato and myself except your 12 friendship. That is incorrect. Another question Mr. Mole
13 should have perhaps inquired into.

14 In Mr. Mole's brief he somewhat criticized my 15 experience or perhaps the lack thereof in his mind in 16 matters of this sort. Mr. Amato and myself have acted as 17 primarily personal injury lawyers. That, of course, is not
18 true. Mr. Amato and myself have tried hundreds if not
19 thousands of cases and rules before juries, judges, state
20 and federal, bankruptcy and federal court and just about
21 every other court I can think of. In fact, at the risk of 22 blowing my own horn, I think that I am probably the only
23 lawyer in this room and maybe the only lawyer with all of 24 the firms combined who has been written up in the WALL
25 STREET JOURNAL in connection with litigation I had handled,

1 and it was not personal injury cases. My experience
2 involves personal injury admittedly in recent years due to
3 the change in the economy this year but also involved
4 commercial litigation, bankruptcy, real estate and title law
5 expertise which I think will become very important in this
6 litigation.

7 Mr. Mole has alluded that in his pleadings that Mr.
8 Amato and myself are your two closest friends. I find it
9 interesting that Mr. Amato and myself are your closest
10 friends that we were not contacted in connection with the 11 background check which must be performed in connection with 12 your appointment. Maybe other people don't think our
13 friendship is viewed the same as Mr. Mole.

14 Finally, Mr. Mole says that we have contributed money
15 to your campaign. Your Honor, as you know I didn't even 16 know you when you ran for office. I only met you in the 17 course of litigating cases in your court. To the best of my
18 knowledge I have never given a campaign contribution to you.
19 To the best of my knowledge you have never had a campaign to 20 which to contribute to. The Justice for All Ball was 21 something that was put together so that all of the judges of
22 the 24th Judicial District Court could have a single fund-
23 raiser, and I think the intent of that was to make it easier
24 on lawyers who contributed to judge's campaigns, and there
25 was some particular form as to how those proceeds were

1 divided up. I don't think they were divided up equally,
2 although how they were distributed I wasn't part of.

3 THE COURT: I don't remember the breakdown, but I do
4 know I was the smallest for what that's worth.

5 MR. LEVENSON: Judge, I think that the rule under
6 Section 455 in the cases make it clear that whether or not
7 we are your friend or even your close friend that is not
8 ground for recusation, and I think that the motion should
9 properly be denied.

10 THE COURT: Mr. Mole anything else you would like to 11 add again?

12 MR. MOLE: Yes, Your Honor. One of the difficult
13 decisions to make is how much of a record should I try to 14 make on this without a balance of the fact that I have to 15 practice law with these gentlemen and before you the rest of 16 my life but that I have a duty to my client. But I think
17 that the record that is made here today is enough, because I
18 don't think Mr. Levenson and Mr. Amato, they have said that
19 they dared me to say what I think are rumors. I don't want
20 to do that. They have not denied what I have said about the 21 relationship between you and them.

22 THE COURT: I have not denied it, and I don't think
23 they deny it.

24 MR. MOLE: Then the fact of the matter is Mr. Levenson
25 could very well deny it if he wanted to, and he has chosen

1 not to do that. That speaks more loudly than anything I
2 could say.

3 THE COURT: Well, you know the issue becomes one of, I
4 guess the confidence of the parties, not the attorneys.
5 Because when it is all said and done you all have been but
6 the spokesperson for the true people in interest and that's
7 the litigants. My concern is not with whether or not
8 lawyers are friends and for whatever value that contribution
9 is to a group as a whole. My concern is that the parties
10 are given a day in court which they can through you present
11 their case, and they can be adjudicated thoroughly without
12 bias, favor, prejudice, public opinion, sympathy, anything
13 else, just on law and facts. That's basically the charge we 14 give juries. We are no longer the juries, but if it was a
15 non-jury trial, we are the trier of fact. And there is a
16 ton of case law that says that I should charge myself
17 according to the same way I would charge a jury.

18 I have always taken the position that if there was ever
19 any question in my mind that this Court should recuse itself
20 that I would notify counsel and give them the opportunity if
21 they wanted to ask me to get off. That includes a case
22 wherein my cousin, Billy, Billy Porteous tries a case in 23 front of me in Gretna, and the plaintiff's lawyer is 24 absolutely delited. And I have got to go fully explain to 25 the jury that I never practiced with him and that they are

1 not to read anything into it. I don't fault you for your
2 filing. I think it is a situation where because of this
3 upward ongoing quick activity of this case because of dates
4 approaching that on its face it appears to be evil or bad or
5 improper. The reality is that none of the above are true.
6 The reality is that if anyone thinks they gain favor from me
7 because someone is in a case need only basically look at 8 what I have done in the past to know that that is a fiction.

9 The question is again in that Bernard case the court
10 said Section 450 requires not only that a Judge be 11 subjectively confident of his ability to be even handed but 12 there is a informed, rational objective observer would not 13 doubt his impartiality. Well, everything we do in the 14 judiciary is under a microscope anyhow. But if the rules
15 were such that every time a contributor and you take a case
16 with current contributions have been made, not 1990
17 contributions, have allowed the Judge to sit where 18 friendship, even "Close friendships are not to be 19 considered," I don't have any difficulty trying this case.

20 Now, after I rule can a party feel that they were
21 wronged? I can't stop that feeling. There is no tie:
22 somebody wins, somebody loses. Are they then upset?
23 Possibly. But that's not for me to concern myself with 24 because again whichever side wins by the evidence and the 25 law will win by the evidence and the law. And as I have

1 told plaintiff lawyers in the past, if 40 percent of zero is
2 zero, I assure you eleven percent of zero is still zero.
3 Now, does that ease your client's mind? I don't know. I
4 can't help you there. Does that make the informed observer
5 satisfied? I don't know. But in my mind I am satisfied
6 because if I had any question as to my ability, I would have
7 called and said, "Look, you're right." Do not think for one
8 moment that this Court went out and solicited this case.
9 This case this Court drew because some other members of the 10 bench couldn't hear it. The pool of judges was very small,
11 and I drew it.

12 Now, I ran the chaser sheet on this, and the reason I
13 talk about a flurry of activity up until the time I drew
14 this case, which was on January 16, 1996, document No. 190
15 or entry 190 in the case re-alloted Judge G.T. Porteous,
16 Jr., since that day when only 190 over a 3-year period
17 entries had been made we have to date, now we have had 102
18 entries made. It always happens that when we get close to 19 trial people get real, real interested. I can't explain it.
20 It just happens. I don't read anything devious or bad about
21 it. In fact, since the time you have come into the case or
22 your firm which was entry No. 210, we have had 82 of them.
23 So there has been a lot of activity, and I will attend to 24 it.

25 I received a multitude of pleadings to find out in

1 taking up other issues today, and I had issued an order and
2 I am hoping everyone got a copy of it. And if they didn't,
3 I don't know what happened. But entry no. 278 says, "Having
4 received the plaintiff's Motion to Recuse, the Court finds
5 it is in the best interest of justice that all motions are
6 deferred pending resolution of the motion to recuse.

7 MR. MOLE: I got that.

8 THE COURT: So I don't know what to tell you all other
9 than I do not believe this is a case where 28 USC 455 is
10 applicable. I don't think a well-informed individual can 11 question my impartiality in this case. Part of me has to 12 sit here and make sure that I don't over help or hurt either
13 one of you. That's always going to be a problem if you know
14 somebody on one side. I'm human, but I assure you I have 15 done this long enough that it won't bother me at all.
16 Saying no is the easiest thing. Saying zero is just a
17 number. Whether it is worth $140 million as you suggest, I
18 don't know. I don't know enough about this case. I don't 19 even know if you all know enough about this case given the 20 rash of pleadings that go back and forth. I'm not even sure
21 it is that complex, but it is sure being made fairly
22 complex.

23 Now, having said all of the above, I tell you now that 24 there is no way on this earth that I can get through any of 25 the motions pending and have a trial date by November 4th.

1 You all can forget it. It is actually impossible, which is
2 exactly what I virtually said when we had the status. I
3 won't be pushing anybody to trial on November 4th. I do
4 want, however, that these things remain in effect. The
5 requirements, those witness lists are cast in stone. I
6 think you all both submitted them. That much is a finished
7 deal. We are not going to be adding witnesses absent a
8 hearing for good cause shown why they should be added. Now,
9 I am not going to say that, I guess something could come up.
10 But that's cast in stone. Both Magistrate Wilkinson and I
11 have told you all that we are available for whatever
12 assistance you need because this is a non-jury trial. I
13 don't intend to enter into any discussions with you all on
14 that. I told you that I believe that Magistrate Wilkinson
15 did. My input is over at that point then. He acts as an 16 arbitrator or mediator if that ever gets to that. If it
17 doesn't, we try your case.

18 Because I know this is an important issue for you and
19 an important issue for your client, I am, in fact, going to 20 issue a judgment denying your motion to recuse myself. It
21 is significant, it is important. If you think it deserves
22 attention by the Fifth Circuit, that's why I am giving you
23 the judgment. If you go there, you do it with no offense to 24 me. And if they disagree with me, then they disagree with 25 me. I don't have a problem with that, counselor. I don't

1 want the issue to be left that you didn't have a mechanism,
2 and I don't think any of you want to do this thing twice.

3 So if you choose to go there, go there. Would I
4 conceive of any grant of a stay? Yes. Would I ask that
5 they expedite it? Probably, yes. And I would hope that you
6 would ask that they expedite it because that does not innure
7 to either side's benefit in this case.

8 MR. MOLE: One of the things that occurred to us and 9 that is that we have a remedy for a writ of mandamus, and we
10 haven't decided to do that.

11 THE COURT: That's why I thought a judgment was
12 necessary, and I don't know if an order would have given you
13 that ability. I am issuing it as a judgment denying your
14 motion to recuse for the reasons I stated on the record,
15 which you can get a transcript of it, of course. But, yes,
16 I told you now that's what I am going to do is give you the 17 guidance to do that.

18 MR. MOLE: One of my concerns is that we have a
19 November 4th trial date. I would have to try to get
20 discovery before then.

21 THE COURT: Does anyone here really believe I can
22 dispose of all of your motions before November 4th? I'm not 23 super human. I have continued all your motions because of 24 this motion to recuse myself.

25 MR. MOLE: We didn't file them to delay things. But I

1 understand Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: I didn't take it for that, but I'm saying I
3 did that on my own motion. Nobody asked me to stay it. I
4 could have done it, but I think whenever somebody asks for a
5 judge to recuse themselves, although technically I can
6 continue a proceeding and particularly in the ruling I had
7 made I think they are entitled for me not to do anything
8 more until we take up the issue. We took the issue up. If 9 you want to go across and do that, I am giving you the 10 procedural tool to do it.

11 MR. MOLE: I appreciate that.

12 THE COURT: Okay, anything else I can dispose of?

13 MR. LEVINSON: On October the 23rd it is scheduled to 14 appear for a pretrial conference.

15 THE COURT: Ignore it. Ignore it. There is no way on 16 earth I am going to do your pretrial. You have got too many 17 motions especially that you would have in the pretrial that
18 the motions are open.

19 MR. LEVENSON: I understand that, Judge. But would you
20 consider making it as a status conference so we can proceed?

21 THE COURT: I will do that as a status conference with
22 you all.

23 MR. MOLE: And no pretrial order?

24 THE COURT: No, obviously not. They will issue an
25 order that the pretrial order is hereby converted to a

1 status conference for whatever time I had it set. Just
2 whatever if that time is blocked out, we keep it at that
3 time.

4 MR. LEVENSON: That's fine, Judge.

5 THE COURT: Discovery I suggest that I believe should
6 be closed at this point in time.

7 MR. MOLE: I think we have everything scheduled that
8 needs to be scheduled, but we still have depositions going
9 on through the last one is October 28th.

10 THE COURT: That's fine. But that's by agreement?

11 MR. MOLE: That's by agreement.

12 THE COURT: That's by agreement. And then as I
13 understand it discovery will be closed?

14 MR. MOLE: Yes, Your Honor. We are cooperating pretty
15 much.

16 THE COURT: Depending on what you do, whether you will
17 be going to go forward and whether there is a stay over
18 there or request for expedited hearing, will depend on when
19 I give you a trial date. Maybe by the 23rd I would ask you
20 and if you are not in position to do it, counselor, I
21 understand. But on the 23rd it is a status conference. If 22 it is your client's desire to proceed with a mandamus or
23 appeal or whatever procedural remedy that is at his disposal
24 with the Fifth Circuit, if you will simply notify me to that
25 effect whether I would or would not set a date. I'm going

1 to set a date with that pending, I am not going to pass on
2 this case while the ruling of mine which may have some
3 impact on whether to recuse myself on this case. So if you
4 could let me know by that date.

5 MR. MOLE: We will do that, Judge.

6 THE COURT: Okay, all right. Thank you all.

7 MR. MOLE: Thank you, Judge.

NO T-6 further advised that he/she had heard that DIANE BOURG, in the Clerk's office, had told people that PORTEOUS was signing the bonds in blank. (NO T-6 advised that he/she believed this practice was illegal). NO T-6 also heard that BOURG was reprimanded for signing the bonds with just a judge's signature without verifying the property.

NO T-6 also advised that he/she had heard of another case where PORTEOUS was paid to reduce a bond. NO T-6 advised that he/she heard that PORTEOUS had been given $1,500 to reduce a bond in a matter which he/she believed involved a TRACY IRELAND who had been arrested for theft. According to the person with whom NO T-6 spoke, PORTEOUS reduced the bond from $500,000 cash to $50,000 property in return for the payment of $1,500. NO T-6 further commented that he/she has heard that Judge PORTEOUS works with certain individuals in writing bonds, specifically Bondsman ADAM BARNETT, Attorney RALPH BARNETT (Adam's father), PAUL BOUDOUSQUE, and other bonding people such as LOUIS and LORI MARCOTTE. Apparently LOUIS MARCOTTE has told people that they "kick back" money to Judge PORTEOUS for reducing the bonds. They also frequently give the judge and his staff cakes, sandwiches, booze, and soft drinks. NO T-6 has also heard from various court personnel that DIANE BOURG is still signing the bonds that the judges give to her, even though they are not properly filled out.

NO T-6 advised that he/she had also heard that PORTEOUS had transferred a case from another division to his (PORTEOUS') to help

When the case was reassigned to PORTEOUS, he (PORTEOUS) gave the individual probation. NO T-6 advised that he/she had not heard whether PORTEOUS had ever taken any money for cases and he/she advised that he/she did not think he had but that he did frequently sign bonds ahead of time for bondsmen.

LOUIS M. MARCOTTE III, Bail Bondsman, 221 Derbigny street, P-1 advised that he has known the candidate for approximately ten years, since the candidate has been a judge. He knows the candidate professionally and socially. MARCOTTE said he sometimes goes to lunch with the candidate and attorneys in the area, since MARCOTTE's office is across the street from the courthouse.

MARCOTTE believes the candidate has a good professional reputation and has heard the candidate is very bright and makes decisions quickly in the courtroom. MARCOTTE said he is really helpful and available for everybody. He stated that the candidate is open-minded and fair, but is not a "push-over." MARCOTTE advised that the candidate is tough on sentencing.

He said the candidate is a very hard worker and many times is the only judge still working in the evenings when MARCOTTE goes to the Gretna courthouse to negotiate bonds with the judges. MARCOTTE advised that family members of individuals in jail will come to MARCOTTE to get bonds. The family members are supposed to give the bondsman 10% of the set bond. If a bond is set for $10,000 the family has to come up with $1,000 to give to the bondsman. Many times the family cannot come up with the 10%, so MARCOTTE goes to the judges to try to lower the bond. He stated that 2% of money received by the bondsman goes to the judges. He advised that the judges are willing to lower set bonds, because if they don't the families will not be able to pay the bonds at all. This way at least some funds will go back into the court system.

MARCOTTE said the candidate is of good character and has a good reputation in general. He said the candidate is well-respected and associates with attorneys who are upstanding individuals. He does not know the candidate to associate with anyone of questionable character.

NO T-6, who requested that his/her identity be protected from anyone outside the FBI, was contacted regarding his/her knowledge of the candidate.

NO T-6 advised that he/she had heard from an individual whom he/she declined to identify but described as reliable that THOMAS PORTEOUS was paid $10,000 to reduce a bond. NO T-6 advised that this unnamed individual told him that when KEITH KLINE was arrested by the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office (JPSO) for a cocaine-related charge, KLINE's girlfriend, whose name NO T-6 could not remember, had approached LOUIS MARCOTTE at MARCOTTE's bail bond office on Derbigny Street in Gretna to arrange bail for KLINE.

NO T-6 heard that this unknown female wanted MARCOTTE to get KLINE out of jail immediately. MARCOTTE telephoned a lawyer named PHILLIP J. BOUDOUSQUE, Gretna, Louisiana. BOUDOUSQUE came over to the office and talked to MARCOTTE with the unknown female. NO T-6 advised that during part of the conversation, BOUDOUSQUE told KLINE's girlfriend and MARCOTTE that he would approach Judge THOMAS PORTEOUS and attempt to get a bond reduction for KLINE.

The female left and came back later that evening with a large amount of cash in a shoe box. NO T-6 heard that MARCOTTE told KLINE's girlfriend that it would take $12,500.00 to get KLINE out of jail. He (MARCOTTE) advised that $10,000.00 of this would go to Judge PORTEOUS for the bond reduction and the other $2,500.00 would go directly for the bond. He (MARCOTTE) stated that BOUDOUSQUE would write up the $10,000.00 as attorney's fees in order to protect the judge.

NOTE TO DOJ:

RE: GABRIEL THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.
BACKGROUND INVESTIGATION
PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENT WITH SENATE CONFIRMATION

The background investigation on Mr. Gabriel Thomas Porteous was opened on June 24, 1994. Mr. Porteous is currently a judge in Gretna, Louisiana. Mr. Porteous is being considered for a Presidential appointment as a United States District Court Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana, a position which requires Senate confirmation. Partial investigations were furnished to your office on July 29, 1994, and August 8, 1994.

An individual who requested total confidentiality, characterized as NO T-6, advised that he/she has heard that the candidate was once paid $10,000 to reduce a bond for an individual named Keith Kline. T-6 advised that an unknown female approached a bail bondsman named Lewis Marcotte to arrange for Kline's immediate release. Marcotte allegedly contacted a lawyer named Phillip Boudousque, who subsequently approached the candidate to get a bond reduction for Kline. T-6 advised that Boudousque delivered $10,000 to the candidate from the unknown female to secure the bond reduction. T-6 further advised that he/she heard that the candidate was paid $1500 to reduce the bond of an individual named Tracy Ireland. T-6 also stated that Lewis Marcotte has told people that the candidate receives "kick backs" for reducing bonds.

T-6 also advised that he/she heard that an individual named Jolene Aoy had smoked marijuana with the candidate and had also been at a party on a yacht allegedly owned by the candidate where cocaine and marijuana was used.

Several individuals were interviewed to include Boudousque, Marcotte, and Aoy. All denied the allegations put forth by T-6 and favorably recommended him.

T-2 was recontacted and could provide no examples of how the candidate lives beyond his means.

The candidate was reinterviewed and denied all the allegations put forth by T-6.

The background investigation is complete.

Counsel for G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.
United States District Court Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana

Dated: July 21, 2010

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and respectfully requests that the Senate dismiss the Articles of Impeachment (I, II, III, and IV) lodged against him by the House of Representatives on the ground that each Article contains multiple and disparate allegations and charges, rendering each individual Article constitutionally deficient. The manner in which these Articles of Impeachment were drafted permits two-thirds of the Senate to convict on an Article of Impeachment even if two-thirds of the voting Senators do not agree on any one allegation contained therein.¹ Alternatively, Judge Porteous requests that the Senate, prior to its final vote on each Article, separately vote on the constituent allegations made within each Article for a determination of whether the alleged acts have been proven and whether each allegation alone amounts to an impeachable offense. Members would then vote on the final Article as a whole. In support of his motion, Judge Porteous states as follows:

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY

The Articles of Impeachment are constitutionally invalid because they impermissibly aggregate multiple claims in single Articles. This aggregation violates two separate constitutional provisions. First, it effectively overrides the requirement that “no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.” U.S. CONST. art. I, §

¹ As an example of the practical effect of aggregate claims, consider an Article that alleges four different acts (such as Article I). Even if all one hundred Senators vote on this Article – and assuming for a moment that any of the allegations are impeachable offenses – a conviction would be sustained if sixty-seven Senators voted to convict. But with four separate allegations, it is entirely possible that Judge Porteous could be convicted with as few as seventeen Senators agreeing that he committed any particular impeachable act. It is difficult to imagine a plainer violation of the super-majority requirement than a conviction resting on seventeen votes out of one hundred Senators.

3. Second, it creates a circumstance in which Judge Porteous could be convicted for misconduct that does not rise to the level of “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4. Moreover, if the Senate convicts on these Articles, the aggregation deprives Judge Porteous, the public, and the historical record of a clear finding as to the specific basis for the removal from federal office.

In prior impeachments, the House of Representatives has drafted and submitted to the Senate several Articles that were based on individualized, specific allegations of misconduct or criminal activity, with each individual allegation serving as the basis for just one Article of Impeachment. Together with these individualized Articles, the House frequently submitted one “omnibus” Article summarizing the other specific, individualized Articles. Votes on the individualized Articles thus provide a clear record of both whether the Senators found that the act occurred and whether those acts constitute impeachable offenses. Votes on the “omnibus” Articles, however, fail to provide such a clear record. Moreover, these “omnibus” Articles also work as a clever mechanism for the House to aggregate a small number of votes on the individualized Articles and achieve a super-majority on the one “omnibus” motion. Indeed, these Articles often group specific acts contained in individual Articles to guarantee conviction when there is insufficient support for any individual Article. This practice has received much criticism, most notably in the controversial Ritter impeachment trial where Judge Ritter was acquitted on each individualized Article and convicted (by a one-vote margin) on the “omnibus” Article. See Jonathan Turley, The Executive Function Theory, The Hamilton Affair, and Other Constitutional Mythologies, 77 N.C. L. REV. 1791, 1834 (1999). In that case, both defense counsel and individual Senators objected to such tactics. See, e.g., Proceedings in the Trial of Impeachment of Robert W. Archbald, vols. 16, 17, 18, 62nd Cong. 3d sess., 1912-13

(Washington, D.C.: Government Printing Office, 1913) at 17:1642 (statement of Sen. George Sutherland (R-UT) noting in the Archbald case “It occurred to me,” when faced with an omnibus Article, “that I cannot consistently vote upon this article one way or the other”).

In Judge Porteous’s case, though, the House now employs this controversial method in each of the four Articles by aggregating multiple claims of alleged misconduct. For example, in Article II, the House piles on top of each other the following list of alleged impeachable acts:

- Judge Porteous engaged in a longstanding pattern of corrupt conduct;
- Judge Porteous “engaged in a corrupt relationship” with the Marcottes;
- Judge Porteous “solicited and accepted numerous things of value;”
- Judge Porteous engaged in “official actions that benefitted the Marcottes;”
- Judge Porteous “used the power and prestige of his office to assist the Marcottes in forming relationships with State judicial officers and individuals important to the Marcottes’ business;” and
- Judge Porteous “well knew and understood” that “Louis Marcotte also made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench.” 111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010).

The Senate should put an end to this tactic by dismissing these Articles. If the Senate is not willing to dismiss the Articles on a threshold challenge due to the aggregation of impeachable claims, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate require preliminary voting on each specific claim of misconduct within each Article to preserve a full and fair record of these hearings and to ensure constitutional validity of the result. The Senate often votes in this manner on legislation with multiple component acts or independent sections. Normally, the Senate would not tolerate forced up-or-down votes on a complex bill without preliminary votes on amendments – effectively individual votes on the components of the bill – and Judge Porteous urges the Senate to be equally as vigilant when dealing with an impeachment where the constitutionally-imposed threshold requires a super-majority. In this way, the Senate would make clear both which acts have been found to have occurred and which acts constitute impeachable offenses. Such a process would facilitate clear, constitutionally valid vote-counts on each allegation within each Article of Impeachment, and would encourage proper pleading in Articles of Impeachment from the House.

The importance of a clear record is especially apparent in this impeachment trial. Here, unlike many past impeachment cases (including the last two trials for Judges Hastings and Nixon), there was no indictment or trial in court creating a detailed record for review. In the cases of the impeachments of Judges Hastings and Nixon, some of the facts alleged in the Articles of Impeachment had already been thoroughly litigated and could be grouped into a single Article of Impeachment. This case is different. Here, the Senate evidentiary hearing will be the first full testimony and argument on these allegations, and the prejudice caused by unconstitutionally aggregated allegations is at its zenith.

ARGUMENT

I. The Articles of Impeachment Aggregate Multiple Claims Within Each Article.

Each Article of Impeachment that has been levied against Judge Porteous contains numerous allegations that are distinct and separate charges, any one of which may be an appropriate ground for removal if two-thirds of the Senate agree. A breakdown of the allegations within each Article can be properly categorized as follows:

A. Article I

Article I alleges that Judge Porteous:

1. Improperly denied a recusal motion in the Lifemark case;
2. When deciding the recusal motion, failed to disclose his relationship with his long-time friends and former law partners Jacob Amato and Robert Creely;
3. Made intentionally misleading statements at the recusal hearing; and

4. Improperly solicited and accepted things of value from Amato and Creely while the Lifemark case was under advisement.² See 111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010).

B. Article II

Article II aggregates at least four separate allegations of alleged misconduct. The Article alleges that Judge Porteous:

1. Engaged in a longstanding pattern of corrupt conduct;
2. Engaged in a corrupt relationship with the Marcottes;
3. Solicited and accepted numerous things of value;
4. Took official actions that benefitted the Marcottes;
5. Used the power and prestige of his office to assist the Marcottes in forming relationships with State judicial officers and individuals important to the Marcottes' business; and
6. Well knew and understood that Louis Marcotte also made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench. See id.

C. Article III

Article III alleges that Judge Porteous engaged in misconduct in connection with his Chapter 13 bankruptcy, accusing him of five specific acts:

1. Using a false name and a post office box address to conceal his identity as the debtor in the case;
2. Concealing assets;
3. Concealing preferential payments to certain creditors;
4. Concealing gambling losses and other gambling debts; and
5. Incurring new debts while the case was pending, in violation of the bankruptcy court's order. See id.

² As discussed in the Motion to Dismiss Article I, being filed concurrently herewith, the construction of Article I mandates that the alleged pre-federal conduct not be the basis for impeachment, but only serves as context for an analysis of Judge Porteous's decision to deny the Motion to Recuse himself in the Lifemark matter.

D. Article IV

Article IV alleges that Judge Porteous made seven separate false statements in three separate forums as follows:

1. On his Supplemental SF-86, he falsely stated that:
 - a. there was nothing in his personal life that could be used to coerce or blackmail him; and
 - b. there was nothing in his life that would cause an embarrassment to Judge Porteous or the President;
2. During his background check, on two separate occasions, he falsely stated that:
 - a. he was not concealing any conduct that could be used to influence or coerce him; and
 - b. he was not concealing any conduct that would impact negatively on his character, reputation, judgment, or discretion.
3. On the Senate Judiciary Committee's 'Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees,' he falsely stated that he was unaware of any unfavorable information that could affect his nomination. See 111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010).

In addition, the Article claims that Judge Porteous's failure to disclose these facts "deprived the United States Senate and the public of information that would have had a material impact on his confirmation." Id. Article IV also alleges that "Louis Marcotte also made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench." Id.

II. Aggregation of Multiple Offenses Circumvents the Constitutional Requirement that Two-Thirds of the Senate Find that the Official Committed Treason, Bribery, or Other High Crimes or Misdemeanors.

A. Aggregation of Multiple Offenses Within a Single Article Overrides the Constitutional Requirement that a Super-Majority Vote for Impeachment.

Article I, Section 3, Clause 6 of the Constitution states that "no Person shall be convicted [in an impeachment trial] without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present." U.S. CONST. art. I, § 3. By necessity, the Constitution not only requires that two-thirds of the Senate agree that each act alleged in an Article of Impeachment occurred but also that each act constitutes an impeachable offense. Permitting a multitude of alleged impeachable misconduct to be included within a single Article, however, unconstitutionally circumvents this requirement. Impeachment should not be reduced to a “Dim Sum” menu where different Senators can pick from a long list of acts in a single Article and then aggregate their votes to satisfy the two-thirds requirement of Article I of the Constitution. Such aggregation could allow conviction on any or all of the four Articles with less than the constitutionally mandated two-thirds majority on any single allegation.

B. Multiple Allegations Within a Single Article Improperly Combine Unimpeachable Acts to Reach the High Constitutional Threshold for Impeachment.

Permitting an Article to contain a multiplicity of allegations could also improperly allow members to find that an aggregate of the alleged conduct satisfies the impeachment standard, even if no one of the individual allegations would be found to meet that constitutional standard. This could result in elevating acts which are arguably improper but do not individually constitute “high Crimes and Misdemeanors” into impeachable acts simply by sheer repetition and piling on. The Framers clearly wanted to confine impeachment to those acts that a super majority of the Senate found to rise to the level of the select impeachable offenses, namely “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4. There is a great danger that the compilation of alleged acts in each Article of Impeachment, if considered improperly as a whole, will result in concluding that Judge Porteous should be convicted merely because he may be considered to be a “bad person,” rather than for any one, specific impeachable act.

That is clearly the House’s intent by alleging “pattern[s] of conduct,” as the basis for impeachment in Articles I, II, and III. 111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010). This is nothing more than a constitutional “cheat” by the House to encourage Senators to rule on their general impressions rather than convicting on the basis of finding, with a two-thirds vote, that specific acts occurred and are proper grounds for removal.

Clearly, many of the acts alleged in the Articles of Impeachment are demonstrably below the standard of a high crime or misdemeanor. For example, in Article IV the House seeks removal for the alleged failure to disclose a statement allegedly made to him by Louis Marcotte after Judge Porteous completed the forms and background interview cited in the Article. (See 111 Cong. Rec. S1645 (Mar. 17, 2010).) Article IV also asserts that Judge Porteous should be removed from office based on his subjective view of what would or would not be embarrassing to a president. Similarly, in Article III, the House seeks removal for an elaborated series of commonplace mistakes Judge Porteous and his wife made in their bankruptcy filing, similar to the mistakes made routinely in bankruptcy. (See accompanying Motion to Dismiss Article III.) By aggregating such alleged acts within one Article, the House apparently hopes to avoid an actual vote on whether each such individual act occurred and, if so, whether each one is a “high crime” or “misdemeanor.” This artful drafting by the House is an impermissible end run around the constitutional requirement that defines impeachable offenses as “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4.

C. The Aggregation in These Articles of Impeachment Deviates from the House of Representatives’ Recent Practice of Aggregating Multiple Allegations Within a Single Article of Impeachment Only Where those Multiple Allegations are Undisputed.

In addition to passing omnibus Articles, the House of Representatives has previously passed Articles of Impeachment that aggregated multiple allegations in the same manner as the Articles here. However, the extent of the aggregation in these Articles is unprecedented. Unlike other recent impeachments, there is not even one Article exclusively based on just one specific alleged act. Furthermore, in the recent impeachments of federal judges, the aggregated allegations were generally for conduct of which the defendant had already been found criminally liable. The 2009 impeachment of Judge Samuel Kent, who pled guilty to obstruction of justice before he was impeached, is a prime example of this practice.

In the Kent impeachment, the House set forth four Articles of Impeachment. Article I alleges specific inappropriate sexual behavior as related to a specific employee. It does not aggregate claims. Article II alleges separate specific inappropriate sexual behavior as related to another specific employee. It does not aggregate claims. Notably, the House did not attempt to allege a separate “pattern of activity” by combining Articles I and II.

Article IV alleges that Judge Kent made specific “false and misleading statements about the nature and extent of his non-consensual sexual contact with two employees” on two dates: November 30, 2007 and August 11, 2008. Article IV, therefore does not aggregate multiple types of conduct into a single Article.

Article III, however, alleges that Judge Kent “corruptly obstructed, influenced, or impeded an official proceeding” and then details the numerous ways in which Judge Kent allegedly performed this obstruction, influence, and impeding. While this Article is an aggregation of charges, reprinted almost verbatim from the “Factual Basis for the Plea” that was attached to Judge Kent’s guilty plea. (See Kent Plea Agreement, attached as Exhibit 1.) As a result, Kent had already agreed to the factual basis for Article III before it was even drafted. Had the matter gone to a Senate vote, the Senate would not have been forced to decide which acts within Article III had been proved.

While aggregation of claims is never a good practice, a judge who has been criminally charged has at least had an opportunity to litigate the underlying acts. In contrast, Judge Porteous has never been indicted for any criminal act, and he faces a far greater challenge in defending himself against unconstitutionally aggregated claims within the Articles of Impeachment.

III. The Disaggregation of Voting Would Protect the Integrity of the Constitutional Standard While Allowing a Vote on Each Article.

In the event that the Senate declines Judge Porteous's request to dismiss the Articles of Impeachment, Judge Porteous urges the Senate to disaggregate the claims by voting on the separate allegations, as a means of ensuring that, as required by the constitution, two-thirds of the Senators support both the factual allegations and concur that each allegation constitutes an impeachable offense. This practice would be comparable to the use of specialized verdict forms in civil trials. See FED. R. CIV. P. 49(a). It is also similar to allowing votes on amendments for and against insular components of legislation leading to a final vote of adoption.

Specifically, as to any Article that remains despite Judge Porteous's Motions to Dismiss, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate initially vote on Judge Porteous's guilt or innocence, i.e., whether or not each of the following specific allegations is true and justifies impeachment:

With regard to Article I, did Judge Porteous:

1. Deprive the parties and the public of the right to the honest services of Judge Porteous's office in connection with the Lifemark v. Liljeberg trial?
2. Create an appearance of impropriety sufficient to prejudice the public respect for, and confidence in, the Federal Judiciary by soliciting and accepting things of value from the attorneys in the Lifemark case?

With regard to Article II, did Judge Porteous:

1. Improperly solicit and accept things of value from the Marcottes?
2. Improperly set, reduce, and split bonds in exchange for the Marcottes because they had given him things of value?
3. Improperly expunge or set aside convictions for Marcotte employees because the Marcottes had given him things of value?

4. Engage in impeachable conduct by introducing his friends the Marcottes to other friends who were state officials?
5. Know and understand that Louis Marcotte also made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench?

With regard to Article III, did Judge Porteous:

1. Make a materially false statement in connection with a bankruptcy proceeding and violate a court order by using a false name and a post office box address briefly to conceal his identity as the debtor in the case?
2. Make a materially false statement in connection with a bankruptcy proceeding or violate a court order by concealing assets?
3. Make a materially false statement in connection with a bankruptcy proceeding or violate a court order by concealing preferential payments to certain creditors?
4. Make a materially false statement in connection with a bankruptcy proceeding or violate a court order by concealing gambling losses and other gambling debts?
5. Make a materially false statement in connection with a bankruptcy proceeding or violate a court order by incurring new debts while the case was pending, in violation of the bankruptcy court's order?

With regard to Article IV, did Judge Porteous:

1. Make a false statement on his Supplemental SF-86?
2. Make a false statement on two separate occasions during his background check?
3. Make a false statement on the Senate Judiciary Committee's Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees?
4. Deprive the United States Senate and the public of information that would have had a material impact on his confirmation?
5. Know and understand that Louis Marcotte also made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal bench?

Ideally, the Senate would hold a separate preliminary vote on each allegation with regard to whether the alleged act occurred and, separately, whether it amounts to an impeachable offense. As a middle ground, though, the Senate might simply vote on each allegation without separate votes as to the factual and constitutional determinations. Even this middle ground approach, confirming both the occurrence and basis for removal of each alleged act with one vote, would be far superior to approving the aggregation of disparate acts in each Article as drafted by the House. The Senate still could vote ultimately on the Articles as a whole, but only after resolving what acts have been accepted by two-thirds of the members as proper grounds for the removal of a federal judge.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate dismiss each of the four Articles of Impeachment. Alternatively, Judge Porteous requests that the Senate hold preliminary votes on each allegation made within each Article, prior to voting on the Article as a whole.

Respectfully submitted,

SAMUEL B. KENT	§

Defendant.	§

PLEA AGREEMENT

The United States of America, by and through its undersigned attorneys for the Public Integrity Section, Criminal Division, United States Department of Justice, and SAMUEL B. KENT (hereinafter referred to as the "defendant") enter into the following agreement:

Charges and Statutory Penalties

1. The defendant agrees to plead guilty to Count Six, Obstruction of Justice, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1512(c)(2), of the Superseding Indictment. The United States agrees to seek dismissal of Counts One through Five of the Superseding Indictment after sentencing.

2. The defendant understands that Count Six has the following essential elements, each of which the United States would be required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt at trial:

- a. First, the defendant corruptly obstructed, influenced, or impeded, or attempted to corruptly obstruct, influence, or impede an official proceeding;
- b. Second, the defendant acted knowingly;

c. Third, the official proceeding is a proceeding before a judge or court of the United States.

3. The defendant understands that pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §1512(c)(2), Count Six carries a maximum sentence of twenty years of imprisonment, a fine of $250,000, a $100 special assessment, and a three-year term of supervised release, an order of restitution, and an obligation to pay any applicable interest or penalties on fines or restitution not timely made.

4. If the Court accepts the defendant's pleas of guilty and the defendant fulfills each of the terms and conditions of this agreement, the United States agrees that it will not further prosecute the defendant for any crimes described in the attached factual basis or for any conduct of the defendant now known to the Public Integrity Section and to the law enforcement agents working with the Public Integrity Section. Nothing in this agreement is intended to provide any limitation of liability arising out of any acts of violence.

Factual Stipulations

5. The defendant agrees that the attached "Factual Basis for Plea" fairly and accurately describes the defendant's actions and involvement in the offense to which the defendant is pleading guilty. The defendant knowingly, voluntarily and truthfully admits the facts set forth in the Factual Basis for Plea.

Sentencing

6. The defendant is aware that the sentence will be imposed by the court after considering the Federal Sentencing Guidelines and Policy Statements (hereinafter "Sentencing Guidelines"). The defendant acknowledges and understands that the court will compute an advisory sentence under the Sentencing Guidelines and that the applicable guidelines will be determined by the court relying in part on the results of a Pre-Sentence Investigation by the court's probation office, which investigation will commence after the guilty plea has been entered. The defendant is also aware that, under certain circumstances, the court may depart from the advisory sentencing guideline range that it has computed, and may raise that advisory sentence up to and including the statutory maximum sentence or lower that advisory sentence. The defendant is further aware and understands that the court is required to consider the advisory guideline range determined under the Sentencing Guidelines, but is not bound to impose that sentence; the court is permitted to tailor the ultimate sentence in light of other statutory concerns, and such sentence may be either more severe or less severe than the Sentencing Guidelines' advisory sentence. Knowing these facts, the defendant understands and acknowledges that the court has the authority to impose any sentence within and up to the statutory maximum authorized by law for the offense(s) identified in paragraph 1 and that the defendant may not withdraw the plea solely as a result of the sentence imposed.

7. The United States reserves the right to inform the court and the probation office of all facts pertinent to the sentencing process, including all relevant information concerning the offenses committed, whether charged or not, as well as concerning the defendant and the defendant's background. Subject only to the express terms of any agreed-upon sentencing recommendations contained in this agreement, the United States further reserves the right to make any recommendation as to the quality and quantity of punishment.

8. The defendant is aware that any estimate of the probable sentence or the probable sentencing range relating to the defendant pursuant to the advisory Sentencing Guidelines that the defendant may have received from any source is only a prediction and not a promise, and is not binding on the United States, the probation office, or the court, except as expressly provided in this plea agreement.

Sentencing Guidelines Stipulations

9. The defendant understands that the sentence in this case will be determined by the Court, pursuant to the factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), including a consideration of the guidelines and policies promulgated by the United States Sentencing Commission, Guidelines Manual 2007 (hereinafter "Sentencing Guidelines" or "USSG"). Pursuant to Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 11(c)(1)(B), and to assist the Court in determining the appropriate sentence, the parties stipulate to the following:

- a. The Base Offense Level pursuant to USSG §2J1.2(a) is 14.
- b. Acceptance of Responsibility

Provided that the defendant clearly demonstrates acceptance of responsibility, to the satisfaction of the United States, through the defendant's allocution and subsequent conduct prior to the imposition of sentence, the United States agrees that a 2-level reduction would be appropriate, pursuant to U.S.S.G § 3E1.1(a).

The United States, however, may oppose any adjustment for acceptance of responsibility if the defendant:

- i. fails to admit a complete factual basis for the plea at the time the defendant is sentenced or at any other time;
- ii. challenges the adequacy or sufficiency of the United States' offer of proof at any time after the plea is entered;
- iii. denies involvement in the offense;

- iv. gives conflicting statements about that involvement or is untruthful with the Court, the United States or the Probation Office;
 - v. fails to give complete and accurate information about the defendant's financial status to the Probation Office;
 - vi. obstructs or attempts to obstruct justice, prior to sentencing;
 - vii. has engaged in conduct not currently known to the United States prior to signing this Plea Agreement which reasonably could be viewed as obstruction or an attempt to obstruct justice, and has failed to fully disclose such conduct to the United States prior to signing this Plea Agreement;
 - viii. fails to appear in court as required;
 - ix. after signing this Plea Agreement, engages in additional criminal conduct; or
 - x. attempts to withdraw the plea of guilty.
- c. Agreement as to Maximum Sentencing Recommendation by the Government:

The United States agrees that the maximum term of imprisonment that it may seek at sentencing is three years, or 36 months, and it may seek a sentence less than 36 months if it is within the applicable Guidelines range.

- d. Criminal History Category

Based upon the information now available to the United States (including representations by the defense), the defendant has no criminal history points and is in Criminal History Category I.

Agreement as to Sentencing Allocation

10. The parties have no other agreement as to the Guidelines calculations and may argue for upward or downward adjustments or departures. The parties agree that either party may seek a sentence outside of the Guidelines Range based upon the factors to be considered in imposing a sentence pursuant to Title 18, United States Code, Section 3553(a).

11. In support of any variance argument, the parties agree to provide reports, motions, memoranda of law and documentation of any kind on which the defendant intends to rely at sentencing not later than twenty-one days before sentencing. Any basis for sentencing with respect to which all expert reports, motions, memoranda of law and documentation have not been provided to the United States at least twenty-one days before sentencing shall be deemed waived.

Court Not Bound by the Plea Agreement

12. It is understood that pursuant to Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure 11(c)(1)(B) and 11(c)(3)(B) the Court is not bound by the above stipulations, either as to questions of fact or as to the parties' determination of the applicable Guidelines range, or other sentencing issues. In the event that the Court considers any Guidelines adjustments, departures, or calculations different from any stipulations contained in this Agreement, or contemplates a sentence outside the Guidelines range based upon the general sentencing factors listed in Title 18, United States Code, Section 3553(a), the parties reserve the right to answer any related inquiries from the Court.

Appeal Waiver

13. The defendant is aware that the defendant has the right to challenge the defendant's sentence and guilty plea on direct appeal. The defendant is also aware that the defendant may, in some circumstances, be able to argue that the defendant's guilty plea should be set aside, or sentence set aside or reduced, in a collateral challenge (such as pursuant to a motion under 28 U.S.C. § 2255). Knowing that, and in consideration of the concessions made by the United States in this Agreement, the defendant knowingly and voluntarily waives his right to appeal or collaterally challenge: (a) the defendant's guilty plea and any other aspect of the defendant's conviction, including, but not limited to, any rulings on pretrial suppression motions or any other pretrial dispositions of motions and issues; and (b) the defendant's sentence or the manner in which [his/her] sentence was determined pursuant to 18 U.S.C. §3742, except to the extent that the Court sentences the defendant to a period of imprisonment longer than the statutory maximum, or the Court departs upward from the applicable Sentencing Guideline range pursuant to the provisions of U.S.S.G. §5K.2 or based on a consideration of the sentencing factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. §3553(a).

14. The defendant further understands that nothing in this agreement shall affect Public Integrity's right and/or duty to appeal as set forth in Title 18, United States Code, Section 3742(b). However, if the United States appeals the defendant's sentence pursuant to Section 3742(b), the defendant shall be released from the above waiver of appellate rights. By signing this agreement, the defendant acknowledges that the defendant has discussed the appeal waiver set forth in this agreement with the defendant's attorney. The defendant further agrees, together with the United States, to request that the district court enter a specific finding that the waiver of the defendant's right to appeal the sentence to be imposed in this case was knowing and voluntary.

15. The defendant's waiver of rights to appeal and to bring collateral challenges shall not apply to appeals or challenges based on new legal principles in the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals or Supreme Court cases decided after the date of this Agreement that are held by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals or Supreme Court to have retroactive effect.

Release/Detention

16. The defendant acknowledges that while the United States will not seek a change in the defendant's release conditions pending sentencing, the final decision regarding the defendant's bond status or detention will be made by the Court at the time of the defendant's plea of guilty. Should the defendant engage in further criminal conduct or violate any conditions of release prior to sentencing, however, the United States may move to change the defendant's conditions of release or move to revoke the defendant's release.

Breach of Agreement

17. The defendant understands and agrees that if, after entering this Plea Agreement, the defendant fails specifically to perform or to fulfill completely each and every one of the defendant's obligations under this Plea Agreement, or engages in any criminal activity prior to sentencing, the defendant will have breached this Plea Agreement. In the event of such a breach: (a) the United States will be free from its obligations under the Agreement; (b) the defendant will not have the right to withdraw the guilty plea; (c) the defendant shall be fully subject to criminal prosecution for any other crimes, including perjury and obstruction of justice; and (d) the United States will be free to use against the defendant, directly and indirectly, in any criminal or civil proceeding, all statements made by the defendant and any of the information or materials provided by the defendant, including such statements, information and materials provided pursuant to this Agreement or during the course of any debriefings conducted in anticipation of, or after entry of this Agreement, including the defendant's statements made during proceedings before the Court pursuant to Fed. R. Crim. P. 11.

18. The defendant understands that Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 11(f) and Federal Rule of Evidence 410 ordinarily limit the admissibility of statements made by a defendant in the course of plea discussions or plea proceedings if a guilty plea is later withdrawn. The defendant knowingly and voluntarily waives the rights which arise under these rules.

19. The defendant understands and agrees that the United States shall only be required to prove a breach of this Plea Agreement by a preponderance of the evidence. The defendant further understands and agrees that the United States need only prove a violation of federal, state, or local criminal law by probable cause in order to establish a breach of this Plea Agreement.

20. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed to permit the defendant to commit perjury, to make false statements or declarations, to obstruct justice, or to protect the defendant from prosecution for any crimes not included within this Agreement or committed by the defendant after the execution of this Agreement. The defendant understands and agrees that the United States reserves the right to prosecute the defendant for any such offenses. The defendant further understands that any perjury, false statements or declarations, or obstruction of justice relating to the defendant's obligations under this Agreement shall constitute a breach of this Agreement. However, in the event of such a breach, the defendant will not be allowed to withdraw this guilty plea.

Waiver of Statute of Limitations

21. It is further agreed that should any conviction following the defendant's plea of guilty pursuant to this Agreement be vacated for any reason, then any prosecution that is not time-barred by the applicable statute of limitations on the date of the signing of this Agreement (including any counts that the United States has agreed not to prosecute or to dismiss at sentencing pursuant to this Agreement) may be commenced or reinstated against the defendant, notwithstanding the expiration of the statute of limitations between the signing of this Agreement and the commencement or reinstatement of such prosecution. It is the intent of this Agreement to waive all defenses based on the statute of limitations with respect to any prosecution that is not time-barred on the date that this Agreement is signed.

Complete Agreement

22. No other agreements, promises, understandings, or representations have been made by the parties or their counsel than those contained in writing herein, nor will any such agreements, promises, understandings, or representations be made unless committed to writing and signed by the defendant, defense counsel, and a prosecutor for the Public Integrity Section.

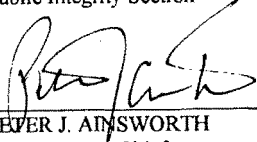

23. The defendant further understands that this Agreement is binding only upon the Public Integrity Section, Criminal Division, United States Department of Justice. This Agreement does not bind the Civil Division or any other United States Attorney's Office, nor does it bind any other state, local, or federal prosecutor. It also does not bar or compromise any civil, tax, or administrative claim pending or that may be made against the defendant.

24. If the foregoing terms and conditions are satisfactory, the defendant may so indicate by signing the Agreement in the space indicated below and returning the original to me once it has been signed by the defendant and by you or other defense counsel.

4. In August 2003 and March 2007, the defendant engaged in non-consensual sexual contact with Person A without her permission.
5. From 2004 through at least 2005, the defendant engaged in non-consensual sexual contact with Person B without her permission.

OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE

6. On or about May 21, 2007, Person A filed a judicial misconduct complaint with the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit ("Fifth Circuit"). In response, the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit appointed a Special Investigative Committee to investigate Person A's complaint.

11. The defendant also falsely testified regarding his unwanted sexual contact with Person B

by stating to the Committee that when told by Person B that his advances were unwelcome, no further contact occurred, when in fact and as he knew the defendant continued his non-consensual contacts even after she asked him to stop.

The House of Representatives (the “House”), through its Managers and counsel, respectfully opposes Judge Porteous’s five pre-trial motions to dismiss the Articles of Impeachment.¹ The facts, as alleged in the Articles of Impeachment, clearly establishes that Judge Porteous has violated the public trust and brought disrepute upon the office he serves. The allegations against Judge Porteous in each Article meet the standard for impeachment and removal from office. The factual disputes raised in his motions must be resolved by the trial.

Judge Porteous’s Motions to Dismiss should be denied. In support of this Consolidated Opposition, the House respectfully submits:

OVERVIEW

I. PRELIMINARY JURISDICTIONAL CONSIDERATIONS

A. Overview

The Constitution assigns the House the “the sole Power of Impeachment.” In the exercise of its Constitutional responsibility, the House has determined unanimously that Judge Porteous should be removed from the bench as a result of conduct specified in four Articles of Impeachment. The Senate, with the “sole Power to try all Impeachments,” has, under Rule XI of the “Procedure and Guidelines of Impeachment Trials in the United States Senate”² assigned this matter to this Trial Committee, which in turn, has scheduled an evidentiary hearing for September 13, 2001.

¹ This Consolidated Opposition addresses Judge Porteous’s Motions to Dismiss Articles I, II, III, and IV, individually, and also addresses Judge Porteous’s “Motion to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment as Unconstitutionally Aggregated; or, in the Alternative, to Require Voting on Specific Allegations of Impeachable Conduct.”

² See Procedure and Guidelines of Impeachment Trials in the United States Senate (hereinafter “Senate Impeachment Procedures”), Senate Doc. 99-3, 99th Cong., 2d Sess., at 4 (1986).

Judge Porteous's motions to dismiss seek to have the Senate take the extraordinary step of dismissing the four Articles prior to trial, thereby denying the House the right to pursue its claim that Judge Porteous is unfit to be a federal judge. In light of the gravity of purpose with which the House considers and votes on Articles of Impeachment, and the seriousness of the Impeachment function, it is therefore not surprising that "the Senate has never dismissed articles of impeachment [without a trial]."³ Dismissal by the Senate at this stage in the proceedings would be truly unprecedented.

Moreover, any motion to dismiss an Article of Impeachment prior to trial must, of necessity, be limited to challenging the facial validity of the Articles of Impeachment, thereby accepting the Articles' allegations as true. No other factual record exists for the Committee or the Senate to consider the motions at this time. Though couched as legal challenges to the Articles, Judge Porteous's motions to dismiss largely turn on his factual claims. Accordingly, his motions are essentially motions for acquittal. These arguments can only be decided after trial and the development of a factual record.

B. THE SENATE COMMITTEE SHOULD DENY THE MOTIONS AT THIS TIME AND PERMIT JUDGE PORTEOUS TO RAISE THEM BEFORE THE FULL SENATE AFTER THE EVIDENTIARY HEARING

Rule XI of the Senate's Impeachment Procedures under which this Committee is established, provides that the Committee is "to receive evidence and take testimony," and thereafter, to "report to the Senate in writing a certified copy of the transcript of the proceedings and the testimony had and given before such committee."⁴ Accordingly, Judge Porteous seeks relief from the Senate Committee that is not contemplated by this mandate or the resolution establishing the Committee.⁵

Trial Committees in prior impeachments have declined to refer pre-trial motions – even ones styled as dispositive legal motions – to the full Senate for consideration prior to trial. For example, the procedural context of Judge Porteous’s requests for relief is in pertinent aspects indistinguishable from the request of Judge Harry Claiborne to dismiss Articles in connection with his 1986 Impeachment trial on the grounds that they failed to allege impeachable offenses. In denying Claiborne’s Motion, Senator Mathias, Chairman of the Trial Committee concluded: “Because the committee has no jurisdiction to determine the legal issue which Judge Claiborne presents, we will refer Judge Claiborne’s motion to the full Senate together with our report, at the time we submit our report.”⁶

⁵ Rather, Senate Resolution 458, submitted March 17, 2010, tracks Rule XI, and states in pertinent part:

Sec. 4. In addition to a certified copy of the transcript of the proceedings and testimony had and given before it, the committee is authorized to report to the Senate a statement of facts that are uncontested and a summary, with appropriate references to the record, of evidence that the parties have introduced on contested issues of fact.

S. Res. 458, 111th Cong. 2d Sess. 2 (2010). Judge Porteous appears to concede that the Senate Committee does not have the power to grant the motions: “Judge Porteous recognizes that, in the past, certain Motions to Dismiss were not resolved until after the evidentiary hearings. It is unclear if that is the Senate’s intent in this proceeding.” See Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article IV, at 12, fn. 12.

⁶ See Hearings Before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee (Judge Claiborne) (hereinafter, “Claiborne Hearings”), S. Hrg. 99-812, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. 113 (1986) (statement of Senator Mathias). Similarly, the Claiborne Trial Committee denied the House’s request to refer to the Senate its pre-trial motions for “summary disposition” and “collateral estoppel.” As he did with Judge Claiborne’s motion, Senator Mathias ruled that the House could raise these motions at the time the matter was referred to the full Senate after trial: “Now, this committee has no jurisdiction to rule on the managers’ first and second motions Now, we shall, of course, refer the managers’ summary disposition and collateral estoppel motions to the full Senate when we report to the Senate the evidence which presented to us.” Id. at 108 (emphasis added).

Similarly, in the Judge Nixon Impeachment proceedings, Judge Nixon sought for the full Senate to consider his pre-trial motion that he filed with the Senate Trial Committee to dismiss Article III. In declining to refer the matter to the full Senate prior to trial, the Nixon Senate trial Committee addressed the merits of Judge Nixon's claim and concluded that Article III was fairly drafted.⁷ The Committee further ruled that "Judge Nixon may press his effort to dismiss Article III before the full Senate after the conclusion of the Committee's proceedings."⁸

The procedural context of the Judge Hastings Impeachment – where the full Senate did hear Judge Hastings' motion to dismiss – is readily distinguishable. In that case, the Articles of Impeachment were filed in August of 1988, the Answer by Judge Hastings was filed September 9, 1988, and the Replication by the House was filed September 23, 1988. The Senate concluded it did not have time to conduct the Impeachment trial before it recessed for the term. In February 1989, the Senate passed Senate Resolution 39, introduced by Senator Wendell Ford of the Rules Committee, which authorized the Senate to resume its consideration of the Hastings Articles and explicitly permitted Judge Hastings to file his motion with the full Senate to dismiss the Articles on double jeopardy grounds. The full Senate did in fact consider that motion on March 15, 1989, prior to voting to establish the Impeachment Trial Committee in that case, which it did on March 16, 1989. See generally S. Res. 38, 101st Cong., 1st Sess. (1989). However, unlike the Hastings situation, the rules for this Impeachment do not provide that Judge Porteous may file motions with the full Senate, and, as noted, no Senate Trial Committee has ever referred a pre-trial motion to the full Senate.

⁷ The approach of the Nixon Trial Committee is consistent with that sought by the House here. The Committee can deny Judge Porteous's motions "on the merits" at this juncture because, as noted, he raises nearly no claims that challenge the facial validity of the Articles. The Committee can also permit Judge Porteous leave to renew these arguments to the Senate after trial.

⁸ See Impeachment Trial Committee Disposition of Pretrial Motions, First Order (hereinafter "Nixon Pretrial Disposition"), at 5 (July 25, 1989) reprinted in Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee on the Articles Against Judge Walter L. Nixon, Jr., (hereinafter, "Nixon Senate Impeachment Report"), S. Hrg. 101-247, 101st Cong., 1st Sess., at 323 (1989).

Senate Trial Committees have been reluctant to refer other motions to the full Senate pre-trial as well. Judge Hastings and Judge Nixon each sought that the full Senate consider their respective motions to pay defense funds. Both Committees denied the respective motions and ruled that the respective Judges could pursue their claim when the matter was reported from the Committee to the full Senate. See Disposition of Motion Requesting Funds for Respondent's Defense, at 1 (May 18, 1989), reprinted in Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee on the Articles Against Judge Alcee L. Hastings (hereinafter, "Hastings Senate Impeachment Report"), S. Hrg. 101-194, 101st Cong., 1st Sess., at 483 (1989) ("Judge Hastings may renew his

Accordingly, the House recommends the Senate Committee deny Judge Porteous's Motions to Dismiss, with leave for Judge Porteous to renew these motions before the full Senate after the evidentiary hearing in light of the full factual record.⁹

II. FACTUAL SUMMARY¹⁰

A. Judge Porteous's Corrupt Conduct as a State Court Judge with Lawyers and Bail Bondsmen

In 1984, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. was elected judge of the 24th Judicial District of Louisiana. He remained in that position until October 28, 1994 when he was sworn in as a United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Throughout that decade, Judge Porteous abused his power as a judge to engage in pervasive corrupt relationships with lawyers and bail bondsmen. These relationships benefited him personally, supporting him in a lifestyle which he could not otherwise afford, but to which he aspired.

Specifically, during his tenure on the state bench, Judge Porteous solicited money from attorney Robert Creely and the law firm of Amato & Creely. These funds amounted to request for defense funds at the close of the Senate's proceedings on the Articles of Impeachment."); see also Nixon Pretrial Disposition, at 7, reprinted in Nixon Senate Impeachment Report, at 325 ("Judge Nixon may renew his request for defense funds at the close of the Senate's proceedings on the Articles of Impeachment.").

⁹ Notwithstanding the House's position that the best course of action for the Committee is to deny the motions at this time, the House will be prepared to argue them if so decided by the Committee.

¹⁰ Judge Porteous tries to have it both ways in his five Motions to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment. He concedes that, for these motions, all facts alleged by the House must be taken as true. See, e.g., Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article II, at 1, fn. 1. Yet, he thereafter proceeds to spend pages of text contesting the factual evidence in this case and presenting his own version of those facts. While the House believes that all of the facts alleged in the Articles of Impeachment should be taken as true for purposes of ruling on Judge Porteous's motions to dismiss, the House nevertheless feels compelled, in light of the approach taken by Judge Porteous, to present what it believes to be the evidence established in the proceedings heretofore.

thousands of dollars, were paid in cash, and were never reported. Eventually, in the late 1980s, Creely balked at continuing to support Judge Porteous's lifestyle of gambling, drinking, and extravagant dining. As a result, Judge Porteous, over time, appointed close to 200 "curatorships" to Creely, which generated fees of $200 per referral and required little work. This was Judge Porteous's way of generating funds for Creely, which Creely could return to Judge Porteous without the monies coming from Creely's own pocket. Indeed, Judge Porteous would call Creely's office from time to time to have "curator money" sent to him in cash, and Creely and his partner Jacob Amato would take draws from their law firm's bank account to meet Judge Porteous's requests. A conservative estimate would put Judge Porteous's share of these funds at about $20,000.

In his testimony before the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee, Judge Porteous acknowledged the essential aspects of this relationship: that he solicited and received monies in cash from Creely and his law firm; that at some point Creely balked ("He [Creely] may have said I had to get my finances under control."); and that Judge Porteous assigned curatorships to Creely and "occasionally" got money from Creely thereafter. Judge Porteous was uncertain as to the dollar amount.

Simultaneously, Judge Porteous sustained a corrupt relationship with local bail bondsmen, Louis Marcotte and his sister Lori, whereby Judge Porteous would set bail bonds as requested by the Marcottes in amounts that would maximize their profits, and in return received hundreds of expensive meals, car maintenance and repairs, home repairs, and trips to Las Vegas. In addition, at the Marcottes' request, Judge Porteous improperly expunged the criminal records of two Marcotte employees. In one of these cases, Judge Porteous delayed setting aside the conviction until after Senate confirmation for his federal judgeship, but before he left the state bench and took the federal oath of office, so that this highly irregular, if not outright illegal, conduct would not jeopardize his federal appointment.

B. Judge Porteous Lies to Obtain the Office of Federal Judge

In 1994, Judge Porteous was being considered for a federal judgeship. As a part of the vetting process, Judge Porteous was required to respond to two questionnaires – one under oath – and was also interviewed twice by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (“FBI”). Knowing that truthful disclosures of his corrupt relationships would derail his nomination, Judge Porteous made false statements and withheld critical information.

First, Judge Porteous filled out and signed a document entitled “Supplement to Standard Form 86 (SF-86).” That form sets forth the following question and answer by Judge Porteous:

[Question] Is there anything in your personal life that could be used by someone to coerce or blackmail you? Is there anything in your life that could cause an embarrassment to you or to the President if publicly known? If so, please provide full details.

[Answer] NO¹¹

Judge Porteous signed that document under the following statement:

I understand that the information being provided on this supplement to the SF-86 is to be considered part of the original SF-86 dated April 27, 1994 and a false statement on this form is punishable by law.¹²

Second, when interviewed by the FBI on July 8, 1994, Judge Porteous was asked a series of standard questions designed to elicit derogatory information. The FBI Agent, in her write-up of the interview, recorded Judge Porteous as stating:

PORTEOUS said he is not concealing any activity or conduct that could be used to influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise him in any way or ¹¹ See Supplement to Standard Form 86 (SF-86), at PORT000000298 (Attachment 1).

that would impact negatively on the candidate's character, reputation, judgement, or discretion.¹³

Judge Porteous was interviewed a second time by the FBI on August 18, 1994 about concerns related to 1993 allegations that he had received monies from an attorney and a bail bondsman to reduce a bond. In the FBI Agent's write-up of that interview, Judge Porteous is once again recorded as stating "that he, was unaware of anything in his background that might be the basis of attempted influence, pressure, coercion or compromise and/or would impact negatively on his character, reputation, judgment or discretion."¹⁴

Finally, on his United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary "Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees," Judge Porteous was asked the following question and gave the following answer:

[Question] Please advise the Committee of any unfavorable information that may affect your nomination.

[Answer] To the best of my knowledge, I do not know of any unfavorable information that may affect my nomination.¹⁵

The signature block in the form of an "Affidavit," reads as follows:

AFFIDAVIT

I, Gabriel Thomas Porteous, Jr., do swear that the information provided in this statement is, to the best of my knowledge, true and accurate.

Gretna, Louisiana, this 6 day of September, 1994.

It is signed by Judge Porteous and a notary.¹⁶

¹³ See FBI Interview of Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., at 3 (July 8, 1994) (Attachment 2).

¹⁴ See FBI Interview of Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., at 2-3 (hereinafter "August 18, 1994 FBI Interview of Judge Porteous") (August 18, 1994) (Attachment 3).

¹⁵ See Judge Porteous's United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary "Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees," at 34-35 (September 6, 1994) (Relevant Excerpts attached as Attachment 4).

Judge Porteous well knew that a truthful response to these inquiries would require the disclosure of his corrupt relationships with Amato and Creely and with the Marcottes. Judge Porteous, however, never disclosed those relationships. The argument that he subsequently could have believed that these questions did not call for him to reveal those relationships is simply not credible.

This very issue of honesty by the candidate in responding to questions posed during the background investigation to become a federal judge was explored in the House hearings with Professor Akhil Amar of Yale Law School and Professor Michael Gerhardt of UNC-Chapel Hill Law School. It is worth quoting at length:

Congressman Schiff:

The Senate, in the background interviews conducted through the FBI or in questionnaires or in testimony obviously can't ask a specific question, did you receive kickbacks from attorneys while you were on the State bench, because they don't know the conduct specifically to ask about, so they generally ask fairly general questions. I would like to acquaint you with some of the questions that were asked of the judge and ask you whether there was an affirmative obligation to disclose such that the failure to disclose would be considered a fraud on the Senate.

In the FBI background interview, the FBI agent reports Judge Porteous said he is not concealing any activity or conduct that could be used to influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise him in any way or that would impact negatively on the candidate's character, reputation, judgment, or discretion.

Similarly, there was a question in one of the Senate questionnaires which said: "Please advise the Committee of any unfavorable information that may affect your nomination," and the judge's answer was: "To the best of my knowledge, I do not know of any unfavorable information that may affect my nomination."

Similarly there was another question: "Is there anything in your background that, if it came out, could embarrass the President?"

¹⁶ Id.

Were these questions sufficient to raise an obligation of disclosure on the part of the judge such that the failure to disclose either the relationship with the bail bondsman or the kickback relationship with the attorneys would in your view constitute a fraud on the Senate sufficient to warrant his impeachment?

Mr. GERHARDT. I suspect we are all in accord on this. I think the answer is overwhelmingly yes.

I think that this is actually not a hard case, Mr. Chair. The fact is that, to begin with, you can use your common sense to simply look at the questions that were asked and look at the kind of misbehavior, the kind of conduct that wasn't disclosed, and understand that that is exactly the kind of thing the Senate would have wanted to know.

In fact, the behavior here isn't just accidental. It is not one or two circumstances. It is a pattern of misconduct that suggests a level of intent that is disturbing. And I suspect that it is exactly the kind of thing the President would have wanted to know, and it is also the kind of thing the Senate would have wanted to know. And I think the failure to disclose is an affront to both the President's nominating authority and Senate's confirmation responsibility.

I might just go one step further, if I may. I have actually thought about that question a lot, Mr. Chair. And I keep come back to the same thing. I think, what do I tell my students? We have the responsibility of educating law students. And if they are faced with a question like this and you don't impeach, they get the message that there is a level of corruption that is permissible, that there is a level of disclosure they don't have to make to accountable bodies.

The fact is that common sense suggests that there should have been disclosure. The very fact that these things weren't disclosed I think suggests, again, a disturbing level of intent but also a refusal to do something I think that is plainly required by those questions.

Professor Amar:

Here, though, it is so much easier, it seems to me, because we are not talking about putting him in jail, we are talking about withdrawing the very position that he wrongfully got through these lies and that he never would have gotten had he been truthful, had he told the whole truth, as was his obligation.

Third, yes, the questions were broad, partly because it is impolite to be more specific, especially without any basis for this, but everyone knows what is actually at the core of the question. Are you an honest person? Are you a person of integrity? Do you have the requisites to hold a position of honor, trust, and profit? Do you have judicial integrity? That is at the core of all these questions. That is not at the periphery.

And what he lied about was his gross misconduct as a judge: taking money from parties, taking money in cash envelopes, not reporting any of this to anyone. There is a pattern.¹⁷

Judge Porteous obtained his federal judgeship by intentionally misleading the Senate. In answering these questions dishonestly, he exhibited the same mindset which led him to postpone his setting aside of the criminal record of a Marcotte employee until after his Senate confirmation, lest he thereby lose his federal appointment.

C. Judge Porteous's Deceptive Omissions of Fact, Failure to Recuse, and Solicitation of Cash in the Liljeberg Case

In October 1994, Judge Porteous was sworn in as a federal district judge. As a result, Judge Porteous was no longer in a position to refer curatorships to lawyers or set bail bonds for the Marcottes. This did not end his corrupt relationships with either the lawyers or the bondsmen, however, because Judge Porteous did not change his approach once he was on the federal bench. He continued to accept numerous expensive lunches and other benefits from Amato and Creely, once he became a federal judge.¹⁸

¹⁷ See To Consider Possible Impeachment of United States District Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., Part IV, Hearing Before the Task Force on Judicial Impeachment of the Committee on the Judiciary (hereinafter, "Task Force Hearing, Part IV"), Ser. No. 111-46, 111th Cong., 1st Sess., at 33-34 (Dec. 15, 2009).

¹⁸ Judge Porteous also persisted in his relationship with Louis and Lori Marcotte once on the Federal bench. The Marcottes continued to take Judge Porteous to expensive lunches and to provide him with other hospitality. In exchange, Judge Porteous helped the Marcottes – whom Judge Porteous knew to be corrupt – in ways that were still available to him. In particular, Judge Porteous vouched for the Marcottes with other state court judges, helping them forge relationships (and in one instance a corrupt relationship) with certain judges.

The corrupt nature of these relationships came to a head in connection with the case of Lifemark Hospitals La., Inc. ["Lifemark"] v. Liljeberg Enterprises ["Liljeberg"].¹⁹ This was a complex case with tens of millions of dollars at stake. Just six weeks before Judge Porteous was to try the case without a jury, Creely's partner Jacob Amato, on behalf of the law firm Amato & Creely, entered his appearance for the Liljebergs.²⁰ Counsel for Lifemark thereafter filed a motion to recuse Judge Porteous. He had heard of the friendship between Judge Porteous and both Amato and Creely, but had no idea that there was a history of thousands of dollars going to Judge Porteous or of the arrangement with the curatorships.

The transcript of the recusal hearing demonstrates Judge Porteous's disingenuous approach to the disclosure requirements and recusal obligations of a federal judge. After explaining he well understood that the standard for recusal goes beyond actual impropriety and includes even the appearance of impropriety, he then deliberately misled the parties about the financial nature of his relationship with Amato and Creely. An excerpt from the transcript tells it all:

THE COURT: Let me make also one other statement for the record if anyone wants to decide whether I am a friend with Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson, I will put that to rest for the answer is affirmative, yes. Mr. Amato and I practiced the law together probably 20-plus years ago. Is that sufficient? . . . So if that is an issue at all, it is a non-issue.

THE COURT: . . . Yes, Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson are friends of mine. Have I ever been to either one of them's house? The answer is a definitive no. Have I gone along to lunch with them? The answer is a definitive answer yes.

¹⁹ Case No.: 2:93-cv-01794-GTP.

²⁰ Another close friend of Judge Porteous's, Leonard Levenson, also entered an appearance on behalf of the Liljebergs.

THE COURT: The first time I ran [for the state bench], 1984, I think is the only time when they gave me money.

THE COURT: I have always taken the position that if there was ever any question in my mind that this Court should recuse itself that I would notify counsel and give them the opportunity if they wanted to ask me to get off.²¹

Judge Porteous never revealed the corrupt financial relationship he had with the Amato & Creely firm or the thousands of dollars they funneled to him in cash. Indeed, he deliberately misled counsel for Lifemark by making it appear that the only time he got any money from them was in an early election campaign. Judge Porteous ultimately denied the motion to recuse.²²

Judge Porteous tried the Liljeberg case without a jury and kept the case under advisement for nearly three years before rendering a verdict. During that time period, Judge Porteous continued to accept meals and other financial benefits from counsel in the case. Most egregiously, on June 28, 1999, while the Liljeberg case was still pending, Judge Porteous went on a fishing trip with Amato. It is undisputed that, while on that trip, Judge Porteous solicited, and that Amato subsequently gave him, $2,000 in cash. As Judge Porteous grudgingly admitted before the Fifth Circuit:

Q. Do you recall in 1999, in the summer, May, June, receiving $2,000 for [sic: should be "from"] them?

²¹ See Hearing Transcript on Plaintiff's Motion to Recuse, Lifemark Hospitals Inc. v. Liljeberg Ents. Inc., Case No. 2:93-cv-01794-GTP, at 4, 6-8, 17 (October 16, 1996). (A copy of the Hearing Transcript is attached to Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article I as Exhibit 1. It is also marked as HP Exhibit 56 on the House's Exhibit List.)

A. I've read Mr. Amato's grand jury testimony. It says we were fishing and I made some representation that I was having difficulties and that he loaned me some money or gave me some money.

Q. You don't—you're not denying it; you just don't remember it?

A. I just don't have any recollection of it, but that would have fallen in the category of a loan from a friend. That's all.²³

Q. [W]hether or not you recall asking Mr. Amato for money during this fishing trip, do you recall getting an envelope with $2,000 shortly thereafter?

A. Yeah. Something seems to suggest that there may have been an envelope. I don't remember the size of an envelope, how I got the envelope, or anything about it.

Q. Wait a second. Is it the nature of the envelope you're disputing?

A. No. Money was received in [an] envelope.

Q. And had cash in it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was from Creely and/or——

A. Amato.

Q. Amato?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was used to pay for your son's wedding.

A. To help defray the cost, yeah.

Q. And was used——

A. They loaned—my impression was it was a loan.

²³ See Fifth Circuit Special Committee Hearing Transcript (hereinafter "Fifth Circuit Transcript"), at 121 (October 29, 2007). Relevant excerpts from the Fifth Circuit Transcript are attached to this Consolidated Opposition as Attachment 5.

Q. And would you dispute that the amount was $2,000?

A. I don't have any basis to dispute it.²⁴

Several months later, Judge Porteous ruled in favor of Amato's client in a decision that would have meant a fee of close to a million dollars to Amato's firm if it had stood up on appeal. However, Judge Porteous's decision on the central issues in the case was reversed in a scathing opinion from the Fifth Circuit that characterized his ruling as "bordering on the absurd," "a chimera," "nonsensical" and "constructed out of whole cloth."²⁵ Judge Porteous's effort to reward his friends Amato and Creely was only thwarted by the court of appeals.

D. Judge Porteous's False Statements, Intentional Omissions of Fact, and Violation of a Court Order in his Bankruptcy

As documented in the House Impeachment Report, Judge Porteous had a serious gambling habit and abused alcohol.²⁶ Over time, despite the monies and benefits he solicited and received from lawyers and bail bondsmen, his financial situation deteriorated to the point of having to file for bankruptcy protection in 2001. His financial predicament was due largely to massive gambling losses.²⁷

A review of Judge Porteous's conduct in the bankruptcy proceedings shows behavior consistent with his prior conduct. Judge Porteous and his attorney entered into a scheme to avoid public disclosure of his bankruptcy, whereby Judge Porteous knowingly and purposefully filed his bankruptcy petition under a false name (“Ortous”) and used a recently obtained post office box as his address instead of his home address. He signed that petition under penalty of perjury.²⁸

Judge Porteous’s bankruptcy proceedings were permeated with false schedules, undisclosed preferential payments, undisclosed assets such as a $4,000 income tax refund, and indebtedness incurred in violation of a bankruptcy judge’s order. The evidence of Judge Porteous’s repeated and consistent pattern of lying and deceiving both his own counsel and the bankruptcy court utterly refutes any notion that these were inadvertent oversights or misunderstandings.

E. Conclusion

A review of Judge G. Thomas Porteous Jr.’s career on the state and federal bench is a record of ongoing, disgraceful, corrupt conduct, laced with falsehoods whenever the truth stood in Judge Porteous’s way. He lied to lawyers, to judges, to the FBI, to the White House and to the Senate. He hid the fact that he had taken substantial sums of cash from lawyers and deceitfully postured on the record how he would recuse himself if he had any question about the propriety of continuing to hear the case. He then solicited and received from a lawyer in the case $2,000 while his decision was pending.

The contention that Judge Porteous’s conduct prior to taking the federal bench may not be considered finds no support in the language of the Constitution. The fact that Judge Porteous was confirmed by the Senate by concealing his corrupt prior conduct and lying under oath only underscores his unfitness to remain on the federal bench. The House of Representatives voted unanimously in favor of all four Articles of Impeachment against Judge Porteous, including Article IV, based upon misconduct engaged in by him prior to assuming federal office. As

²⁸ Many people filing for bankruptcy may view this experience as embarrassing and would like to avoid public disclosure of their financial predicament. A judge may find it particularly embarrassing. However, the fact that this concealment – filing and signing under a false name – was committed by a Federal judge, under oath, is far more offensive, and far less forgivable, than if committed by a average citizen.

Professor Gerhardt stated:

The second issue has to do with whether or not somebody may be subject to impeachment conviction and removal for conduct done prior to occupying that particular position. I think this can be a difficult question, but I don't think it is a difficult question here.

As I suggest in my written statement, any egregious misconduct not disclosed prior to election or appointment to an office from which one may be impeached or removed is likely to qualify as a high crime or misdemeanor. While murder would be one obvious example of such misconduct, it is not the only example.

Another example I think is lying to or defrauding the Senate in order to be approved as a Federal judge. Such misconduct is not only serious but obviously connected to the status and responsibilities of being a Federal judge. Such misconduct plainly erodes the essential indispensable integrity without which a Federal judge is unable to do his job.²⁹

If the Senate were to grant the motion to dismiss or acquit Judge Porteous on the grounds that some of his egregious misconduct occurred in prior to assuming the federal bench, it would be an invitation to make the federal bench a lifetime safe harbor for a person who may have engaged in the most reprehensible behavior, so long as he is able to conceal it and is willing to lie to the FBI and the Senate. The House submits that is an utterly untenable conclusion, neither sanctioned by the Constitution nor contemplated by the Framers.

III. THE STANDARD FOR IMPEACHMENT

A critical assumption that permeates nearly all of Judge Porteous's pre-trial motions is that an impeachment trial is the nature of a criminal proceeding, with criminal law standards and the procedural protections of a criminal case.³⁰ This assumption is wrong. An impeachment trial is not a criminal case, as the Senate has already recognized in this very case.³¹ Judge Porteous's conduct may well have violated the criminal laws of the United States, but both the substantive law and the procedural requirements that govern impeachments make clear that the standards to be applied in an impeachment have no foundation in the criminal laws of this country.

²⁹ See Task Force Hearing, Part IV, supra note 17, at 24.

A. The Substantive Law Governing Impeachments and Removal

Both the House and Senate have interpreted the Constitution's "high crimes and misdemeanors" formulation for impeachable conduct to include violations of public trust beyond the confines of criminal law.³² The Walter Nixon Impeachment Report reviewed the "high crimes and misdemeanors" terminology from 12 judicial impeachments that had occurred prior to 1989 and found that the term "misdemeanor," as used in the Constitution, "did not denote a ³⁰ See, e.g., Motion to Dismiss Article I (arguing that the Supreme Court's limitation of the federal criminal honest services statute on grounds of constitutional vagueness undermines the Article); Motion to Dismiss Article II (arguing that the House has failed to establish the elements of criminal concealment of assets and false oaths under 18 U.S.C. § 152); Motion to Dismiss Article IV (arguing that under the Kerik case from the Southern District of New York, the House could not satisfy the elements of proving a criminal false statement); Motion to Exclude Previously Immunized Testimony (arguing that the Fifth Amendment's protection against use of immunized testimony in a "criminal case" precludes reliance by Congress in the impeachment process on Judge Porteous's sworn immunized testimony to the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee); Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony (arguing that the Sixth Amendment's guarantees for "criminal prosecutions" to confront the witnesses requires that all testimony admitted into evidence be from witnesses providing live testimony at the trial).

violation of criminal law;” instead, the “word focuses on the behavior of a public official, i.e., his demeanor.”³³

Constitutional history reinforces the correctness of the courts’ consistent reading of impeachment as a political,³⁴ non-criminal proceeding subject to a case-specific determination of the federal officer’s fitness to hold office. The Founders purposefully broke from the British impeachment practice, which upon conviction imposed criminal penalties, including death, and instead made it a proceeding of a political nature that called for the maximum punishment not to exceed removal and disqualification from office.³⁵ Any possible doubt after the Constitution’s adoption on whether impeachment proceedings were criminal in nature was settled in the early impeachment inquiries, which considered such non-criminal offenses as, for example, the impeachment of Judge John Pickering in 1803 for performing his judicial functions while drunk and for acts of indecency.³⁶

As Alexander Hamilton observed at the time of the debates surrounding the adoption of the Constitution, impeachment trials were understood as deliberative sessions for the Senate to decide whether an official had committed an “abuse or violation of some public trust.”³⁷ Justice Story likewise observed, in the early nineteenth century, that “an impeachment is a proceeding of ³⁴ The term “political . . . proceeding,” is meant to describe a proceeding that pertains to the state or its government. It is not meant to connote party politics.

a purely political nature. It is not so much designed to punish an offender as to secure the state against gross official misdemeanors. It touches neither his person nor his property; but simply divests him of his political power.”³⁸ These principles are not subject to any legitimate dispute.³⁹

B. The Procedural Requirements for Impeachments

The procedural requirements that govern judicial impeachment trials likewise reflect the principle that an impeachment trial is not and should not be treated as a criminal proceeding. Nowhere does the Constitution require the House, which has the “sole Power of Impeachment,”⁴⁰ to limit articles of impeachment to acts that are violations of criminal law. Similarly, the Constitution requires the concurrence of two-thirds of the Members present in the Senate to convict in an impeachment trial, but, unlike a criminal case, leaves the burden of proof undefined.⁴¹ Likewise, because the Constitution places impeachment proceedings and criminal proceedings on two separate tracks (see U.S. CONST. art. I, § 3), an impeachment following a criminal trial does not implicate the Fifth Amendment’s Double Jeopardy Clause, as numerous ³⁸ Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Constitution § 801 (1833).

³⁹ Indeed, counsel for Judge Porteous has adopted this view on more than one occasion. He has stated that “[t]he judicial impeachment cases . . . reflect controversies that raise fundamental questions of legitimacy and conduct that is viewed as incompatible or demeaning to judicial office.” See Turley, supra note 3, at 73-74. He further summarized judicial impeachments as “deal[ing] not only with issues related to the use of judicial power but with conduct that brought disrepute upon the office through personal or (non-judicial) criminal misconduct.” Id. at 67-68. On another occasion, he stated that “acts which undermine the integrity of government are appropriate grounds whether or not they happen to constitute offenses under the general criminal law. . . . [T]he essential nexus . . . may be founding acts which, without directly affecting the governmental processes, undermine that degree of public confidence in the probity of executive and judicial officers that is essential to the effectiveness of government.” See Background and History of Impeachment, Hearing Before the House Judiciary Committee Subcommittee on the Constitution, at 28 (Nov. 9, 1998) (Testimony of Jonathan Turley, Shapiro Professor of Public Interest Law, George Washington University Law School).

⁴¹ U.S. CONST. art. I, § 3, cl. 6, cl. 7.

courts and the Senate have recognized. Further, there is no appeal from a conviction in the case of impeachment,⁴² and the Constitution expressly denies the President the power to pardon a civil officer who has been impeached.⁴³ Because the standard for impeachment is not a criminal standard, it is unproductive and misleading to engage in an analysis of whether the Articles of Impeachment state a claim that would establish a violation of federal criminal law.

The House reiterates that while Judge Porteous's conduct may well have violated the criminal laws, in both substantive and procedural respects, an impeachment trial is not a criminal proceeding, and a fundamentally different standard involving a fundamentally different judgment applies. Accordingly, the House can frame the Articles – and the Senate can convict on those Articles – as long as those bodies conclude that the charges are for impeachable misconduct, i.e., conduct that in their view warrants impeachment and removal from office.

ARGUMENT

The approach taken by Judge Porteous in his Motions to Dismiss is consistently to mischaracterize what each Article of Impeachment actually states, and then argue that the “facts” supporting the Articles – according to his interpretation of them – do not prove the “charges” – as he misconstrues them. Judge Porteous also analyzes the facts supporting the Articles by taking each one in isolation, characterizing it benignly, minimizing it, and explaining how a particular action could have been done innocently or mistakenly.

Thus, in considering each of Judge Porteous's five Motions to Dismiss, it is important to note both the tactics which Judge Porteous employs to re-create the narrative of this case and the ⁴² See, e.g., Nixon v. United States, 506 U.S. 224 (1993).

⁴³ U.S. CONST. art. II, §. 2, cl. 1.

lengths that Judge Porteous goes to distort the factual and legal landscape of this judicial impeachment.

I. ARTICLE I PROPERLY ALLEGES CONDUCT THAT WARRANTS IMPEACHMENT AND REMOVAL FROM OFFICE

Article I alleges profound judicial misconduct that warrants the removal of Judge Porteous as a federal judge. Judge Porteous presided over a case in which he failed to disclose a prior corrupt financial relationship with attorneys for one of the parties, and during which he continued to solicit and accept cash and things of value from those attorneys. Article I clearly alleges that Judge Porteous did so even in the face of a motion to recuse by the opposing counsel, in response to which Judge Porteous conducted the recusal hearing so as to conceal material facts and to distort the factual record, thereby misleading the moving party and insulating his actions from appellate review.

After first mischaracterizing the facts supporting Article I, Judge Porteous makes two arguments for the dismissal of this Article. First, he claims that Article I charges the federal offense of “honest services fraud,” and that the Article cannot stand in light of the Supreme Court’s recent ruling in Skilling v. United States.⁴⁴ Article I, however, does not charge a violation of a specific criminal code section, nor does the Constitution require it to do so. The Supreme Court’s recent ruling as to what conduct satisfies a criminal statute is wholly irrelevant to an assessment of whether the allegations set forth in Article I constitute an abuse of public trust warranting Judge Porteous’s removal from office.

Second, Judge Porteous argues that the conduct involved in Article I, as a factual matter, does not warrant impeachment because the Article alleges, according to Judge Porteous, only the “appearance of impropriety,” and not “actual impropriety,” and that a Judge cannot be impeached solely for the “appearance of impropriety.”⁴⁵ Judge Porteous ignores the charging language in Article I, which in fact alleges specific misconduct. It will be up to the Senate to determine whether the House has proved the facts alleged in Article I and whether that conduct, if proven, warrants removal. That question cannot be resolved based on the pre-trial record, and certainly not by Judge Porteous’s version of the facts.

A. Judge Porteous Mischaracterizes the Facts in Article I.

Three factual examples from the Motion to Dismiss Article I illustrate Judge Porteous’s attempts to downplay and recreate evidence supporting Article I. First, Judge Porteous claims that he “did not conceal his relationship with Mr. Amato . . . [because] his long-time friendship with Mr. Amato was well known in the New Orleans legal community.” However, what Judge Porteous is accused of concealing at the Liljeberg recusal hearing was not his friendship with Mr. Amato but his corrupt financial relationship with Amato, which included receiving approximately $20,000 in cash payments under the table.

Second, Judge Porteous describes the allegations in Article I as including the fact that at the time he assigned curatorships to Robert Creely, he received “personal gifts from Creely,” when, in reality, Article I alleges that Judge Porteous received approximately $20,000 in cash from Creely and the Amato & Creely law firm in connection with the curatorships.⁴⁶

⁴⁵ See Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article I, at 1.

⁴⁶ Judge Porteous’s factual representation of the actions taken by Attorney Mole related to the hiring of Judge Porteous’s friend, Donald Gardner, in the Liljeberg case is also worth addressing. First, Mr. Mole’s actions are irrelevant to an assessment of Judge Porteous’s conduct – the only conduct under scrutiny by the House and the Senate. Second, the House would note that Judge Porteous’s perceived biases were so deeply apparent to the litigants in the community – accurately as it turned out – that Lifemark, Mole’s client, felt the need to “level the playing field” by retaining Gardner as a counterweight to the Liljebergs’ retaining of Amato (along with another of Judge Porteous’s friends, Leonard Levenson). See To Consider Possible Impeachment of United States District Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., Part I, Hearing Before the Task Force on Judicial Impeachment of the Committee on the Judiciary (“Task Force Hearing,

Third, Judge Porteous casually describes his decision in the Liljeberg case as having been “affirmed in part and reversed in part by the Fifth Circuit”⁴⁷ – an assertion which is technically true, but is a profound distortion of the substance of the appellate court’s decision. In reality, on nearly every significant issue, the Court of Appeals reversed Judge Porteous, characterizing his opinion as “a chimera,” “constructed entirely out of whole cloth,” “nonsensical,” and “absurd.”⁴⁸

B. Because Article I Does Not Allege a Violation of a Specific Federal Criminal Statute, the Supreme Court’s Decision in Skilling is Irrelevant.

Article I alleges misconduct involving Judge Porteous’s hidden financial relationship with attorneys handling a case pending before him. Article I alleges in six paragraphs that Judge Porteous dishonestly presided over the Liljeberg case by concealing his financial relationships with attorneys for one of the parties, making intentionally misleading statements at the recusal Part I”), Ser. No. 111-43, 111th Cong., 1st Sess., at 143.(Nov. 18, 2009). If anything, Lifemark’s decision to hire Gardner demonstrates the damage that Judge Porteous inflicted on the judicial system – creating an environment where parties believed they had to hire attorneys who were close personal friends of the presiding judge in order to have a chance to succeed in the litigation.

And third, Judge Porteous’s attempt to tar Mr. Mole with the decision to hire Mr. Gardner is not supported by the record. The House cites to the transcript from its November 18, 2009 Hearing To Consider Possible Impeachment of United States District Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. simply because the allegation against Mr. Mole is so unfair and should not go uncorrected. At that hearing, Mr. Mole clearly testified:

After we lost the motion to recuse, my client and I discussed that—and my client insisted that we try to find a lawyer who, like Mr. Amato and Mr. Levenson, was a friend with the judge and knew him very well. They were concerned that they would do everything they can to achieve a level playing field.

I resisted doing that. I am not happy with the fact that we did it. But my client insisted, and so we did it.

hearing, and soliciting and accepting things of value from attorneys while the case was pending. Judge Porteous focuses on a single factual allegation – that Judge Porteous’s conduct deprived the public and parties of his “honest services” – to argue that this sentence converts the entire Article into a criminal count based on a violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1346. It does nothing of the sort.

The House sets forth Article I in full, below, to illustrate the entire context of the “honest services” language, on which Judge Porteous bases his lead argument for the dismissal of that

Article:

G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., while a Federal judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, engaged in a pattern of conduct that is incompatible with the trust and confidence placed in him as a Federal judge, as follows:

Judge Porteous, while presiding as a United States district judge in Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. v. Liljeberg Enterprises, denied a motion to recuse himself from the case, despite the fact that he had a corrupt financial relationship with the law firm of Amato & Creely, P.C. which had entered the case to represent Liljeberg. In denying the motion to recuse, and in contravention of clear canons of judicial ethics, Judge Porteous failed to disclose that beginning in or about the late 1980s while he was a State court judge in the 24th Judicial District Court in the State of Louisiana, he engaged in a corrupt scheme with attorneys, Jacob Amato, Jr., and Robert Creely, whereby Judge Porteous appointed Amato's law partner as a 'curator' in hundreds of cases and thereafter requested and accepted from Amato & Creely a portion of the curatorship fees which had been paid to the firm. During the period of this scheme, the fees received by Amato & Creely amounted to approximately $40,000, and the amounts paid by Amato & Creely to Judge Porteous amounted to approximately $20,000.

Judge Porteous also made intentionally misleading statements at the recusal hearing intended to minimize the extent of his personal relationship with the two attorneys. In so doing, and in failing to disclose to Lifemark and its counsel the true circumstances of his relationship with the Amato & Creely law firm, Judge Porteous deprived the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals of critical information for its review of a petition for a writ of mandamus, which sought to overrule Judge Porteous's denial of the recusal motion. His conduct deprived the parties and the public of the right to the honest services of his office.

Judge Porteous also engaged in corrupt conduct after the Lifemark v. Liljeberg bench trial, and while he had the case under advisement, in that he solicited and accepted things of value from both Amato and his law partner Creely, including a payment of thousands of dollars in cash. Thereafter, and without disclosing his corrupt relationship with the attorneys of Amato & Creely PLC or his receipt from them of cash and other things of value, Judge Porteous ruled in favor of their client, Liljeberg.

By virtue of this corrupt relationship and his conduct as a Federal judge, Judge Porteous brought his court into scandal and disrepute, prejudiced public respect for, and confidence in, the Federal judiciary, and demonstrated that he is unfit for the office of Federal judge.

Wherefore, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., is guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors and should be removed from office.⁴⁹

Judge Porteous argues that as a result of the single sentence alleging that Judge Porteous's conduct "deprived the parties and the public of the right to the honest services of his office," "[t]he House framed Article I as a broad 'honest services' claim,"⁵⁰ and that recent judicial interpretations of the "honest services" statute therefore come into play.

First and foremost, while Judge Porteous's conduct may in fact have been a violation of the criminal law, Article I does not purport to allege a violation of a specific statute, let alone the highly technical offense of "honest services fraud." It is not patterned after the mail fraud or wire fraud statutes (or any fraud statute), and it does not otherwise allege a "scheme or artifice to defraud," or any other language alleging a fraud scheme – language that would be necessary to charge a criminal "honest services" fraud offense.⁵¹ Article I cites to no criminal statute, instead ⁴⁹ H. Res. 1031, 111th Cong., 2d Sess., at 2–4 (2010) (emphasis added) (Attachment 7).

⁵⁰ See Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article I, at 6. He further contends that "Article I would create bizarre new precedent by impeaching a federal judge on the basis of an honest services violation that was recently rejected as unconstitutionally vague by the Supreme Court." Id. at 21.

⁵¹ 18 U.S.C. § 1346 sets forth the basis for "honest services" fraud and provides:

concluding that Judge Porteous's conduct "brought his court into scandal and disrepute, prejudiced public respect for, and confidence in, the Federal judiciary, and demonstrated that he is unfit for the office of Federal judge." Indeed, Article I is written in non-technical language and focuses on Judge Porteous's acts of concealment of financial relationships in the course of presiding over a case. Whether the conduct alleged in Article I also violated criminal laws, or could have resulted in an indictable offense for "honest services fraud," has no bearing on any issue before the Senate; as set forth above, a different standard governs the Senate's decision. Hence, the interpretation of the term "honest services," and the applicability of that term to support a criminal indictment, is irrelevant here.

Judge Porteous's remaining argument related to honest services is that, as a factual matter, because of the vagueness associated with the "honest services" statute, he and federal judges simply have no notice as to how they should behave on the federal bench.⁵² However, the House's unanimous decision to impeach was reached without reference to the criminal provision that may reach that conduct.⁵³ Rather, the description of the objectionable conduct in the Articles specifically gives notice to the judiciary and the public of the behavior by Judge Porteous that informed the House's unanimous conclusions as to what constituted grounds for impeachment.

For the purposes of this chapter, the term "scheme or artifice to defraud" includes a scheme or artifice to deprive another of the intangible right of honest services.

⁵² Judge Porteous claims that if Article I were not dismissed, Judges "would be left to guess what conduct might result in their removal." See Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article I, at 3. He thereby underestimates the integrity of his colleagues.

⁵³ Not only is the Skilling case irrelevant to these impeachment proceedings, but it would be particularly problematic in separation of powers terms if the Federal judiciary had the power to insulate a Member of the judiciary from impeachment by itself making certain legal rulings.

C. Article I Sets Forth an Impeachable Offense.

Judge Porteous also claims that Article I charges only the “appearance of impropriety,” and not “actual impropriety” and argues that dismissal is warranted because the Article is not based on “actual impropriety.”⁵⁴ Incredibly, Judge Porteous labors to persuade the Senate Committee that soliciting and receiving cash from a lawyer with a pending case is not actual misconduct, that it creates only an “appearance” problem. Plainly, the judge sets a very low bar as to what constitutes actual misconduct. Surely, the Senate is entitled to conclude that a Judge’s solicitation and receipt of monies from an attorney with a case pending before him constitutes “actual misconduct” that warrants the Judge’s removal from office. The label is unimportant.

Article I alleges that by bringing disrepute to the federal judiciary and undermining its authority and legitimacy, Judge Porteous’s conduct warrants impeachment. When Judge Porteous – or any judge – is exposed as having accepted things of value from attorneys appearing before him and then ruling in favor of the client represented by those attorneys, he damages the judicial system and brings the federal courts into disrepute. This is especially so here, where Judge Porteous’s ruling for his financial benefactors’ client was reversed on the central issues in the litigation, in an opinion that excoriated the judge.⁵⁵ Thus, Article I charges that the conduct at issue establishes two grounds for Judge Porteous’s removal: first, that it brought his court into “scandal and disrepute, prejudiced public respect for, and confidence in, the Federal judiciary,” and second, that it “demonstrated that he is unfit for the office of Federal judge.” The terms “actual” and “apparent” impropriety have no relevance to the consideration of this Article or the facts it alleges.

⁵⁵ See In the Matter of Liljeberg Enterprises Inc., 304 F.3d at 428–29, 431–32 (Attachment 6).

Further, as a matter of precedent, it is well established that a judge's conduct involving financial entanglements with parties and litigants is a recognized and appropriate basis for impeachment and removal from office.⁵⁶ Other impeachments demonstrate that a "gross betrayal of public trust" is sufficient ground for impeachment. The 1926 impeachment report of Judge George W. English concluded:

No one reading the record in this case can conclude that this man has lived up to the standards of our judiciary, nor is he [sic] the personification of integrity, high honor, and uprightness, as the evidence presents the picture of the manner in which he discharged the high duties and exercised the powers of his great office.⁵⁷

Article I falls squarely within the principles that emerge from prior impeachments in that it charges Judge Porteous, in substance, with official acts of misconduct and conduct that is incompatible or demeaning to the judicial office he holds, such that he has forfeited his "legitimacy" and should be removed from office.

WHEREFORE, the conduct alleged in Article I unquestionably charges an impeachable offense – one that is not governed by federal criminal standards – and Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article I should be denied.

II. ARTICLE II PROPERLY ALLEGES CONDUCT THAT WARRANTS IMPEACHMENT AND REMOVAL FROM OFFICE

Judge Porteous argues that because this case would be the first time in history that anyone has been impeached for pre-office conduct – i.e., conduct that occurred in an office held ⁵⁶ See e.g., Porteous Impeachment Report, supra note 26, at 15–16 (citing the 1912 impeachment of Circuit Judge Robert W. Archbald, who enriched himself through financial dealings with companies and attorneys with cases before him on the Federal district court and U.S. Commerce Court, and the 1936 impeachment against Judge Halsted L. Ritter, who received a kickback from his former partner).

⁵⁷ Turley, supra note 3, at 74–75 (internal citations omitted).

prior to the one from which the official is being impeached – Article II must be dismissed.⁵⁸

This argument is unavailing because the Senate may, in its judgment, impeach on the sole or partial basis of pre-office conduct, where such conduct would, in the Senate’s judgment, render the officer unfit to hold office.

A. Article II Properly Charges Conduct For Which Removal is Appropriate

Article II describes a corrupt scheme between Judge Porteous and local bail bondsmen, Louis Marcotte and his sister Lori. The Article alleges, in substance, that Judge Porteous solicited and received things of value from the Marcottes in exchange for taking numerous official acts for the Marcottes’ financial and personal benefit. This was part of a pervasive corruption scheme in the 24th Judicial District Courthouse located in Gretna, Louisiana. Judge Porteous’s affirmative actions on behalf of the Marcottes, while he was both a state and a federal judge, were significant to the Marcottes in expanding their corrupt influence in the 24th Judicial District.⁵⁹ Significantly, Judge Porteous intentionally waited until after his Senate confirmation – but before he took the oath of office and ascended to the federal bench – to set aside a conviction of a Marcotte employee (at Louis Marcotte’s request), knowing that this highly improper judicial act could bring to light his relationship with the Marcottes and derail his ascension to the federal bench.

Judge Porteous mischaracterizes and attempts to trivialize the allegations in Article II. This impeachment did not arise because of “a handful of lunches.” (Nor has the House asserted that having lunch with a corrupt bail bondsman is “on par with treason,” as Judge Porteous alleges.)⁶⁰ Instead Article II has charged that Judge Porteous engaged in a quid pro quo arrangement with Louis Marcotte – a convicted racketeer – similar to conduct for which other state judges were sent to prison. In fact, the proof will establish the Marcottes paid for hundreds of lunches, ongoing car repairs and maintenance, home repairs, and several trips in return for Judge Porteous’s official acts in setting bonds and other judicial acts as requested by the Marcottes. The company Judge Porteous keeps is not the impeachable offense; the high crime or misdemeanor is the continuing pattern of corruption: a quid pro quo of official acts in return for economic largess from the Marcottes.

⁵⁸ See generally Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article II.

Further, in Article II, the House does not “tangentially allude” to Porteous’s conduct on the federal bench.⁶¹ Though much of the quid pro quo conduct set forth in Article II occurred while Judge Porteous was a state judge (and would by itself provide a basis for his impeachment), Article II makes clear that Judge Porteous continued to accept meals from the Marcottes, and continued act to further the activities of Louis and Lori Marcotte – persons whom he knew to be corrupt based on his own interactions with them – while he was a federal judge.

One of the events that was set forth explicitly at the House hearing involved Judge Porteous, as a federal judge, vouching for Louis Marcotte with state Judge Ron Bodenheimer. Bodenheimer has testified that he did not hold the Marcottes in high regard, but that Porteous, as a federal judge, vouched for the Marcottes. Bodenheimer testified this was critical in his decision to form a relationship with the Marcottes – a relationship which became corrupt in ways similar to the Marcottes’ relationship with Judge Porteous and was among the charges which landed Bodenheimer in prison.⁶² In addition, as set forth in the House Report, while a federal judge, Judge Porteous was more than willing to lend the prestige of his office to Louis Marcotte to help him forge relationships with other state judges and magistrates, including Judges Kerner, Centanni and Bengel, as well as with businessmen who could advance Marcotte's business interests.⁶³ In short, the Porteous-Marcotte quid pro quo relationship did not come to an end when Judge Porteous took the federal bench. The Marcottes and Judge Porteous continued to confer benefits on each other.

⁶⁰ See Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article II, at 4.

⁶¹ Id. at 5.

Whatever the hypothetical concerns are that Judge Porteous raises about remote or trivial offenses, the conduct at issue in this case involved: (1) serious misconduct by Judge Porteous, (2) taken in a judicial capacity and thus clearly bearing on his fitness to be a judge, (3) which was affirmatively concealed from the Senate, and (4) which persisted after Judge Porteous took the federal bench. The revelation that a sitting federal judge has engaged in conduct that landed other state judges in prison brings the federal bench in disrepute. The appropriate remedy is for Judge Porteous to be removed from his office.

B. Impeachment Can Be Based on Pre-Federal Bench Conduct.

Judge Porteous's contention that pre-federal bench conduct – no matter how serious – cannot support impeachment, does not survive scrutiny. No reading of the Constitution or any other legal authority supports Judge Porteous's argument.

Pre-federal bench conduct as a basis for impeachment finds support in three distinct places: (1) the Constitution, (2) the impeachment proceedings involving Judge Robert W.

⁶² See Ronald Bodenheimer Grand Jury Testimony, at 10–11, 28–29 (April 22, 2004) (Relevant Excerpts attached as Attachment 8).

Archbald, and (3) the history of judges who were either prevented from or dissuaded from ascending to the federal bench because of corrupt pre-federal bench conduct.

1. The Constitution, in Providing for Impeachment for Treason, Bribery and High Crimes or Other Misdemeanors, Provides No Time Limit as to When Impeachable Conduct Must Occur.

Nothing in the text of the Constitution supports Judge Porteous's position that pre-federal bench conduct can never warrant impeachment. As noted in the House Report accompanying the Articles, "the Constitution describes certain types of conduct for which impeachment is warranted ("Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors"), 'it does not say when the misconduct must have been committed,' and certainly does not require that such conduct occur during the tenure of the Federal office from which impeachment is sought.'"⁶⁴ Indeed, treason or bribery may have occurred prior to confirmation as a federal judge. The ultimate decision by the Senate – whether the conduct rises to the level of a "High Crime or Misdemeanor" and warrants the judge's removal – does not turn on when that conduct occurred, but instead on whether that conduct so undermines the public trust that the judge must be removed from office.

Additionally, no policy justification exists for a blanket prohibition on the consideration of pre-federal bench conduct as a grounds for impeachment. The logic of Judge Porteous's position is that even if a federal judge were later found to have committed espionage or homicide prior to taking the federal bench, he could not be removed from his lifetime appointment as a federal judge, notwithstanding that proof of such conviction would so clearly demonstrate his unfitness for the job and would result in incalculable injury to the reputation of the federal judiciary.

Moreover, the three distinguished constitutional scholars who testified before the House Impeachment Task Force were unequivocal in their recognition of pre-federal bench conduct as a basis for impeachment. Each expert witness argued that pre-federal bench conduct can be the basis of impeachment.⁶⁵

Professor Gerhardt explained in his written statement:

Say, for instance, that the offence was murder—it is as serious a crime as any we have, and its commission by a judge completely undermines both his integrity and the moral authority he must have in order to function as a Federal judge. The timing of the murder is of less concern than the fact of it; this is the kind of behavior that is completely incompatible with the public trust invested in officials who are sufficiently high-ranking to be subject to the impeachment process.⁶⁶

Professor Amar stated at the hearing:

Let's take bribery. Imagine now a person who bribes his way into office. By definition, the bribery here occurs prior to the commencement of office holding. But surely that fact can't immunize the bribery from impeachment and removal. Had the bribery not occurred, the person never would have been an officer in the first place.⁶⁷

⁶⁵ Judge Porteous's attempts to characterize their testimony to the contrary is simply not supported by a fair reading of their testimony.

⁶⁶ See Written Statement of Professor Gerhardt, supra note 64, at 4.

⁶⁷ See Task Force Hearing, Part IV, supra note 17, at 17 (Testimony of Professor Amar). As one commentator has explained, impeachment rectifies a fraud in the confirmation process – when it is revealed that the true character of the person holding office is not what the Senate was led to believe at the time of confirmation:

The thrust of an impeachment trial is that the individual standing before the Senate is not the individual who secured an office by election or appointment. Rather, the later disclosure of misconduct revealed critical information about the individual's virtue or ability to hold public office.

Turley, supra note 3, at 7.

Professor Geyh stated:

[A] quid pro quo arrangement with bail bondsmen . . . is the kind of corruption that fairly may be characterized as a violation of the public trust. Who cares if it occurred before [Judge Porteous took the Federal bench]?⁶⁸

In addition, Professor John C. Harrison of the University of Virginia Law School has submitted his opinion on whether the conduct for which civil officers may be impeached, convicted and removed from office includes only actions that took place while the officers hold the office that is the subject of the impeachment. He notes:

Because impeachment is about the interests of the public, and not primarily about punishing wrongdoing, it is appropriate that a judgement of unfitness may be based on conduct that took place before an office-holder's appointment. Wrongdoing before one enters office can demonstrate serious untrustworthiness just as can wrongdoing while in office, and the ultimate touchstone in impeachment is whether the people can trust the office holder.⁶⁹

2. The Archbald Conviction on the “Omnibus” Count Supports the Impeachment of Judge Porteous.

The impeachment of Judge Robert W. Archbald raised the issue of prior conduct.⁷⁰

There were thirteen Articles of Impeachment brought against Archbald. Six Articles accused him of misconduct on the Commerce Court (where he was then assigned at the time of his impeachment and trial); six accused him of misconduct on the district court – his prior judicial appointment. Article 13, the Article most closely analogous to the Articles of Impeachment against Judge Porteous, set forth allegations that involved his conduct on both courts. On this Article, the Senate convicted Judge Archbald.

⁷⁰Judge Archbald was, at the time of his impeachment, a Judge on the Third Circuit Court of Appeals assigned to the Commerce Court.

The House carefully considered the propriety of brining pre-Commerce Court charges. The House’s reasoning for doing so is particularly apt in considering the conduct of Judge Porteous:

It is indeed anomalous if the Congress is powerless to remove a corrupt or unfit Federal judge from office because his corruption or misdemeanor, however vicious or reprehensible, may have occurred during his tenure in some other judicial office under the Government of the United States prior to his appointment to the particular office from which he is sought to be ousted by impeachment, although he may have held a Federal judgeship continuously from the time of the commission of his offenses. Surely the House of Representatives will not recognize nor the Senate apply such a narrow and technical construction of the constitutional provisions relating to impeachments.

See H.R. Rep. No. 946, Impeachment of Robert W. Archbald, Judge of the United States Commerce Court, Report of the Committee on the Judiciary (hereinafter “Archbald Impeachment Report”), reprinted in IMPEACHMENT: SELECTED MATERIALS, 93d Cong., 1st Sess., at 175 (1973), as reprinted in, U.S. IMPEACHMENT: SELECTED MATERIALS, 105th Cong., 2d Sess., at 11311 (1998).

Because debate was closed during the floor vote in the Archbald impeachment, there was no formal debate or discussion about the Senate's jurisdiction to impeach over prior conduct.⁷¹

The Senators were not required to state their reasons for their votes, yet a small minority of Senators did so, and divided equally on the issue of prior conduct with approximately six expressing the view one way and approximately six the other. The vast majority of Senators did not explain their votes. For example, one Senator stated:

Mr. Owen: Impeachment is the exercise of political power and not the exercise of mere judicial authority under a criminal code. Impeachment is the only mode of removing from office those persons proven to be unfit because of treason or high crime[s] or misdemeanors.

Whether these crimes be committed during the holding of a present office or a preceding office is immaterial if such crimes demonstrate the gross unfitness of such official to hold the great offices and dignities of the people.

A wise public policy forbids the precedent to be set that promotion in office of a criminal precludes his impeachment on the ground of his discovered high crimes and misdemeanors in a previous office from which he has just been promoted.

For these reasons it is my judgment that articles 7, 8, 9, etc., in so far as they charge crimes committed by Robert W. Archbald while United State district judge, comprise impeachable offense and may be alleged against him as judge of the Commerce Court.⁷²

⁷¹ See Proceedings of the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives in the Trial of Impeachment of Robert W. Archbald, 62d Cong., Sen. Doc. 1140, at 1620-78 (1913).

⁷² Id. at 1647. Several other Senators made similar statements. Senator Poindexter stated that:

[A]lthough the offenses were committed while the respondent was a district judge and before we was appointed circuit judge, yet, since the penalty for impeachable offenses is not only forfeiture of office, but disqualification to hold office thereafter, I am of [the] opinion that the offense charged in these articles, although committed before respondent's appointment as circuit judge, nevertheless disqualify him, on impeachment therefor [sic], from holding office as such circuit judge or as a Judge of the Commerce Court. There is no statute of limitations nor law of limitations in impeachment proceedings.

Though some Senators argued against impeachment on the district court counts, the fact that the Senate ultimately acquitted on those counts means little because the proof on those counts was apparently very weak. One Senator specifically noted that he was voting not guilty on all but one of the district court counts, but that his vote should not be misinterpreted as suggesting that charging prior conduct was improper. Senator Cullom stated:

I have voted "not guilty" on articles 4, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11 and 12, believing that they do not constitute the offense of high crimes and misdemeanors, and not because the acts were committed while the respondent was a judge of the district court. In my opinion the Senate would have jurisdiction to try respondent if the articles should warrant such action.⁷³

But although it is impossible to determine what motivated the votes of most Senators in the Archbald case, since most Senators were silent on the matter, one conclusion is beyond question: the Senate voted to convict Archbald on the one count that most closely resembles the Article against Judge Porteous and alleged conduct both prior to and during his tenure in the current office.

3. Corrupt Pre-Federal Bench Conduct Has Prevented or Dissuaded Judges Throughout History from Ascending to the Federal Bench And Caused Others to Resign Rather than be Impeached

Judge Porteous relies heavily on the fact that there is an absence of direct precedent for impeachment based on pre-office conduct. However, it is hardly surprising that most impeachments have involved conduct during the course of the judicial tenure. As a general matter, persons of dubious integrity are not considered for federal judgeships. Moreover, those

Id. at 1648. Senator Elihu Root stated: "I have no doubt that respondent is liable to impeachment for acts done while he was a judge of the district court and that the Senate has jurisdiction to try him for such acts." Id. at 1650. Senator Gronna stated: "While Judge Archbald was not at the time of the impeachment holding the identical office which he did when the offense referred to were committed, the office is closely linked to the one he previously held, and the duties he was called on to perform were of the same general nature." Id. at 1653.

⁷³ Id. at 1663.

individuals who are selected have to survive an FBI background check – a process that is intended to weed out applicants with significant misconduct in their backgrounds. In addition, applicants with derogatory information in their backgrounds are likely to self-select out of the process to avoid an inquiry or examination, which may expose wrongdoing they wish to keep concealed, and to avoid having to answer forms falsely under oath or make false statements in order to secure the position of federal judge.

In two instances where it has been discovered that a federal judge has taken the bench with undiscovered corrupt behavior in his background, the judge has resigned, thus eliminating the need for Congress to consider whether that misconduct warranted impeachment. Further, a consideration of the facts associated with those two instances demonstrates that impeachment would have been warranted, and indeed inevitable, if they had not resigned.

One example of a judge who voluntarily resigned to avoid impeachment is Judge Otto Kerner. After Judge Kerner became a judge on the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, he was prosecuted, convicted, and sentenced to jail for his conduct in accepting bribes as the Governor of Illinois, well before he assumed the federal bench. Upon his conviction, Members of Congress and the press called for him to resign or be impeached.⁷⁴ Those calls for resignation or impeachment reflect a commonsense recognition that a judge who committed egregious ethical misconduct even before he assumed the bench, in this case involving bribery, must be removed from the bench. The point in time when that conduct occurred was not important. As one author bluntly stated: “[J]udge Otto Kerner, Jr., of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh ⁷⁴ Although some small portion of the counts of conviction involved post-Federal bench actions (perjury or false statements), the calls for resignation or impeachment did not focus on that conduct.

Circuit resigned before inevitable impeachment after he was convicted for conduct that preceded his service.”⁷⁵

Another example is that of Judge Hebert Fogel of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, who resigned as a way of avoiding scrutiny for pre-federal bench conduct. As described in one law review article:

[J]udge Hebert Fogel of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania remained in office for more than a year after he was investigated in 1976 by the Justice Department for business irregularities occurring before he ascended to the bench. Judge Fogel invoked the Fifth Amendment when questioned before a grand jury about his role in a questionable government contract deal involving his uncle. The New York Times reported in November of 1976 that “deputy Attorney General Harold R. Tyler, Jr. has let it be known to Judge Fogel that it would be best for the reputation of the federal judiciary if he left the bench voluntarily.” Judge Fogel resigned about a year later and returned to private practice.”⁷⁶

The suggestion that Judge Fogel, if he had in fact engaged in corrupt government contract deals prior to taking the bench, would henceforth be beyond the reach of impeachment, makes no sense.

Thus, it is a rare situation in which serious pre-federal bench misconduct would come to light, so the lack of direct precedent is easily explicable. Judge Porteous’s case constitutes precisely that rare situation.

By concealing critical information, Judge Porteous sneaked through the background investigation process. His pre-federal bench misconduct in Article II only emerged as a result of FBI inquiries into the misconduct of other state judges several years after Judge Porteous had left the state court bench. Unlike Judges Kerner and Fogel, he has not resigned, but claims that no matter how egregious his pre-federal bench conduct, and no matter if his conduct brings the federal courts into disrepute, Congress lacks the power to remove him. Though this is an unusual circumstance, it is not one that is beyond Congress's constitutional impeachment power to address and remedy. And, the fact that the post-federal bench disclosure of pre-federal bench misconduct has seldom occurred has little to do with whether impeachment would be permitted to address it.

4. The Constitution's "Good Behavior" Language Does Not Set Forth a Substantive Standard of Conduct, But Instead Was Intended to Provide for Life Tenure for Federal Judges.

Judge Porteous has argued that he is entitled to hold his judicial office "during good behavior," and, therefore, the conduct which occurred prior to his taking the federal bench cannot constitute a basis for impeachment. By this argument, Judge Porteous fundamentally misreads the "good behavior" clause.

Article III, Section 1, of the Constitution provides:

Section 1. The judicial Power of the United States, shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their Offices during good behavior,

This provision means only that federal judges shall have life tenure – unless impeached. It does not set forth a separate standard for behavior, or in any way limit Congress's ability to impeach and remove for high crimes and misdemeanors – no matter when they occurred.

First, it would be incongruous for the Constitution to set forth specific grounds for impeachment in Article I (treason, bribery, and high crimes and misdemeanors), while at the same time providing for a separate and far more vague standard for removal in Article III (failing to engage in "good behavior").

Second, there is no basis in constitutional history or in the plain reading of the Constitution itself that suggests that the "good behavior" clause was intended to limit Congress in considering when conduct must take place to warrant impeachment. If that were the Framers' intent, then the constitutional definition of impeachable conduct could have provided that such conduct must occur while the judge is in the office from which impeachment is sought. Or, the temporal limitation as to impeachable conduct that Judge Porteous contends is provided by the "good behavior" clause would have been found in Article I (which defined impeachable conduct), and not in Article III (which establishes the judiciary). Judge Porteous's interpretation of the reach of the good behavior clause would not permit impeachment for treason or bribery, which was not disclosed prior to a judge's appointment to the bench.

In explaining why the "good behavior clause" should be understood as meaning "that federal judges shall hold tenure for life unless impeached," ⁷⁷ Professor Michael Gerhardt stressed two points. He noted that the Framers "included the phrase 'during good behavior' in the Constitution to contrast the unlimited term of federal judges with the fixed terms for the president, vice-president and members of Congress."⁷⁸ Second, he noted that the "good behavior" language is a lesser standard of conduct than the grounds for impeachment set forth in Article I, and that the Framers had rejected "maladministration" as a ground for removal because it was so vague. Thus, it would conflict with the structure of the Constitution and the framers' desire for an independent federal judiciary designed to protect citizens from potential overreaching of the federal government if so vague a standard as "good behavior" (in Article III) were read to make it easier to remove federal judges than the "high crimes and misdemeanor" standard in Article I.⁷⁹ As Gerhardt concluded: "It defies common sense for the framers to have taken great pains to have purposefully designed such an awkward system for remedying judicial misconduct but then implicitly left Congress and the president free to remove judges on identical or more lenient grounds through some other, nonspecified, more efficient devices.”⁸⁰

⁷⁷ GERHARDT, supra note 35, at 83.

⁷⁹ Id. at 84.

Accordingly, no article of impeachment against any judge has ever stated that the allegedly impeachable conduct failed to constitute “good behavior” and thus warranted the judge’s removal from office.

WHEREFORE, because there is simply no persuasive authority for the proposition that the Constitutional power to impeach a federal judge cannot be exercised where the misconduct at issue occurred prior to appointment, Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article II should be denied.

III. ARTICLE III PROPERLY ALLEGES CONDUCT THAT WARRANTS IMPEACHMENT AND REMOVAL FROM OFFICE

A. Judge Porteous Misconstrues Article III and Misstates the Facts.

Judge Porteous argues that Article III should be dismissed because, in essence, it alleges nothing more than “errors or inaccuracies,” “common problems,” and “common mistakes” that any debtor in bankruptcy may experience. He further argues that it should be dismissed because it alleges “private, minor, bankruptcy misconduct.” Both these arguments fail, and his motion should be denied.

Judge Porteous’s first argument, like his arguments to dismiss other Articles, rests on a mischaracterization of what the Article charges. Article III alleges more than a mere series of errors. To be clear, Article III alleges that Judge Porteous “engaged in a pattern of conduct inconsistent with the trust and confidence placed in him as a federal judge by knowingly and intentionally making material false statements and representations under penalty of perjury related to his personal bankruptcy filing and by repeatedly violating a court order in his bankruptcy case.”⁸¹ The conduct that comprised these false statements, misrepresentations and acts is set forth as follows:

- (1) knowingly using a false name and a post office box address to conceal his identity as the debtor in the case;
- (2) concealing assets;
- (3) concealing preferential payments to certain creditors;
- (4) concealing gambling losses and other gambling debts; and
- (5) incurring new debts while the case was pending, in violation of the bankruptcy court's order.⁸²

The hypothetical situation posed by Judge Porteous – that this conduct could have been committed by some other debtor as a result of innocent error⁸³ – is a red herring. The issue before the Senate is whether this conduct, when actually committed by Judge Porteous himself, involved his knowing and intentional attempts to dishonestly thwart and evade the bankruptcy laws, including lying under oath in order to do so.

The evidence in the Senate trial will establish the numerous dishonest acts that Judge Porteous committed and argue their significance as to the proof of his intent. At this stage, the House notes, however, that Judge Porteous's dishonesty in his bankruptcy filings – concealing debts and gambling activities – is similar to the dishonesty reflected in his annual financial disclosure statements, which he filed in the years leading up to his bankruptcy,⁸⁴ and as reflected in Judge Porteous's conduct in connection with his background check to become a federal judge.

⁸² Id. at 6.

⁸³ See Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article III, at 2.

⁸⁴ See Porteous Impeachment Report, supra note 26, at 93–95.

In addition, Judge Porteous's factual assertions are simply inaccurate. For example, Judge Porteous, at the same time he was signing and preparing his bankruptcy schedules, filed for a tax refund in excess of $4,000. When asked about the tax refund at the Fifth Circuit, he falsely blamed his bankruptcy counsel, Mr. Lightfoot and he persists with that explanation in his Motion to Dismiss Article III.⁸⁵ On this particular issue, the House Impeachment Task Force Hearing record is telling:

Ms. KONAR [Impeachment Task Force Counsel]. Did Judge Porteous ever tell you that on March 23rd of 2001, he filed his tax return for the year 2000 and he requested a $4,143 tax refund?

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. No.

Ms. KONAR. Did Judge Porteous ever tell you that on April 13th, 2001, which was just 4 days after his bankruptcy schedules were filed, that he received that $4,143 tax refund into his bank account?

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. No.

Ms. KONAR. Is the information concerning this tax refund that we have just discussed something that Judge Porteous should have disclosed to you?

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. I would expect a positive answer to that. Relative to the term "liquidated," if you filed a tax return, you know exactly what you are entitled to. So if earlier in the year, let's say you are October of 2000, you can't have filed your 2000 return yet, the year is not even over, you don't file it until the following year. So if a tax return has been filed and there is a liquidated amount and it is owed, and you know that it is owed, then it should be in that answer.

Ms. KONAR. What would you have done if you had found out prior to filing Judge Porteous's bankruptcy schedules that he had filed his year 2000 tax refund and that he had claimed a $4,000 tax refund?

⁸⁵See Fifth Circuit Transcript, supra note 23, at 80–84.

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. I would have amended his schedule to list it, had it been absent, and probably informed the trustee, particularly if the meeting of creditors hadn't been held yet. I would have mentioned it.⁸⁶

In another attempt to explain away one of the many perjurious statements in his bankruptcy filings, Judge Porteous blames his attorney for their scheme to file his initial bankruptcy petition under a false name.⁸⁷ The fact that his attorney was a willing participant in this fraudulent filing does not absolve Judge Porteous of responsibility. Even if his attorney was willing to subvert his own legal and ethical obligations, that does not mitigate the wrongfulness of the judge's conduct — particularly coming from someone who must, at times, preside over bankruptcy proceedings.

Whether similar conduct by a private person would warrant a criminal prosecution is a far different issue than whether that same conduct by a federal judge on matters that touch centrally to his duties, would warrant his removal from office.⁸⁸ Article III clearly charges that, by his conduct in the bankruptcy proceedings, "Judge Porteous brought his court into scandal and disrepute, prejudiced public respect for and confidence in the federal judiciary, and demonstrated that he is unfit for the office of federal judge."⁸⁹

⁸⁶ See To Consider Possible Impeachment of United States District Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., Part III, Hearing Before the Task Force on Judicial Impeachment of the Committee on the Judiciary (hereinafter, "Task Force Hearing, Part III"), Ser. No. 111-44, 111th Cong., 1st Sess., at 46-47 (Dec. 8, 2009). Judge Porteous stresses that he ultimately complied with the repayment plan. This ignores the fact that the repayment plan was procured in bad faith, and the creditors would have received more money had Judge Porteous been honest. By not reporting the tax refund for example, Judge Porteous in effect stole $4,000 from his creditors.

⁸⁷ See Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article III, at 7.

⁸⁸ Judge Porteous further complains that Article III fails to set forth all the elements of a criminal offense. As set forth above, the Articles of Impeachment do not purport to allege violations of specific criminal laws and need not do so to sustain a conviction by the Senate.

⁸⁹ See H. Res. 1031, supra note 49, at 6.

Finally, Judge Porteous distorts the facts in Article III by claiming that the trustee who oversaw his bankruptcy case “elected not to take action” after the FBI advised the trustee that Judge Porteous had filed his bankruptcy petition using an “incorrect name.”⁹⁰ Yet, Judge Porteous conveniently fails to note that the letter explaining the bankruptcy trustee’s decision not to take action specifically noted that “the FBI has refused to provide the Trustee with any evidence of improprieties by debtor. Since [the trustee] has no evidence to support the suspicions expressed by the FBI agents, he does not intend to take further action related to these allegations.”⁹¹ All of these factual arguments by Judge Porteous, in any event, go well beyond the four corners of the Articles of Impeachment and are not properly considered pre-trial.

B. Personal Misconduct is Recognized as an Appropriate Basis for Impeachment.

Judge Porteous also argues Article III alleges only “private, minor, bankruptcy misconduct” that was not the subject of a criminal prosecution. It is clear, however, that “private” conduct can be the basis for impeachment. It is likewise clear that Judge Porteous’s definition of “minor” – in substance, conduct that was not the subject of a criminal prosecution – is unsupportable. In this way, he attempts to distinguish this case from that of Judge Claiborne, who was convicted of tax evasion and was thus a convicted felon. But, Judge Porteous’s argument flies in the face of the Constitution’s text and is inconsistent with the Senate’s resolution in prior impeachments.

⁹⁰ See Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article III, at 8.

⁹¹ See Letter from attorney Michael Adoue to FBI Agent Horner (April 1, 2004). (A copy of the April 1, 2004 Letter from Adoue to Horner is attached to Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article III as Exhibit 2.)

1. Criminal Prosecution for Personal Misconduct is Not Required to Impeach for that Conduct.

Presumably aware that he cannot prevail on the argument that the Constitution does not allow “personal” conduct to be a basis for impeachment, Judge Porteous attempts to argue that what the Constitution really means is that a judge cannot be impeached for personal misconduct if the Executive Branch failed to prosecute that conduct. Such an argument is contrary to overwhelming precedent that makes it clear that a criminal prosecution is wholly irrelevant to whether a given course of conduct warrants impeachment.

The essence of the argument advanced by Judge Porteous was addressed by the House in connection with the impeachment of Judge George English for a variety of acts for which he was not criminally prosecuted. The Report accompanying the Articles recognized that the fact of indictment and prosecution was not relevant to the exercise by Congress of its Impeachment power in removing a federal judge. The Report noted there may well be circumstances where

[a] civil officer may have behaved in public so as to bring disgrace upon himself and shame upon the country and . . . his name became a public stench and yet might not be subject to indictment under any law of the United States, but he certainly could be impeached. Otherwise the public would in this and kindred cases be beyond the protection intended by the Constitution.⁹²

Thus, the fact of or lack of federal prosecution is ultimately irrelevant to the issue of whether specified conduct rises to the level of a “high crime or misdemeanor” warranting impeachment. Under Judge Porteous’s theory of Constitutional interpretation, Congress can impeach only if the Department of Justice prosecutes. Aside from the fact that most of the impeachments in this country’s history have not followed criminal prosecutions, there is no principled basis for Congress – either the House or Senate – to abdicate its constitutionally assigned roles associated with the exercise of the impeachment power and cede them to the Attorney General of the United States.

Indeed, the Senate has spoken clearly that the existence of a federal prosecution – even a federal criminal conviction – does not drive its consideration of whether the conduct alleged in the Articles of Impeachment warrants conviction and removal. Judge Claiborne was ultimately convicted and removed by the Senate for his conduct. The Senate acquitted on the Article which specifically charged the federal conviction as grounds for impeachment. Similarly, the Senate convicted and removed Judge Hastings, even after he was acquitted in his jury trial.

The Report accompanying the Articles of Impeachment of Judge Porteous addressed the relevance of the fact that the Department of Justice did not prosecute Judge Porteous:

First, the nature of Congress's determination whether to impeach is fundamentally different from DOJ's decision whether to prosecute. Congress does not decide guilt or innocence with reference to a criminal statute. Rather, it is for Congress to make what is in essence a "fitness for office" determination. Congress alone has the power to remove an unfit Federal judge, and conduct that renders a judge unfit may not necessarily violate a criminal statute.

Second, Congress has an independent responsibility to review the evidence and cannot rely on DOJ's assessment of what the evidence reveals. Thus, just as the House heard the evidence involving Judge Samuel B. Kent, and before that of Judges Walter Nixon and Robert Collins, and did not rely solely on the fact that each of those judges had been criminally convicted, so it is proper for Congress to consider and review the evidence that relates to the conduct of Judge Porteous, even though some of that evidence (but not all) was considered by the Department of Justice.

Fifth, the Impeachment Task Force has . . . uncovered new evidence that simply was not considered by the Department, . . . [specifically] the Task

Force and the Committee had the benefit of the Fifth Circuit hearings which expanded on the evidence available to the DOJ.⁹³

The Senate is entitled to conclude that Judge Porteous's dishonest statements and acts in his bankruptcy proceedings demonstrate that he cannot be entrusted with upholding the integrity of federal judicial proceedings, despite the fact that the Department of Justice declined to prosecute.⁹⁴ The Senate may likewise conclude that Judge Porteous's continued presence on the federal bench brings the federal judiciary into disrepute, and that conviction is warranted.

2. Congress Has Rejected a Distinction Between Private and Public Conduct in the Impeachment Context.

a. The Judge Claiborne Impeachment.

There is no distinction between public and private conduct when Congress considers impeachable offenses. Judge Porteous's argument, which rests on the "private" nature of the financial misconduct, is fundamentally indistinguishable from the argument that Judge Claiborne raised and that the Senate Committee rejected in his Impeachment. In that case, Articles of Impeachment against Judge Claiborne charged him with filing false tax returns. In his motion to dismiss, Judge Claiborne argued in terms that track Judge Porteous's claims here, namely, that impeachment "was designed to reach those in high places guilty of official delinquencies or maladministration" and that the charges against him were "based on alleged private misconduct, as distinguished from official misconduct."⁹⁵ In its response, the House stressed that nothing in the text of the Constitution supported the private / public distinction and stated that if the Framers sought impeachment to be limited to “official” conduct, they certainly could have included such a limitation in the Constitution. Moreover, as the House explained in Claiborne:

⁹⁴ See Complaint of Judicial Misconduct Concerning The Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., filed by the Department of Justice, at 1 (May 18, 2007). (A copy of the DOJ Complaint is attached to Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article III as Exhibit 1. It is also marked as HP Exhibit 4 on the House's Exhibit List.)

⁹⁵ See [Judge Claiborne's] Motion to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment on the Grounds They Do Not State Impeachable Offenses at 3, reprinted in Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, Hearings before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, United States Senate,

A review of the history of the impeachment provisions in the Constitution demonstrates the error in Judge Claiborne’s argument. The same narrow view of impeachable offenses expressly was offered and rejected by the Framers of the Constitution.

The Constitutional Convention convened on July 20, 1787, to consider the impeachment provisions. As originally drafted, the impeachment clause provided that the President should be “removable on impeachment and conviction of malpractice or neglect of duty.” 1 The Records of the Federal Convention of 1787 69 (M. Farrand ed. 1911) (hereinafter Farrand). The provision was subsequently revised to make the President impeachable for “treason, bribery or corruption.” 2 Farrand, supra, at 185-86. On September 8, 1787, Colonel Mason moved to add the phrase “or maladministration” after “bribery.” He argued that “maladministration” was already a ground for impeachment in five State constitutions. In response, James Madison objected that “maladministration” was too narrow a standard. Mason soon withdrew his amendment and substituted the phrase “or other high crimes and misdemeanors.” The formulation was accepted, along with an amendment to extend the impeachment sanction to the Vice President and all other civil officers. Id., at 552. The Framers thus rejected, at two separate junctures, the concepts of professional “malpractice” or “maladministration” as the sole basis for the impeachment of federal officials.⁹⁶

At the oral arguments, Judge Claiborne’s counsel repeated the arguments he had made in his written motion, arguing, for example: “[O]ur position, of course, is that there is no allegation at this point in time that the behavior of Judge Claiborne in any way was related to misbehavior in his official function as a judge; it was private misbehavior. And we submit that, based on that private conduct, it is not an impeachable offense.”⁹⁷ In response, House Manager Kastenmeier reiterated: “As has been pointed out, it would be absurd to conclude that a judge who had committed murder, mayhem, rape, or perhaps espionage in his private life, could not be removed from office by the U.S. Senate.”

(hereinafter “Claiborne Impeachment Report”) S. Hrg. 99-812, 99th Cong., 2d Sess., at 244, 246 (1986). As to whether “non-official” conduct could constitute a basis for impeachment, Judge Claiborne further went on to argue: “[o]ffenses not immediately connected with office, such as murder, burglary, and robbery, are left to the ordinary course of judicial proceedings, while impeachment was historically limited to misconduct in office.” Id.

⁹⁶ See [The House of Representatives’] Opposition to [Judge Claiborne’s] Motion to Dismiss Articles of Impeachment for Failure to State Impeachable Offenses at 3–4, reprinted in Claiborne Impeachment Report, supra note 96, at 443–44.

The Senate Impeachment Trial Committee resolved this issue on the merits. After noting that he lacked the authority to dismiss the Article, Chairman Mathias nonetheless ruled:

There is neither historical nor logical reason to believe that the Framers of the Constitution sought to prohibit the House from impeaching and the Senate from convicting an officer of the United States who had committed treason or bribery or any other high crime or misdemeanor which is a serious offense against the government of the United State and which indicates that the official is unfit to exercise public responsibilities, but which is an offense which is technically unrelated to the officer's particular job responsibilities.⁹⁸

The House urges the Senate Committee to follow the Claiborne Committee's disposition of this issue.

b. The Judge Walter Nixon Impeachment

The Judge Walter Nixon impeachment in 1989 further illustrates the inapplicability of the private conduct versus official conduct distinction and provides additional grounds to reject Judge Porteous's claims. In that case, Judge Nixon had attempted to persuade a local Sheriff to go easy on the prosecution of one of Judge Nixon's business associates, an individual who had provided Judge Nixon with lucrative investment opportunities. Thereafter, when investigated for bribery for having taken things of value from the business associate, Judge Nixon lied to the FBI and the Grand Jury and denied he had spoken to the Sheriff. Ultimately, Judge Nixon was impeached for lying to the FBI and committing perjury before the Grand Jury.

The Judge Nixon Impeachment establishes the propriety of impeachment when it is shown that a federal judge made false statements under oath and took other acts of concealment to interfere with a federal judicial proceeding, even one which had no bearing on any case in his own courtroom. Judge Porteous's false statements and pattern of concealment in the bankruptcy case are therefore well within the Nixon precedent.

WHEREFORE, Article III properly alleges that the conduct of Judge Porteous in his bankruptcy case justifies his conviction and removal from office. Specifically, by his bankruptcy-related misconduct, "Judge Porteous brought his court into scandal and disrepute, prejudiced public respect for and confidence in the Federal judiciary, and demonstrated that he is unfit for the office of Federal judge." This properly sets forth a compelling basis for Judge Porteous's conviction and removal. Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article III should be denied.

IV. ARTICLE IV PROPERLY ALLEGES CONDUCT THAT WARRANTS IMPEACHMENT AND REMOVAL FROM OFFICE

In his Motion to Dismiss Article IV, Judge Porteous grossly mischaracterizes what Article IV actually charges. Judge Porteous claims that "Article IV is nothing more than a statement by the House that, in the House's view, Judge Porteous should have been embarrassed by the facts alleged in Articles I and II."⁹⁹ He goes on to argue that "[i]f Judge Porteous were convicted on the basis of Article IV, the Senate would be asserting the right to remove a judge because it believes that a judge should have viewed an uncharged and unproven allegation to be ⁹⁹ See Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article IV, at 2.

‘embarrassing.’”¹⁰⁰ Reading Judge Porteous’s Motion, one would be under the impression that Judge Porteous was asked on several occasions nothing more than to reveal “embarrassing” information. This is a mischaracterization of what occurred.

What Article IV actually alleges is that during his background check to determine his qualifications to be a federal judge, Judge Porteous made a series of materially false statements, as follows: (1) denying under oath on his Supplemental SF-86 that there was anything “in his personal life that could be used by someone to coerce or blackmail him, or if there was anything in his life that could cause an embarrassment to Judge Porteous or the President if publicly known;” (2) “falsely [telling] the Federal Bureau of Investigation on two separate occasions that he was not concealing any activity or conduct that could be used to influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise him in any way or that would impact negatively on his character, reputation, judgment, or discretion,” and (3) representing under oath on a Senate Judiciary Committee Questionnaire that, to the best of his knowledge, he did “not know of any unfavorable information that may affect [his] nomination.”¹⁰¹

Article IV alleges that these statements were false because, in truth and in fact, as Judge Porteous well-knew, he had engaged in corrupt relationships with attorneys Creely and Amato, and with bail bondsman Louis Marcotte. Contrary to Judge Porteous’s description of Article IV, Judge Porteous is not charged with having concealed the “allegation” of improper relationships, he is instead charged with having made false statements to conceal the actual underlying conduct. Judge Porteous knew that such information would have been material to the White House and the Senate, and that he would not have been nominated or confirmed had he been

¹⁰¹ H. Res. 1031, supra note 49, at 7–8.

truthful about these relationships.¹⁰² As further proof of knowledge that certain information would have been material, Judge Porteous did not set aside the criminal conviction of one of the Marcottes' employees until after his confirmation proceeding, which demonstrates that Judge Porteous understood what the Senate was looking for and which shows his mens rea.¹⁰³

Judge Porteous goes on to argue that the background check questions, as he repeatedly mischaracterizes them, were "vague, ambiguous, . . . nebulous [and] are incapable of being proven false."¹⁰⁴ Notwithstanding Judge Porteous's claims, the information that was sought by ¹⁰² Because an impeachment proceeding is not a criminal prosecution, analogies to the criteria for Federal indictments are irrelevant. Nonetheless, the House notes that there is at least one recent criminal case where an individual was prosecuted by way of a guilty plea for false statements arising from his having falsely stated to an investigator as part of a security investigation that he had not "engaged in conduct which would . . . make him vulnerable to coercion . . ." See Criminal Information, U.S. v. Keyser, Case No. 1:05-CR-543 (E.D. Va. Dec. 12, 2005):

Count Three

On or about August 9, 2004, in Arlington, Virginia, in the Eastern District of Virginia, the defendant . . . did knowingly, willfully, and unlawfully make material false, fictitious, and fraudulent statements and representations, and conceal material facts, in a matter within the jurisdiction of an agency within the executive branch of the Government of the United States; to wit, on or about the above date, [defendant] falsely stated to an investigator . . . that he had not engaged in conduct which would may make him vulnerable to coercion, exploitation, or pressure from a foreign government.

(In violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1001(a)).

(emphasis added) (Attachment 13). The "vulnerable to coercion, exploitation, or pressure from a foreign government" language is, in material respects, indistinguishable from the "influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise" language at issue in Article IV in this case.

the questions could not be more obvious. As Professor Amar testified before the House

Impeachment Task Force:

[E]veryone knows what is actually at the core of the question[s]. Are you an honest person? Are you a person of integrity? Do you have the requisites to hold a position of honor, trust, and profit? Do you have judicial integrity? That is at the core of all these questions. That is not at the periphery.

And what he lied about was his gross misconduct as a judge: taking money from parties, taking money in cash envelopes, not reporting any of this to anyone. . . .

[W]e know what those questions at their core [were] about, and he lied at the core. There is vagueness at the periphery, but this was really central.¹⁰⁵

Judge Porteous notes that Congress has never instituted impeachment proceedings for failing to disclose information.¹⁰⁶ However, the reasons that impeachment is appropriate for Judge Porteous's conduct are manifest. If impeachment were not permitted, then an individual who attained his judicial position by fraud would, in essence, be immune from removal. Judge ¹⁰⁵ See Task Force Hearing, Part IV, Testimony of Professor Akhil Amar, supra note 64, at 34–35. Professor Amar further noted that these questions did not constitute some sort of “trap” for the unwary: “All he has to do is simply say, I do not wish to be considered for this position.” Id. at 42.

¹⁰⁶ Judge Porteous has put together a list of persons who have been reported in the press as having made false statements of one sort or another in the confirmation process. These include a true hodgepodge of fact patterns, including instances of obvious innocent error and misstatements that were corrected prior to confirmation. Notably, none of the cases involved the willful concealment of potentially criminal misconduct by an appointee to become a Federal judge. When applicants did conceal such conduct, as with Cisneros and Kerik, they were in fact subject to criminal prosecution. Moreover, there is a significant difference between appointees to the Executive Branch and appointees to the Federal bench. As a practical matter, Congress has oversight power of the Executive Branch, and the positions at issue are not lifetime appointments. The individuals can be removed – and will inevitably be removed – by the process of elections and the workings of the political process. The Judge Bybee example is particularly inapposite, because there is no contention that Judge Bybee made any false statements to the Senate in connection with his confirmation.

Porteous views Senate confirmations as a game of hide the ball – there is no need to disclose anything you do not expect the Senate to learn of on its own, and, once confirmed, a federal judgeship is a lifetime safe harbor. While that may be the system that Judge Porteous would have the Senate adopt, it is certainly not one contemplated by the Constitution. As the House Report noted:

For reasons set forth in the discussion of Article II, it is appropriate to consider pre-Federal bench conduct as a basis to impeach. Even though Judge Porteous did not make the statements in a judicial capacity, and even though this conduct did not carry over into his tenure as a Federal judge, the false statements corrupted the judicial appointment and rendered it illegitimate from its inception. As Professor Amar testified before the Task Force, after stating why pre-Federal bench “bribery” would constitute impeachable conduct:

Now what is true of bribery is equally true of fraud. A person who procures a judgeship by lying to the President and lying to the Senate has wrongly obtained his office by fraud and is surely removable via impeachment for that fraud.

Professor Gerhardt agreed that “lying to or defrauding the Senate in order to be approved as a Federal judge” is likely to justify impeachment. First of all, that conduct is serious as a stand-alone matter in that it “plainly erodes the essential, indispensable integrity without which a Federal judge is unable to do his job.” Professor Gerhardt noted, however, that in the case of Judge Porteous, it is not necessary to determine whether the false statements themselves demonstrated his unfitness.

For, by defrauding the Senate in his confirmation proceedings, Judge Porteous has engaged in misconduct that is egregious and has a more than obvious connection to his present position. The nexus is that Judge Porteous deprived the Senate of information that would undoubtedly have changed the outcome in his confirmation hearing. His failure to disclose is nothing less than an attack on the integrity of the confirmation process and an affront to the constitutional responsibilities of the President and the Senate.¹⁰⁷

¹⁰⁷ See Porteous Impeachment Report, supra note 26, at 22–23 (citing Task Force Hearing, Part IV) (footnotes omitted). The obvious propriety of impeachment on this conduct – fraud in the

Finally, Judge Porteous alleges that the Senate was aware of many of the facts that Article IV alleges that he concealed. There is nothing to suggest that the Senate was made aware of the corrupt relationships Judge Porteous had with Creely, Amato, or the Marcottes. It is inconceivable that these facts would not have been material to the Senate as it considered Judge Porteous's candidacy for the federal bench. That is why he lied. As to Judge Porteous's relationships with those in the bail bonds industry, for example, he notes that the FBI background check contained certain anonymous information suggesting that the Judge had corrupt relationships with bondsmen and attorneys. However, Judge Porteous has it backwards and misses the significance of this fact. The existence of these general allegations only increases the significance of Judge Porteous's false statements – under oath or to the FBI – since he was well aware of information that would negatively impact on his confirmation.

Indeed, it was precisely the existence of these allegations that caused the FBI to interview Judge Porteous a second time, and to ask him yet again whether there was anything in his background that “might be the basis of attempted influence, pressure, coercion or compromise, and/or would impact negatively on his character, reputation, judgment or discretion.”¹⁰⁸ These allegations compound the materiality of Judge Porteous's denials. Because the second interview followed up on allegations of impropriety, Judge Porteous had no doubt as to the information that was sought by the questions, and the information he was concealing by his answers. Judge Porteous's comments that the curatorships assigned to Creely were a matter of public record obviously omits the important part of that story – namely, that Creely gave Judge Porteous a portion of the money he received from those same curatorships. This relationship – of obvious confirmation process – is yet another example of the propriety of impeachment for pre-Federal Bench conduct.

¹⁰⁸ See August 18, 1994 FBI Interview of Judge Porteous, supra note 14, at 2–3.

potential importance to the Senate in determining whether Judge Porteous should be confirmed – was concealed.

WHEREFORE, Article IV properly alleges conduct warranting Judge Porteous's impeachment based on Judge Porteous defrauding the Senate and lying to the FBI in order to obtain the office of federal judge. Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss Article IV should be denied.

V. THE ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT DO NOT IMPERMISSIBLY AGGREGATE DISCRETE ALLEGATIONS

Judge Porteous claims that the structure of the Articles of Impeachment aggregates a series of discrete allegations, in violation of both Article I, Section 6 and Article II, Section IV of the Constitution. He argues that the Articles of Impeachment as drafted are contrary to the approach used in "prior impeachments."¹⁰⁹ He argues further that the Senate, therefore, should dismiss all of the Articles or, in the alternative, should require voting on each specific factual predicate claim within each Article. Judge Porteous's arguments are wrong on the law and wrong in their characterization of the impeachment Articles and of the history of impeachment convictions by the Senate. There is no basis for granting the relief he seeks, and the motion should be denied.

Regarding Judge Porteous's first argument, he is wrong that the Constitution bars the Senate from considering and convicting a federal official based on an Article of Impeachment with multiple factual predicates. Judge Porteous cites two constitutional provisions, neither of which supports his claim. First, he claims that aggregation would violate the requirement that to convict in an impeachment, the Senate must provide "Concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.”¹¹⁰ But the House has framed its Articles and the Senate will vote on them up or down. If two-thirds of the Senators present vote to convict, Article I’s two-thirds requirement will plainly be satisfied. No more is required. Second, Judge Porteous claims that if the Senate convicts on the Articles as presented, it would “deprive[] Judge Porteous, the public, and the historical record of a clear finding” as to the basis for removal from federal office.¹¹¹ This argument is deficient on its face: the basis for the removal from office is precisely the course of conduct set forth in the Articles, which is and will be in the clear historical record, and the contents of which have long been known to Judge Porteous.

Regarding Judge Porteous’s second argument, he fails to acknowledge the historical examples of Senate precedent that directly support Articles of Impeachment with multiple factual predicates. In the Judge Nixon Impeachment, Judge Nixon sought to dismiss Article III, which repeated the allegations of the Articles I and II, and, as alleged by Judge Nixon, contained fourteen separate allegations of false statements to the FBI and the federal grand jury. The Senate Committee specifically rejected Judge Nixon’s argument that this charge was inappropriate, noting that the Article set forth “an intelligible and adequately discrete charge;” “[t]he House has substantial discretion in determining how to aggregate related alleged acts of misconduct in framing Articles of Impeachment and has historically frequently chosen to aggregate multiple factual allegations in a single impeachment article[;]” and “[t]he House’s itemization of the fourteen particular statements . . . serves to give Judge Nixon fair notice of the contours of the charge”¹¹² Similarly, in the Judge Halsted Ritter Impeachment, Judge Ritter was convicted on an omnibus Article – which, in substance, restated the allegations from the other articles, on all of which he had been acquitted.¹¹³ Judge Porteous does not (and could not) credibly claim that any of the Articles against him are “omnibus” in this sense. These examples, which ultimately supported the conviction and removal of Judge Ritter, confirm just how farfetched Judge Porteous’s aggregation theory is.

Regarding his third argument, not only does Judge Porteous misstate the constitutional limits and historical evidence informing the Senate’s method of decision as to whether removal is warranted, he badly mischaracterizes the Articles of Impeachment themselves. Each Article describes a course of conduct in pursuit of a unitary end, pursued through a combination of means. Article I describes Judge Porteous’s improper conduct while presiding over the Liljeberg case, arising from his concealed corrupt financial relationships with attorneys Creely and Amato; Article II describes Judge Porteous’s corrupt relationship with Louis and Lori Marcotte and provides the details of what he received from the Marcottes and what he did for them; Article III describes the numerous dishonest acts and false statements under oath by Judge Porteous to deprive his creditors and the bankruptcy court of the truth surrounding his financial circumstances and Judge Porteous’s violations of a bankruptcy court order; and Article IV describes Judge Porteous’s false statements during his background check to becoming a federal judge, in which he knowingly concealed his corrupt relationships with attorneys Creely and Amato and with bail bondsmen Louis and Lori Marcotte. Even though each of these separate schemes are comprised of several discrete acts, each Article describes a single coherent scheme.

The Articles against Judge Porteous easily withstand scrutiny under the criteria suggested by Senate precedent: each is intelligible and discrete, each constitutes a proper exercise of the House's discretion in specifying the conduct by Article for which the House has determined impeachment and removal are warranted, and each provides Judge Porteous fair notice of the contours of the charge. The House has properly framed its Articles, and the Senate will vote on them up or down.¹¹⁴ There is no colorable constitutional violation from this method of impeachment trial, and no remotely credible basis for dismissal of the Articles prior to trial.

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous's Motion to Dismiss the four Articles of Impeachment or to require a series of separate preliminary votes should be denied.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for all the foregoing reasons, Judge Porteous's Motions to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment should be denied.

¹¹⁴ See H. Res. 1031, supra note 49. The Articles of Impeachment against Judge Porteous are attached to this Consolidated Opposition at Attachment 7. By way of comparison, the House attaches to this Consolidated Opposition the Articles of Impeachment of Judges Archbald and Ritter, respectively (Attachments 14 and 15). Even a cursory review of these Articles reveals how straightforward and narrow the Articles are in this case, as contrasted with Articles from prior judicial impeachments.

GABRIEL THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR., Judge, Division A, 24th Judicial District Court, Parish of Jefferson, was interviewed at his place of business, JEFFERSON PARISH COURTHOUSE, Gretna, Louisiana 70053, 504/364-3850. PORTEOUS was advised that he was being interviewed as a result of a request for the FBI to conduct a background investigation concerning his candidacy for U.S. District Judge, Eastern District of Louisiana. PORTEOUS was advised that the scope of the questions asked during the interview was not necessarily limited to the timeframe on the SF-86 and that his response to each question should cover his entire adult life, since age 18. It was also pointed out the PORTEOUS that Question 23 on the SF-86, pertaining to "Police Record," covers activities since his 16th birthday.

PORTEOUS currently resides at 4801 Neyrey Drive, Metairie, Louisiana, which is the only property he owns at this time. PORTEOUS attended LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY AT NEW ORLEANS (LSU-NO), from September, 1964, to May, 1968, while he resided with his family at 2218 Madrid Street, New Orleans, Louisiana. LSU-NO is known as the UNIVERSITY OF NEW ORLEANS (UNO) today. PORTEOUS was employed by BAKER'S SHOE STORES as listed in his application the summer after his graduation from high school and during his attendance at LSU-NO.

After graduation from LSU-NO in May, 1968, PORTEOUS continued to work for BAKER'S SHOE STORES during the summer. During PORTEOUS' attendance at LSU LAW SCHOOL in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, he continued to work part-time for BAKER'S and affiliated shoe stores in Baton Rouge. He believes BAKER'S is owned by EDISON SHOES. After PORTEOUS' first year of law school, from May, 1969, to approximately August, 1969, he resided with his parents on Madrid Street for a few months while he prepared for his wedding. PORTEOUS said that after graduation from law school in May, 1971, he was preparing for the Bar examination which he took in late June or early July, 1971. He believes he began working at the Office of the Attorney General, State of Louisiana, throughout the Summer of 1971, before becoming Special Counsel there in September, 1971.

PORTEOUS advised that from July, 1982, until August, 1984, he was employed part-time as a city attorney for the City of Harahan, simultaneously working as a Jefferson Parish District Attorney. He advised that the law firm of EDWARDS, PORTEOUS, & AMATO that he had been with beginning January, 1973, is the firm that evolved into PORTEOUS & MUSTAKAS, of which he was a partner until August, 1984. PORTEOUS said that he was employed part-time with B&L ASSOCIATES from August, 1970, to May, 1971, while at the same time working part-time for BAKER'S. He said that he was basically "on call" for B&L ASSOCIATES to conduct interviews and take statements.

PORTEOUS said that he does not really have a supervisor currently but listed HUGH COLLINS on his application as COLLINS is the judicial administrator for the State of Louisiana.

PORTEOUS said that he has no personal or business credit issues, including but not limited to repossessions, delinquent student loans, debts placed for collection, or bankruptcy. He advised that he is current on all Federal, State, and local tax obligations, including but not limited to income taxes, Medicare taxes, Social Security taxes, and unemployment taxes. PORTEOUS said that the only back payment of taxes he has had to make was either in 1974, 1975, or 1976 when he was with the firm EDWARDS, PORTEOUS & LEE. He advised that upon an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) audit, the firm was advised that advances the firm paid for filing fees could not be considered expenses, as the firm had indicated on their tax returns. The firm paid the taxes on the difference of taxable income excluding the filing fees as expenses.

PORTEOUS stated that other than the civil suits listed on the supplement to his SF-86, he has not been involved in any civil suits as a plaintiff or defendant, to include divorces. PORTEOUS said that he has had no involvement in criminal matters as a suspect or subject or any criminal charge, arrest, or conviction.

PORTEOUS said that he had not been denied employment or been dismissed from employment, to include the Federal sector. PORTEOUS advised that he has had no contact with official representatives of foreign countries.

PORTEOUS said he is not concealing any activity or conduct that could be used to influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise him in any way or that would impact negatively on the candidate's character, reputation, judgement, or discretion.

PORTEOUS stated that he has had no professional complaints or any non-judicial disciplinary action against him, to include Bar Association grievances, Better Business Bureau complaints, student or military disciplinary proceedings, Equal Employment Opportunity complaints, and Office of Professional Responsibility inquiries. PORTEOUS said that in his official capacity, he, along with all judges in the 24th Judicial District Court, was sued by SHURMAINE DE GRANGE and IDA WILLIAMS for alleged discrimination. He said that both petitioners were former employees of the late Judge LIONEL COLLINS. The suit is referred to in PORTEOUS' supplemental SF-86.

PORTEOUS advised that he is not involved in any business or investment circumstances that could or have involved conflicts of interest allegations.

PORTEOUS said that he has had no psychological counseling with psychiatrists, psychologists, or other qualified counselors, including marital counselors.

PORTEOUS advised that he has had no involvement in any organization which advocates the use of force to overthrow the U.S. Government or any involvement in the commission of sabotage, espionage, or assistance of others in any of these acts. PORTEOUS knows of no current or past circumstances that could have a bearing on his suitability for Federal employment or access to classified information.

PORTEOUS advised that he has no current membership in any organization or social/private club which restrict membership on the basis of sex, race, color, religion, or national origin. PORTEOUS currently is a member of the following: American Bar Association, Jefferson Bar Association, American Judges Associations, American Judicature Society, Louisiana District Attorney's Association, 4th and 5th Circuit Judges Association, Chateau Golf and Country Club, and St. Clement of Rome Men's Club. PORTEOUS has held the office of President of the 4th and 5th Circuit Judges Association within the last five years but does not currently hold that position. PORTEOUS advised that St. Clement is the church which he attends. He said that within the church there is a women's and men's club which have different functions in the church.

PORTEOUS advised that sometime between 1979 and 1982, he was a member of the Mardi Gras krewe of CAESAR for two years. The Mardi Gras krewe is an organization which sponsors a parade and other festivities during Mardi Gras. He advised that this was an all-male krewe at the time, but he is not sure what its membership consists of currently. PORTEOUS did not hold an office in this organization.

PORTEOUS advised that he has not written any articles for publication or made any major speeches. He said that he gives a presentation annually to the Jefferson Bar Association on topics such as conflicts of interest and medical malpractice. He has given presentations to the Louisiana Bar Association and the Louisiana Judicial College as well. These presentations consist of an outline, a short synopsis, and case examples for the continuing legal education of these organizations' members.

PORTEOUS said that he has been taking out student loans for his son through a "Parent-Plus" Program at FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE (FNBC), New Orleans, each semester. Repayment of these loans had been deferred until his son's graduation until recently. PORTEOUS advised that on March 7, 1994, he received his first notice that payment on the loan was due. By this time, it was overdue. In April, 1994, he received forms to fill out for deferment of payment until his son's graduation. He filled the forms out, and the school signed them on April 14, 1994. On May 3, 1994, PORTEOUS received a letter of ineligibility for deferment since the parent is paying back the loan. On May 25, 1994, he sent the lending institution a request for forbearance on the debt because of the confusion over eligibility for deferment. PORTEOUS then paid $96.83 to FNBC which covered accrued interest and, on June 28, 1994, commenced making payments as scheduled. PORTEOUS said this loan is now current.

PORTEOUS advised that he has seen a plastic surgeon for surgery on his ear whose name is Dr. GUSTAVE COLON. He said his internist is Dr. ROBERT SONGY.

PORTEOUS provided the supplement to his SF-86 with Attachments 1 & 2 to the interviewing Agents. PORTEOUS signed an FD-465, Medical Release Form, at this time. Also provided to the Agents was a copy of certification from Chief Disciplinary Counsel, Louisiana State Bar Association, stating that there is no pending or past record of any complaint, grievance, disciplinary action, or disciplinary proceeding against PORTEOUS.

Judge THOMAS PORTEOUS, Louisiana State Court Judge for the 24th Judicial District, was interviewed in his office located in Gretna, Louisiana (LA), regarding information received from confidential source, NO T-6, on August 8, 1994.

PORTEOUS stated that he was somewhat aware of the nature of the inquiry due to his Criminal Court Clerk, JOLENE ACY, having been interviewed by this interviewing Agent on the previous day. ACY had related to Judge PORTEOUS a summation of that interview. PORTEOUS was initially asked if he recalled having been involved in a bond reduction matter for a criminal defendant named KEITH KLINE, who was arrested by the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office on a cocaine charge in March, 1987. Judge PORTEOUS could not specifically recall a bond reduction matter involving this named individual, but after being provided with some of the information obtained from NO T-6, PORTEOUS seemed to recall that this individual, who already had an extensive criminal history involving narcotics violations, had a very high bond initially set. Upon request from the arresting officer or possibly Deputy Chief RICHARD RODRIGUE, who is in charge of Criminal Detectives for the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Department (JPSD), he reluctantly agreed to reduce the bond. PORTEOUS stated that if the incident that he is recalling is in fact an incident that involved the named subject, KEITH KLINE, the agreement to reduce the bond was based on reporting from a JPSD officer that PORTEOUS further stated that if this was the incident he is attempting to recall, then Assistant District Attorney PAT MC GINNITY, (who is currently in private practice as a criminal defense attorney, with office located on Girod Street, New Orleans, LA, telephone P-1) would have been involved in the bond reduction discussion. PORTEOUS stated that it is routine for the prosecuting attorney along with the arresting officer to be involved in a discussion regarding any bond reductions. PORTEOUS could not recall any involvement of a girlfriend of KEITH KLINE in monetary transactions regarding the bond reduction. Furthermore, PORTEOUS categorically denied that he was paid a sum of $10,000, or for that matter, any sum in exchange for an agreement to reduce the bond for KEITH KLINE.

With regards to an allegation that PORTEOUS had received $1,500 to reduce a bond in a matter involving a TRACY IRELAND, who had been arrested for theft, PORTEOUS, already having been aware of this allegation from previous discussion with JOLENE ACY (as referenced above), had the criminal file available for review. PORTEOUS pointed out that IRELAND's bond had originally been set at $300,000, based on a mere two counts of theft. The bond was initially set by Judge JOHN MOLAISSON. Upon review of the matter, PORTEOUS agreed to reduce the bond to a $50,000 property bond. He recalls ADAM BARNETT being the bondsman in this matter, a trusted bondsman who he had known for a long time. PORTEOUS stated that he felt, based upon the Jefferson Parish jails being extremely overcrowded at that time (last year), the fact that the details of the arrest did not appear to warrant such a high bond, along with limited criminal history of the defendant, this situation warranted a reduction in bond. PORTEOUS pointed out that the bond was reduced to a $50,000 property bond. Although it was later shown that the surety was insufficient for the amount of the bond, the defendant appeared in court for every hearing, and was ultimately given credit for time served in jail, and placed on probation. He recalled the New Orleans Times Picayune newspaper as making an issue of this technical error in allowing a property bond to be set when there was insufficient surety. PORTEOUS stated that although there was a technical error here, it proved to be a harmless error, in light of the fact that the defendant never failed to appear for any of her court hearings. However, PORTEOUS again categorically denied that he had been given $1,500 or any amount of money to reduce the bond for TRACY IRELAND.

Judge PORTEOUS also denied that he had ever owned a yacht either individually or jointly with others, and furthermore, denied that he had ever owned any type of boat. He also denied that he had ever been present when cocaine, marijuana, or any other illegal narcotic was being utilized. He also denied that he had ever used any illegal narcotic personally.

Lastly, Judge PORTEOUS denied that he had ever signed any bail bonds "in blank;" and stated that he was unaware of anything in his background that might be the basis of attempted

11:41 1 Q. And the current value of that interest is $100, correct?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. And that's on Page 95?
4 A. Bates Page 95.
11:41 5 Q. Bates Page 95. Bates Page 96, Schedule B, Question 17,
6 "Other liquidated debts -- other liquidated debts owing debtor,
7 including tax refunds, give particulars." And in the next box,
8 it's checked off "none," correct?
9 A. Yes, sir.
11:42 10 Q. Attached to this exhibit, starting on Bates Page 112, the 11 statement of financial affairs, are you familiar with that,
12 sir?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. And on the last page of that statement of financial
11:42 15 affairs, with Bates Number SC116?
16 A. Right.
17 Q. "I declare under penalty of perjury that I have read the 18 answers contained in the foregoing statement of financial 19 affairs and any attachments thereto and they are true and 11:42 20 correct," dated April 9th, '01, the date of the amended
21 petition, signed by you and your wife, correct?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. So, you would agree with me, Judge Porteous, this is a
24 document that had a jurat that required that it be signed --
11:43 25 well, that it be signed under penalty of perjury, correct?

11:43 1 A. Yes, sir. You just read that.

2 Q. Right. There was another one. This -- that had to do with
3 statement of financial affairs.

4 On Page 111, "Declaration concerning debtors'
11:43 5 schedules," just about the schedules. Now, "Declaration under
6 penalty of perjury by individual debtor," it states, "I declare
7 under penalty of perjury that I have read the foregoing summary
8 and schedules consisting of 16 sheets plus the line summary
9 page and that they are true and correct to the best of my 11:43 10 knowledge, information, and belief," dated April 9th, '01,
11 signed by you and your wife, correct?

12 A. Right.

13 Q. Isn't it true, Judge Porteous, that although you replied
14 "none" to "tax returns," that you and your wife filed for a
11:44 15 federal tax refund on March 23rd, 2001, in the amount of 16 $4,143.72, which was just five days before your original
17 Chapter 13 petition was filed? Do you recall that?

18 A. I know we filed for a tax refund.

19 Q. All right. Let me show it to you.

11:44 20 Exhibit 24, do you recognize this as being your 21 1040 return?

22 A. Yes, sir.

23 Q. For tax year -- for 2000 --

24 A. 2000.

11:44 25 Q. -- correct?

11:44 1 And this is Bates Page 600?

2 A. Right.

3 Q. This is going to be tough to read, but feel free to look at

4 your copy.

11:45 5 Under the section "Refund," which is sort of cut

6 off on my copy, Line 67a, "Amount of Line 66 you want refunded

7 to you, $4,143.72" --

8 A. Yes, sir.

9 Q. -- correct?

11:45 10 It's signed, again under penalty of perjury, by

11 you and your wife on March 23rd, 2001, correct?

12 A. Yes, sir.

13 Q. And has your occupation as judge and your wife -- your

14 wife's occupation as housewife?

11:45 15 A. Right.

16 Q. And this is on Page 601, correct, Bates page?

17 A. Yes, sir.

18 Q. March 23rd, 2001, less than a week before you filed

19 Chapter 13, correct?

11:45 20 A. Yes, sir.

21 Q. And on your schedule, you put that you had no refund?

22 A. When that was listed, you're right.

23 Q. Okay. From your Exhibit 25, from your Bank One bank

24 account, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., Account 6902379554 --

11:46 25 actually, that number is a little bit different than the one

1T:46 1 that was on the schedule. Maybe there was a typo.
2 If you look on Schedule B that we've read before,
3 this account starts with 002379554, but the actual statement
4 has a different few numbers that start. Probably just a typo,
11:46 5 don't you think?
6 A. I know there's bottom numbers on those checks. I always
7 called that account, I think, 00.
8 Q. All right. Now, going back to this Exhibit 25 --
9 A. Uh-huh.
11:47 10 Q. And I regret that I can't get this clearer; but it shows on 11 April 13th, a deposit of an IRS tax refund of $4,143.72,
12 correct?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. And that deposit was April 13th?
11:47 15 A. Yes, sir.
16 Q. Just four days after your amended return was filed,
17 correct?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. Your amended return was April 9th?
11:47 20 A. Yes, April 9th.
21 Q. But nothing was mentioned on that return?
22 A. No. I know I called my -- I called Claude when I got it.
23 And by Claude, I meant Mr. Lightfoot. I'm sorry.
24 Q. You discussed that with Mr. Lightfoot?
11:47 25 A. I did.

11:48 1 Q. Did he tell you not to put it on the return?
2 A. No, no. I discussed that I received the refund, what
3 should I do with it.
4 Q. What did Mr. Lightfoot tell you?
11:48 5 A. Said, "If the trustee didn't put a lien on it, put it in
6 your account; but they may -- they may ask for it back."
7 Q. But, Judge Porteous, that schedule was signed under penalty
8 of perjury.
9 A. It was omitted. I don't know how it got omitted. There
11:48 10 was no intentional act to try and defraud somebody. It just 11 got omitted. I don't know why.
12 We had been fighting this, trying not to go into
13 bankruptcy for a long time. And I don't know. It just didn't 14 appear on the schedule.
11:48 15 Q. Okay.
16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How many days before the schedule
17 was made that omitted that was the request for refund made of 18 the filing?
19 MR. FINDER: About five days, five days from the 11:49 20 original petition, your Honor. The schedule was on the amended
21 petition and --
22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Well, I'm trying to get the
23 difference in date between the date he signs the statement
24 saying he has no refund coming --
11:49 25 MR. FINDER: Right.

01:41 1 Amato or Creely, cash gifts, in any of these financial
2 disclosures?
3 A. No.
4 Q. But you certified every one as being true and correct?
01:41 5 A. Correct.
6 Q. And there was an omission, then, correct?
7 A. Not that I'm aware of.
8 Q. Well, if someone gave you money during those years and it
9 was more than $250, wouldn't that be reportable?
01:41 10 A. I do not recall receiving any cash from them during that -- 11 Q. Do you recall in 1999, in the summer, May, June, receiving
12 $2,000 for them?
13 A. I've read Mr. Amato's grand jury testimony. It says we 14 were fishing and I made some representation that I was having 01:42 15 difficulties and that they loaned me some money or gave me some 16 money.
17 Q. You don't -- you're not denying it; you just don't remember
18 it?
19 A. I just don't have any recollection of it, but that would 01:42 20 have fallen in the category of a loan from a friend. That's 21 all.
22 Q. Has the loan ever been paid back --
23 A. No.
24 Q. -- if you got it?
01:42 25 A. No.

Attachment Six

ing of a statutory term unless Congress explicitly rejects that meaning. See Taylor v. United States, 495 U.S. 575, 592, 110 S.Ct. 2143, 109 L.Ed.2d 607 (1990).

Second, the plain language of the phrase "crimes against the person" connotes conduct that is intentionally directed against another person—which would exclude reckless conduct with the likely effect of harming others. Here again, the definition of "crime of violence" in § 16(b), as construed in Chapa-Garza, provides a more suitable reference point than the Guidelines definition because § 16(b) includes only those offenses that are likely to involve the intentional use of force.

In sum, we conclude that the term "crimes against the person" should be construed in accordance with its accepted common law meaning to include only those offenses that, by their nature, are likely to involve the intentional use or threat of physical force against another person. Under this definition, Trejo's misdemeanor convictions for driving under the influence are not "crimes against the person." See Chapa-Garza, 243 F.3d at 927–28; cf. Solem v. Helm, 463 U.S. 277, 280, 103 S.Ct. 3001, 77 L.Ed.2d 637 (1983) (noting that, for purposes of Eighth Amendment proportionality review, a "third-offense driving while intoxicated" is not "a crime against a person"). Consequently, Trejo is not eligible for an enhanced sentence of supervised release under § 1326(b)(1).

III

Because Trejo's three misdemeanor convictions for driving under the influence were not "crimes against the person" under § 1326(b)(1), the district court erred in sentencing Trejo to a term of supervised release in excess of the maximum term authorized for a conviction under § 1326(a). Accordingly, we VACATE Trejo's three-year term of supervised release and remand the case to the district court for resentencing in a manner not inconsistent with this opinion.

VACATED and REMANDED.

No. 00–30645.

United States Court of Appeals,
Fifth Circuit.

Aug. 28, 2002.

In consolidated proceedings involving Chapter 11 debtor-company which had exclusive right to provide pharmaceutical services at hospital, orders were entered by the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., J., overturning judicial sale of hospital, reinstating various agreements which defined financing and lease of hospital, and denying holder of hospital mortgage a claim for deficiency judgment. Damages award was entered in debtor's favor on its circumvention claim, and order was entered conditionally granting debtor's motion to assume pharmacy agreement. Appeal was taken. The Court of Appeals, Patrick E. Higginbotham, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) mortgage lender that provided financing for construction of hospital did not, by virtue of mortgagor's pledge of its own collateral mortgage note, undertake fiduciary duties as pledgee; (2) mortgage lender's exercise of its contractual rights did not support claim of bad faith or self-dealing, such as might allow district court to upset judicially confirmed sale; (3) pharmacy agreement was "executory" contract; (4) cross-default provision was enforceable, such that an incurable breach of lease agreement by affiliate precluded debtor from assuming pharmacy agreement; and (5) damages award was supported by evidence in part.

Affirmed in part, reversed in part, and remanded in part.

1. Federal Courts ⇐776, 850.1

Court of Appeals reviews de novo district court's legal conclusions but reviews its findings of fact for clear error.

2. Federal Courts ⇐776, 850.1

As to mixed questions of law and fact, Court of Appeals reviews district court's fact findings for clear error and its legal conclusions and application of law to fact de novo.

3. Mortgages ⇐211, 529(3)

Under Louisiana law, mortgage lender that provided $40 million in financing for construction of hospital did not, by virtue of mortgagor's pledge to lender of its own collateral mortgage note, undertake any fiduciary duties as pledgee to timely reinscribe collateral mortgage or buy out intervening creditor's lien, and its failure to do so did not provide basis for setting aside confirmed judicial sale to lender after intervening creditor foreclosed.

4. Federal Courts ⇐382.1, 383

In diversity case, federal court has to apply substantive law of state in which it sits as it believes that highest court of that state would do, looking to decisions of intermediate state courts for guidance where state's highest court has not spoken clearly to issue.

5. Pledges ⇐28

Under Louisiana law, trust relationship exists between pledgor and pledgee, which carries with it attendant duties to protect obligation and collateral.

6. Pledges ⇐1

Under Louisiana law, "pledge" is accessory contract by which debtor gives something to creditor as security for his debt.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

7. Mortgages ⇐199(2)

Under Louisiana law, where collateral assignment of rents specifically provided that mortgage lender would not be obligated to perform or to discharge any obligation, duty or liability under lease, its holding of right to basic rent under collateral assignment of rents did not subject it to any duty to preserve lease covering these assigned rents.

8. Mortgages ⇨529(3)

Under Louisiana law, mortgage lender's exercise of its contractual rights, in not reinscribing its collateral mortgage and thereby allowing another mortgagee to gain priority, and in acquiring property on credit bid submitted in connection with intervening mortgagee's foreclosure sale, did not support claim of bad faith or self-dealing, such as might permit district court to upset judicially confirmed sale of property.

9. Judicial Sales ⇨34.1

Under Louisiana jurisprudence, judicial sale, once completed, cannot generally be undone.

10. Bankruptcy ⇨3106

Pharmacy agreement pursuant to which performance was still owing on both sides at time of debtor's Chapter 11 filing was "executory" contract, which debtor could assume, even after debtor's postpetition default; contract did not provide for automatic termination on default, but required notice from nonbreaching party, and notice was never given. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365.

See publication Words and Phrases for other judicial constructions and definitions.

11. Bankruptcy ⇨3106

To determine whether debtor's contract is "executory," for purpose of assumption or rejection, court must inquire whether performance remains due to some extent on both sides, such that failure of either party to complete performance would constitute a material breach and excuse other party from performing. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365.

12. Contracts ⇨217

Under Louisiana law, contract will not terminate, even though it explicitly provides for automatic termination, unless non-breaching party seeks judicial dissolution of contract or at least provides notice of intent to terminate contract for default.

13. Bankruptcy ⇨3110.1

Act of assuming contract must be grounded, at least in part, on conclusion that maintenance of contract is more beneficial to estate than doing without other party's services. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365.

14. Bankruptcy ⇨3114

Bankruptcy statute which conditions debtor's right to assume executory contract on his either curing, or providing adequate assurance of cure, of any defaults and providing assurance of future performance essentially allows debtor to continue in beneficial contract, provided that the other party is made whole at time of debtor's assumption of contract. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

15. Bankruptcy ⇨3114

Bankruptcy statute which conditions debtor's right to assume executory contract on his either curing, or providing adequate assurance of cure, of any defaults and providing assurance of future performance is meant to provide means whereby debtor can force other party to contract to continue to perform under contract if (1) debtor can provide adequate assurance that he, too, will continue to perform, and if (2) the debtor can cure any defaults in his past performance. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

16. Bankruptcy ⇨3110.1

Debtor must take full account of cost to cure all existing defaults owed to non-debtor party when assessing, for assumption or rejection purposes, whether executory contract is beneficial to estate. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365.

17. Bankruptcy ⇨3114

To determine if debtor-in-possession has provided "adequate assurance" of future performance, as prerequisite to assuming executory contract, court must look to factual conditions, including whether debtor's financial data indicates its ability to generate an income stream sufficient to meet its obligations, general economic outlook in debtor's industry, and presence of guarantee. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

18. Bankruptcy ⇨3787

To the extent that determination of whether debtor provided "adequate assurance" of future performance of contract to be assumed turned upon contested factual disputes, appellate court's review was for clear error only. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

19. Federal Courts ⇨776

District court's interpretation of contract is reviewed de novo, and contract and record are reviewed independently and under same standards guiding district court.

20. Federal Courts ⇨776, 874

If interpretation of contract turns on consideration of extrinsic evidence, such as evidence of intent of parties, standard of review is "clear error," but if intent is determined solely from language of contract, then contractual interpretation is pure question of law, and threshold question as to whether extrinsic evidence should be considered in determining intent of parties is itself a question of law and thus reviewable de novo.

21. Federal Courts ⇨412.1

In diversity case, Court of Appeals would look to state law for applicable standard of contract interpretation.

22. Contracts ⇨1, 152

Under Louisiana law, contract is the law between parties, and is read for its plain meaning.

23. Contracts ⇨152Evidence ⇨397(1), 448

Under Louisiana law, where words of contract are clear and explicit and lead to no absurd consequences, contract's meaning and intent of its parties must be sought within four corners of document and cannot be explained or contradicted by extrinsic evidence

24. Contracts ⇨147(2), 176(2)

Under Louisiana law, if court finds contract to be unambiguous, it may construe parties' intent from face of document, without considering extrinsic evidence, and enter judgment as matter of law.

25. Contracts ⇨143(2)

Under Louisiana law, contract is ambiguous when uncertain as to parties' intentions and susceptible to more than one reasonable meaning under the circumstances and after applying established rules of construction.

26. Contracts ⇨143(1, 2, 3)

Under Louisiana law, when words of contract are clear and explicit and lead to no absurd consequences, no further interpretation may be made in search of parties' intent; party may not create an ambiguity where none exists, nor may courts create new contractual obligations where language of written document clearly expresses their intent.

27. Contracts ⇨155

Under Louisiana law, rule of contract construction, that doubts or ambiguities as to meaning of contract must, if not otherwise resolvable, be eliminated by interpreting contract against the party who prepared it, applies only when there are two equally reasonable interpretations of contractual provision in question.

28. Contracts ⇨155

Under Louisiana law, rule of contract construction, that doubts or ambiguities as to meaning of contract must, if not otherwise resolvable, be eliminated by interpreting contract against the party who prepared it, is primarily applied to standard-form or adhesionary contracts.

29. Contracts ⇨155

While jurisprudence of Louisiana has established a rule of contractual interpretation which construes ambiguity against party who drafted document in question, neither party is deemed to be the scrivener where initial draft is modified and re-modified in series of exchanges between parties to produce an execution draft reflecting give and take between obligor and obligee.

30. Bankruptcy ⇨3101, 3114

Cross-default provision in debtor's executory contract to operate pharmacy at hospital, providing that if debtor or any of the other party's corporate affiliates were in default of their obligations under lease or other contract between parties, then this would be regarded as a breach of pharmacy agreement by debtor, could not be interpreted as written, so as to subject debtor to liability for defaults by other party's corporate affiliates; rather, to avoid absurd result, provision had to be interpreted as referring to defaults by debtor's corporate affiliates, so that breach of lease by debtor's affiliate, when it allowed judicial mortgage to be entered against hospital property and mortgagee to foreclose thereon, was incurable default under pharmacy agreement, that precluded debtor's assumption thereof. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

31. Reformation of Instruments ⇨1

Under Louisiana law, reformation is equitable remedy which may be used when contract fails to express parties' true intent, either because of mutual mistake or fraud.

32. Reformation of Instruments ⇨19(1), 45(1)

To establish the appropriateness of reformation, party that seeks to reform contract must show, by clear and convincing evidence, that agreement, as written, contains mutual mistake and does not comport with parties' original intent.

33. Contracts ⇨143.5

Under Louisiana law, every provision of contract must be interpreted in light of contract's other provisions in order to give each provision the meaning suggested by contract as a whole

34. Contracts ⇨143.5, 153

Under Louisiana law, contract provisions susceptible to different meanings should be interpreted so as not to neutralize or ignore any provision or treat any provision as mere surplusage and so as to preserve validity of contract.

35. Contracts ⇨143(1), 170(1)

Under Louisiana law, doubtful provision in contract must be interpreted in light of the nature of contract, equity, usages, conduct of parties before and after formation of contract, and of other contracts of like nature between same parties.

36. Bankruptcy ⇨3101, 3114

Where lease and collateral mortgage to party that provided $40 million of financing for construction of hospital were interrelated with pharmacy agreement pursuant to which debtor ran pharmacy service out of hospital, such that there would have been no pharmacy agreement without lease or loan secured by collateral mortgage, cross-default provision was enforceable in bankruptcy, such that an incurable breach of lease agreement by debtor's affiliate precluded debtor from assuming pharmacy agreement. Bankr. Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

37. Bankruptcy ⇌ 3101

Although cross-default provisions are inherently suspect, they are not per se invalid in bankruptcy context, and court should carefully scrutinize facts and circumstances surrounding particular transaction to determine whether enforcement of provision would contravene an overriding federal bankruptcy policy and thus impermissibly hamper debtor's reorganization.

38. Bankruptcy ⇌ 3101, 3114

Federal bankruptcy policy is offended when non-debtor seeks enforcement of cross-default provision in effort to extract priority payments under unrelated agreement, and creditor cannot use protections afforded by bankruptcy statute which requires curing of defaults and adequate assurances of future payment under contract to be assumed in order to maximize its returns by treating unrelated unsecured debt as de facto priority obligation. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

39. Bankruptcy ⇌ 3114

Where non-debtor party would have been willing, absent existence of the cross-defaulted agreement, to enter into contract that debtor wishes to assume, then cross-default provision should not be enforced, so as to require debtor, as prerequisite to assuming the one contract, to first cure its default under cross-defaulted agreement; however, enforcement of cross-default provision should not be refused where to do so would thwart non-debtor party's bargain. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365(b)(1).

40. Bankruptcy ⇌ 3101

Mere fact that legally separate entities are parties to various agreements does not of itself preclude enforcement of cross-default provision in bankruptcy, and where documents are contemporaneously executed as necessary elements of same transaction, such that there would have been no transaction without each of the other agreements, fact that nominally distinct parties executed these agreements will not preclude enforcement of cross-default provision in favor of party whose economic interests are identical to those of entity that is party to document containing cross-default provision. Bankr.Code, 11 U.S.C.A. § 365.

41. Federal Courts ⇌ 871

In absence of error of law, Court of Appeals reviews district court's award of damages for clear error only.

42. Federal Courts ⇌ 871

If award of damages is plausible in light of record, reviewing court should not reverse the award, even if it might have come to different conclusion.

43. Damages ⇌ 184

While district court may not determine damages by speculation or guess, it will be enough if evidence shows extent of damages as matter of just and reasonable inference, though result may be only approximate.

44. Damages ⇌ 184

Under Louisiana law, actual damages must be proven; they cannot be speculative or conjectural.

45. Damages ⇌ 184

Under Louisiana law, while breaching party should not escape liability because of difficulty in finding perfect measure of damages, evidence must furnish data for a reasonably accurate estimate, such that it appears reasonably evident that amount allowed as contract damages rests upon some certain basis.

46. Damages ⇨190

Under Louisiana law of damages, lost profits must be proven with reasonable certainty and cannot be based on conjecture and speculation.

47. Damages ⇨118

District court's interpretation of the phrase "fee per procedure," as used in section of pharmacy agreement entitling company that provided pharmacy service at hospital to certain prescribed fees on "per procedure" basis, as entitling company to new fee each time a dose of same drug or drug combination was administered from single vial of medicine, was not clearly erroneous but was sufficiently supported by evidence presented in support of company's damages claim.

48. Health ⇨178

Actions on part of hospital's materials management department, in ordering and distributing to doctors and nurses in ancillary departments certain legend drugs for administration to patients on doctors' orders, was a "distribution" and not "dispensing" of such drugs, and did not have to be accomplished under supervision of pharmacist under Louisiana law that was in effect at time; accordingly, hospital's contested practice of ordering and distributing certain legend drugs and kits containing legend drugs did not violate Louisiana pharmacy laws, and would not support cause of action by pharmacy against hospital for circumventing pharmacy's right to fee.

49. Damages ⇨190

Damages award upon pharmacy's circumvention claim against hospital where it had exclusive right to provide pharmaceutical services was not erroneous, as product of mere speculation and conjecture, but was sufficiently supported by evidence presented, including results of audit of patient charts and competing estimates of hospital's and of pharmacy's experts.

50. Health ⇨942

Clause in pharmacy agreement, which provided that company that had exclusive right to provide pharmacy services at hospital would not be entitled to compensation for any drugs and supplies utilized by ancillary departments of hospital in connection with patient-related procedures in which cost of drug was included in charge for the procedure, relieved hospital of any obligation to pay for company's lost profits in connection with contrast media that hospital obtained from another source and used in radiology procedures at hospital, where cost of this contrast media was not separately billed; operation of this provision did not turn on whether charge for drug could be identified, but on whether such an "identifiable" charge was included in charge for patient-related procedure in which drug was used.

51. Health ⇨942

Clause in pharmacy agreement, which generally limited amount of reimbursement which company providing pharmaceutical services at hospital could seek based on drug prices set forth in other party's prime vendor contracts, did not give other party right to pay company for name-brand drugs that it dispensed at hospital, and that it had earlier acquired at or below prices for these same name-brand drugs in prime vendor contracts, based on lower prices at which generic drugs might have been acquired; nothing in pharmacy agreement authorized other party to pay company for generic drugs when company was dispensing physician-requested name-brand drugs and when other party had never told company to dispense only generics.

52. Health ⇨942

Minimum fee increase provision in pharmacy agreement, which provided for adjustment in minimum fee that was paid to company providing pharmacy services at hospital based on increase/decrease in certain indicators "in the immediately preceding years," did not permit increase in minimum fee based on isolated increase in indicators in a single year, where that increase was not enough to offset decreases from prior years; natural sense of "immediately preceding years" conveys last two or three years, and district court erred in interpreting the plural word "years" as if it were singular.

53. Health ⇨942

Company that provided pharmacy services at hospital was liable to hospital for any overcharges, notwithstanding alleged lack of damages to hospital, which purportedly charged its patients three times the overcharge price and thus actually profited from overcharges by passing them on to patients.

54. Removal of Cases ⇨119

Corporate entity that was never joined as defendant nor served with process could not be subject of adverse judgment, in action that was removed from state court and consolidated with three other proceedings.

55. Judgment ⇨668(3), 707

One is not bound by judgment in personam resulting from litigation in which he is not designated as party or to which he has not been made a party by service of process.

56. Costs ⇨194.34

Chapter II debtor and affiliated entity were not entitled to award of attorney fees, pursuant to terms either of lease or Louisiana statute that provides for fee award when transaction is rescinded based upon fraud, once Court of Appeals reversed district court's judgment overturning judicial sale and reinstating lease.

Appeals from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Before PATRICK E.
HIGGINBOTHAM, DeMOSS and BENAVIDES, Circuit Judges.

PATRICK E. HIGGINBOTHAM,
Circuit Judge:

This appeal brings to us three of four consolidated actions arising from a failed relationship formed to build and manage a hospital and medical office building in Kenner, Louisiana, the latest round in the parties' protracted litigation.

Following a bench trial of the consolidated cases, the district court overturned a judicial sale of the hospital, reinstated various contracts which defined the financing and lease of the hospital, and denied the holder of the hospital mortgage a claim for a deficiency judgment. The court also ruled that, under a Clinical Pharmacy Management Agreement governing the operation of the hospital pharmacy and the flow of drugs to the hospital, Liljeborg

Enterprises, Inc., the hospital pharmacy operator and principal supplier of drugs to the hospital, was due almost $12.5 million and the hospital operators and principal purchasers of the drugs for the hospital were owed $741,879.

In Chapter 11 proceedings, the district court conditionally granted the debtor Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.'s request to assume the Clinical Pharmacy Management Agreement as an executory contract pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 365.¹

We reverse the district court's judgment setting aside the judicial foreclosure of the hospital and declining to award the deficiency due on the mortgage debt, we reverse the district court's order allowing the debtor in the Chapter 11 proceedings to assume the pharmacy agreement, and finally we affirm in part and reverse in part the various awards made under the pharmacy agreement.

I.

First, the dramatis personae. The four consolidated actions involve Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., Lifemark Hospitals, Inc., American Medical International, and Tenet Healthcare Corporation on one side,² and Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc. ("Liljeberg Enterprises") and St. Jude Hospital of Kenner, La., L.L.C. ("St. Jude") (collectively the "Liljebergs") on the other.

Liljeberg Enterprises is a corporation whose sole shareholders are John Liljeberg and his brother Robert Liljeberg, both licensed pharmacists. The Liljebergs, through Liljeberg Enterprises, formed a series of corporations and a partnership to own or operate a medical complex consisting of a hospital, a hospital pharmacy, and a medical office building. St. Jude, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Liljeberg Enterprises, owned the St. Jude Hospital ("hospital"), which is now known as Kenner Regional Medical Center. St. Jude Medical Office Building, Ltd. Partnership ("St. Jude Limited Partnership"), of which St. Jude was the general partner, owned the adjacent medical office building. Funding for that building came from Travelers Insurance Company, a loan of $25 million on October 10, 1985, secured by a mortgage on the medical office building and an assignment to Travelers of rents to be paid on leased spaces in the building.

Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. was a national hospital management company that provided financing to St. Jude to build the hospital. Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Lifemark Hospitals, Inc., entered into an agreement with St. Jude to lease and operate the hospital. American Medical acquired Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. in 1984, and Tenet became the successor to American Medical in 1995.

II.

On August 26, 1981, the Liljebergs obtained a "certificate of need" under Section 1122 of the Social Security Act to build and operate a 300-bed acute care facility in the New Orleans area.³ This Section

1. Neither party appeals from the district court's judgment in Cause No. 95-2922, denying Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.'s request for injunctive relief. The district court consolidated Cause No. 93-1794 early on with Cause Nos. 93-4249, 94-3993, and 95-2922 for all purposes, but, for ease of reference, we follow the district court and the parties in referring to the various parts of the district court's judgment in the case by the original causes of action numbers.

2. We refer to these parties collectively or individually as "Lifemark" except where further distinction is relevant.

3. The 1122 certificate allowed certain capital costs to be passed through to the government.

1122 certificate was the only one available in the New Orleans area and the last one to be granted in Louisiana. Lacking the money to build a hospital, the Liljeborgs immediately solicited participation by many companies, including Health Services Acquisition Corporation. The Liljeborgs' negotiations with Health Services extended over several months before disintegrating into heated litigation.⁴ The Liljeborgs began their discussions with Lifemark in the latter part of 1981, under the shadow of the approaching deadline under the Section 1122 certificate of need.

In their negotiations with Lifemark, John Liljeborg was assisted by a team of two attorneys, one of whom was a CPA, an economist, and two pharmacy consultants. John Liljeborg insisted from the outset that, as part of any deal, the Liljeborgs had to be given a contract to provide pharmaceutical services to the hospital. On December 21, 1982, the parties signed a letter of intent setting forth the principal terms of their agreement.

The final documents were executed in early 1983, including: (1) a loan agreement, wherein Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. agreed to provide financing of over $44 million to St. Jude for construction of the hospital; (2) a promissory note signed by St. Jude and made payable to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.; (3) a collateral mortgage, a collateral mortgage note, and a pledge of the collateral mortgage note, all signed by St. Jude to secure the note to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.; (4) a lease agreement wherein Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. agreed to lease and operate the hospital from St. Jude; and (5) the Clinical Pharmacy Management Agreement ("pharmacy agreement"), signed by Liljeborg Enterprises and Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., wherein Liljeborg Enterprises agreed to provide pharmaceutical services to the hospital. Additionally, the Liljeborgs received a cash payment of $2.5 million as called for by the letter of intent.

These agreements were intertwined in at least two ways: (1) St. Jude's note payments and Lifemark's lease payments were offsetting transactions so that their monthly payment was only a bookkeeping entry;⁵ and (2) the pharmacy agreement contained a cross-default provision.

A dispute arose between Lifemark and St. Jude over the financing and project management involved in the construction of the hospital. That dispute was settled by written agreement in 1991 after arbitration. As part of the settlement, St. Jude executed a renewal note, renewing and extending the original note. Like the original note, the renewal note was secured by the original collateral mortgage, collateral mortgage note, and pledge of collateral mortgage note. To further secure the renewal note, St. Jude executed a "Collateral Assignment of Basic Rent" ("collateral assignment of rents"), which was recorded, providing Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. a secured interest in rents in the event of a future default by St. Jude.

The hospital, hospital pharmacy, and medical office building became operational in 1985. By March of 1990, St. Jude Limited Partnership had defaulted on its Travelers loan and, in June 1990, Travelers sued St. Jude Limited Partnership and other defendants. The suit, seeking seiits right to receive basic rent against St. Jude's note obligations. St. Jude exercised this option at all relevant times through October 1, 1994.

zure and sale by judicial process of the medical office building, was successful, and the building was sold at public auction on October 18, 1991 to Travelers, the sole bidder.

More protracted litigation ensued, in the course of which a panel of this court commented that the conduct of the Liljebergs constituted "as egregious and unconscionable of bad faith contractual dealings as the members of this panel can recall having encountered."⁶ Travelers obtained an amended judgment in December 1992 awarding Travelers both unpaid rents and damages from St. Jude Limited Partnership based on, inter alia, a jury verdict finding waste committed by the Liljebergs with respect to the collateral in the medical office building securing the repayment of Travelers's loan to St. Jude Limited Partnership for the construction of the building. When efforts to collect the amended judgment against the partnership failed, Travelers filed a separate action against St. Jude, the general partner of St. Jude Limited Partnership, in which Travelers obtained a summary judgment on July 30, 1993, which this Court affirmed.⁷

On August 12, 1993, Travelers secured a lien on the hospital by filing its $7.8 million judgment against St. Jude. The Travelers lien primed Lifemark's collateral mortgage because Lifemark had not at that time reinscribed its lien.⁸ Lifemark reinscribed its collateral mortgage on June 29, 1994.

Within the same time frame, on January 27, 1993, within one month after Travelers obtained its $7.8 million judgment, Liljeberg Enterprises filed for bankruptcy protection. In the course of these bankruptcy proceedings, Liljeberg Enterprises as the debtor in possession, sought the federal district court's permission to assume, that is, continue to operate under, the pharmacy agreement, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 365 and 1107. Shortly thereafter, on August 11, 1993, within one month after Travelers sought to collect its judgment against St. Jude, St. Jude filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. The bankruptcy court dismissed that action one year later, finding that St. Jude had filed in bad faith.

On August 30, 1994, Travelers began the process of foreclosing on the hospital. Once again, St. Jude asked the district court to vacate Travelers's writ of execution and to find Travelers's lien inferior to Lifemark's lien. At St. Jude's request, Lifemark filed a memorandum setting forth the facts concerning the ranking of the liens. The court denied St. Jude's motions and allowed the foreclosure sale to proceed.

Prior to the sale, Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. filed a motion in the federal district court before Judge Henry A. Mentz, Jr. seeking permission to bid credits against the value of its collateral mortgage instead of cash at the judicial sale, subject to any obligation to pay the amount of cash neces-

8. Lifemark's collateral mortgage is dated March 15, 1983. In order to preserve the rank of the collateral mortgage, it had to be reinscribed by March 15, 1993. See La. Civil CODE art. 3328, accord id. art. 3369 (repealed by 1992 La. Acts 1132). Nearly five months later Travelers filed its judgment lien. One effect of Lifemark's failure to reinscribe was that it was not able to foreclose on the hospital following the filing of the Travelers lien without paying the Travelers debt. Lifemark, in fact, ultimately sued its former attorneys for legal malpractice on the basis of this failure to reinscribe.

sary to satisfy the superior judicial mortgage of Travelers. The court granted Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.'s motion.

The United States Marshal's seizure and judicial sale of the hospital occurred on October 28, 1994. Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. was the sole bidder and purchased the hospital for $26 million, or two-thirds of the $37.5 million appraised value as the minimum price prescribed by Louisiana statute. The purchase price was distributed as follows: (1) $7,786,083.33 went to Travelers to satisfy its lien; (2) $18,165,483.74 went to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. to reduce the deficiency owed on St. Jude's note to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.; and (3) the balance was applied to costs of the sale. The district court subsequently confirmed the sale. St. Jude appealed the orders of the district court, and this court affirmed, dismissing as moot St. Jude's challenge to the confirmed judicial sale.⁹

As a result, Lifemark became the owner of the hospital, and Lifemark's lease with St. Jude was extinguished as a matter of law under the doctrine of confusion. At the same time, Lifemark accelerated the debt owed by St. Jude under the renewal note, and Lifemark sought to terminate the pharmacy agreement based upon the cross-default provision in that agreement.

III.

Ultimately four lawsuits were consolidated and tried to the bench in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana in June and July 1997. The district court entered findings of fact and conclusions of law and a partial judgment on April 26, 2000, later amending the judgment by adding a certification under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 54(b) on August 1, 2000, three years after the case was tried. The amended judgment included a Rule 54(b) certification for immediate appeal of "all claims other than Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.'s claim in Cause No. 93-4249 for damages accruing from the commencement date of the trial and continuing through the date of" the amended judgment.

In the first lawsuit, Cause No. 94-3993, Lifemark sued St. Jude to collect the unpaid balance of a promissory note evidencing the debt incurred in building the hospital. St. Jude counterclaimed for damages asserting a variety of lender liability claims. The district court awarded no damages to Lifemark or St. Jude. Rather it set out to undo the transaction and overturned the 1994 confirmed judicial sale of the hospital. This upset was made contingent upon either St. Jude or its parent company Liljeberg Enterprises reimbursing Lifemark the amount that Lifemark had paid to Travelers, the holder of the superior lien and judicial mortgage. The district court also reinstated all of the related commercial instruments as if the judicial sale had never taken place and denied Lifemark's deficiency claim.

In the second suit, Cause No. 93-1794, Liljeberg Enterprises, as the Chapter 11 debtor in possession, sought permission from the bankruptcy court to assume the pharmacy agreement between Lifemark and Liljeberg Enterprises as an executory contract pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 365. On October 19, 1993, the district court withdrew the reference to bankruptcy court of LEI's motion to assume. The district court, over Lifemark's objection, granted the motion to assume the pharmacy contract.

9. See Travelers Ins. Co. v. St. Jude Hosp. of Kenner, La., Inc., Nos. 94-30636, 94-30639 &

94-30665, 56 F 3d 1386 (5th Cir. May 24, 1995) (unpublished per curiam).

The third suit, Cause No. 93-4249, was filed in Louisiana state court but removed to the federal district court. Here Liljeberg Enterprises claims that Lifemark, acting in bad faith, breached and wrongfully "circumvented" the pharmacy agreement. Lifemark denied the allegations and counterclaimed for overcharges and breaches of the pharmacy agreement.¹⁰ The district court found that Lifemark owed Liljeberg Enterprises $12,432,905.92 for breach of payment due under the pharmacy agreement and that Liljeberg Enterprises owed Lifemark $741,879 in overcharges.

Finally, in the fourth suit, Cause No. 95-2922, Liljeberg Enterprises sought an injunction to prohibit Lifemark from unlawfully dispensing legend drugs at the hospital.¹¹ The district court denied Liljeberg Enterprises's request.

IV.

Lifemark here attacks judgments in Cause Nos. 94-3993, 93-1794, and 93-4249 on many grounds. In Cause No. 94-3993, Lifemark argues that the district court erred by rescinding the judicial sale of the hospital when this court of appeals decided in prior litigation that St. Jude's challenge to the judicially confirmed sale was moot; that the judgments are flawed by the following erroneous rulings: that Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. had a duty to St. Jude to reinscribe the collateral mortgage, and that Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. had a duty to terminate the Travelers foreclosure; that Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. had a duty to prevent Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. from purchasing the hospital at the foreclosure sale; that Lifemark acted in bad faith or colluded to chill the bidding at the foreclosure sale which proximately caused St. Jude's loss; and that Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. did not properly purchase the hospital at two-thirds of its appraised value. Lifemark also argues that the district court erred in concluding that Lifemark is not entitled to recover on its deficiency claim under the renewal promissory note.

In Cause No. 93-1794, Lifemark argues that the district court erred in allowing Liljeberg Enterprises to assume the pharmacy agreement on several grounds. First, it erred in its ruling that the pharmacy agreement did not terminate by its own terms prior to the district court's order allowing assumption. Second, by failing to properly interpret sections 5.1(e)

10. Lifemark filed many of its breach of contract claims as part of its counterclaim in the bankruptcy cause of action, Cause No. 93-1794. The district court consolidated Cause No. 93-1794 with Cause No. 93-4249 early in the course of this litigation, and, as a result, like the district court's opinion and judgment, this court's opinion treats Lifemark's claims related to LEI's breach of the pharmacy agreement as though they were filed in Cause No. 93-4249.

11. Legend drugs are prescription drugs that bear a legend on the label warning that the drug may not be dispensed without a prescription from a duly-authorized practitioner. See LA.Rev Stat § 37:1164(45) (" 'Prescription drug' or 'legend drug' means a drug that is required by any applicable federal or state law or regulation to be dispensed or delivered pursuant only to a prescription drug order, or is restricted to use by practitioners only."); id. § 40:1237(3) (" 'Legend drug' means any drug or drug product bearing on the label of the manufacturer or distributor, as required by the Federal Food and Drug Administration, the statement 'Caution: Federal law prohibits dispensing without prescription' "); LA ADMIN CODE tit. 46, pt. LIII, § 3501(A) (" 'Legend Drugs. A legend drug is a medication which must only be dispensed by a pharmacist on the order of a licensed practitioner and shall bear the following notation on the label of a commercial container: 'caution: federal law prohibits dispensing without a prescription' (Ref. R.S. 40:1237, et seq [1982] and U.S.C. 21:353(b) [1987]) ").

and 5.1(b) of the pharmacy agreement and section 11.1 of the lease and the fourth and fifth covenants of the mortgage.

In Cause No. 93-4249, Lifemark argues that the district court erred in its interpretation of sections 2.4, 2.6, 4.1, and Exhibit B of the pharmacy agreement and in denying Lifemark's motion to reopen the evidence. Further, Lifemark argues that the district court erred: in awarding damages based upon a procedurally flawed audit; in awarding duplicative damages; in allowing Liljeberg Enterprises to recover costs greater than those allowed by the hospital's prime vendor contract under section 2.4 of the pharmacy agreement; in allowing Liljeberg Enterprises to recover based on unexplained bills; in failing to award damages to Lifemark for Liljeberg Enterprises's overbilling; and in its interpretation of the parties' stipulation as to actual acquisition costs payable under an earlier state court judgment.

Finally, Lifemark argues that the district court erred in awarding any relief against Tenet, a non-party.

On its cross-appeal, in Cause No. 94-3993, Liljeberg Enterprises argues that the district court erred in requiring St. Jude and Liljeberg Enterprises to reimburse Lifemark the $7,834,516.26 it paid to Travelers for the allegedly collusive purchase of the hospital. The Liljebergs also contend on their cross-appeal in Cause Nos. 94-3993, 93-1794, and 93-4249 that Liljeberg Enterprises and St. Jude are entitled to attorneys' fees by the parties' lease agreement and under Louisiana Civil Code articles 1997 and 1958.

V. Cause No. 94-3993

The district court in Cause No. 94-3993 overturned the confirmed 1994 judicial sale of the hospital contingent upon either St. Jude or Liljeberg Enterprises reimbursing Lifemark the approximately $7.8 million that Lifemark paid to Travelers to purchase the hospital at foreclosure. The district court also reinstated the renewal promissory note, collateral mortgage note, pledge of collateral mortgage note, collateral mortgage, hospital lease, and collateral assignment of rents which existed before the judicial sale and held that all rental payments that were due by Lifemark to St. Jude under the lease shall be deemed paid by St. Jude to Lifemark and the renewal promissory note, collateral mortgage note, pledge of collateral mortgage note, and collateral mortgage are deemed current and not in default as of the date of judgment. Finally, the district court denied Lifemark's claim for a deficiency pursuant to the renewal promissory note.

[1,2] We review de novo the district court's legal conclusions, but review its findings of fact for clear error.¹² We have explained that "a finding is clearly erroneous when although there is evidence to support it, the reviewing court on the entire evidence is left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed," and that, "despite an appellate court's conviction that it would have weighed the evidence differently had it been sitting as the trier of fact, it may not reverse a district court's findings when they are based on a plausible account of the evidence considered against the entirety of the record."¹³ Accordingly, "when 'two permissible views of the evidence exist, the fact finder's choice between them

[3] The district court premised its decision setting aside the judicial sale of the hospital on a finding that Lifemark breached fiduciary duties and an obligation of good faith owed to St. Jude. It found these obligations in the Louisiana law of pledge. The district court found that Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. became the pledgee of St. Jude by holding the collateral mortgage note and the right to basic rent under the collateral assignment of rents. As pledgee, Lifemark owed fiduciary duties to St. Jude, its pledgor, to protect that collateral, the collateral mortgage note and the right to basic rent under the collateral assignment of rents.

The found breach came when Lifemark failed to timely reinscribe the collateral mortgage and "allowed" Travelers' judgment mortgage to prime the collateral mortgage. The district court also found a breach of a duty to preserve the lease covering the assigned rents as pledgee of the right to basic rent under the collateral assignment of rents. This breach came, it found, when Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. allowed Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. to acquire the hospital. That acquisition extinguished the lease under the doctrine of confusion pursuant to Louisiana Civil Code article 1903 as well as the rental stream assigned to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.

As the district court explained it, when St. Jude became liable to Travelers for over $7.8 million, specifically $7,834,516.26, and the hospital became subject to Travelers's approximately $7.8 million lien, Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. was obligated to buy out the Travelers lien, to add the Travelers debt to the debt owed by St. Jude to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. Relatedly, it found an obligation to refrain from having Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. purchase the hospital at the foreclosure sale. All these were found to be duties, all of which Lifemark breached.

[4] In this diversity case, we are controlled by the substantive law of Louisiana. We are to determine and apply its law as we believe the Supreme Court of Louisiana would, looking to the decisions of intermediate Louisiana appellate courts for guidance where the Supreme Court of Louisiana has not spoken clearly to the issue.¹⁶

We conclude that the foundational principles of the entire set of the district court's rulings are deeply flawed. Such duties are not to be found in Louisiana law.

[5] There is no question but that, under Louisiana law, "a trust relationship between the pledgor and pledgee" carries with it "attendant duties to protect the debt or the obligation and the collateral." "¹⁷ But holding the collateral mortgage note and the right to basic rent under the collateral assignment of rents did not create a pledgor-pledgee relationship giving rise to the duties discovered by the district court.

[6] To understand why this is so it is helpful to review the Louisiana law of pledge and collateral mortgages. "The pledge is a contract by which one debtor gives something to his creditor as a security for his debt."¹⁸ The Supreme Court of Louisiana has very recently repeated the Louisiana law of pledge:

Pledge is an accessory contract by which one debtor gives something to a creditor as security for the debt. Invariably, the thing given as security for the debt is a movable, in which case the contract is more accurately called pawn. A person may give a pledge not only for his own debt, but also for that of another. The pledge secures only that debt or debts contemplated in the contract between the pledgor and pledgee.¹⁹

A "collateral mortgage" is statutorily defined as "a mortgage that is given to secure a written obligation, such as a collateral mortgage note, negotiable or non-negotiable instrument, or other written evidence of debt, that is issued, pledged, or otherwise used as security for another obligation."²⁰ We recently summarized the basic operation of a typical collateral mortgage transaction under Louisiana law:

In a typical Louisiana collateral mortgage transaction, the borrower contemporaneously executes a promissory note (known as a collateral mortgage note) and an act of mortgage (known as a collateral mortgage). In this latter instrument, the mortgagor acknowledges his indebtedness and states his intent to pledge the collateral mortgage note, which is secured by the collateral mortgage, as security for the advancement of funds. The collateral mortgage note is customly made payable on demand, to "Bearer" or "Myself" or "Any Future Holder," and is "paraphed" for identification with the mortgage. This collateral mortgage package is then delivered by the borrower in pledge to the lender to secure an indebtedness which is usually represented by a separate "hand note."

The pledge of a collateral mortgage note and collateral mortgage to secure a debt is a contract. The pledge secures only the debt or debts contemplated in the act of pledge between the pledgor and the pledgee. A collateral mortgage package may be pledged to secure particular debts, either previously existing or contracted contemporaneously with the pledge, or future loans by the pledgee to the pledgor—or both—up to the limits of the pledge.²¹

We have also discussed the usual purpose to which collateral mortgages are put: "The collateral mortgage is commonly used with financing in which the maker draws the loan proceeds in stages. The collateral note and mortgage are made for the full amount of the line of credit extended by the lender. This is then pledged as security for a debt, usually represented by a separate hand note. This seemingly fictitious transaction is a Louisiana credit device that lenders use to obtain a lien on property effective on the date the mortgage is executed for advances not yet made, but which the lender may make in the future." Fed. Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Murray, 853 F.2d 1251, 1255 n. 1 (5th Cir.1988).

The Supreme Court of Louisiana has made clear that "[t]he collateral mortgage, though now recognized by statute, is a form of conventional mortgage that was developed by Louisiana's practicing lawyers and has long been recognized by Louisiana courts."²² It "arose out of the need for a special form of mortgage to secure revolving lines of credit and multiple present and future cross-collateralized debts for which there was no provision in the Civil Code."²³

More specifically, the Supreme Court of Louisiana explained:

"A mortgage is an accessory right which is granted to the creditor over the property of another as security for the debt. La. Civ.Code arts. 3278, 3284. Mortgages are of three types: conventional, legal and judicial. La. Civ.Code art. 3286. Within the area of conventional mortgages, three different forms of mortgages are recognized by the Louisiana statutes and jurisprudence: an 'ordinary mortgage' (La. Civ.Code arts. 3278, 3290); a mortgage to secure future advances (La. Civ.Code arts. 3292, 3293); and a collateral mortgage. See Thrift Funds Canal, Inc. v. Foy, 261 La. 573, 260 So.2d 628 (1972). Unlike the other two forms of conventional mortgages, a collateral mortgage is not a 'pure' mortgage; rather, it is the result of judicial recognition that one can pledge a note secured by a mortgage and use this pledge to secure yet another debt."

"A collateral mortgage indirectly secures a debt via a pledge. A collateral mortgage consists of at least three documents, and takes several steps to complete. First, there is a promissory note, usually called a collateral mortgage note or a 'ne varietur' note. The collateral mortgage note is secured by a mortgage, the so-called collateral mortgage. The mortgage provides the creditor with security in the enforcement of the collateral mortgage note."

"Up to this point, a collateral mortgage appears to be identical to both a mortgage to secure future advances and an ordinary mortgage. But a distinction arises in the collateral mortgage situation because money is not directly advanced on the note that is paraphrased for identification with the act of mortgage. Rather, the collateral mortgage note and the mortgage which secures it are pledged to secure a debt."²⁴

As such, "[b]ecause the mortgagor, after executing the collateral mortgage and the collateral mortgage note, then pledges the collateral mortgage note as security for a debt, usually represented by a separate hand note, the collateral mortgage package combines the security devices of pledge and mortgage."²⁵

Synthesizing the law of pledge and on collateral mortgages, the Supreme Court of Louisiana has observed that a "[p]ledge is an accessory contract which secures the performance of an existing principal obligation," and "[t]he principal obligation in the collateral mortgage scheme is the actual indebtedness, usually represented by a hand note, and the collateral mortgage note is pledged to secure payment of the principal obligation."²⁶ The district court and Liljeberg Enterprises make much of the fact that the collateral mortgage "package" involves a "pledge," but, under the facts of this case, this is word play.

A collateral mortgage often involves a hand note that is a third party's note made payable to the mortgagor, which note is pledged by the mortgagor to the mortgagee.²⁷ In such an instance, a pledgor-pledgee relationship with attendant duties—including a statutory duty of reasonable care and fiduciary duties—to protect the rights of the mortgagor in the third party's note against other creditors of the third party may well arise under statute by the virtue of the nature of the pledgor-pledgee relationship.²⁸

Here, however, St. Jude executed a collateral mortgage on the hospital site and pledged a collateral mortgage note to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. to secure the collateral mortgage, which was itself created to secure the promissory note evidencing Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.'s loan to St. Jude for construction of the hospital. There was no third-party obligation involved.²⁹ In such a case, where the mortgagor has "pledged" to the mortgagee the mortga-

In the case of chattel paper or an instrument, reasonable care includes taking necessary steps to preserve rights against prior parties unless otherwise agreed."); LA CIV CODE art. 3167 ("The creditor is answerable agreeably to the rules which have been established under the title: Of Conventional Obligations, for the loss or decay of the pledge which may happen through his fault."); accord LA REV STAT § 10-9-207(1) ("A secured party must use reasonable care in the custody and preservation of collateral in his possession. Acts 128); cf. Trans-Global, 583 So.2d at 453 (holding that, in a case not involving a collateral mortgage, the duty of care imposed on a creditor, as the pledgee of a debtor's letter of credit from a third party, was that of prudent administrator such that the creditor could be held liable for the loss or decay of the pledge occurring through its fault)

29. Liljeberg Enterprises argues for first time in its reply brief that Lifemark did not raise in the district court its argument distinguishing between collateral mortgages involving third party notes and those involving hand notes on which the collateral mortgagor is the obligor. Ordinarily, we do not consider arguments raised for the first time in a reply brief. See Price v. Roark, 256 F.3d 364, 368 n. 2 (5th Cir.2001). However, St. Jude's argument here seeks simply to invoke a rule which we at times invoke sua sponte. that arguments not raised in the district court cannot be asserted for the first time on appeal. See Stokes v. Emerson Elec. Co., 217 F.3d 353, 358 n. 19 (5th Cir.2000); Brown v. Ames, 201 F.3d 654, 663 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 925, 121 S.Ct. 299, 148 L.Ed.2d 240 (2000). However, an argument is not waived on appeal if the argument on the issue before the district court was sufficient to permit the district court to rule on it. Brown, 201 F.3d at 663; Rogers v. Hartford Life & Accident Ins. Co., 167 F.3d 933, 943 n. 8 (5th Cir.1999); N.Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 84 F.3d 137, 141 n. 4 (5th Cir.1996). That is the case here, based on our review of the record. On appeal, Lifemark has certainly refined its argument to distinguish the duties owed by a collateral mortgagee/pledgee in third-party note situations as developed in the case law cited by St. Jude from Lifemark's situation, but Lifemark did sufficiently put before the district court its argument that no duty to reinscribe the collateral mortgage or to prevent the loss of the hospital flowed from its pledgor-pledgee relationship with St. Jude. See R. 9076, 9151-57. This was sufficient to permit the district court to rule on the essential argument Lifemark advances on appeal.

gor's own hand note on which the mortgagor is directly obligated to the mortgagee, the mortgagee has a duty to keep the note so that it may be returned to the mortgagor upon payment of the underlying debt to the mortgagee.³⁰ It is true that the Supreme Court of Louisiana has cited Professor Slovenko's observation that:

... [I]n the case of promissory notes, bills of exchange, and other evidences of indebtedness pledged as security, a duty exists on the part of the pledgee to preserve the rights of the pledgor against the obligors in the deposited documents. The pledgee is held responsible if he neglects to have a promissory note, the subject of the pledge, protested for non-payment, and the endorser is discharged in consequence; or, if he neglects to have a mortgage which is pledged to him reinscribed or reregistered in proper time, and it loses its rank and effect.³¹

It is also the case that Professor Slovenko's discussion assumes that a third-party obligation is involved with the pledge, where here it is not. To the contrary, the obligor of the underlying document and the pledgor (and the collateral mortgagor) were one and the same—St. Jude.

Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. loaned money to St. Jude to build a hospital, a loan evidenced by a loan agreement and a promissory note, or hand note, in turn collateralized by the pledge of a collateral mortgage note, itself secured by a collateral mortgage on the hospital site.³² The extraordinary duty the district court imposed upon Lifemark, who loaned the money to build the hospital and held the mortgage on it to secure its payment, is inexplicable. Whatever duty Lifemark may have owed as the pledgee of the collateral mortgage note, they do not include a requirement that Lifemark reinscribe the mortgage executed in Lifemark's favor to secure a debt owed by St. Jude to Lifemark, in order that the mortgage may retain priority for Lifemark's benefit as pledgee and mortgagee. As Lifemark aptly points out, ordinarily a debtor such as St. Jude is happy to have its creditor fail to record its lien. We reject the assertion 30. Cf. Max Nathan, Jr. & Anthony P. Dunbar, The Collateral Mortgage: Logic and Experience, 49 LA L REV 39, 49 (1988) ("Since a collateral mortgage may be used to secure a specific debt, a debtor who wishes to limit the mortgage to that debt can lawfully do so and the pledge agreement is clearly the proper document in which to manifest such an intent. The risk, of course, is that the ne varietur note, which is negotiable, may fall into the hands of bona fide third parties who are unaware of the pledge agreement and are not bound by it. That risk is probably the major drawback to use of the collateral mortgage. The problem is mitigated by the fact that a pledgee, who accepts a fiduciary duty as such, surely would be liable to a borrower injured in such a situation. The risk can be further minimized by use of a third-party custodian to hold the ne varietur note, or by use of a safety deposit box with appropriate restrictions." 32. Under a later settlement in 1991, St. Jude executed a renewal note, renewing and extending the original note, and, like the original note, the renewal note was secured by the original collateral mortgage, collateral mortgage note, and pledge of the collateral mortgage note. Along with the execution of the renewal note, St. Jude provided Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. with additional security in the form of a collateral assignment of rents, which assignment was recorded.

that Lifemark as the mortgagee here owed a duty to its mortgagor to reinscribe the mortgage, as illustrated in part, indeed, by the very difficulty of describing exactly how not protecting a mortgage's first position, in and of itself, could possibly harm the mortgagor.

Nor can this theory explain how it can lie beside the undisputed right of Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. to, "at any time, without notice to anyone, release any part of the Property from the effect of the Mortgage." This right of release is explicitly recited in the collateral mortgage itself. In addition, the renewal note provides that St. Jude "agree[s] to any . . . release of any [of the security herefor]." The right of Lifemark to unilaterally release any part of the property from the mortgage is wholly at odds with the district court's discovery of a "duty" to reinscribe the collateral mortgage. It was Lifemark's contracted-for right to retain the collateral mortgage's priority against other creditors, under both the renewal note and the collateral mortgage itself.³³ The grant of a security interest to secure St. Jude's debt was to protect the lender, Lifemark Hospitals, Inc., not the borrower.

Nor did Lifemark as mortgagee have a duty to protect the hospital owner from other creditors asserting their rights against the hospital, as the district court held Lifemark did. It is self-evident that there is a vast difference between a statutory duty to prevent loss or decay of a third party's note evidencing a debt owed to the collateral mortgagor/pledgor in order to preserve against other third parties the collateral mortgagor's rights in the third party's note pledged by it to the collateral mortgagee, and a supposed fiduciary duty on the part of the collateral mortgagee to protect the collateral mortgagor against a third party's exercise of its rights in an entirely different instrument or judgment. This is a mere chimera, existing nowhere in Louisiana law. It was apparently constructed out of whole cloth.

In sum, Lifemark had no duty to timely reinscribe the collateral mortgage, and the district court erred as a matter of law in concluding that Lifemark had a consequential duty to "mitigate" any harm allegedly caused by Lifemark's failure to reinscribe by buying out the Travelers lien and adding the Travelers debt to the debt owed by St. Jude to Lifemark.

[7] As for any duties arising out of Lifemark's holding the right to basic rent under the collateral assignment of rents, Lifemark argues in part that the statutory duty of reasonable care under Louisiana Civil Code article 3167 does not apply to an assignment of rents because such an assignment is not a pledge where Lifemark did not take possession of a corporeal movable or evidence of a credit, such as a note, as required by Louisiana Civil Code article 3152.³⁴ Lifemark argues that article 3167 imposes only custodial duties on pledgees and that no such duties attend its collateral assignment of rents from St. Jude.

33. Cf. Commercial Nat'l Bank in Shreveport v. Audubon Meadow P'ship, 566 So.2d 1136, 1140-41 (La.App. 2 Cir.1990) (holding that, in light of the guaranty agreement's permitting the lending bank to surrender any securities without notice or consent from the guarantor, the bank's alleged negligence in allowing a letter of credit to lapse provided the guarantor with no basis for recovery against the bank)

34. See LA CIV.CODE art. 3152 ("It is essential to the contract of pledge that the creditor be put in possession of the thing given to him in pledge, and consequently that actual delivery of it be made to him, unless he has possession of it already by some other right.")

This argument, however, does not account for Louisiana Civil Code article 3153, which provides: "But this delivery is only necessary with respect to corporeal things; as to incorporeal rights, such as credits, which are given in pledge, the delivery is merely fictitious and symbolical."³⁵ An assignment of rents may be a pledge, because "[o]ne may, in fine, pawn incorporeal movables, such as credits and other claims of that nature."³⁶ Indeed, Louisiana statutes provide that "[c]laims, credits, obligations, and incorporeal rights in general not evidenced by written instrument or muniment of title, shall be subject to pledge, and may be pledged in the same manner as other property" and that "[t]he pledge shall be valid as to all persons without delivery of the claim, credit, obligation, or incorporeal right to the pledgee."³⁷

But again, that is beside the point, the duty attributed by the district court to Lifemark as pledgee of the right to basic rent under the collateral assignment of rents did not exist. The recorded collateral assignment of rents simply gave Lifemark a secured right to rents upon default by St. Jude under the renewal note. The collateral assignment of rents specifically provides that Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. "shall not be obligated to perform or discharge nor does [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] hereby undertake to perform or discharge any obligation, duty or liability under said

Lease." As we observed, the renewal note itself gave Lifemark the right to release any security, including the collateral assignment of rents, under the renewal note. In the face of these contractual provisions, holding the right to basic rent under the collateral assignment of rents imposed no duty upon Lifemark to preserve the lease covering the assigned rents.

We are persuaded that the district court erred as a matter of law in concluding that Lifemark breached any duties by failing to timely reinscribe the collateral mortgage, buy out the Travelers lien, add the Travelers debt to the debt owed by St. Jude to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc., and refrain from having Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. purchase the hospital at the foreclosure sale. In sum, Lifemark did not owe the duties to St. Jude upon which the district court premised its order reversing the judicial sale of the hospital. The district court erred in upsetting the confirmed judicial sale on these grounds.

B.

[8] The district court pointed to its findings of Lifemark's bad faith, collusion, and self-dealing in forcing the judicial sale of the hospital, chilling the bidding at the sale, and purchasing the hospital as an alternative ground for its upset of the judicial sale. The district court relied upon two unpublished district court decisions setting aside a judicial sale. Both were in admiralty and prior to sale confirmation.

That slender reed aside, the district court's findings of a "conspiracy" to wrest control of the hospital and medical office building from St. Jude and Liljeberg Enterprises border on the absurd. We are left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed, that the findings are not supported by the evidence and are clearly erroneous.

The district court's "conspiracy theory" conclusion is based, in part, on the view that Liljeberg Enterprises's or St. Jude's losses were caused by Lifemark. Specifically, not reinscribing the collateral mortgage and not buying out the Travelers lien and adding the Travelers debt to the debt owed by St. Jude to Lifemark. These findings turn on the remarkable but largely implicit conclusion, asserted directly by the Liljebergs' counsel at oral argument, that, under Louisiana law, a second mortgagee, which Travelers would have been had the collateral mortgage been timely reinscribed, cannot initiate foreclosure proceedings. The district court and Liljeberg Enterprises offer no statutory or case law support for this proposition, for the simple reason that this is not the law.³⁸

The theory that Lifemark proximately caused any loss to Liljeberg Enterprises or St. Jude from the Travelers foreclosure on its judicial mortgage cannot accommodate the undisputed fact that, under Louisiana law, St. Jude could have reinscribed the collateral mortgage itself.³⁹ A subordinate position for the Travelers judgment is now said to have been critical for St. Jude and its loss the centerpiece of a conspiracy to take the hospital. Yet, St. Jude could have checked the records and protected its own interest. That it could have and did not do so is telling. It rends a large hole in the conspiracy claim and leaves St. Jude's inaction unexplained. This, with the reality we have explained that Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. had no duty to buy out the Travelers lien, no duty to add the Travelers debt to the debt owed by St. Jude to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc., and no duty to prevent the purchase of the hospital at the foreclosure sale by Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc.

Even if we were to somehow "explain" all of this by the theory that this foreclosure was part of Lifemark's plan from the beginning, the theory cannot be squared with one large undisputed fact: Liljeberg Enterprises and St. Jude faced the Travelers lien because of Liljeberg Enterprises's and St. Jude's own failed litigation against Travelers, arising out of an independent dispute with Travelers. Any suggestion that Lifemark somehow worked that result is defied by the record. Indeed, a panel of this court described the Liljebergs' conduct involved that litigation as "as egregious and unconscionable of bad faith contractual dealings as the members of this panel can recall having encountered." ⁴⁰ The cases before us only reinforce that panel's observation. The record is clear that any losses by St. Jude and Liljeberg Enterprises were proximately caused by the Liljebergs, who defaulted to Travelers and whose post-default conduct, in part, led to the Travelers judgment and its resulting judicial mortgage and lien on the hospital. The foreclosure of this lien led to the foreclosure of the hospital that the district court order would set aside.

Indeed, despite Liljeberg Enterprises's contention on appeal that Lifemark's efforts to "circumvent" the pharmacy agreement and refusal to renew the medical office building lease caused St. Jude and Liljeberg Enterprises to experience significant shortfalls which foreclosed any possibility of paying the note on the medical office building to Travelers, the district court made no findings of fact that Lifemark's conduct was the cause of the debt to Travelers or St. Jude's inability to pay that debt, which resulted in the judicial mortgage Travelers filed encumbering the hospital property.⁴¹

With or without such findings, however, the idea that Lifemark deliberately subordinated its mortgage interest to Travelers, knowing it would result in a required payment, to wit, approximately $7.8 million, to Travelers at any judicial sale, comes close to being nonsensical. It rests upon the assertion that Louisiana law somehow obligated Lifemark to lend the money to bail the Liljebergs out of their litigation fiasco with Travelers. That is so because, as we will explain, Travelers would most certainly have foreclosed its second mortgage. Although the district court made no such explicit finding, Liljeberg Enterprises argues on appeal that Lifemark deliberately failed to reinscribe its collateral mortgage in order to facilitate the Travelers foreclosure and the judicial sale of the medical office building and the hospital to Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., whereafter Lifemark conspired to manipulate the judicial sale, colluded to minimize the price offered at the judicial sale, and schemed to terminate the lease and St. Jude's right to collect rents from Lifemark.

In answer to the palpable flaws in their theories, the Liljebergs would simply expand the conspiracy. They argue that this court should consider documents from Lifemark's legal malpractice suit against their former attorneys for their attorneys' failure to reinscribe the collateral mortgage and, more specifically, in a footnote in their original brief, the Liljebergs state for the first time that they "challenge the court's denial of their motion to supplement the record with documents from the trial between Lifemark and [its former attorneys]," which "documents clearly show that Defendants and their attorneys conspired to defraud St. Jude/Liljeberg Enterprises out of the hospital, the lease, and

The panel further noted that "[t]he Liljeberg conduct to which we refer is the antithesis of that mandated in La. Civil Code Ann. art. 1983 ('Contracts must be performed in good faith'), and has contributed to the legal effects described in La. Civil Code Ann. art. 1997 ('An obligor in bad faith is liable for all damages, foreseeable or not, that are a direct consequence of his failure to perform.')." Id. at 2 n. 3.

able or not, that are a direct consequence of his failure to perform.')." Id. at 2 n. 3.

41. Nor, for that matter, did the district court make findings supporting two other premises of the Liljebergs' arguments on appeal: that Lifemark intentionally or deliberately failed to reinscribe the collateral mortgage or that Lifemark engaged in any fraud on the court or fraud with regard to the judicial sale.

the pharmacy." It tells that this argument was not raised or briefed as a separate issue until the Liljebergs' final reply brief. It is therefore waived.⁴² Moreover, the district court ruled in an order dated April 25, 2000 that the Liljebergs' motion to supplement was rendered moot by the court's order and final judgment issuing its findings of fact and conclusions of law, which therefore quite obviously did not rely on the supplemental materials proffered with the motion. Under these circumstances, even if we were to consider this issue, the Liljebergs could not show an abuse of discretion on appeal.⁴³

In sum, we conclude that the district court's findings that Lifemark engaged in bad faith, collusion, and self-dealing to force the judicial sale of the hospital, chill the bidding at the sale, and purchase the hospital are clearly erroneous. In the absence of any breach of duty to St. Jude or Liljeberg Enterprises on the part of Lifemark or a Lifemark breach having proximately caused any loss to the Liljebergs resulting from the Travelers lien, there is no bad faith or collusion in Lifemark's decision to bid at the judicial sale or Lifemark's purchase of the hospital at the legally-permitted two-thirds of its appraised value.

The other side of the no-duty coin is that Lifemark was free to act in its own self-interest, including allowing Lifemark, which had the license, to own and operate the hospital, and to escape the burden of the pharmacy agreement, which functioned much like an overriding royalty payment. As Lifemark persuasively argues on appeal, and the record is clear: the various lending and lease transactions and instruments, as agreed to by the Liljebergs and Lifemark, permitted the outcomes which Lifemark sought in Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc.'s bidding at the judicial sale as well as Lifemark's decision not to renew the lease on the medical office building.⁴⁴ Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. was legally entitled to obtain permission to bid credits, and received a court order granting such permission, to give it the option to bid at the sale should the circumstances warrant. The district court's findings and the Liljebergs' arguments on appeal offer no logical connection between a decision to seek authority to bid credits and the absence, let alone the chilling, of other bids on the hospital property at the judicial sale—the credits represent a debt Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. was owed, so a payment in cash and credits or simply in cash would make no difference for the bottom line in Lifemark's accounting. Moreover, although

Even assuming arguendo that the Liljebergs did not waive this issue on appeal and that we were to conclude that the district court abused its discretion in denying their motion to supplement, the supplemental material would not alter our conclusions on appeal.

44. Cf. Clark v. America's Favorite Chicken Co., 110 F.3d 295, 297-98 (5th Cir.1997) (under Louisiana law, it is not a breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing to engage in conduct which is expressly allowed under a contract).

the Liljebergs argue that Lifemark's knowledge that the priority of the lease on the hospital and collateral assignment of rents would deter other bidders at the judicial sale somehow supports their conspiracy theory, it demonstrates quite the opposite. As counsel for Lifemark aptly noted at oral argument, the judicial sale could almost be considered "chill-proof," in that it is hard to imagine anyone bidding $26 million on a property that would, by virtue of the lease and collateral assignment of rents, provide no cash-flow until at least sixteen years later, in 2010.

[9] On the basis of its clearly erroneous "conspiracy theory" findings, the district court erred as a matter of law in disregarding long-standing Louisiana jurisprudence that a judicial sale, once completed, cannot generally be undone.⁴⁵ Freed from the district court's clearly erroneous "conspiracy theory" findings, the evidence concerning Lifemark's actions following Travelers's filing its judicial mortgage does not support findings of bad faith, collusion, and self-dealing on the part of Lifemark that would permit the district court to overturn the confirmed judicial sale.⁴⁶ Rather, the evidence considered against the entirety of the record shows that Lifemark's actions consisted of commercially reasonable, albeit aggressive, steps in reaction to the Travelers judgment, all of which were within their contractual rights and applicable law.

We have detected several warring premises internal to the Liljebergs' theories. In concluding this section, we mention one more: the Liljebergs attempt to maintain both that Lifemark never intended to perform under the various commercial instruments between the parties and that Lifemark drafted these instruments to allow Lifemark to engage in conduct it challenges—declining to renew the lease on the medical office building, purchasing the hospital at a judicial sale, and terminating the pharmacy agreement based on a cross-default provision.

Lifemark argues that the district court erred in denying its claim for a deficiency judgment, a sum of $20,600,060.91 that St. Jude owed Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. under the renewal promissory note after Life-mark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc.'s purchase of the hospital at the judicial sale.

The Liljeborgs respond that the same bad faith and collusive conduct that tainted the judicial sale also bars any claim for deficiency and that the alleged defaults and acceleration were caused by the bad faith and collusive wrongdoing of Lifemark, which alone is legally responsible. The district court denied Lifemark's deficiency judgment claim based on its decision to overturn the judicial sale, such that "[a]ll rents which would have been paid absent the judicial sale will be deemed paid on the mortgage in favor of [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] and the mortgage note shall be deemed current at the time of transfer," and, "[i]nasmuch as this Court has restored the status quo prior to sale and reinstated the collateral mortgage, collateral mortgage note, and note, the claim of [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] on the note is disallowed." Having found the district court's findings and conclusions in favor of this order to be in error, and rejected the Liljeborgs' arguments on appeal, we must in turn reverse the district court's order denying this claim. As discussed infra in connection with the motion to assume the pharmacy agreement, the judicial mortgage and lien on the hospital won in court by Travelers and the judicial sale that followed were defaults under the fourth covenant of the collateral mortgage. These events of default gave Lifemark the contractually-secured right to accelerate the renewal promissory note and immediately recover all amounts and interest due thereunder.⁴⁷ We remand to the district court for calculation of the amount of deficiency owed to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. and for entry of judgment in that amount.

D.

On its cross-appeal, Liljeborg Enterprises argues that the district court erred in requiring St. Jude and Liljeborg Enterprises to reimburse Lifemark the approximately $7.8 million it paid to Travelers. Having reversed the district court's order overturning the judicial sale, we must reverse the order of reimbursement, part of the district court's set-aside of the judicial sale. Because Lifemark will maintain ownership of the hospital pursuant to the confirmed judicial sale, the Liljeborgs need not reimburse Lifemark's payment of the Travelers debt made at foreclosure. Liljeborg Enterprises's cross-appeal on this issue is now moot.⁴⁸

47. The fourth covenant of the collateral mortgage provides.

The Property is to remain mortgaged and hypothecated until the full and final payment of the aforesaid indebtedness in principal and interest, attorney's fees, insurance premiums, costs and expenses, the Mortgagor hereby binding itself, its heirs, successors and assigns not to make a conveyance, mortgage, transfer or sale of the Property until full and final payment of the aforesaid indebtedness including principal and interest, attorney's fees, insurance premiums, costs and expenses, unless the Mortgagee expressly consents to such conveyance or mortgage in writing. The Mortgagor hereby agrees that should the Property be mortgaged, sold or transferred, either with or without the assumption of the aforesaid indebtedness, such sale, transfer or mortgage shall constitute a breach of this contract and the obligations herein set forth, and the Note shall, at the option of the Mortgagee, immediately mature and become due and payable, anything contained herein to the contrary notwithstanding, and it shall be lawful for the Mortgagee to proceed with enforcement of its mortgage as hereinabove set forth.

48. We therefore assume, without deciding, that the Liljeborgs did not waive this point of error by failing to raise it before the district court, notwithstanding that the relief they sought in seeking to alter or amend the district court's findings and judgment specifically requested only that the district court "defer the due date for reimbursing Lifemark with

VI. Cause No. 93-1794

The district court concluded in Cause No. 93-1794 that Liljeberg Enterprises, as the debtor in possession in its Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding, should be allowed to assume the pharmacy agreement pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 365. The district court rejected Lifemark's arguments that the pharmacy agreement terminated under its own terms and was therefore not available to be assumed and that Liljeberg Enterprises committed incurable defaults under the pharmacy agreement which, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(1), precluded an order granting Liljeberg Enterprises's motion to assume.

11 U.S.C. § 365(a) provides that "the trustee, subject to the court's approval, may assume or reject any executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor," but 11 U.S.C. § 1107(a) provides that, "[s]ubject to any limitations on a trustee serving in a case under this chapter, and to such limitations or conditions as the court prescribes, a debtor in possession shall have all the rights, other than the right to compensation under section 330 of this title, ... of a trustee serving in a case under this chapter." Thus, as a debtor in possession, Liljeberg Enterprises was required to satisfy all the requirements of 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(1) in order to assume the pharmacy agreement as an executory contract under section 365:

If there has been a default in an executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor, the trustee may not assume such contract or lease unless, at the time of assumption of such contract or lease, the trustee—

(A) cures, or provides adequate assurance that the trustee will promptly cure, such default;

(B) compensates, or provides adequate assurance that the trustee will promptly compensate, a party other than the debtor to such contract or lease, for any actual pecuniary loss to such party resulting from such default; and

(C) provides adequate assurance of future performance under such contract or lease.⁴⁹

A.

[10, 11] As an initial matter, Lifemark argues that the pharmacy agreement was no longer an executory contract subject to assumption. To determine if a contract is executory for purposes of this provision, "the relevant inquiry is whether performance remains due to some extent on both sides," such "that an agreement is executory if at the time of the bankruptcy filing, the failure of either party to complete performance would constitute a material breach of the contract, thereby excusing the performance of the other party."⁵⁰

Lifemark argues that the district court erred in treating the pharmacy agreement as an executory contract subject to assumption by Liljeberg Enterprises. They contend that, when Lifemark ceased to lease the hospital on October 28, 1994, the pharmacy agreement terminated by its own terms pursuant to section 5.1(e). It provides: "This Agreement shall be effective as set forth above and shall continue in full force and effect, unless sooner terminated with the first to occur of the following: . . . (e) LIFEMARK ceases to lease or operate Hospital."

Liljeberg Enterprises filed for Chapter 11 relief on January 27, 1993. Lifemark's lease of the hospital did not end until almost twenty months later—when Travelers foreclosed and Lifemark bought the hospital at the judicial sale. There is no dispute but that throughout this period the pharmacy agreement was in full force and effect and a failure of either party to complete performance would have been a material breach.

Lifemark argues, however, that a line of authority out of the Tenth Circuit provides that "[a] contract that provides for termination on the default of one party may terminate under ordinary principles of contract law even if the defaulting party has filed a petition under the Bankruptcy Act."⁵¹ Although this holding arose under the old Bankruptcy Act,⁵² Lifemark argues that it remains valid under the Bankruptcy Code, pointing to a bankruptcy court's conclusion to that effect.⁵³ That Michigan bankruptcy court reviewed several decisions involving the issue of whether a contract terminated by its own terms or time limits post-petition and concluded that "the issue must be whether termination requires the non-debtor party to undertake some post-petition affirmative act," such that, "[w]hen termination of the contract requires an affirmative act of the non-debtor party, the contract remains executory because such an act is stayed under 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)," but, "[w]hen termination occurs without any action by the non-debtor party, the contract is no longer executory and no longer subject to assumption or rejection."⁵⁴

The parties have pointed to no Fifth Circuit decisions treating this issue, and we have located none. The Liljebergs argue that even under this authority the pharmacy agreement did not terminate post-petition where Lifemark not only participated in the alleged defaults, they intentionally precipitated them; that, under the pharmacy agreement and Louisiana law, the pharmacy agreement could not terminate automatically but required Lifemark to place Liljeberg Enterprises in default and obtain judicial dissolution.

[12] We agree and conclude that the district court did not err in concluding that the pharmacy agreement was an executory agreement subject to assumption by Liljeberg Enterprises. Lifemark's affirmative acts—its purchase of the hospital—caused the lease to be extinguished under the doctrine of confusion, which in turn caused any alleged default under section 5.1(e) of the pharmacy agreement. Moreover, Louisiana law provides that, except in limited circumstances which the district court correctly concluded do not apply here, a contract will not terminate unless the non-breaching party seeks judicial dissolution of the contract or at least provides notice of the intent to exercise the right to terminate the contract for default, even if the contract explicitly provides for automatic termination.⁵⁵ And section 5.1(e) does not do so. Lifemark was required to give Liljeberg Enterprises written notice of termination under section 15 of the pharmacy agreement. In short, terminating the pharmacy agreement for default under section 5.1(e) required an affirmative act of Lifemark. Lifemark gave no notice and did not seek judicial dissolution. The pharmacy agreement remained executory.

B.

[13] Turning then to whether the district court erred in allowing Liljeberg Enterprises to assume the executory pharmacy agreement, under section 365, “[a]n assumed lease or contract will remain in effect through and then after the completion of the reorganization,” and “[t]he non-debtor party to the agreement is not released from its duties and must continue to perform; likewise, the debtor must continue to perform or pay for the services or other costs that are not discharged.”⁵⁶ We have further explained that “[t]he act of assumption must be grounded, at least in part, in the conclusion that maintenance of the contract is more beneficial to the estate than doing without the other party’s services,”⁵⁷ a determination that assumption of the pharmacy agreement by Liljeberg Enterprises “represented a proper exercise of business judgment.”⁵⁸

[14–17] Section 365(b)(1) essentially “allows a debtor to ‘continue in a beneficial contract provided, however, that the other party is made whole at the time of the debtor’s assumption of said contract.’”⁵⁹ That is, “[s]ection 365 is intended to provide a means whereby a debtor can force another party to an executory contract to continue to perform under the contract if (1) the debtor can provide adequate assurance that it, too, will continue to perform, and if (2) the debtor can cure any defaults in its past performance.”⁶⁰ As such, “the debtor party must take full account of the cost to cure all existing defaults owed to the non-debtor party when assessing whether the contract is beneficial to the estate.”⁶¹ Further, to determine if the debtor in possession has provided “adequate assurance” of future performance, we have held that courts must look to “factual conditions,” including “consider[ation of] whether the debtor’s financial data indicated its ability to generate an income stream sufficient to meet its obligations, the general economic outlook in the debtor's industry, and the presence of a guarantor." ⁶²

[18] To the extent that such determinations turn on contested factual disputes, and not errors of law, we review only for clear error and not under de novo review.⁶³ Lifemark argues that, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(1), the district court should have denied Liljeberg Enterprises's motion to assume because Liljeberg Enterprises's transactional and operational defaults under the pharmacy agreement are incurable and because Liljeberg Enterprises cannot provide adequate assurance of future performance.

[19,20] Lifemark's arguments regarding transactional defaults require interpretation of several contractual documents. "The district court's interpretation of a contract is reviewed de novo," and "[t]he contract and record are reviewed independently and under the same standards that guided the district court."⁶⁴ At the same time, "if the interpretation of the contract turns on the consideration of extrinsic evidence, such as evidence of the intent of the parties, the standard of review is clearly erroneous," but, if "intent is determined solely from the language of the contract, then contractual interpretation is purely a question of law," and "[t]he threshold question whether extrinsic evidence should be considered in determining the intent of the parties is itself a question of law and thus reviewable de novo."⁶⁵

[21–26] In this diversity case, we look to Louisiana law for the applicable standard of contract interpretation.⁶⁶ "Under Louisiana law, a contract is the law between the parties, and is read for its plain meaning."⁶⁷ Thus, "[u]nder Louisiana law, where the words of a contract are clear and explicit and lead to no absurd consequences, the contract's meaning and the intent of its parties must be sought within the four corners of the document and cannot be explained or contradicted by extrinsic evidence," such that, "[i]f a court finds the contract to be unambiguous, it may construe the intent from the face of the document—without considering extrinsic evidence—and enter judgment as a matter of law."⁶⁸ Further, "[u]nder Louisiana law, a contract is ambiguous when it were substantially amended by Act 331 of 1984, which was enacted after the pharmacy agreement was entered into on February 10, 1983. is uncertain as to the parties' intentions and susceptible to more than one reasonable meaning under the circumstances and after applying established rules of construction.'" ⁶⁹ Put another way, "under Louisiana law, 'when the words of the contract are clear and explicit and lead to no absurd consequences, no further interpretation may be made in search of the parties' intent,'" and "[t]his established rule of strict construction does not allow the parties to create an ambiguity where none exists and does not authorize courts to create new contractual obligations where the language of the written document clearly expresses the intent of the parties.'" ⁷⁰

[27] The Liljebergs and the district court also rely on the rule that "under Louisiana law doubts or ambiguities as to the meaning of a contract must, if not otherwise resolvable, be eliminated by interpreting the contract against the party who prepared it." ⁷¹ The Supreme Court of Louisiana has applied this rule in the context of "an adhesionary contract," noting that "any contradiction or ambiguity should be construed against Titan, the party who drafted the policy," but that "[t]his general rule of construction . . . only applies when there are two equally reasonable interpretations of the contractual provision in question." ⁷²

[28] The statutory provision, Louisiana Civil Code article 2056, captioned "Standard-form contracts," provides both that, "[i]n case of doubt that cannot be otherwise resolved, a provision in a contract must be interpreted against the party who furnished its text" and that "[a] contract executed in a standard form of one party must be interpreted, in case of doubt, in favor of the other party." This language suggests it will primarily be applied to standard-form or adhesionary contracts or, as the Supreme Court of Louisiana has most often recently applied article 2056, to insurance contracts. ⁷³ Neither this court nor the Supreme Court of Louisiana has, however, confined the provision to these types of contracts. ⁷⁴

[30] We first must answer whether the judicial lien and foreclosure of the hospital were defaults under the collateral mortgage and lease and, if so, whether they were transactional defaults under the pharmacy agreement's cross-default provision. Section 5.1(b) of the pharmacy agreement provides:

This Agreement shall be effective as set forth above and shall continue in full force and effect, unless sooner terminated with the first to occur of the following: . . . (b) Either party shall remain in breach of this Agreement for a continuous, unabated 30-day period after receipt of written notice of such breach from the other party. Should OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.]; or any of LIFEMARK's corporate affiliates, be in default of any other contractual agreement with LIFEMARK or any of LIFEMARK's corporate affiliates, including, but not limited to, the lease relating to the Hospital, then OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.] shall be in breach of this Agreement.

20 (La.1994) ("Applying this rule [Louisiana Civil Code article 2056] in contexts like this one is appropriate in that it recognizes the reality that the releasee is responsible for the broad release language and that any ambiguity should thus be construed against the releasee."), cf. Mott v. ODECO, 577 F.2d 273, 278 (5th Cir.1978) (case involving master service

Section 5.1(b) placed the Liljebergs in breach of the pharmacy agreement by virtue of the default under the fourth covenant of the collateral mortgage through the sale of the hospital. That covenant provides that "[t]he Mortgagor [St. Jude] hereby agrees that should the [hospital] be mortgaged, sold or transferred, either with or without the assumption of the aforesaid indebtedness, such sale, transfer or mortgage shall constitute a breach of this contract and the obligations herein set forth."

Lifemark argues that the judicial mortgage and lien placed on the hospital was also a transactional default under the fourth and fifth covenants of the collateral mortgage. The fourth covenant provides in relevant part, in addition to the previously-quoted language, that "[t]he [hospital] is to remain mortgaged and hypothecated until the full and final payment of the aforesaid indebtedness . . . the Mortgagor [St. Jude] hereby binding itself . . . not to make a conveyance, mortgage, transfer or sale of the [hospital] until full and final payment of the aforesaid indebtedness . . . , unless the Mortgagee [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] expressly consents to such conveyance or mortgage in writing." The fifth covenant provides, in pertinent part, that "should there be created or suffered to be created any other lien or charges superior in rank to the lien and mortgage herein granted, . . . then and in any of such events, the Note in principal and interest and all other indebtedness secured hereby shall, at the option of the Mortgagee [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] shall, at the option of the Mortgagee [Lifemark mark Hospitals, Inc.), immediately become due and payable....” Finally, Lifemark argues that the Travelers lien created a default of the lease between St. Jude and Lifemark, which provides in Article 11.1, entitled “Warranty of Peaceable Possession and Title,” that “[d]uring the Lease Term, LESSOR [St. Jude] represents and covenants that it will not create nor allow to exist any liens, encumbrances or charges relating to obligations of the LESSOR [St. Jude] affecting the Leased Premises except liens, such as paving, water and sewerage liens, resulting from a special assessment by a Governmental Authority and the Act of Collateral Mortgage ... and any other mortgage instruments now or hereafter executed to secure the [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] loan ... or otherwise agreed to in writing by [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.]”

It is important to note that the collateral mortgage was signed by St. Jude and Lifemark Hospitals, Inc., not Liljeberg Enterprises and Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., while the lease of the hospital was signed by St. Jude and Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., not Liljeberg Enterprises and Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. As a result, Lifemark argues on appeal that the first reference to Lifemark in section 5.1(b) of the CPA is a typographical error, and that the provision should read “or any of OPERATOR’s corporate affiliates,” such that any default of St. Jude, which is an affiliate of the “Operator,” Liljeberg Enterprises, is a default under the pharmacy agreement.

[31, 32] The difficulty for Lifemark is that it is required to seek reformation or, to avoid absurdity, reading of the word “OPERATOR’S” into section 5.1(b) for “LIFEMARK’S.” Lifemark has never whole-heartedly sought reformation and with good reason. Under Louisiana law, “[r]eformation is an equitable remedy that may be used when a contract between the parties fails to express their true intent, either because of mutual mistake or fraud.”⁷⁶ Indeed, “[t]o establish the appropriateness of reformation, [Lifemark] had to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the [pharmacy agreement], as written, contained a mutual mistake and did not comport with the parties original intent.”⁷⁷

On this appeal, Lifemark stresses that the district court erred in rejecting its interpretation of section 5.1(b). The district court concluded that the language in section 5.1(b) could have been prepared for Liljeberg Enterprises’s benefit so that a default by Lifemark or a Lifemark affiliate would have allowed Liljeberg Enterprises to terminate the pharmacy agreement or seek damages. Lifemark replies that this suggested rational basis for the provision’s otherwise embarrassing phrasing is not so simple. Rather, this rescue requires a finding that the scrivener’s made four errors in the provision, instead of the one error that would exist under Lifemark’s interpretation. Lifemark’s argument, while strong, is not clear and convincing evidence of mutual mistake or fraud in the formation of the pharmacy agreement.

Lifemark also says that John Liljeberg testified that the Travelers lien could cause a default under the pharmacy agreement’s cross-default provision. As we read the testimony, Liljeberg did not admit any mutual mistake in the drafting of section 5.1(b) of the pharmacy agreement. Rather he indicated only that his attorney was concerned that the Travelers lien and foreclosure might sever the pharmacy agreement.

At the same time, "Louisiana courts will not interpret a contract in a way that leads to unreasonable consequences or inequitable or absurd results even when the words used in the contract are fairly explicit."⁷⁸ Lifemark argues that the assertion that there was no typographical error in section 5.1(b) of the pharmacy agreement is untenable because it leads to the nonsensical result that, when read literally, section 5.1(b) provides that Liljeberg Enterprises would be in breach if a Lifemark affiliate defaulted under an agreement with another Lifemark affiliate. Lifemark points out that this reading of section 5.1(b) is contrary to its plain language. That provision sets forth a default on "the lease relating to the Hospital" as an example of the type of breach that will trigger the cross-default provision. They note that, under Liljeberg Enterprises's reading, such a breach of the lease could not trigger the cross-default provision because it is not an agreement between Liljeberg Enterprises and a Lifemark affiliate or an agreement between two Lifemark entities.

[33-35] This is a stronger argument for Lifemark's interpretation of section 5.1(b). Particularly so in light of several controlling standards for contract interpretation under Louisiana law: (1) Every provision of the contract must be interpreted in light of the contract's other provisions in order to give each provision the meaning suggested by the contract as a whole; (2) Contract provisions susceptible to different meanings should be interpreted so as not to neutralize or ignore any provision or treat any provision as mere surplusage and so as to preserve the validity of the contract; and (3) "A doubtful provision must be interpreted in light of the nature of the contract, equity, usages, the conduct of the parties before and after the formation of the contract, and of other contracts of a like nature between the same parties."⁷⁹ Only if these rules do not resolve the issue of how to interpret the contractual provision at issue should the provision be interpreted against the party that drafted it, which default rule applies, in any event, "only . . . when there are two equally reasonable interpretations of the contractual provision in question."⁸⁰

We conclude that Lifemark's interpretation of section 5.1(b), providing that "LIFEMARK'S" should be read as "OPERATOR'S" in the first reference in the provision, is the only construction of the provision which gives it the meaning suggested by the pharmacy agreement as a whole and which does not neutralize or ignore any provision or treat any provision as mere surplusage. In particular, this reading of section 5.1(b) makes sense of the example of the lease of the hospital between St. Jude and Lifemark Hospitals, Inc., which was signed only a month after Liljeberg Enterprises and Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. entered into the pharmacy agreement. In short, reading section 5.1(b) literally leads to absurd results, inter alia, that Liljeberg Enterprises would be required to answer for a default by one of Lifemark's corporate affiliates, whereas the interpretation advanced by Lifemark represents the most reasonable interpretation of the provision in question following the established rules of contract interpretation under Louisiana law.

We conclude that the district court erred in finding section 5.1(b) to be unenforceable.

ble and therefore severable from the pharmacy agreement pursuant to section 10 and in finding that "[t]he obligations contained in the [pharmacy agreement] are severable from St. Jude's obligations to [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] under the mortgage and [Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc.] under the lease."

We further hold that the district court clearly erred in finding, largely implicitly, that the Travelers judicial mortgage and the judicial sale of the hospital were not defaults under the fourth covenant of the collateral mortgage. The district court also clearly erred in finding that "[t]he mortgage when viewed in tandem with the lease was incapable of default since the obligations owed by [Lifemark] under the lease would satisfy all of the obligations due by St. Jude to [Lifemark Hospitals, Inc.] under the terms of the financing." Under the express terms of the collateral mortgage, the hospital was not be mortgaged or sold. These events were breaches of the non-financial covenants of the collateral mortgage and the undisputed fact is that the hospital was both mortgaged and sold. It is no answer that the mortgage and sale resulted from Lifemark's actions and not Liljeberg Enterprises's or St. Jude's. The express language of the fourth covenant does not confine its prohibition of sales or mortgages of the hospital to events caused by St. Jude. We have already concluded that the district court clearly erred in finding the superior rank of the Travelers judicial mortgage and the resulting judicial sale of the hospital to have been the result of a breach of fiduciary duties, bad faith, or collusion on the part of Lifemark. Moreover, the district court made no findings that Liljeberg Enterprises had cured or provided adequate assurance that it will promptly cure such a default, nor could the district court have done so on this record.

[36] The Liljebergs, however, attempt to escape the effect of the default under the collateral mortgage by attacking the validity of the cross-default provision of the pharmacy agreement. These efforts are unavailing. The Travelers judgment which gave rise to the judicial mortgage and lien and subsequent judicial sale of the hospital did not occur solely because of Liljeberg Enterprises's financial condition upon the filing of its Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition. To assert that it did ignores the Liljebergs' bad faith conduct, as found by this court, in their dealings with Travelers. Contrary to the Liljebergs' assertion, relegated to a footnote, that the pharmacy agreement's cross-default provision is legally invalid because it impermissibly hinges on Liljeberg Enterprises's financial condition and ability to pay under the other contracts, the cross-default provision does not run afoul of the exceptions to 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(1)'s requirements provided under sections 365(b)(2)(A) or 365(e)(1)(A).⁸¹

[37-40] There is non-binding authority from bankruptcy and district courts outside of this circuit, cited by the Liljebergs, for the propositions that cross-default provisions do not integrate otherwise separate transactions or leases and

81. See 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(2)(A) ("Paragraph (1) of this subsection does not apply to a default that is a breach of a provision relating to—(A) the . . . financial condition of the debtor at any time before the closing of the case . . ."); id. § 365(e)(1)(A) ("Notwithstanding a provision in an executory contract . . . , an executory contract of the debtor may not be terminated . . . , at any time after the commencement of the case solely because of a provision in such contract or lease that is conditioned on—(A) the financial condition of the debtor at any time before the closing of the case. . . ."). that section 365 prohibits the enforcement of cross-default provisions where enforcement would restrict the debtor's ability to assume an executory contract.⁸² We agree with another bankruptcy court which recently synthesized these authorities and concluded that, while "cross-default provisions are inherently suspect," they are not per se invalid in the bankruptcy context, and "a court should carefully scrutinize the facts and circumstances surrounding the particular transaction to determine whether enforcement of the provision would contravene an overriding federal bankruptcy policy and thus impermissibly hamper the debtor's reorganization."⁸³ Before finding that a cross-default provision involving a lease and non-lease agreements, including a note, similar to that here, was enforceable, the bankruptcy court concluded that "[f]ederal bankruptcy policy is offended where the non-debtor party seeks enforcement of a cross-default provision in an effort to extract priority payments under an unrelated agreement," such that "[a] creditor cannot use the protections afforded it by section 365(b) (which requires curing of defaults and adequate assurances of future payments as a precondition to assumption of an executory contract or unexpired lease) in order to maximize its returns by treating unrelated unsecured debt as a de facto priority obligation."⁸⁴ As such, "where the non-debtor party would have been willing, absent the existence of the cross-defaulted agreement, to enter into a contract that the debtor wishes to assume, the cross-default provision should not be enforced," but "enforcement of a cross-default provision should not be refused where to do so would thwart the non-debtor party's bargain."⁸⁵ The court also noted that "[t]he fact that legally separate entities are parties to the various contracts does not of itself preclude enforcement of the cross-default provision" and that, "[w]here documents are contemporaneously executed as necessary elements of the same transaction, such that there would have been no transaction without each of the other agreements, the fact that nominally distinct parties executed the agreements will not preclude enforcement of a cross-default provision in favor of a party whose economic interests are identical to those of the entity that is party to the document containing the cross-default provision."⁸⁶

Here, there is ample support for the conclusion that the lease and collateral mortgage of the hospital are interrelated with the pharmacy agreement and that there would have been no pharmacy agreement without the lease of the hospital or the loan secured by the collateral mortgage. Indeed, the parties agreed in the pre-trial order that St. Jude would not have entered into the lease of the hospital to Lifemark if Lifemark had refused to enter into the pharmacy agreement with Liljeberg Enterprises.⁸⁷ It is true that the lease was signed a month after the pharmacy agreement was executed, but section 5.1(b) expressly contemplates "the lease relating to the Hospital" as an instrument covered by the cross-default provision. The parties also agreed that John Liljeberg signed a letter of intent dated December 20, 1982, with Lifemark concerning a proposal to develop St. Jude Hospital.⁸⁸ The district court, in considering the effectiveness of an alleged default under pharmacy agreement section 5.1(e), found that "although it is evident that the [pharmacy agreement] was a part of the overall transaction, it is not evident from the documents executed one month after the [pharmacy agreement] that the [pharmacy agreement] was not severable from the remainder of the transaction," such that "a default under the [pharmacy agreement] would not collapse the loan or the Lease." That observation adds nothing. Non-enforcement of the cross-default provision, providing that a default under the collateral mortgage or lease would collapse the pharmacy agreement, would thwart Lifemark's bargain in agreeing to enter into the pharmacy agreement, all a part of the overall transaction to finance the building of the hospital through a loan secured by a collateral mortgage. Any finding, express or implied, to the contrary by the district court is clearly erroneous on the record before us.⁸⁹

C.

In sum, the district court erred in allowing Liljeberg Enterprises to assume the pharmacy agreement pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 365. Liljeberg Enterprises's assumption of the pharmacy agreement is barred pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 365(b)(1)(A) by defaults under the fourth covenant of the collateral mortgage in the form of the judicial mortgage placed on and judicial sale of the hospital, which in turn resulted in an incurable default under section 5.1(b) of the pharmacy agreement.⁹⁰ We therefore reverse the district court's judgment in Cause No. 93-1794 granting Liljeberg Enterprises's motion to assume the pharmacy agreement.

VII. Cause No. 93-4249

The district court in Cause No. 93-4249 ruled that Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., American Medical, and Tenet are liable to Liljeberg Enterprises for damages in the total amount of $12,432,905.92 for breach of payment due under the pharmacy agreement, specifically for the following: (1) $4,062,396 for Lifemark's failure to reimburse Liljeberg Enterprises its actual acquisition costs for the period August 31, 1989 through June 1, 1993; (2) $700,000 as lost profits for Lifemark's failure to purchase contrast media through the date of trial from Liljeberg Enterprises as required under the pharmacy agreement;⁹¹ (3) $2,023,571 for

88. Id. at 32 ¶4 (R 9210)

89. Likewise, the Liljebergs' unsupported contention in a footnote that principles of estoppel and waiver bar Lifemark's challenge to Liljeberg Enterprises's assumption because Liljeberg Enterprises would not be in bankruptcy were it not for Lifemark's actions is undermined by our conclusion that the district court clearly erred in its findings of bad faith and collusion and by the absence of any findings by the district court (or record evidence) that Lifemark's conduct was the cause of the debt to Travelers or St. Jude's inability to pay that debt let alone Liljeberg Enterprises's Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

90. In light of this conclusion, we need not address Lifemark's additional arguments regarding Liljeberg Enterprises's transaction defaults under the collateral mortgage and lease, operational defaults under the pharmacy agreement, or failure to provide adequate assurance of future performance under the pharmacy agreement.

91. Contrast media is a diagnostic drug for use in, inter alia, radiology procedures, which is generally swallowed or injected and which

Lifemark's wrongful disallowance of requested payment to Liljeberg Enterprises due to pricing differences and other items not specifically addressed in the district court's judgment through the date of trial; (4) $103,617 for Lifemark's wrongfully deducting bad debt allowances from its payments on the cost reimbursement portion of Liljeberg Enterprises's billing through the date of trial; (5) $150,275.60 for Lifemark's failure to implement minimum fee increases due to Liljeberg Enterprises under the pharmacy agreement through the date of trial; (6) $54,055 for Lifemark's failure to properly pay Liljeberg Enterprises under the pharmacy agreement for TPN fees and to reimburse Liljeberg Enterprises for chemotherapy kits provided to the nursing staff at the hospital;⁹² (7) $281,906.32 for pricing and quantity differences; (8) $57,085 for Lifemark's failure to properly pay Liljeberg Enterprises for nitroglycerin and insulin supplied under the pharmacy agreement; and (9) an additional $5 million as damages through the date of trial. The district court also ruled that Liljeberg Enterprises is liable to Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., American Medical, and Tenet for $741,879, specifically $616,400 for Liljeberg Enterprises's overcharges on piggyback fees under the pharmacy agreement⁹³ and $125,479 for Liljeberg Enterprises's failure to pay Medicare reimbursement due to Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., American Medical, and Tenet under the pharmacy agreement through the date of trial. The district court denied all other claims by the parties for damages under the pharmacy agreement.

[41, 42] In the absence of an error of law, this court reviews the district court's award of damages for clear error only.⁹⁴ "If the award of damages is plausible in light of the record, a reviewing court should not reverse the award even if it might have come to a different conclusion."⁹⁵

[43-46] We have generally held that, "[w]hile the district court may not determine damages by speculation or guess, it will be enough if the evidence show[s] the extent of the damages as a matter of just and reasonable inference, although the result be only approximate."⁹⁶ Moreover, under Louisiana law, it is well-settled that "[a]ctual damages must be proven; they cannot be speculative or conjectural."⁹⁷ Thus, "[w]hile the breaching party should not escape liability because of difficulty in finding a perfect measure of damages, the evidence must furnish data for a reason-

92. The district court found that "Total Parenterals Nutrition ('TPN') is a combination of a highly caloric dextrose or sugar solution with protein additives prepared using the aseptic technique."

93. The district court found that "[a]n 'IV piggyback' is a small volume of fluid that is used to administer mostly antibiotic medications to patients through an intravenous solution," and "[a]n additive is added to IV piggybacks in 90% of the IV piggybacks dispensed by [Liljeberg Enterprises]."

The district court's findings of breaches of the pharmacy agreement meriting damage awards against Lifemark and many of Lifemark's arguments on appeal turn largely on interpretations of various provisions of the pharmacy agreement, which are generally governed by the standards we have described. On appeal, the Liljebergs seek to go beyond the plain language of the pharmacy agreement on the basis of Lifemark's alleged drafting of the pharmacy agreement in bad faith. The argument is that the contract was made deliberately ambiguous in order to injure Liljeberg Enterprises. Likewise, the district court found ambiguity in almost every relevant provision of the pharmacy agreement which was not preclusively interpreted by the Louisiana state court in a prior case involving these parties.¹⁰⁰ The district court further concluded that, based on testimony that Lifemark entered into the pharmacy agreement with the ultimate motive of terminating rather than abiding by the contract, the pharmacy agreement should be interpreted against Lifemark where the pharmacy agreement is suscep-

table to more than one interpretation. However, as Lifemark aptly points out on appeal, Liljeberg Enterprises never argued that the contract was fraudulently induced and the record shows that John Liljeberg was fully apprised of the pharmacy agreement's terms and was represented by counsel and pharmacy consultants when he negotiated the agreement and understood the agreement that he signed on behalf of Liljeberg Enterprises. Under these circumstances, in the absence of ambiguity, we look to the clear and explicit language within the four corners of the pharmacy agreement to determine the pharmacy agreement's meaning and the intent of its parties.

On appeal, Lifemark challenges several of the district court's damage awards to Liljeberg Enterprises.¹⁰¹ We will address each challenge in turn.

A.

Lifemark argues that the district court erred in awarding $5 million for Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim" based upon Liljeberg Enterprises's theory that Lifemark "circumvented" the pharmacy agreement, and thereby avoided paying Liljeberg Enterprises, by not paying Liljeberg Enterprises for each administered dose of drugs provided by Liljeberg Enterprises and obtaining drugs from other sources. Lifemark contends that these Neither party challenges on appeal the district court's determination of issue preclusion.

101. Lifemark does not appeal the district court's awards of $103,617 for bad debt deductions and $54,055 for chemotherapy kits and TPN fees, nor the district court's failure to award $753,952 for Liljeberg Enterprises's denial of Medicaid reimbursements. Likewise, the Liljebergs do not appeal the order to repay $616,400 for I.V. piggyback fee overcharges and $125,479 for Medicare reimbursement denials.

claims fail because they are based upon erroneous interpretations of sections 2.6 and 4.1 of the pharmacy agreement and because, in any event, by relying solely on a procedurally flawed audit of patient charts, Liljeberg Enterprises failed to adequately prove damages. Lifemark also contends that the $5 million award for "circumvention" overlaps impermissibly with the $700,000 award for lost profits on contrast media (based upon Liljeberg Enterprises's argument under section 2.6(a)) and the $57,085 award for insulin and nitroglycerin underpayments (based upon Liljeberg Enterprises's argument under section 4.1).¹⁰²

The provisions of the pharmacy agreement at issue here are sections 2.6 and 4.1 and Exhibit B. Section 2.6(a) provides:

OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.] shall not provide, nor be entitled to any compensation, for the following:

(a) all drugs and supplies utilized by the ancillary departments of the Hospital in preparation for, during, or immediately following departmental patient related procedures, except those patient identifiable charges in which the cost of the drug is not included in a fee or charge for that procedure. Ancillary departments shall include, but not be limited to, radiology, anesthesiology, and clinical labs . . .

Section 4.1 provides in pertinent part:

(a) As compensation for those pharmaceutical services provided by OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.] as specified above, and for pharmaceuticals and intravenous solutions furnished hereunder to inpatients or emergency room patients, LIFEMARK shall pay to OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.] the fee per procedure as shown on Exhibit B, which is attached hereto and incorporated herein for all purposes less 5% of such total of the fees per procedure as allowance, for bad debt. The allowance for bad debt shall be reviewed after each fiscal year of the Hospital and changed to reflect the actual percentage of uncollectable accounts for the preceding fiscal year of the Hospital.

Exhibit B, in turn, provides:

LIFEMARK shall reimburse the OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.] the greater of (i) the minimum fee set forth below or (ii) a fee equal to 1.35 times cost as identified by invoice.

102. See Nat'l Tea Co. v. Plymouth Rubber Co., Inc., 663 So 2d 801, 811 (La App 5 Cir.1995) (holding that "the allowance of a double recovery in a contractual situation, in which the damages are fixed, is inappropriate").

4.1(a)'s provision for "the fee per procedure as shown on Exhibit B" to mean that Liljeberg Enterprises was entitled to a new fee each time a dose of the same drug or drug combination was administered by a nurse or physician, even if Liljeberg Enterprises performed no new pharmaceutical service. Lifemark contends that section 4.1(a)'s "fee per procedure" provision is unambiguous and simply means that Liljeberg Enterprises is entitled to a single fee for each drug dispensed by Liljeberg Enterprises's pharmacy, irrespective of whether a nurse or doctor later administers a dose or doses of the drug in a multi-step process.

The state court's preclusive holding establishes that, under section 4.1(a), Liljeberg Enterprises is entitled to receive reimbursement for actual acquisition costs in addition to the "fee per procedure" set forth in Exhibit B.¹⁰³ The question left unanswered by the state court decision, however, and squarely presented in this case is whether "fee per procedure" should be understood to authorize Liljeberg Enterprises to receive a fee per drug dispensed or pharmaceutical service provided by Liljeberg Enterprises's pharmacy or a fee per administered dose, as the district court found. The district court concluded that the phrase "per procedure" is ambiguous and therefore turned to extrinsic evidence.

This conclusion is correct if the parties' intent as to the meaning of this provision of section 4.1(a) is uncertain and this provision is susceptible to more than one reasonable meaning under the circumstances and after applying established rules of construction.¹⁰⁴ The term "procedure" is nowhere defined in the pharmacy agreement and is, in fact, used in several different contexts within this contract, including

"departmental patient related procedures" and "the Hospital's policies and procedures." Lifemark argues that the per-administered-dose meaning is not reasonable because it would compensate Liljeberg Enterprises for services performed by other hospital employees or departments, such as nurses administering medication, and not simply for services Liljeberg Enterprises actually performed. As support for this argument, Lifemark notes that section 4.1(a) provides that the "fee for procedure" shall be paid "[a]s compensation for those pharmaceutical services provided by [Liljeberg Enterprises] as specified above, and for pharmaceuticals and intravenous solutions furnished hereunder to inpatients or emergency room patients." Section 2.4 provides that "pharmaceutical services" includes "without limitation, drugs, medicines, and intravenous solutions." Even the most expansive, reasonable meaning attributable to "pharmaceutical services" under the pharmacy agreement would not include services performed by other hospital employees or departments within the scope of "pharmaceutical services provided by [Liljeberg Enterprises]."

However, section 4.1(a) also provides that the "fee per procedure" shall be paid "for pharmaceuticals and intravenous solutions furnished hereunder to inpatients or emergency room patients." In light of this language, the ordinary meaning of "procedure" could reasonably encompass either meaning attributed by the parties to "fee per procedure." Moreover, the district court's interpretation of "fee per procedure" does not neutralize or ignore or treat as mere surplusage any other provision of the pharmacy agreement. Under these circumstances, we conclude that the district court did not err in concluding that the phrase "fee per procedure" in section 4.1(a) is ambiguous and looking to extrinsic evidence.

Having found ambiguity exists in section 4.1(a), we review the district court's factual determinations of intent for clear error only.¹⁰⁵ Lifemark argues that compensation per dose administered results in grossly excessive charges. Additionally, Lifemark notes that the district court interpreted the "fee per procedure" phrase to apply differently to heparin flush kits and contends that there is no reasoned basis for interpreting "per procedure" differently according to the type of drug dispensed when the pharmacy's involvement is the same.¹⁰⁶ However, Lifemark offers no persuasive argument on appeal that there is clear error in the district court's finding, based on witness testimony, that the parties intended for Liljeberg Enterprises to be compensated for each unit administered with respect to the administration of multiple units of medication or multiple administrations of medication from single vials of medicine. We therefore conclude that the district court's interpretation of section 4.1(a) is correct.¹⁰⁷ The district court's additional finding that heparin flush kits are distinguishable because allowing Liljeberg Enterprises compensation for each step in the process and each legend drug item contained in a kit would involve multiple reimbursement for a single, one-time process of administering the kit is consistent with the district court's general finding and is also not clearly erroneous.

ii.

[48] Turning to section 2.6(a) of the pharmacy agreement, Lifemark argues that the district court erred in ruling that Lifemark was required to compensate Liljeberg Enterprises for certain bulk drugs, such as contrast media and surgery kits, which Lifemark purchased directly from drug wholesalers and which were sent to ancillary departments of the hospital for administration by doctors or nurses.¹⁰⁸ According to Lifemark, the district court held that compensation was due Liljeberg Enterprises because section 2.6(a)'s excluding compensation to Liljeberg Enterprises for these drugs was illegal and was superseded by the Tenet policy manual. The argument is that the district court included this unspecified compensation in its $5 million award to Liljeberg Enterprises.

The district court's actual findings and conclusions on this matter are somewhat different, however, and hinge on the following propositions. Liljeberg Enterprises was the exclusive, licensed hospital pharmacy for the hospital, and the parties intended that Liljeberg Enterprises would

105. See Gebreyesus, 204 F.3d at 642.

106. The district court's unchallenged factual finding was that "[a] 'heparin flush kit' consists of three separate items that are administered at one time and are in essence a single procedure or dose."

107. Lifemark also argues that the district court erred in failing to award Lifemark $51,771 as reimbursement for overpayments for multiple doses of nitroglycerin and insulin, where Liljeberg Enterprises charged multiple fees for the pharmacy's single act of dispensing these medications, and, based on the same reasoning, Lifemark contends that the district court erred in awarding $57,085 for Lifemark's alleged underpayments to Liljeberg Enterprises for nitroglycerin and insulin supplied under the pharmacy agreement. On the basis of our conclusion that the district court's interpretation of "fee for procedure" in section 4.1(a) is not in error, we reject these points of error as well.

108. Surgery kits contain a combination of legend drugs such as Lidocaine and non-legend supplies used during surgical procedures.

have the exclusive right to furnish all drugs to all departments at the hospital except for specific exclusions set forth in section 2.6. Louisiana and federal law do not require that kits which include legend drugs be purchased from Liljeberg Enterprises, but the law does require that Liljeberg Enterprises oversee the storage and dispensing of these items. However, Tenet policy requires that the hospital pharmacy procure, store, distribute, and control all pharmaceuticals used within the hospital,¹⁰⁹ and the pharmacy agreement requires that all drugs to be administered to patients at the hospital be purchased from Liljeberg Enterprises, other than those drugs for which a specific exclusion exists under the pharmacy agreement, e.g., pursuant to section 2.6. Thus, Lifemark should have involved Liljeberg Enterprises in procuring, storing, and dispensing any drugs or kits which required the intervention of a licensed pharmacist under applicable law. Lifemark failed to do so in ordering legend drugs or kits containing legend drugs from sources other than Liljeberg Enterprises, including by use of Liljeberg Enterprises's pharmacy permit without Liljeberg Enterprises's permission,¹¹⁰ and by storing and dispensing legend drugs through the hospital's Materials Management Department, bypassing the hospital pharmacy, in contravention of the pharmacy agreement.

109. The district court found that Tenet's Pharmacy Policy & Procedure Manual gave Liljeberg Enterprises, as the hospital's pharmacy department, the responsibility to store, control, and distribute all drugs, including non-legend drugs, for use in ancillary departments, resting on the manual's general statement that the general purpose of the pharmacy department is the procurement, distribution, and control of all pharmaceuticals used within the hospital.

110. There is no dispute that only Liljeberg Enterprises possessed the relevant hospital

Thus, the district court did not conclude that section 2.6(a) is illegal per se. Nor did it conclude that Liljeberg Enterprises was required by state or federal law to purchase all drugs or kits containing legend drugs for use in the ancillary departments of the hospital in preparation for, during, or immediately following departmental patient related procedures. Rather, it decided that, where state and federal law requires Liljeberg Enterprises's involvement with legend drugs used by the ancillary departments of the hospital, section 2.6(a) must not be read to bar Liljeberg Enterprises from entitlement to compensation under the pharmacy agreement.

Lifemark argues, however, that where section 2.6(a) states that Liljeberg Enterprises will neither "provide" nor be compensated for drugs used in ancillary departments, including legend drugs, but does not prohibit Liljeberg Enterprises from providing oversight or other services which the court has found to be necessary, section 2.6(a) is entirely consistent with the district court's finding that Lifemark could lawfully purchase legend drugs. Lifemark also argues that there is no evidence of illegality; that a Louisiana Board of Pharmacy inspector found no violations where the drugs were distributed on doctors' orders and the administration of the drugs was ultimately reviewed by the hospital pharmacy.¹¹¹ Lifemark contends that pharmacy permit for the hospital required under Louisiana law.

111. Lifemark concedes that an inspector for the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals testified that he concluded that legend drugs were being stored and dispensed from the Materials Management Department without the supervision of a pharmacist, but notes that he also admitted that his normal job responsibility was to inspect hospitals for federal reimbursements and that he would defer to Louisiana Board of Pharmacy on the interpretation and enforcement of Louisiana pharmacy laws.

the district court erred in discounting this evidence (along with testimony that, even if it is against the letter of the law, many hospitals store and dispense pharmaceuticals out of ancillary departments), because, in the view of the district court, the Board's non-action against Lifemark appeared to be the result of the Board's desire to stay out of a contract dispute between two private entities and "because the exercise of discretion by the Board of Pharmacy cannot abrogate black letter law."

Finally, Lifemark argues that the district court erred in refusing to reopen the record to allow evidence from a trial in another lawsuit filed by Liljeberg Enterprises's former pharmacy director James Witchen against Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc., a Lifemark employee, Tenet, and Liljeberg Enterprises.¹¹² This evidence showed that the Louisiana Board of Pharmacy found that Lifemark's handling of legend drugs was not a violation of pharmacy laws. Lifemark argues that this refusal works an injustice to it and constitutes an abuse of discretion.¹¹³

We conclude that the district court erred in concluding that section 2.6(a) denies Liljeberg Enterprises compensation for its required involvement in the procuring or purchasing and distribution, as opposed to the dispensing, of the legend drugs or kits. However, the district court did not err insofar as it concluded that Liljeberg Enterprises should have been involved with the storage of the legend drugs or kits at issue and compensated accordingly under the pharmacy agreement.

The district court's conclusion turns on whether applicable state or federal law required Liljeberg Enterprises to purchase, procure, store, distribute, or dispense legend drugs or kits containing legend drugs, which would prohibit a reading of section 2.6(a) to exclude compensation to Liljeberg Enterprises for rendering these services to "provide" such drugs for use by the ancillary departments of the hospital.¹¹⁴

Turning first to federal law, neither the district court nor the Liljebergs point to any relevant statutes, and we have found none, which prohibit the hospital's practice of the Materials Management Department's ordering, storing, and distributing legend drugs, which are not "controlled substances," to doctors or nurses in the ancillary departments of the hospital to administer to patients on doctors' or

112. Witchen's suit stemmed from Lifemark's request, pursuant to its rights under the pharmacy agreement, that Liljeberg Enterprises remove Witchen as pharmacy director

113. The standard for deciding whether the district court erred in denying a motion to reopen is well-settled:

We review for abuse of discretion a district court's ruling on a party's motion to reopen its case for the presentation of additional evidence. The court's decision "will not be disturbed in the absence of a showing that it has worked an injustice in the cause." Among the factors the trial court should examine in deciding whether to allow a reopening are the importance and probative value of the evidence, the reason for the moving party's failure to introduce the evidence earlier, and the possibility of prejudice to the non-moving party.

114. Section 2.6(a) provides that Liljeberg Enterprises "shall not provide, nor be entitled to any compensation, for . . . (a) all drugs and supplies utilized by the ancillary departments of the Hospital in preparation for, during, or immediately following departmental patient related procedures, except those patient identifiable charges in which the cost of the drug is not included in a fee or charge for that procedure" (emphasis added).

ders.¹¹⁵ Furthermore, although the district court found that American Medical and Tenet used Liljeberg Enterprises's pharmacy permit without Liljeberg Enterprises's permission to order drugs, the court made no further findings that these drugs were controlled substances for which 21 U.S.C. § 822 requires registration with the United States Attorney General, and the record does not support a finding that Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim" involves any legend drugs which are controlled substances.

This issue presents a classic Erie question as to what state law requires, which we review de novo.¹¹⁶ The competing views of officials from the Louisiana Board of Pharmacy and the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals on the question of what Louisiana law required as to the procurement or purchasing, storage, and dispensing or distributing of legend drugs at the hospital are of no moment in this analysis and entitled to no deference. Although the regulations upon which the district court relied were promulgated by the Board of Pharmacy of the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals, the views upon which the parties rely are not the sort of final decision of a state agency embodying the agency's interpretation of its own regulations to which Louisiana courts will give deference.¹¹⁷ For this reason, the district court was entirely within its discretion in denying Lifemark's motion to supplement the record with evidence that the Louisiana Board of Pharmacy rejected Liljeberg Enterprises's complaints to the Board that Lifemark's hospital departments were dispensing drugs in violation of state pharmacy laws and that the Board rejected the complaints because it failed to find any violation of the pharmacy laws.

In concluding that "[t]he law only requires that [Liljeberg Enterprises] oversee the storage and dispensing of [items containing legend drugs]," the district court discussed only regulations promulgated by the Board of Pharmacy of the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals which govern "hospital pharmacies."¹¹⁸ These regulations, however, do not specifically require the hospital pharmacy or pharmacist-in-charge to be involved in the purchasing, procurement, or distribution of legend drugs to doctors or nurses in the ancillary departments of the hospital to administer to patients on doctors' orders.¹¹⁹ Our review of Louisiana law convinces us that the Materials Management Department's "distributing" legend drugs to doctors or nurses in the ancillary departments of the hospital to "administer" to patients on doctors' orders constituted "distribution" and was not "dispensing," as the district court described it. Louisiana law in effect at the relevant time did not require that this work be supervised or done by a pharmacist.¹²⁰ Neither the district court nor Liljeberg Enterprises point us to any other controlling Louisiana law then in force that would prohibit the role of the Materials Management Department in ordering and distributing the drugs and kits at issue, and we have located no Louisiana case law or statute in effect at the relevant time which would do so.

The Louisiana legislature later changed the law to require just what the district court found to be the law at the time of Lifemark's alleged "circumvention" pursuant to the various hospital pharmacy regulations. The Louisiana legislature in 1999, after the events which allegedly gave rise to Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim," enacted Louisiana Revised Statutes § 37:1224(F). This section provided that "[a]ll procurement, delivery, dispensing, and distribution of federal legend and con-

120. It is important to distinguish between "dispensing," "administering," "delivering," and "distributing" drugs. Under Louisiana law, "'[a]dminister' or 'administration' means the direct application of a drug to the body of a patient or research subject by injection, inhalation, ingestion, or any other means." LA REV STAT § 37:1164(1), accord id. § 40:961(2). On the other hand, "[d]ispense" or "dispensing" means the interpretation, evaluation, and implementation of a prescription drug order, including the preparation and delivery of a drug or device to a patient or patient's agent in a suitable container appropriately labeled for subsequent administration to, or use by, a patient," such that "'[d]ispense' necessarily includes a transfer of possession of a drug or device to the patient or the patient's agent." Id. § 37:1164(10); accord id. § 40:961(13). Finally, "'[d]istribute' or 'distribution' means the delivery of a drug or device other than by administering or dispensing." Id. § 37:1164(11); accord id. § 40:961(14)

trolled drugs that are purchased for and administered to patients inside a hospital licensed under R.S. 40:2100, et seq. shall be procured, delivered, dispensed, and distributed under the direction of the pharmacist-in-charge of that hospital.”¹²¹ The legislature explicitly noted in Act 767, in which it enacted section 37:1224(F), that section “37:1224(F) is all new law.”¹²² Yet, because the Legislature did not expressly provide for this new substantive law to apply retroactively, section 37:1224(F) is not applicable to this case.¹²³

Regulations from the Board of Pharmacy Louisiana Department of Health in force at the relevant time, however, provided that “[l]egend drugs shall be stored in a licensed pharmacy under the immediate control and responsibility of a pharmacist.”¹²⁴ On appeal, Lifemark does not challenge the district court’s finding that “Materials Management is merely a department of the hospital, is not a pharmacy and is not under the control or direction of a licensed pharmacist.”¹²⁵ Lifemark instead points us to the testimony of the Louisiana Board of Pharmacy inspector that a sanitary permit issued by the Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals to Lifemark gave the hospital the authority to hold and store prescription drugs outside of the hospital pharmacy. But Lifemark points us to no controlling Louisiana law which codifies or confirms this authority, and our own research has located none.

On the basis of our review of Louisiana law in force at the time of the events giving rise to the Liljebergs’ “circumvention claim,” we believe the Supreme Court of Louisiana would conclude that Lifemark’s contested practice of ordering and distributing certain legend drugs and kits containing legend drugs did not violate the Louisiana pharmacy laws. This conclusion is bolstered by the legislature’s later enactment of section 37:1224(F) as “new law.” At the same time, we are persuaded that the Supreme Court of Louisiana would conclude that governing state regulations required the involvement of the hospital pharmacy in the storage of legend drugs and kits containing legend drugs.

Accordingly, without any basis in state or federal requirements, the district court erred as a matter of law in expanding the scope of the pharmacy agreement through Tenet’s policy manual to provide for a requirement that Liljeberg Enterprises be involved in the purchasing, procurement, or distribution of the legend drugs or kits containing legend drugs at issue.¹²⁶ Indeed, the law between the parties—section 2.6(a) of the pharmacy agreement—provides to the contrary.

The district court thus erred in awarding $5 million in damages on the basis, in part, that Lifemark “circumvented” Liljeberg Enterprises’s hospital pharmacy and thereby denied compensation to Liljeberg Enterprises. Lifemark did not violate federal or Louisiana law by purchasing certain bulk drugs, such as contrast media and surgery kits, directly from drug wholesalers and distributing them to ancillary departments of the hospital for administration by doctors and nurses, but the hospital's storage of these drugs and kits outside of the hospital pharmacy contravened governing state regulations.

Lifemark argues that, notwithstanding its challenges to the district court's interpretations of sections 4.1(a) and 2.6(a) of the pharmacy agreement in favor of Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim," the $5 million award cannot stand because Liljeberg Enterprises failed to adequately prove damages awarded in reliance on a procedurally flawed audit of patient charts. Moreover, Lifemark argues that the $5 million award for Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim" is duplicative, in part, of the $700,000 award for lost profits on contrast media, which we address below, and the $57,085 award for insulin and nitroglycerin underpayments, which we affirm.

[49] Lifemark argues that, rather than even attempting to prove actual, itemized damages, Liljeberg Enterprises performed an audit of a small percentage of patient charts from which it asked a mathematics professor to extrapolate a damage figure. The district court rejected the professor's figure, finding "that the [Liljeberg Enterprises] methodology to price the calculation of damages pursuant to its chart audit to be inflated." However, despite Lifemark's assertion that the district court found the chart audit to be unreliable, the only flaw the district court found in the audit was its "charging the full price of the drug plus the fee for each administration of a drug when, in fact, a multiple administration of a drug would have carried no separate acquisition cost," while the district court also found that Lifemark's claim "that 40% of all of the patients receive no drugs is also . . . without foundation." On the basis of these findings, the district court found that "the correct figure is somewhere between [Lifemark expert] Dr. Haworth's $3,000,000 and a significant discount off the [Liljeberg Enterprises] expert's figure," which was at least $12.8 million, and accordingly found "that $5,000,000 is the proper figure."

The district court was presented with conflicting testimony and evidence as to the validity of the chart audit and the accuracy of its methodology. On appeal, Lifemark argues that the district court should have credited the testimony of its experts over the testimony and evidence offered by Liljeberg Enterprises in support of the audit. On the record before us, the district court was entitled to weigh the conflicting testimony and credit Liljeberg Enterprises's chart audit as the basis for a reasonably accurate estimate of the amount of damages, with modifications, and, in so doing, the district court did not base its award on mere speculation or conjecture.¹²⁷ It is well-settled that the district court is only required to determine the extent of the damages as a matter of just and reasonable inference and that the result need only be approximate. The basis for the district court's award, while it is decidedly not "a perfect measure of dam-

127. See Theriot v. United States, 245 F.3d 388, 395 (5th Cir.1998) (noting that, when the district court's finding is based on its decision to credit the testimony of one witness over that ages," nevertheless meets these criteria on the record before us.

Additionally, according to Lifemark, the $5 million award overlaps with two more specific damage awards for non-payments for contrast media and underpayments for insulin and nitroglycerin. This is because Liljeberg Enterprises's pharmacy director admitted that both these claims were a part of Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim." Additionally, the district court's $5 million award was based on the chart audit; that Liljeberg Enterprises's expert accepted the chart in calculating damages for claimed underpayments or non-payments for contrast media, insulin, and nitroglycerin. That is, Liljeberg Enterprises did not back the overlapping charges out of the audit.

It is unclear whether the district court's $5 million figure took account of non-payments for contrast media or underpayments for insulin and nitroglycerin. However, because the district court made specific awards with separate stated reasons as to each of these claimed underpayments, we must conclude that they were not included in the $5 million award, in the absence of more compelling evidence from Lifemark of duplicative awards.

We conclude that the district court erred, in part, in awarding $5 million on Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim" on the basis of its interpretation of section 2.6(a) of the pharmacy agreement. We cannot on the record before us quantify how much of the $5 million award was for Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim" under section 2.6(a), which we reverse in part, as distinguished from its claim under section 4.1(a), which we affirm. We therefore vacate the district court's $5 million award to Liljeberg Enterprises and remand to the district court for a redetermination of damages for Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim."

B.

[50] Lifemark also argues that, because contrast media was not separately identifiable on patients' bills, Liljeberg Enterprises is not entitled to the $700,000 award for lost profits on contrast media under section 2.6(a) of the pharmacy agreement. Lifemark argues that the district court erred in relying upon an exception in section 2.6(a), which excludes "patient identifiable charges in which the cost of the drug is . . . included in a fee or a charge for that procedure," to justify a $700,000 award.

The district court found that Liljeberg Enterprises originally supplied contrast media to the hospital, which was included as a separate item on the bill of a patient, but that American Medical later decided to include contrast media in what it urges are unidentifiable costs in a single procedure. The district court found that American Medical began including the contrast media cost within a single procedure in order to avoid having to purchase this item from Liljeberg Enterprises. The contention is that the pharmacy agreement allowed American Medical to purchase items and legend drugs from other sources "where the cost for the drug is not identifiable from the cost of the procedure." However, the district court concluded that, from American Medical's master price list or "charge master," it can identify the cost of contrast media by comparing the listed costs for procedures with and without contrast media and so, "for purposes of the [pharmacy agreement], it is an identifiable cost."

Lifemark argues that American Medical stopped billing contrast media as a separate item to each patient and began including them in bills for radiology procedures. Lifemark argues that it negotiated a favorable contract with a new vendor, which allowed it to bill for contrast media in this fashion, a practice that saved patients up to $400 per procedure. The argument continues that, pursuant to section 2.6(a) of the pharmacy agreement, American Medical stopped paying Liljeberg Enterprises for contrast media because, under its new practice, these drugs were "patient identifiable charges in which the cost of the drug is . . . included in a fee or charge for that procedure."

Section 2.6(a) provides that Liljeberg Enterprises "shall not provide, nor be entitled to any compensation, for . . . (a) all drugs and supplies utilized by the ancillary departments of the Hospital [including, but not limited to, radiology] in preparation for, during, or immediately following departmental patient related procedures," including "those patient identifiable charges in which the cost of the drug is . . . included in a fee or charge for that procedure."

The operation of this provision does not turn, as the district court concluded, on whether the charge for the drug can be identified, i.e., is "identifiable," for each patient, but rather on whether such an "identifiable" charge is included in the fee or charge for the departmental patient related procedure in which the drug is used. The district court made no finding that the charges for the cost of contract media were not included in the charges for radiation procedures, but simply concluded that American Medical contravened the terms and spirit of the pharmacy agreement.

Section 2.6(a) is clear, and American Medical operated well within its terms. The district court erred in its implicit conclusion that American Medical breached the pharmacy agreement in bad faith. We reverse the district court's award of $700,000 to Liljeberg Enterprises as lost profits for Lifemark's failure to purchase contrast media through the date of trial from Liljeberg Enterprises as required under the pharmacy agreement

C.

[51] Lifemark argues that the district court erred in awarding Liljeberg Enterprises $2,023,571, which represents costs incurred in excess of limits set by their contract. The argument is that the award is based on an erroneous conclusion that Lifemark improperly limited reimbursement for acquired drugs to prices set forth in Lifemark's prime vendor contracts; that this finding is erroneous because the limit is found in section 2.4 of the pharmacy agreement. Section 2.4 provides:

OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.] agrees to obtain from LIFEMARK Pharmacy all of Hospital's inpatient (including emergency room patients) requirements for pharmaceutical services, including, without limitation, drugs, medicines, and intravenous solutions, to the extent LIFEMARK Pharmacy can provide same. LIFEMARK Pharmacy shall supply these items at cost. Nothing in this Agreement shall prevent OPERATOR [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.] from acquiring those items from another supplier if i) the cost for those items is less than what LIFEMARK Pharmacy would charge and ii) the quality of those items is equal to or superior to those supplied by LIFEMARK Pharmacy.

The district court concluded that, under section 2.4, Liljeberg Enterprises agreed to obtain all hospital inpatient requirements from Lifemark Pharmacy, which was obligated to supply the items at cost; that, Liljeberg Enterprises could purchase such required items from a vendor other than Lifemark Pharmacy only if Lifemark Pharmacy could not supply an item or if the item was less expensive elsewhere and the quality was equal or superior to that supplied by Lifemark Pharmacy. The district court also found, however, that "Lifemark Pharmacy" did not exist at any time after the hospital opened and that Liljeberg Enterprises never purchased any drugs from "Lifemark Pharmacy" but instead purchased drugs under buying contracts from Bergan Brunswig and from Spark Drug. Finally, the district court found that Liljeberg Enterprises was paying six percent less for drugs than if it would have under purchasing contracts between drug manufacturers and wholesalers and American Medical and later Tenet.

The district court found that, where Liljeberg Enterprises's actual acquisition costs for drugs which it did not obtain through Lifemark's prime vendor contracts was greater than the amount shown for those drugs on the prime vendor contracts, Lifemark had deducted the difference between the amounts from its payments to Liljeberg Enterprises under the pharmacy agreement. At trial, Lifemark's expert witness Dr. Albert Richard applied the same approach to argue that Liljeberg Enterprises had wrongfully billed in excess of $600,000 based on the difference between Liljeberg Enterprises's actual acquisition costs and the amounts shown on Lifemark's prime vendor contracts. The district court rejected Dr. Richards's argument and found that Lifemark's contract administrator had wrongfully deducted amounts from Liljeberg Enterprises's bills on the basis of this approach. The district court found that Lifemark's approach failed to compare the National Drug Code ("NDC") number¹²⁸ in Lifemark's prime vendor contract to the NDC number of the drugs actually supplied by Liljeberg Enterprises. Instead, payments were based on the lowest price possible for the type of drug supplied without regard to differences in generic versus name-brand drugs and in strength, quantity, bioequivalency, and bioavailability.

Lifemark first argues that American Medical and later Tenet are the successors to "Lifemark Pharmacy" for purposes of the pharmacy agreement. According to Lifemark, because American Medical purchased Lifemark in 1984, before the pharmacy opened, pricing was established by a prime vendor contract negotiated by American Medical on behalf of all American Medical-owned hospitals. This provided sources in bulk with favorable pricing, and Tenet later followed the same protocol.

Lifemark also argues that it was entitled under section 2.4 to pay Liljeberg Enterprises only the price for generic drugs, otherwise equivalent with regard to strength, bioequivalency, and bioavailability. It points out that Liljeberg Enterprises could have purchased its drugs at the lower prices under the prime vendor contracts by becoming a member of Tenet's group purchasing organization or by purchasing generic or other drugs from outside vendors at the lower prices; that Liljeberg Enterprises instead chose to purchase and bill Lifemark for the more expensive name-brand drugs, thereby expanding its profits under the cost-plus contract. Liljeberg Enterprises responds that nothing in the pharmacy agreement authorized American Medical or Tenet to

128. The district court found that "[a] coding system, implemented by NDC whereby each drug is given a code number, allows the identification of the drug manufacturer, its strengths and its quantity and, thus, is a means of identifying the cost of the drug pursuant to purchasing contracts."

pay Liljeberg Enterprises for generic drugs when Liljeberg Enterprises was dispensing physician-requested name-brand drugs and that Lifemark never told Liljeberg Enterprises to dispense only generics.

We conclude that the district court did not err in its interpretation of section 2.4. Like the parties, whose past practice under the pharmacy agreement includes Liljeberg Enterprises's purchasing drugs under Lifemark's prime vendor contracts negotiated by American Medical, we substitute American Medical/Tenet for "LIFEMARK Pharmacy," so that the comparison for purposes of the phrase "less than what LIFEMARK Pharmacy would charge" looks to Lifemark's prime vendor contracts. However, the provision that Liljeberg Enterprises could obtain drugs from other suppliers so long as "the cost for those items is less than what LIFEMARK Pharmacy would charge" does not in itself contemplate that, while American Medical/Tenet would charge one price for requested name-brand drugs under the prime vendor contracts, Lifemark can pay Liljeberg Enterprises only the cost of generic equivalents under the prime vendor contracts.

On appeal, Lifemark does not challenge the finding that Liljeberg Enterprises paid the same or less for name-brand drugs than if it would have paid for the same name-brand drugs under Lifemark's prime vendor contracts, which Lifemark simply describes as providing "favorable bulk prices."¹²⁹ Instead, Lifemark complains that Liljeberg Enterprises should have been purchasing only generic drugs or purchasing in bulk under its prime vendor contracts. Nothing in section 2.4 entitles Lifemark to insist on such purchases by Liljeberg Enterprises in the absence of the availability from the prime vendor contracts of lower prices for the same drugs. It is no answer that the pharmacy agreement requires the purchase of the lowest priced drugs and makes no exceptions for name-brand drugs where the term "items" in section 2.4 reasonably encompasses, in the context of the pharmacy agreement, both name-brand and generic drugs, depending on the order which Liljeberg Enterprises was called upon to fill.

We find no error in the district court's interpretation of section 2.4 or its findings supporting its award of $2,023,571 for Lifemark's wrongful disallowance of requested payment due to pricing differences.

[52] Lifemark argues that the district court misread the minimum fee increase provision of the pharmacy agreement, section 4.1(c). This led to its finding that Lifemark should have increased the minimum fee in 1995 and its award of $150,275.60. Section 4.1(c) of the pharmacy agreement provides:

LIFEMARK agrees that OPERATOR's [Liljeberg Enterprises, Inc.'s] minimum fee expressed in Exhibit B shall be increased annually by the lesser of (i) the percentage increase in the Department's revenue per patient day and (ii) the percentage increase in the Hospital Market Basket Index, as published by the American Hospital Association, or ap-

129. Lifemark does challenge the specific finding that Liljeberg Enterprises is paying six percent less than Tenet's bulk prices on the basis that the supporting testimony for this finding referred only to the price Liljeberg Enterprises was paying at the time of trial. However, Lifemark points to no evidence that would show clear error in the district court's broader finding that the prices for name-brand drugs under Lifemark's prime vendor contracts are not lower than the prices Liljeberg Enterprises was paying for the same name-brand drugs.

propriate successor index (the "Index"); provided however, that in any year in which there is either no change or a percentage decrease pursuant to subsection (i) or (ii) above, the minimum fee shall not be changed and provided, further, that the calculations in any year pursuant to subsection (i) and (ii) above shall be adjusted for any decrease, if any, in the immediately preceding years. The percentage calculated pursuant to subsection (i) above shall be a fraction, the numerator of which is the revenue per patient day for the year just ended and the denominator of which is the revenue per patient day for the prior year. The percentage calculated pursuant to subsection (ii) above shall be a fraction, the numerator of which is the most recently published Index and the denominator of which is the last published Index immediately prior to the beginning of the most recently concluded 12-month period of this subsection Agreement. The first adjustment shall be made as of the first day of the thirteenth (13th) month of the term of this Agreement and shall be based solely upon subsection (ii) above, and subsequent adjustments shall be made on each annual anniversary date thereafter.

The district court found that Liljeberg Enterprises receives 33% of its revenue from minimum fee items under the pharmacy agreement and that, for the period September 1, 1995 through May 31, 1997, Liljeberg Enterprises received $2,447,485.35 from minimum fee revenue; that this amount was paid by Lifemark based upon Lifemark's mistaken belief that no increase in the minimum fee was due under the terms of the pharmacy agreement. The district court concluded that under the pharmacy agreement a 6.14% increase in the minimum fee should have been paid to Liljeberg Enterprises, an additional $150,275.60 for the period September 1, 1995 through May 31, 1997. These findings are based on the district court's conclusion that, under section 4.1(c), the term "immediately preceding years" requires, as Liljeberg Enterprises claims, that the minimum fee for any year is to be calculated based upon the immediate preceding year and not, as Lifemark claims, upon the highest percentage for any prior year.

Lifemark's only argument here is that reading the word "years" as singular and not plural led the district court to erroneously conclude that a minimum fee increase should be allowed when there is a net increase based upon a single year's growth on the heels of several years of losses. Lifemark contends that this interpretation flies in the face of common sense as well as the language of the pharmacy agreement, which calls for the netting of decreases in previous years against any increases in the current year's revenue. Lifemark asserts that it is undisputed that pharmacy revenue per patient day declined during the years 1992-1994 and that, although Liljeberg Enterprises increased its per-patient revenue in 1995, a cumulative decrease remained, such that the minimum fee increase provision was not triggered.

We conclude that the district court erred in its interpretation of section 4.1(c).¹³⁰ The pharmacy agreement nowhere explic-

130. We are not persuaded by the Liljebergs' argument that this issue is controlled by the Louisiana state court decision's preclusive holdings. See Liljeberg Enters., 620 So.2d at 1340 (holding only that the trial court erred in determining that the starting date for the escalation of the minimum fees was March 1, 1984, whereas "any adjustments in the minimum fees should have begun thirteen months from August 25, 1985, the date St. Jude's Hospital began operations").

itly mentions "netting" or aggregating prior years' percentage decreases or changes. Yet every provision of the pharmacy agreement must be interpreted in light of the contract's other provisions, to give each provision the meaning suggested by the contract as a whole and to avoid neutralizing, ignoring, or treating as mere surplusage any provision.

Section 4.1(c) calls for an increase in the minimum fee based on the lesser of the percentage increase in the pharmacy's revenue per patient day and the percentage increase in the Hospital Market Basket Index so long as (1) there was a percentage increase in both the pharmacy's revenue per patient day and the Hospital Market Basket Index, i.e., neither of these indices experienced either "no change or a percentage decrease," (2) "provided, further, that the calculations in any year pursuant to subsection (i) and (ii) above shall be adjusted for any decrease, if any, in the immediately preceding years." The district court apparently read this provision to provide for an increase in minimum fees by the lesser of the percentage increase in the pharmacy's revenue per patient day and the percentage increase in the Hospital Market Basket Index that year, so long as there was no percentage decrease in the "immediately preceding year." Lifemark would read the provision to prohibit a minimum fee increase until there is no net percentage decrease when the current year's percentage increase is added to the percentage decreases in some unspecified number of preceding years.

The district court's interpretation gives no effect to the phrase "the calculations in any year pursuant to subsection (i) and (ii) above shall be adjusted for" and, without any explanation or apparent finding of ambiguity, reads "immediately preceding years" as singular and not plural. Looking to the meaning of this phrase in section 4.1(c) suggested by the contract as a whole, we note that the "calculations" at issue are important for determining whether there is an increase, a decrease, or no change as a matter of percentages. The most reasonable understanding of "adjusting" the calculations "for any decrease, if any, in the immediately preceding years" is to offset any percentage increase in the current year by the net "decrease, if any, in the immediately preceding years." The natural sense of "immediately preceding years" conveys the last two or three years, in order to give effect to both the phrases "immediately preceding" and "years."

Accordingly, we conclude that the district court erred in its interpretation of section 4.1(c). As such, we reverse the district court's award of $150,275.60 to Liljeberg Enterprises for Lifemark's failure to implement minimum fee increases due to Liljeberg Enterprises under the pharmacy agreement through the date of trial.

E.

Lifemark argues that the district court erred in awarding Liljeberg Enterprises $281,906.32 based upon its finding that the HPI reports¹³¹ failed to reflect drug prices and frequencies submitted in reports generated by Liljeberg Enterprises. Lifemark asserts that this finding is clearly erroneous because it is predicated on a fundamental misunderstanding of the parties' record-keeping and billing procedures and because it overlooks Liljeberg Enterprises's failure to provide documentation to support the accuracy of the prices and quantities it submitted.

131. HPI rates represented the prices at which Liljeberg Enterprises billed Lifemark for pharmaceuticals, and HPI rates were located on the monthly "hospital pharmacy billing" report, or "HPI report."

The district court found that Lifemark improperly entered cost data into its computer, "deleted administered doses dispensed by Liljeberg Enterprises without any known reason from [Liljeberg Enterprises's] daily and monthly disks," and generated inaccurate HPI reports which incorrectly reflected the drug prices and frequencies dispensed by Liljeberg Enterprises, and that the HPI reports also failed to take into account floor stock. The district court further found that there was no evidence that the drugs at issue in Liljeberg Enterprises's claim for underpayments due to Lifemark's incorrect pricing and quantity differences between January 1989 and May 31, 1997 were not provided by Liljeberg Enterprises and that the evidence in the record revealed that floor stock items were not accounted for by Lifemark.

Reviewing these factual findings for clear error only, we find that this damage award is based on a plausible account of the evidence considered against the entirety of the record. Lifemark points out that Liljeberg Enterprises's own pharmacy director clearly testified that the daily disks provided by the Liljeberg Enterprises pharmacy to Lifemark contained only the quantity that the pharmacy dispensed, not the doses administered by the hospital's doctors and nurses, such that it was not possible that Lifemark's computers deleted administered doses dispensed by Liljeberg Enterprises from Liljeberg Enterprises's daily disks. At the same time, Lifemark does not deny that the HPI reports often indicated that the actual cost of acquisition of a drug to be zero and did not always account for so-called floor stock. The district court heard conflicting testimony as to whether Lifemark adequately paid Lil-jeberg Enterprises for this floor stock and the zero entries on the HPI reports, and it was entitled to credit Liljeberg Enterprises's account of the evidence. Lifemark's citation to isolated testimony favorable to its position on each of these fact findings does not show clear error.

We affirm the district court's award of $281,906.32 to Liljeberg Enterprises for pricing and quantity differences.

F.

Lifemark argues that district court miscalculated the actual acquisition costs payable under the judgment of the Louisiana state court of appeal in a prior case between Liljeberg Enterprises and Lifemark involving the pharmacy agreement. According to Lifemark, Liljeberg Enterprises and Lifemark stipulated that they would "split the difference" between their experts' numbers, which was $3,575,748 by Lifemark's expert and $4,062,396 by Liljeberg Enterprises's expert. Accordingly, Lifemark contends that the district court should have awarded $3,819,072, not $4,062,396, which was the number given by Liljeberg Enterprises's expert.

Lifemark acknowledges that it owes Liljeberg Enterprises for actual acquisition cost for drugs for the period August 1989 through June 1993 pursuant to the preclusive state court judgment,¹³² but argues that the district court erred in finding that "[t]he parties have stipulated that the actual acquisition cost billed by [Liljeberg Enterprises] for the period is $4,062,396.00." Liljeberg Enterprises suggests that the record indicates that Lifemark's and Liljeberg Enterprises's experts originally did split at $4,062,396, but that Lifemark's expert later tried to lower that figure.

The record reflects that the parties stipulated at trial that the amount of this award should be fixed at the mid-point between the sum determined by Liljeberg Enterprises's expert and the sum determined by Lifemark's expert. Liljeberg Enterprises's expert's number was undisputedly $4,062,396. The number provided by Dr. Richard, Lifemark's damages expert, began at $3,990,953, and at trial he testified that the average of these figures would be $4,026,675. However, he then discussed several adjustments off this number and presented a figure of $3,575,748, which Lifemark now urges on appeal to provide an average of $3,819,072.

Based on the parties' stipulation, we conclude that the district court clearly erred in not splitting the difference between Dr. Richard's original figure of $3,990,953 and Liljeberg Enterprises's figure of $4,062,396. We must reduce this award to $4,026,675.

G.

Lifemark argues that the district court erred by not awarding Lifemark $2,585,138 in reimbursement of Liljeberg Enterprises's overcharges based on Liljeberg Enterprises's submission each month of a lump sum bill that was inexplicably higher than and inconsistent with the daily record of patient billing that Liljeberg Enterprises provided to Lifemark. According to Lifemark, the evidence at trial showed that this claim included (1) $184,000 overbilled to Lifemark based upon claimed frequencies of drugs dispensed; (2) $1,497,078 for thousands of unexplained $3.05 "admixture fees," overcharges relating to I.V.s, for which Lifemark should have been awarded $880,678, after a credit of $616,400 for the amount awarded to Lifemark for overcharges relating to I.V. handling fees for piggybacks;¹³³ (3) $885,644 which Liljeberg Enterprises overcharged Lifemark for heparin flush kits, which the district court found but refused to award on the basis that Lifemark passed the overcharges onto patients and suffered no loss; and (4) $634,816 in overcharges resulting from Liljeberg Enterprises's submission of incorrect pricing information from September 1, 1989 through April 30, 1993 on Liljeberg Enterprises's bills based upon HPI reports using pricing information from Liljeberg Enterprises's add/change/delete forms.

First, Lifemark argues that it presented uncontroverted evidence that Liljeberg Enterprises, in adjusting the bills to Lifemark to reflect the frequencies of drugs dispensed, only adjusted the bills when the numbers favored Liljeberg Enterprises and failed to adjust the bills when the numbers favored Lifemark, which resulted in an overbilling which Dr. Richard estimated as at least $184,000. Liljeberg Enterprises points to no evidence to the contrary, but argues that the $184,000 Lifemark claims is based on frequencies of drugs which the hospital alone handled and was responsible for and which, assuming Lifemark dispensed these drugs in violation of the pharmacy agreement, more likely than not would increase, not decrease, Liljeberg Enterprises's damages if an accounting were made of the compensation owed for these drugs under the pharmacy agreement.

133. The district court found that "[a] 'handling fee' is a charge imposed on a large volume parental ('LVP') that is handled by a pharmacist" and that "[a]n 'admixture' is the result of additives being placed in an intravenous solution," where "[e]ach additive to a solution is performed as a separate procedure."

The district court made no relevant findings as to this claim and did not explicitly deny it, and, as Lifemark aptly observes, Liljeberg Enterprises's response is a non-answer. We conclude that the failure to award this sum is clearly erroneous. The record evidence submitted by Lifemark leaves us with the firm and definite conviction that the only plausible account of the evidence considered against the entirety of the record is that Liljeberg Enterprises systematically overcharged Lifemark by failing to correct drug frequency reports when the preliminary frequency shown on Lifemark's HPI report exceeded the frequency shown on Liljeberg Enterprises's pharmacy charge report.¹³⁴

The evidence is that Dr. Richard testified that $184,000 is a reasonable estimate of the amount of the aggregate overcharges. We are given no conflicting evidence and modify the judgment to award Lifemark $184,000 in damages on this claim.

ii.

Second, Lifemark contends that, when Liljeberg Enterprises's bills were scrutinized at trial, Liljeberg Enterprises was unable to explain thousands of $3.05 "admixture fees" relating to I.V.s and argues that the district court clearly erred in failing to award damages based on Dr. Richard's calculation of reimbursement of the total overcharge for these unexplained fees, $1,497,078. Lifemark contends that, notwithstanding the unexplained "admixture" charges and the discrepancies in the pharmacy's reporting of the charges, Lifemark was billed these charges thousands of times each month for several years and paid them. The district court made no relevant findings as to this claim and did not explicitly deny it.

On the record before us, we cannot conclude that the district court clearly erred in failing to award damages to Lifemark for these overcharges. The district court awarded Lifemark $616,400 for Liljeberg Enterprises's overcharges on I.V. piggy-back fees under the pharmacy agreement, which Liljeberg Enterprises has not appealed, and the number offered by Dr. Richard was $1,497,078 in gross overcharges for I.V. handling and admixture fees. Lifemark seeks an award of $880,678 after applying a credit of $616,400 for the amount awarded for overcharges relating to I.V. handling fees for piggy-backs.

The record before us, however, does not allow us to arrive at a reasonably accurate estimate of the amount of damages for any overcharges for the I.V. "admixture" fees disaggregated from Dr. Richard's estimate of the gross overcharges for I.V. handling and admixture fees. Accordingly, we affirm the district court's decision to deny Lifemark an award on this claim.

[53] Third, Lifemark argues that the district court erred by finding that "[Liljeberg Enterprises] has in fact overcharged [Lifemark] for [Heparin flush kits]" but then refusing to reimburse Lifemark for the $885,644 overcharge due to its conclusion that Lifemark passed the overcharge onto patients and suffered no loss. Lifemark contends that this latter finding was based upon a misreading of the testimony of Steven Fauchaux, Lifemark's administrative pharmacist. According to Lifemark, the district court found that Fauchaux testified that Lifemark billed its

134. Liljeberg Enterprises also implies that the denial of these damages was appropriate because Lifemark readily billed its patients on the basis of the numbers in the HPI reports. This pass-through argument, addressed more fully below, is wholly unpersuasive.

patients based upon Liljeberg Enterprises's "overcharge price and multiplied that cost times three," when, in fact, Fauchaux explicitly denied basing patient charges on Liljeberg Enterprises's "overcharge prices" and instead explained that "patient rates are from a totally separate mechanism" and that Lifemark "uses the actual wholesale price of the drug" to bill patients. Moreover, Lifemark argues that, even if the overcharges were passed on, Lifemark was entitled to realize the benefit of its bargain by paying the lower costs to Liljeberg Enterprises, citing Louisiana Civil Code article 1995.¹³⁵

The district court found that Lifemark, American Medical, and Tenet bill the hospital's patients a set markup from the price charged by Liljeberg Enterprises for each drug, including a triple markup for heparin flush kits. The court then concluded that, although Liljeberg Enterprises in fact overcharged Lifemark for heparin flush kits, Liljeberg Enterprises is not liable for damages because Lifemark suffered no loss when it charged its patients three times the overcharge price for the loss and so actually profited from the overcharge by passing it on to patients.

Regardless of whether Lifemark tripled the charges from Liljeberg Enterprises in billing its patients, we concluded that the district court's "pass-through" reasoning is without merit. Even if Lifemark recouped the overcharge payments many times over, Liljeberg Enterprises remains liable for the amount it overcharged Lifemark in the first instance in breach of the pharmacy agreement.¹³⁶ Neither the district court nor Liljeberg Enterprises has presented any authority to the contrary. Under Louisiana law, Lifemark suffered a loss as a matter of law by overpaying Liljeberg Enterprises based on Liljeberg Enterprises's systematic overcharges for heparin flush kits.

Based on the evidence presented by Lifemark, including the expert report of Dr. Richard, the district court clearly erred as a matter of law in failing to award Lifemark $885,644 for the heparin flush kit overcharges. We modify the judgment to provide the award to Lifemark of $885,644 in damages on this claim.

iv.

Fourth and finally, Lifemark argues that the district court erred by failing to award Lifemark $634,816 based on overcharges resulting from Liljeberg Enterprises's submission of incorrect pricing information from September 1, 1989 through April 30, 1993. Lifemark contends that, although during that time period, Liljeberg Enterprises's bills were based solely upon HPI reports, which were generated by the hospital's computers, the pricing information, the "HPI rate," came directly from Liljeberg Enterprises's add/change/delete forms, on which, in several instances, Liljeberg Enterprises submitted the wrong HPI rate.

We cannot find clear error in the rejection of this claim. The evidence presented by Lifemark does not leave us with a definite and firm conviction that the district court was mistaken in denying the claim. The claim was based on Dr. Richard's extrapolation of a 60-item sample that Lifemark wrongfully paid $634,816 as a result of Liljeberg Enterprises's errors

135. LA CIVCODE art 1995 ("Damages are measured by the loss sustained by the obligee and the profit of which he has been deprived").

in using the HPI rate. Unlike the evidence regarding the systematic frequency billing discrepancies which overwhelmingly ran in Liljeberg Enterprises's favor, the evidence here simply shows that some HPI rates drawn from Liljeberg Enterprises's add/change/delete forms were incorrect and Lifemark failed to notice and correct the error based on the information provided by Liljeberg Enterprises in the first instance.

We therefore affirm the district court's denial of an award to Lifemark on this claim.

VIII. Judgment against Tenet

[54] Lifemark argues that, because Tenet was not sued by Liljeberg Enterprises or St. Jude, it was error for the district court to enter judgment against it. The district court made no finding of jurisdiction over Tenet nor any ruling formally adding Tenet as a party to this consolidated case, and a review of the district court's docket sheet confirms that, to this day, Tenet is not a party in this case and has never been joined as a defendant or served with process.

[55] "It is elementary that one is not bound by a judgment in personam resulting from litigation in which he is not designated as a party or to which he has not been made a party by service of process."¹³⁷ The Liljebergs' reliance on case law regarding successor liability and collateral estoppel is misplaced. The issue is jurisdiction over a non-party to the actions, not liability for a party already properly joined and served. We conclude that the district court erred in entering judgment against Tenet, a non-party in this case, and we must vacate the judgment in its entirety as against Tenet.

IX Attorneys' Fees

[56] On their cross-appeal, the Liljebergs argue that Liljeberg Enterprises and St. Jude are entitled to attorneys' fees under the parties' lease agreement and under Civil Code articles 1997 and 1958. On the record before us and based on our rulings on this appeal, Liljeberg Enterprises and St. Jude have no basis for a claim for attorneys' fees.

First, we have reversed the district court's judgment overturning the judicial sale and reinstating, inter alia, the lease between St. Jude and Lifemark. Accordingly, even assuming the claim has not been waived, as Lifemark claims, there is no basis to award St. Jude fees under section 17.1 of the lease.

Second, Louisiana Civil Code article 1958 provides that "[t]he party against whom rescission is granted because of fraud is liable for damages and attorney fees." Again, however, even assuming this provision would apply to this case based on the district court's findings of fact and conclusions of law and that this claim has not been waived, we have reversed the district court's judgment which overturned the judicial sale and ordered rescission of the hospital.

Finally, Louisiana Civil Code article 1997 provides that "[a]n obligor in bad faith is liable for all the damages, foreseeable or not, that are a direct consequence of his failure to perform." There is conflicting authority as to whether this provision authorizes the award of attorneys' fees for a bad faith breach of contract.¹³⁸

However, we need not decide this unsettled issue because the Liljebergs failed to raise article 1997 as a basis for attorneys' fees in the district court and have therefore waived any claim to attorneys' fees.¹³⁹ We are not persuaded that our refusal to consider this claim for the first time on appeal would work a miscarriage of justice.

X.

To summarize our holdings, (i) we reverse the district court's judgment in Cause No. 94-3993 overturning the judicial sale of the hospital and reinstating various commercial instruments relating to the financing and lease of the hospital and remand for calculation of the amount of, and entry of judgment on, the past due deficiency owed to Lifemark Hospitals, Inc. on the renewal promissory note and interest due thereunder; (ii) we reverse the judgment in Cause No. 93-1794 granting Liljeberg Enterprises's motion to assume the pharmacy contract; (iii) in Cause No. 93-4249, we affirm the district court's damage awards to Liljeberg Enterprises of $2,023,571 for Lifemark's wrongful disallowance of requested payment due to pricing differences and $281,906.32 for pricing and quantity differences; (iv) we reverse the district court's award to Liljeberg Enterprises of $700,000 as lost profits for Lifemark's failure to purchase contrast media from Liljeberg Enterprises and $150,275.60 for Lifemark's failure to implement minimum fee increases due to Liljeberg Enterprises under the pharmacy agreement through the date of trial; (v) we modify the district court's award of $4,062,396 for Lifemark's failure to reimburse Liljeberg Enterprises its actual acquisition costs for the period August 31, 1989 through June 1, 1993 to $4,026,675; (vi) we vacate the district court's $5 million award to Liljeberg Enterprises and remand to the district court for a redetermination of damages for Liljeberg Enterprises's "circumvention claim"; (vii) we conclude that the district court clearly erred in failing to award Lifemark $184,000 in overbillings by Liljeberg Enterprises based upon claimed frequencies of drugs dispensed and $885,644 for the heparin flush kit overcharges, and we award Lifemark damages in these amounts; (viii) we reverse the district court's judgment against Tenet, a non-party to this case, and (ix) we conclude that Lifemark's other points of error on appeal and the Liljebergs' points of error on their cross-appeal are without merit.¹⁴⁰

111TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

H. RES. 1031

Impeaching G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, for high crimes and misdemeanors

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

JANUARY 21, 2010

Mr. CONYERS (for himself, Mr. SMITH of Texas, Mr. SCHIFT, Mr. GOODLATTE, Ms. JACKSON LEE of Texas, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. DELAHUNT, Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California, Mr. COHEN, Mr. FORBES, Mr. JOHNSON of Georgia, Mr. GOHMERT, Mr. PIERLUISI, and Mr. GONZALEZ) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary

RESOLUTION

Impeaching G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, for high crimes and misdemeanors.

1 Resolved, That G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a judge of
2 the United States District Court for the Eastern District
3 of Louisiana, is impeached for high crimes and mis-
4 demeanors, and that the following articles of impeachment
5 be exhibited to the Senate:

6 Articles of impeachment exhibited by the House of 7 Representatives of the United States of America in the

1 name of itself and all of the people of the United States
2 of America, against G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a judge in
3 the United States District Court for the Eastern District
4 of Louisiana, in maintenance and support of its impeach-
5 ment against him for high crimes and misdemeanors.

6 ARTICLE I

7 G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., while a Federal judge of 8 the United States District Court for the Eastern District
9 of Louisiana, engaged in a pattern of conduct that is in-10 compatible with the trust and confidence placed in him
11 as a Federal judge, as follows:

12 Judge Porteous, while presiding as a United States
13 district judge in Lifemark Hospitals of Louisiana, Inc. v.
14 Liljeberg Enterprises, denied a motion to recuse himself
15 from the case, despite the fact that he had a corrupt finan-
16 cial relationship with the law firm of Amato & Creely, P.C.
17 which had entered the case to represent Liljeberg. In de-
18 nying the motion to recuse, and in contravention of clear
19 canons of judicial ethics, Judge Porteous failed to disclose 20 that beginning in or about the late 1980s while he was 21 a State court judge in the 24th Judicial District Court
22 in the State of Louisiana, he engaged in a corrupt scheme
23 with attorneys, Jacob Amato, Jr., and Robert Creely,
24 whereby Judge Porteous appointed Amato's law partner
25 as a "curator" in hundreds of cases and thereafter re-
26 quested and accepted from Amato & Creely a portion of

1 the curatorship fees which had been paid to the firm. Dur-
2 ing the period of this scheme, the fees received by Amato
3 & Creely amounted to approximately $40,000, and the 4 amounts paid by Amato & Creely to Judge Porteous
5 amounted to approximately $20,000.

6 Judge Porteous also made intentionally misleading
7 statements at the recusal hearing intended to minimize the 8 extent of his personal relationship with the two attorneys.
9 In so doing, and in failing to disclose to Lifemark and 10 its counsel the true circumstances of his relationship with 11 the Amato & Creely law firm, Judge Porteous deprived
12 the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals of critical information 13 for its review of a petition for a writ of mandamus, which 14 sought to overrule Judge Porteous's denial of the recusal
15 motion. His conduct deprived the parties and the public
16 of the right to the honest services of his office.

17 Judge Porteous also engaged in corrupt conduct after 18 the Lifemark v. Liljeberg bench trial, and while he had 19 the case under advisement, in that he solicited and accept-20 ed things of value from both Amato and his law partner
21 Creely, including a payment of thousands of dollars in 22 cash. Thereafter, and without disclosing his corrupt rela-
23 tionship with the attorneys of Amato & Creely PLC or 24 his receipt from them of cash and other things of value,
25 Judge Porteous ruled in favor of their client, Liljeberg.

1 By virtue of this corrupt relationship and his conduct
2 as a Federal judge, Judge Porteous brought his court into
3 scandal and disrepute, prejudiced public respect for, and 4 confidence in, the Federal judiciary, and demonstrated
5 that he is unfit for the office of Federal judge.

6 Wherefore, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., is guilty
7 of high crimes and misdemeanors and should be removed
8 from office.

9 ARTICLE II

10 G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., engaged in a longstanding 11 pattern of corrupt conduct that demonstrates his unfitness
12 to serve as a United States District Court Judge. That 13 conduct included the following: Beginning in or about the 14 late 1980s while he was a State court judge in the 24th
15 Judicial District Court in the State of Louisiana, and con-
16 tinuing while he was a Federal judge in the United States
17 District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana,
18 Judge Porteous engaged in a corrupt relationship with bail
19 bondsman Louis M. Marcotte, III, and his sister Lori
20 Marcotte. As part of this corrupt relationship, Judge
21 Porteous solicited and accepted numerous things of value,
22 including meals, trips, home repairs, and car repairs, for 23 his personal use and benefit, while at the same time taking
24 official actions that benefitted the Marcottes. These offi-
25 cial actions by Judge Porteous included, while on the 26 State bench, setting, reducing, and splitting bonds as re-

1 requested by the Marcottes, and improperly setting aside or 2 expunging felony convictions for two Marcotte employees
3 (in one case after Judge Porteous had been confirmed by 4 the Senate but before being sworn in as a Federal judge).
5 In addition, both while on the State bench and on the Fed-
6 eral bench, Judge Porteous used the power and prestige
7 of his office to assist the Marcottes in forming relation-
8 ships with State judicial officers and individuals important
9 to the Marcottes' business. As Judge Porteous well knew
10 and understood, Louis Marcotte also made false state-
11 ments to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in an effort
12 to assist Judge Porteous in being appointed to the Federal 13 bench.

14 Accordingly, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., has en-
15 gaged in conduct so utterly lacking in honesty and integ-
16 rity that he is guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors, 17 is unfit to hold the office of Federal judge, and should 18 be removed from office.

19 ARTICLE III

20 Beginning in or about March 2001 and continuing 21 through about July 2004, while a Federal judge in the 22 United States District Court for the Eastern District of 23 Louisiana, G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., engaged in a pattern
24 of conduct inconsistent with the trust and confidence
25 placed in him as a Federal judge by knowingly and inten-
26 tionally making material false statements and representa-

1 tions under penalty of perjury related to his personal
2 bankruptcy filing and by repeatedly violating a court order
3 in his bankruptcy case. Judge Porteous did so by—

4 (1) using a false name and a post office box ad-
5 dress to conceal his identity as the debtor in the 6 case;

7 (2) concealing assets;

8 (3) concealing preferential payments to certain
9 creditors;

10 (4) concealing gambling losses and other gam-
11 bling debts; and

12 (5) incurring new debts while the case was 13 pending, in violation of the bankruptcy court's order.

14 In doing so, Judge Porteous brought his court into 15 scandal and disrepute, prejudiced public respect for and 16 confidence in the Federal judiciary, and demonstrated that 17 he is unfit for the office of Federal judge.

18 Wherefore, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., is guilty
19 of high crimes and misdemeanors and should be removed
20 from office.

21 ARTICLE IV

22 In 1994, in connection with his nomination to be a
23 judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern 24 District of Louisiana, G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., knowingly 25 made material false statements about his past to both the 26 United States Senate and to the Federal Bureau of Inves-

1 tigation in order to obtain the office of United States Dis-
2 trict Court Judge. These false statements included the fol-
3 lowing:

4 (1) On his Supplemental SF-86, Judge
5 Porteous was asked if there was anything in his per-
6 sonal life that could be used by someone to coerce
7 or blackmail him, or if there was anything in his life
8 that could cause an embarrassment to Judge
9 Porteous or the President if publicly known. Judge
10 Porteous answered “no” to this question and signed 11 the form under the warning that a false statement
12 was punishable by law.

13 (2) During his background check, Judge
14 Porteous falsely told the Federal Bureau of Inves-
15 tigation on two separate occasions that he was not 16 concealing any activity or conduct that could be used 17 to influence, pressure, coerce, or compromise him in 18 any way or that would impact negatively on his 19 character, reputation, judgment, or discretion.

20 (3) On the Senate Judiciary Committee’s
21 “Questionnaire for Judicial Nominees”, Judge
22 Porteous was asked whether any unfavorable infor-
23 mation existed that could affect his nomination.
24 Judge Porteous answered that, to the best of his 25 knowledge, he did “not know of any unfavorable in-

1 formation that may affect [his] nomination”. Judge
2 Porteous signed that questionnaire by swearing that 3 “the information provided in this statement is, to 4 the best of my knowledge, true and accurate”.

5 However, in truth and in fact, as Judge Porteous
6 then well knew, each of these answers was materially false
7 because Judge Porteous had engaged in a corrupt rela-
8 tionship with the law firm Amato & Creely, whereby Judge
9 Porteous appointed Creely as a “curator” in hundreds of 10 cases and thereafter requested and accepted from Amato
11 & Creely a portion of the curatorship fees which had been 12 paid to the firm and also had engaged in a corrupt rela-
13 tionship with Louis and Lori Marcotte, whereby Judge
14 Porteous solicited and accepted numerous things of value,
15 including meals, trips, home repairs, and car repairs, for 16 his personal use and benefit, while at the same time taking 17 official actions that benefitted the Marcottes. As Judge
18 Porteous well knew and understood, Louis Marcotte also 19 made false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investiga-
20 tion in an effort to assist Judge Porteous in being ap-21 pointed to the Federal bench. Judge Porteous’s failure to 22 disclose these corrupt relationships deprived the United 23 States Senate and the public of information that would 24 have had a material impact on his confirmation.

1 Wherefore, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., is guilty
2 of high crimes and misdemeanors and should be removed
3 from office.

1 me tell you, let me give you some pointers about
2 being a judge. Number one, you'll never be known
3 as Ronnie again. You'll be judge for the rest of,
4 your life. Number two, you'll never have to buy
5 lunch again OK. There will always be somebody to 6 take you to lunch. And number three, always wash
7 your rear end so the attorneys have a clean place
8 to kiss."

9 Q. Was there a time when Judge Porteous,
10 when he said those things to you, were there other 11 people around?

12 A. Yes. There was a bunch of, there was a 13 group of lawyers around talking. And it was said,
14 you know, in jest because everybody was laughing.

15 Q. Was there a time when he pulled you aside
16 to talk to you individually?

17 A. Yes. It wasn't straight from there, but 18 a little while later he and I ended up alone and 19 that's when he told me that -- he says, "Look.
20 Let me just tell you something." He says, "I know 21 you really don't like Louis Marcotte," because 22 Louis Marcotte -- and I hate to sound prejudice, 23 but he had the ponytail in the back and he just 24 looked like a Miami Vice dope dealer. And there 25 was always rumors about him fooling around with

1 cocaine. So I distanced myself from him.
2 Porteous knew it. And he says, "I know you got 3 this bad taste in your mouth for him. I know that 4 you've heard these rumors about him and cocaine."
5 He said, "Let me tell you. It's not true. He's a
6 good guy. You can trust him. If you got problems
7 with bonds go see him. He'll never steer you
8 wrong. He'll never get you hurt."

9 Q. Did he -- did Judge Porteous say anything
10 to you in that conversation about splitting bonds?
11 About that being a reason to talk to Mr. Marcotte?

12 A. Yeah. Well, actually, when I was still a 13 DA is when splitting the bonds things first 14 occurred. Porteous was the one who -- I use the 15 term invented it because I think of a better --
16 well, he started using that split bond kind of 17 thing.

18 Q. Could you explain to the grand jury very 19 briefly how split bonds worked, what that meant.

20 A. Yeah. You know, before Porteous, a split
21 bond -- you know, almost all bonds were either
22 cash or commercial. Sometimes you had people who 23 would come in and would have some property. And 24 even before Porteous it wasn't uncommon to split a 25 bond. But it was split this way: A guy comes in.

1 things that he did for you?

2 A. You know, you know, at first, you know,
3 when this all happened I said I didn't do anything
4 for him I didn't do for anybody else. But then
5 thinking about it and you examine your conscience
6 I did. I mean, you know, here's a guy that bought
7 you lunch last night and he shows up the next
8 morning and he wants a bond. You know, as much as 9 you try to say, "I did the right thing and I never 10 did anything illegal," the fact that you were out
11 to dinner last night with the guy makes a 12 difference, you know. And so I started thinking 13 about it and I said, "Yeah, you know, I did give 14 the guy actually something that I shouldn't have 15 and I was wrong for that."

16 Q. Did Judge Porteous' initial conversation
17 with you about Louis Marcotte and then the fact
18 that he went to those lunches, did that contribute
19 to the kind of relationship that you developed
20 with Louis Marcotte where you took things from him
21 and you did things for him?

22 A. Well, that's a hard question to answer.
23 I mean, Porteous never said, "Hey, Ronnie, you
24 know, he's gonna do things for you, you know, you
25 can take things from him cause --" he never told

1 me that. But the fact that he -- that, you know
2 -- I probably would have been a lot more
3 distrustful of Louis Marcotte in general if 4 Porteous hadn't, you know, even vouched for him.

5 I was Judge Chehardy's DA too and when
6 she vouched for him that meant something. But it
7 really didn't mean as much coming from Chehardy as 8 it did from Porteous because I just respected him.
9 I mean, not that I didn't respect Judge Chehardy,
10 but I respected Judge Porteous a whole lot more.

11 Q. Did the fact that Judge Porteous seemed 12 comfortable accepting these kind of -- these sort
13 of long and expensive lunches from Louis Marcotte 14 make you feel comfortable accepting those and 15 other things from him?

16 A. Yeah. I thought if Louis was doing
17 anything illegal Porteous wouldn't have anything
18 to do with him.

19 BY MR. BOOKBINDER: Does the grand jury
20 have any questions for the witness?

21 BY GRAND JUROR 13:

22 Q. I'm really not familiar with the 23 protocol, but is it common for judges and bail
24 bondsmen to have lunch together or whatever? Is 25 that a common practice?

Written Statement of

Michael J. Gerhardt,

Samuel Ashe Distinguished Professor of Constitutional Law, UNC-Chapel Hill School of Law

Committee on the Judiciary Task Force on the Possible Impeachment of Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.

December 15, 2009

Introduction and Overview

I appreciate the invitation to appear today before the House Committee on the Judiciary Task Force pertaining to the possible impeachment of Judge Porteous. I have long been interested in constitutional issues relating to the federal impeachment process. I have written a book and several articles on the federal impeachment process, worked as a special consultant to the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal, consulted with many members of Congress on past impeachment proceedings, and testified during President Clinton's impeachment proceedings as a joint witness in the special hearing held by the House Judiciary Committee on the history of impeachment. I have also long had been interested in the quality and composition of the federal judiciary; I have, among other things, written a book and several articles on the appointments process, testified in confirmation hearings, consulted with the Senate and the White House on several judicial nominations, and served recently as Special Counsel to Senator Leahy and the Judiciary Committee on the nomination of Sonia Sotomayor to the Supreme Court. It is an honor and privilege to participate in today's hearing in my personal capacity as a constitutional law professor.

In this Statement, I focus on four issues of particular concern to the Task Force. These issues are (1) whether a federal judge may be impeached, convicted, and removed from office for misconduct that is not indictable; (2) whether a federal judge may be impeached, convicted, and removed from office for misconduct committed prior to becoming a federal judge; (3) whether an impeachment proceeding is a criminal proceeding such that it would be covered by the immunity agreement pursuant to which Judge Porteous testified before the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council; and (4) which if any impeachment precedents are useful for guiding the Task Force's deliberations.

I have previously written about and given substantial thought to each of these questions. First, there has long been widespread consensus among impeachment scholars and members of Congress that impeachable offenses are not restricted to indictable offenses but rather are political crimes. Political crimes are injuries to the Republic and breaches of the public trust that are not restricted to either indictable offenses or only the abuses of an office's formal powers or duties. Second, any egregious misconduct not disclosed prior to election or appointment to an office from which one may be impeached and removed is likely to qualify as a "high crime or misdemeanor." While murder would be one obvious example of such misconduct, it is not the only one. Another example is lying to or defrauding the Senate in order to be approved as a federal judge. Such misconduct is not only serious but also obviously connected to the status (and responsibilities) of being a federal judge. Such misconduct plainly erodes the essential, indispensable integrity without which a federal judge is unable to do his job. Third, an impeachment proceeding is not a criminal proceeding but rather a unique, political proceeding. Thus, the current proceedings are not affected – or restricted in any way – by Judge Porteous' immunity agreement. Last but not least, the current proceedings are not affected, or deterred, in any way by the fact that there are no precedents directly on point. The fact that the charges made against Judge Porteous are different than those made against the officials who have been impeached and convicted says much more about the extent of his misconduct than it does about anything else. In any event, the charges made against Judge Porteous have enough in common with the grounds on which two other judges were impeached, convicted, and removed.

Consequently, I do not believe that any of these issues present any reasons whatsoever to keep the Task Force from moving forward in its impeachment proceedings against Judge Porteous.

I.

I understand that one matter of interest to Task Force members is whether the scope of impeachable offenses is restricted to indictable offenses – offenses that are statutorily prohibited as felonies and that the punish for the breach of which includes a substantial loss liberty. This question is not new; both constitutional scholars and members of Congress have extensively the question throughout the history of this nation. I will not review the literature here. It should suffice to say that the overwhelming weight of authority supports construing the phrase “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes or Misdemeanors” in Article II is not restricted to indictable crimes.

First, the language and examples that the framers and ratifiers used to describe the scope of impeachable offenses reflect their common understanding that the terms “high Crimes or Misdemeanors” in Article II refers to what the framer’s generation understood to be “political crimes.” They expressed their understanding of “political crimes” through such terms or phrases as “great offences against” or injuries to the Republic,” abuses of authority, and breaches of the public trust. Almost all their examples were of misdeeds that were not liable at law, such as a president’s entering into an unlawful treaty that benefitted foreign but not American interests. To the framers and ratifiers, the criterion for determining whether an offense was impeachable was not whether it had been proscribed through a specific criminal statute but rather the extent and nature of its injury to the State, abuse of power, or breach of the public trust.

Second, the most prominent, post-ratification commentators agreed that the scope of impeachable offenses were not limited to indictable crimes. Alexander Hamilton, James Wilson, and Joseph Story each explained that the offenses for which people could be impeached, convicted, and removed from office were political crimes. Hamilton the constitutional grounds for removal as consisting of “those offences which proceed from the abuse or violation of some public trust. They are of a nature which may with peculiar propriety be denominated POLITICAL, as they relate chiefly to injuries done immediately to the society itself.”¹ Wilson referred to such offenses as “political crimes and misdemeanors,”² while Story opined that impeachable offenses were “[s]uch kind of misdeeds . . . as peculiarly injure the commonwealth by the abuse of high offices of trust.”³ Both Hamilton and Story believed that impeachable offenses comprised a unique set of transgressions that defied neat delineation or codification. Story emphasized that no statute would be able to codify the range of misconduct that could qualify as impeachable, because “political offences are so various and complex a character, so utterly incapable of being defined, or classified, that the task of positive legislation would be impractical, if it were not almost absurd to attempt it.”⁴ Story suggested that subsequent generations would have to define impeachable offenses on a case-by-case basis rather than through criminal statutes.

¹Alexander Hamilton, Federalist No. 65, The Federalist Papers 396 (Rossiter, ed. 1961).

³Joseph Story, Commentaries on the Constitution section 788, at 256 (Nowak & Rotunda 1987).

⁴Id., section 405, at 287.

If we turn, as Story suggested, to the practice of impeachment in order to determine the kinds of offenses for which people may be impeached, convicted, and removed from office, a clear pattern emerges: Of the 16 men impeached by the House of Representatives, only five have been impeached on grounds constituting an indictable offense, and one of those was Alcee Hastings, who had been formally acquitted of bribery prior to his impeachment. The House articles of impeachment against the nine others include misconduct that did not constitute indictable offenses, at least at the time that they were approved. Of the seven men (all federal judges) actually removed from office by the Senate, four were charged with and convicted of misconduct that did not constitute any indictable offenses. These four were Judges Pickering (public drunkenness and blasphemy); West Humphreys (supporting the Confederacy and failing to fulfill his duties as a federal judge); Robert Archibald (obtaining contracts for himself from persons appearing before his court and for adjudicating cases in which he had a financial interest or received a payment – offenses that were not indictable at the time); and Halsted Ritter (bringing “his court into scandal and disrepute, to the prejudice of said court and public confidence in the administration of justice therein . . .”). The other three judges who have been removed from office – Harry Claiborne, Alcee Hastings, and Walter Nixon – were each charged with indictable crimes. Hence, the pattern of convictions indicates that impeachable offenses include, but are not limited to, certain indictable crimes. The common theme in these cases is not committing felonies but rather engaging in misconduct that is incompatible with being a federal judge and depriving the judge of the integrity required in order to maintain public confidence in his continuing to exercise the powers of an Article III judge. A felony might qualify as a political crime but a political crime does not have to be a felony.

II.

Another issue of interest to the Task Force is whether a federal judge may only be impeached, convicted, and removed for abusing their official constitutional responsibilities. What follows from this argument is that no federal judge may be impeached, convicted, or removed for misconduct committed prior to becoming a judge, because such misconduct is not, after all, among his current duties or responsibilities.

To appreciate why this argument and the premise on which it rests (that federal judges are only impeachable for their abuses of official duties) are mistaken, one should consider how the Constitution treats each of the following three kinds of misconduct. The first is misconduct that is committed prior to becoming a federal judge and that is both inconsequential and unknown (or undisclosed) at the time of a judge’s confirmation proceeding. The second is misconduct that is known at the time the judge is confirmed. The third is misconduct that is egregious but not known at the time of the judge’s confirmation proceedings.

I believe the Constitution clearly permits impeachment in the third circumstance but not necessarily in either of the other two. In the first circumstance, we are not dealing with misconduct that is consequential or serious; it is, by definition, unimportant, innocuous, or trivial. As such, it is the kind of misbehavior (if one wants to use that term), which no one would expect a nominee to disclose or that would, if disclosed, make any difference to the outcome. Moreover, something inconsequential is not a political crime. To be sure, some judgment might be required to determine whether something is inconsequential, but I have supposed that in this first scenario everyone would agree that the misconduct is not serious enough to be a breach of the public trust, an injury to the State, or an abuse of power. Hence, it does not matter if it is known or not at the time of the judge's confirmation.

The second kind of misconduct is likely not to be impeachable, because the proper authority – the Senate – effectively ratifies the misconduct at the time it decides to confirm the judge. It does not matter, in this scenario, whether the misconduct is serious or inconsequential because the Senate has had the opportunity to assess its magnitude and relevance to its confirmation decision. By confirming the judge, the Senate has effectively ratified the previous misconduct or signaled that it does not regard the earlier misconduct as disqualifying.

The third kind of misconduct is different than either of the first two kinds. This third kind is egregious and not known at the time of confirmation. Such misconduct is, in other words, likely to be of sufficient gravity that it is an impeachable offense. It does not matter whether the conduct has any formal relationship to a judge's specific duties; it is bad behavior that by itself demonstrates a level of moral depravity and bad judgment that it is completely incompatible with the responsibilities of a judge. If we add to the facts that the nominee lied to the Senate about this bad misconduct, then the nominee has not only done something morally reprehensible but he has also engaged in misconduct that directly undermines the integrity of the confirmation process itself.

Say, for instance, that the offense was murder – it is as serious a crime as any we have, and its commission by a judge completely undermines both his integrity and the moral authority he must have in order to function as a federal judge. The timing of the murder is of less concern than the fact of it; this is the kind of behavior that is completely incompatible with the public trust invested in officials who are sufficiently high-ranking to be subject to the impeachment process. The fact that a nominee would suppress or not bring this misconduct to light to either the President who is considering his nomination or the Senate which is considering his confirmation makes the misconduct all the more reprehensible. It clearly reflects such poor judgment and complete lack of regard for the Senate that it is an offence against the State and a breach of the public trust.

My understanding is that Judge Porteous has been charged with misconduct that falls into this third circumstance, and treating such misconduct as impeachable is consistent with the language of Article II. The latter provides that an impeachable official may be impeached, convicted, and removed from an office for certain kinds of misconduct; however, it does not say when the misconduct must have been committed. To be sure, the framers deliberately designed the impeachment process to distinguish it from the British system in which private citizens were subject to impeachment. It seems to follow that the misconduct of a private citizen – or someone who is not an impeachable official in the federal constitutional sense – is, at the time it was done, an impeachable offense. It might even seem odd to allow the Congress to transform such misbehavior later into an impeachable offense simply because the person's status changes later. Yet, this is not odd, if we recognize that once a person becomes a federal judge, he is plainly subject to the clause, which says, quite explicitly, that he may be impeached, convicted, and removed for "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes or Misdemeanors." The critical questions are whether Judge Porteous committed such misconduct and whether such misconduct demonstrates the lack of integrity and judgment that are required in order for him to continue to function as an Article III job. In Judge Porteous' case, the Task Force does not have to be concerned about whether some misconduct committed to his becoming a judge may, on its own, serve as an impeachable offense. For, by defrauding the Senate in his confirmation proceedings, Judge Porteous has engaged in misconduct that is egregious and has a more than obvious connection to his present position. The nexus is that Judge Porteous deprived the Senate of information that would undoubtedly have changed the outcome in his confirmation hearing. His failure to disclose is nothing less than an attack on the integrity of the confirmation process and an affront to the constitutional responsibilities of the President and the Senate.

In my book on impeachment, I had considered the question of whether a judge or some other impeachable official might be impeached for misconduct committed prior to assuming his current office. I wrote that there might be some difficult cases but “it is easy to imagine instances in which impeachable offenses could be based on present misconduct consisting of fraudulent suppression or misrepresentation of prior misconduct. Particularly in cases in which an elected or confirmed official has lied or committed a serious act of wrongdoing to get into [his] present position, the misconduct that was committed prior to entering office clearly bears on the integrity of the way in which the present officeholder entered office and the integrity of that official to remain in office.”⁵ I continue to stand by this analysis. Judge Porteous’ misconduct fits squarely into this analysis. There is no question that his defrauding the Senate undermined the integrity of his confirmation process and deprives him of the essential, indispensable integrity that he needs in order to continue to function as a federal district judge.

III.

Another concern of the Task Force might be that the immunity agreement pursuant to which Judge Porteous testified before the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council bars using in these proceedings any of his testimony before that body or any evidence derived from that testimony. The agreement expressly immunizes Judge Porteous from having used against him in any “criminal” proceeding either the testimony he gave to the Fifth Circuit Council or any evidence derived from such testimony. Some members of the Task Force might wonder whether an impeachment proceeding is essentially the same as a criminal proceeding and thus none of Judge Porteous’ prior testimony, or any evidence derived from it, should be used in the instant impeachment proceedings.

The problem is that an impeachment proceeding is NOT the same as a criminal proceeding. In fact, the framers designed the impeachment process as a unique, political proceeding. In his classic treatise on impeachment, the late Charles Black stressed this point,⁶ as do I in prior writings.

The uniqueness of an impeachment proceeding is evident in both the language and structure of the Constitution. As I suggested over a decade ago, “[The Constitution expressly limits the punishments for impeachment [and conviction] to removal and disqualification from office, punishments that are unavailable in any other proceeding in our legal system. In addition, the Constitution does not entitle the target of an impeachment the right to a jury or to counsel; the president may not pardon a person convicted by impeachment (whereas he is able to pardon any other convicted official); the federal rules of evidence do not apply in an impeachment trial; and a conviction does not require unanimous agreement among the senators sitting in judgment.”⁷ Other critical differences are that the case is not tried before a jury of one’s peers or a judge and the burden of proof is unique. In his classic treatise on impeachment, the late Charles Black explained that the unique, “hybrid” nature of an impeachment trial required that the burden of proof be unique (and thus not be the same as the standard of beyond a reasonable doubt that is required in criminal trials).⁸ Indeed, the unique structure of the Senate has made it practically impossible for it to have a uniform burden of proof; instead, the Senate has long taken the (unique) “position that each senator should follow whatever burden of proof he or she thinks is best.”⁹ Indeed, the Senate has never approved this conception of impeachment and, in the late 1980s, flatly rejected the argument that impeachment proceedings are the same as criminal trials. A few years later, the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal reached the same conclusion that impeachment proceeding are unique, political proceedings and are not structurally, or meant to be, the same as criminal trials.

⁶ See Charles Black, Impeachment: A Handbook 17 (1973).

IV.

A final issue raised in the present proceedings is whether there are any prior impeachment proceedings – any precedents – that would be useful guides to the Task Force. One argument that might be made on behalf of Judge Porteous is that he should not be impeached because no one has ever before been impeached, convicted, and removed in like circumstances. But, the fact that there are no precedents directing on point is of no consequence. There is no precedent of impeaching an official for murder, but this would not, I am sure, prevent the House and the Senate from considering such misconduct to be an impeachable offense and to proceed accordingly. The fact that the House has not proceeded before against a judge on grounds similar to those on which it is proceeding against Judge Porteous says much more about the nature and extent of his misconduct than it does about anything else. To refrain from acting would create a precedent that would be bad for the Congress and for the federal judiciary, since it would not only suggest a permissible level of corruption for federal judges but also provide an incentive for judicial nominees to refrain from disclosing bad behavior to the Senate.

Nevertheless, there are two impeachments that have some things in common with the instant case. In the first, the House impeached and the Senate convicted and removed Robert Archibald from office because of misconduct he had committed as a member of the Commerce Court while he was serving as a judge on the Third Circuit. As David Kyvig explains in his important, recent treatise on impeachment, “None of the judge’s conduct, if carried out by a private businessman, would have been indictable, but his use of judicial influence for personal gain provoked outrage. Among other things, Archibald had written letters on Commerce Court stationery encouraging the sale or lease of property on favorable terms to third parties who, in turn, rewarded the judge, their silent partner. In another instance, Archibald clandestinely corresponded with an appellant’s attorney in a railroad case before his court, asked the lawyer for his opinion on the case, and then supported the successful appeal, all of which violated judicial ethics.”¹⁰ As Professor Charles Geyh suggests in his testimony to the Task Force, Judge Porteous is guilty of several ethical violations, which, as the Archibald case shows, may properly serve as the basis for impeachment, conviction, and removal.

In the second case, Halsted Ritter was impeached by the House and convicted and removed from his judgeship in 1936 by the Senate. As Kyvig explains, “Ritter was convicted and removed from office . . . for taking a kickback of fees in a resort-hotel bankruptcy case, for evading income tax, and for continuing to practice law after going on the bench. All the alleged misconduct dated from the first year of Ritter’s judgeship.”¹¹ The Senate did not convict Ritter on any specific charge of misconduct but rather, as Kyvig further notes, “voted 56-28 for an article that collected all the previous charges into one summary article that charged Ritter with bringing his court into ‘scandal and disrepute, to the prejudice of said court, and public confidence in the administration of justice.’ By the margin of a single vote, the Senate convicted and removed him from the federal bench. Notably, Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana, later named to the federal appellate bench by Franklin Roosevelt and elevated to the Supreme Court by Harry Truman, voted to acquit Ritter on all six of the substantive articles and to convict on the omnibus article.”¹² The pattern of Judge Porteous’ misbehavior,¹³ which extends over a longer period than Judge Ritter’s, has, at the very least, undermined confidence that he has the requisite integrity and moral authority to continue to function as a federal judge. As demonstrated in both the Archibald and Ritter convictions, the integrity of the courts is ultimately the responsibility of the Congress to ensure and maintain through its impeachment authority.

Conclusion

The issues before the Task Force are among the most serious that the House of Representatives must consider in the discharge of its constitutional responsibilities, and I am mindful of what is at stake in these proceedings. I do not take lightly the responsibility that the Task Force has placed in me as a witness in these proceedings. There is nothing more important to our system of justice than a judge’s integrity, and the loss of this integrity, as is abundantly apparent in the instant proceedings, provides as sound a basis for the exercise of the awesome impeachment authority as any I know. The constitutional issues before the Task Force are straightforward: A federal judge may be impeached, convicted, and removed for non-indictable offenses and ethical lapses, including defrauding the Senate in the confirmation proceedings to occupy the office he now holds. Consequently, this Task Force is acting well within its constitutional responsibilities to recommend the impeachment of Judge Porteous.

A judge’s soliciting and receiving cash and things of value from lawyers appearing before the judge is so obviously a questionable practice that it is subject to numerous substantive, disclosure, and ethical regulations. Were it not so regulated, judges could ask for and take money from lawyers, sit on cases involving those lawyers, and deny any impropriety. Those who would claim otherwise would be left with the burden of proving the judge’s and lawyer’s contrary states of mind.”).

Testimony Before the House Committee on the Judiciary Task Force to Consider the Possible Impeachment of Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.
December 15, 2009

By Akhil Reed Amar

Thank you, Mr. Chair. My name is Akhil Reed Amar. I am the Sterling Professor of Law and Political Science at Yale University, where I have been writing and teaching about the Constitution for a quarter century. Among other things, I have written extensively on the specific topic of impeachment. It is a solemn privilege to address this body on the weighty matter before you. In preparation for today's hearing, I have reviewed various materials presented to me by Special Impeachment Counsel Alan I. Baron. Based on these materials and my current understanding of the underlying facts, I believe that the impeachment of Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. is clearly warranted, and I see no valid legal or constitutional objection to impeachment in these circumstances. I have five points to make.

First, there is no good reason to believe—no sound argument from the Constitution's specific text or general structure, no persuasive argument from the history of the Founding, no valid argument grounded in the precedents set by previous impeachment proceedings, no convincing argument from common sense or the American tradition of fair play—that only offenses punishable under the criminal code merit impeachment. As I explained in my 2005 book, America's Constitution: A Biography:

In context, the words “high . . . Misdemeanors” most sensibly meant high misbehavior or high misconduct, whether or not strictly criminal. Under the Articles of Confederation, the states mutually pledged to extradite those charged with any “high misdemeanor,” and in that setting the phrase apparently meant only indictable crimes. The Constitution used the phrase in a wholly different context, in which adjudication would occur in a political body lacking general criminal jurisdiction or special criminal-law competence. Early drafts in Philadelphia had provided for impeachment in noncriminal cases of “mal-practice or neglect of duty” and more general “corruption.” During the ratification process, leading Federalists hypothesized various noncriminal actions that might rise to the level of high misdemeanors warranting impeachment, such as summoning only friendly senators into special session or “giving false information to the Senate.” In the First Congress, Madison contended that if a president abused his removal powers by “wanton removal of meritorious officers” he would be “impeachable . . . for such an act of mal-administration.”¹ Consistent with these public expositions of the text, House members in the early 1800s impeached a pair of judges for misbehavior on the bench that fell short of criminality. The Senate convicted one (John Pickering) of intoxication and indecency, and acquitted the other (Samuel Chase) of egregious bias and other judicial improprieties.²

An impeachment standard transcending criminal-law technicalities made good structural sense. A president who ran off on a frolic in the middle of a national crisis demanding his urgent attention might break no criminal law, yet such gross dereliction of duty imperiling the national security and betraying the national trust might well rise to the level of disqualifying misconduct. (Page 200).

Second, and related, the procedural rules applicable in ordinary criminal cases do not necessarily apply to impeachment trials. For example, the Senate, sitting as a trial jury of sorts, need not be unanimous to convict, and the rules for recusal are quite different from those in an ordinary criminal trial. Also, House and Senate members may properly vote to impeach and convict even if in their minds the evidence of guilt does not rise to the level of proof beyond reasonable doubt. For similar reasons, I believe that the Fifth Amendment Self-Incrimination Clause—a clause that applies to ordinary criminal cases—should not apply in all respects to an impeachment trial, which is only quasi-criminal. Thus, reliable derivative fruits of compelled testimony should be admissible in an impeachment trial even if these fruits would ordinarily be barred from an ordinary criminal case; and perhaps even the compelled testimony itself should be admissible, as it would be admissible in a standard civil case. Also, unlike petit jurors in an ordinary criminal case involving a nontestifying defendant, Senators should be allowed to draw adverse inferences against an impeachment defendant who refuses to answer questions—as may trial jurors in a typical civil case where the defendant declines to take the stand.

The underlying reasoning here is simple. Ordinary criminal cases place the defendant's bodily liberty at risk. Indeed, in a capital case, a defendant's very life hangs in the balance. But an impeachment defendant does not face any threat to life or limb in an impeachment proceeding, even if he is being impeached for treason itself. Thus, impeachment procedures need not be as tenderly protective of defendants because impeachment defendants face fewer punitive sanctions than ordinary criminal defendants. In the case of Judge Porteous, it is not even clear that removal from office would truly "punish" him by depriving him of anything that was ever rightfully his. Rather, removal from office would simply undo an ill-gotten gain, by ending a federal judgeship that he never should have received—and never would have received but for the falsehoods and frauds that he perpetrated when being vetted for this position.

Third, it is a gross mistake to believe that federal officers may be impeached only for misconduct committed while in office, or (even more strictly) only for misconduct that they committed in their capacity as federal officers.³ The text of the Constitution contains no such requirement, and constitutional structure and common sense demonstrate the absurdity of this position. The Constitution explicitly mentions treason and bribery as impeachable offenses. Both offenses can be committed by someone prior to commencing federal office. Indeed, imagine for a moment an officer who procures his very office by bribing his way into it. By definition, the bribery here occurred prior to the commencement of officeholding, but surely this fact should not immunize the briber from impeachment and removal. Had the bribery not occurred, the person would never have been an officer in the first place. As I put the point in my 2005 book, “In the case of [an officer] who did not take bribes but gave them—paying men to vote for him—the bribery would undermine the very legitimacy of the election that brought him to office.”

What is true of bribery is also true of fraud: A person who procures his judgeship by lying to the President and the Senate has wrongly obtained his office by fraud and is surely removable via impeachment for that fraud.

Fourth, not all evasive or incomplete or even downright false statements in the nomination and confirmation process deserve to be viewed as “high” misdemeanors equivalent to bribery. Here, as elsewhere, judgment is required, and the Congress is perfectly positioned to exercise that judgment. As I explained in 2005: “The House and Senate, comprising America’s most distinguished and accountable statesmen, would make the key decisions. Acting under the American people’s watchful eye, these leaders would have strong incentives to set the bar at the right level. If they defined virtually anything as a ‘high’ misdemeanor, they and their friends would likely fail the test, which could one day return to haunt them. If, instead, they ignored plain evidence of gross [executive or judicial] malignance, the apparent political corruption and back-scratching might well disgust the voters, who could register popular outrage at the next election.”

In the case of Judge Porteous, as I understand the facts, I would stress that he gave emphatically false answers to direct (albeit broad) questions; that his emphatic falsehoods concealed gross prior misconduct as a judge in a vetting proceeding whose very purpose was to determine whether he should be given another judicial position with broadly similar power; that this nomination-and-confirmation-process fraud and falsehood was part of a much larger pattern of fraud and falsehood that began much earlier (in state court) and continued much later (as evidenced by the frauds and falsehoods he perpetrated on counsel Mole in the Liljeberg case); and that had Porteous told the truth in his confirmation process it is absolutely inconceivable that he would have been confirmed and commissioned as a federal judge.

Fifth, the House and Senate need not worry in this case about undoing the People's verdict on Election Day—a concern that properly informs presidential impeachment cases. Here, Porteous is a judge because the Senators themselves voted to make him one—and they did so under false pretenses. Simply put, he lied to them. This House should give the other body, which voted to place Porteous in a position of power over his fellow citizens, the opportunity to revote and remove Porteous from power now that it is clear that he won the earlier vote by foul, fraud, and falsehood—that is, by high misdemeanor. As I suggested before, removal in this case would not be harsh punishment, but rather would simply be disgorgement of wrongful gain and prevention of foreseeable future misconduct given the gross pattern that has been demonstrated here.

Every day that a fraudster continues to claim the title of a federal judge and to draw his federal salary is an affront to his fellow citizens and taxpayers, to say nothing of the parties unfortunate enough to come before him. The mere fact that criminal prosecution of Porteous might not be warranted should not mean that he should therefore escape the scrutiny and verdict of an impeachment court. I am reminded of the bank robber who managed to fool the judge into acquitting him. “That’s great, your honor,” the defendant blurted out. “Does this mean I can keep the money?”

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES G. GEYH
ON H. RES. 1448 (2008), INQUIRING INTO THE IMPEACHMENT OF DISTRICT JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS

December 15, 2009

My name is Charles G. Geyh (pronounced "Jay"). I am the Associate Dean for Research and the John F. Kimberling Professor of Law at the Indiana University Maurer School of Law. I am the co-author of over forty books, book chapters and articles on judicial conduct, ethics, independence, accountability, and administration, including the treatise "Judicial Conduct and Ethics" (4th Ed. 2007) (with Alfini, Lubet & Shaman); the book "When Courts & Congress Collide: The Struggle for Control of America's Judicial System" (2006); and the forthcoming monograph "Judicial Disqualification: An Analysis of Federal Law" (2d Edition, Federal Judicial Center, forthcoming 2010). I have previously served as Reporter to the American Bar Association's Joint Commission to Evaluate the Model Code of Judicial Conduct; Director of and Consultant to the American Bar Association's Judicial Disqualification Project; Assistant Special Counsel to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, on the Impeachment and Removal of Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice Rolf Larsen; consultant to the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal; and counsel to the House Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Courts, Intellectual Property and the Administration of Justice (under Subcommittee Chairman Robert W. Kastenmeier). The views expressed in my testimony today are my own, and not necessarily those of the organizations with which I am or have been affiliated.

My testimony today will be directed at the ethical implications of Judge Porteous's alleged conduct, with a focus on the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. The analysis of judicial ethics is context dependent - whether a judge did or did not run afoul of an ethical directive will almost always turn on the facts surrounding that judge's conduct. In preparation for my testimony today, I have reviewed the following materials: the House Judiciary Committee's Impeachment Task Force hearing transcripts from November 17 and December 8, 2009; the Report and Recommendations of the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, dated June, 2008 and forwarded to the House of Representatives on June 18, 2008; the Report by the Special Investigatory Committee to the Judicial Council of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, together with accompanying exhibits and a concurring/dissenting Report, dated November 20, 2007; and an undated Hearing Memorandum to the House Judiciary Committee's Impeachment Task Force prepared in anticipation of its November 17, 2009 hearing. My analysis of Judge Porteous's conduct is based on information derived from these materials. I do not, however, presume to make my own findings of fact concerning Judge Porteous's conduct. Whenever possible, therefore, I have predicated my ethics analysis upon facts as found and summarized by the Judicial Conference in its June, 2008 Report. Although the findings of fact in the Judicial Conference Report impress me as consistent with testimony in the hearing record, I draw no conclusions in that regard. Accordingly, my testimony throughout refers to the judge's "alleged" conduct.

The Porteous matter is complicated, spanning many years and featuring a number of episodes. I will orient my testimony around those episodes, beginning with the most problematic. In so doing, however, it is critically important not to lose the forest for the trees. As egregious as the judge's alleged conduct was in several episodes viewed in isolation, the whole exceeds the sum of its parts. Taken together, the actions that Judge Porteous is reported to have taken as a state and federal judge reflect a cynical and contorted view of judicial service as an opportunity to be exploited; of judicial power as a thing to be abused for personal gain; and of legal and ethical constraints on judicial conduct as obstacles to be circumvented. Measured against the directive of the first canon in the Code of Conduct - the canon articulating a judge's primary ethical duty - that he "uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary," such conduct represents a grave and extreme abrogation of the judge's ethical responsibilities.

The Liljeberg Case and its Antecedents

Judge Porteous's reported conduct in the Liljeberg case raises ethical concerns of the most extreme sort, and culminated years of problematic behavior. To fully appreciate the severity of his ethical transgressions in Liljeberg, however, it is necessary to review the history of his relationship with the lawyers who represented the parties in that case, and the ethical problems that arose in the course of that relationship.

Conduct as a State Judge

Attorneys Jacob Amato and Leonard Levinson (who represented defendant in Liljeberg) and Donald Gardner (who represented plaintiff) each testified that they were longtime friends of Judge Porteous, and that during his years as a state judge, they took Judge Porteous to lunch innumerable times - often at expensive restaurants. Rarely, if ever, did Judge Porteous pay for his meals. Codes of conduct permit judges to accept "social hospitality" without running afoul of restrictions on the gifts judges may receive,¹ and friends and former colleagues who take each other to lunch can be a conventional form of social hospitality. This, however, was not ordinary "social hospitality." These lawyers reportedly paid Judge Porteous's lunch bills countless times for years with no meaningful reciprocation by the judge. Moreover, this one-way payment practice appears to be what Judge Porteous wanted and expected: Former state judge Ronald Bodenheimer testified that when Bodenheimer became a judge, Porteous told him that, once a judge, he would "never have to buy lunch again. . . There will always be somebody to take you to lunch." In other words, Judge Porteous was trading on his position as a judge in contravention of the ethical principle that a judge should not "lend the prestige of judicial office to advance the private interests of the judge.”² Similarly, Amato’s partner, Robert Creely, testified that he took Porteous on numerous, all expense-paid-hunting and fishing trips during his years as a state judge, which further exceeds traditional notions of “social hospitality,” and lends additional support to the suspicion that Judge Porteous was exploiting his station for personal gain.³

In addition to meals and trips, the Judicial Conference Report noted that “much of the available evidence concerns Judge Porteous’s solicitation and receipt of cash payments from a law firm, Amato & Creely [which was] . . . a relationship begun when Judge Porteous was a state court judge.” According to Amato and Creely, Judge Porteous solicited tens of thousands of dollars from them over a period of years. These lawyers testified that they were good friends of the judge and were simply acting out of a desire to help a friend who was in a seemingly constant state of financial distress, and not because they were seeking or receiving favors. It is possible to credit this testimony completely and still conclude that Amato and Creely would not have shown such magnanimity to Porteous were he not a judge. Judges are important and powerful people in their communities, and it is understandable that lawyers would want to remain in their good graces, which is why ethics rules limit the gifts judges can receive and prohibit judges from exploiting their positions for personal gain.

Even more troubling, however, the Judicial Conference Report states that when the firm “indicated to Judge Porteous that it was unhappy with having to bear the expense of repeated payments to him . . . Judge Porteous frequently appointed the firm to curatorship proceedings and, at Judge Porteous’s suggestion, received in return a portion of the fees paid.” Such conduct is unethical in the extreme. Code of Conduct Canon 3B3 states that “a judge should exercise the power of appointment fairly and only on the basis of merit, avoiding unnecessary appointments, nepotism and favoritism.”⁴ While Judge Porteous clearly exhibited favoritism in his assignment of curatorships, he did so less for the benefit of friends than himself. His conduct thus entailed a gross abuse of judicial power that manifested a fundamental disregard for core ethical directives that a judge “should avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in all activities;” “should uphold the integrity . . . of the judiciary” and should not abuse the prestige of his office for personal gain.⁵

² Code of Conduct for United States Judges, Canon 2B (2009) (hereafter “Code of Conduct (2009)”). State rules are comparable. ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct, Rule 1.3 (2007) (hereafter “Model Code”). The Code of Conduct for United States Judges was substantially revised in July, 2009. The Judicial Conference Report evaluated Judge Porteous’s conduct with reference to predecessor Code. Differences between the two Codes do not affect the analysis of Judge Porteous’s conduct, but in my testimony, I cite to both

⁴ The predecessor Code is comparable, providing that “A judge should not make unnecessary appointments and should exercise that power only on the basis of merit, avoiding nepotism and favoritism.” Code of Conduct for United States Judges, Canon 3B4 (2008) (hereafter “Code of Conduct (predecessor).” See ABA Model Code, Rule 2 13.

⁵ Code of Conduct Canons 1, 2 (2009); See also, Model Code, Canon 1

Although the Judicial Conference Report discussed Judge Porteous's conduct as a state judge to provide context, it did not factor such conduct into its recommendation that "consideration of impeachment may be warranted." It seems clear to me, however, that Congress is well within its rights to consider such conduct when evaluating Judge Porteous's continuing fitness to serve. By way of an extreme example, suppose that a federal judge is found to have committed a multiple homicide while a state judge ten years earlier. It is difficult to imagine that such conduct would be off limits in an impeachment inquiry simply because it predated the judge's ascension to the federal bench. Without getting into standards for impeachment (which other witnesses will address), the better question is whether the judge's conduct as a state judge affects his fitness to serve as a federal judge. In state court systems, for example, it is relatively well settled that a judge's conduct in a prior term, in a different judicial office, or even in private practice, may be the subject of judicial conduct proceedings.⁶

Conduct as a federal judge

The Judicial Conference Report states:

It is undisputed that Judge Porteous solicited and received cash and other things of value from law firms and attorneys who appeared before him in litigation. These included, at a minimum, cash payments, numerous lunches, payments for travel, meals, and hotel rooms in Las Vegas, and payments for the expenses of a congressional externship for Judge Porteous's son.

These meals, trips and payments that Judge Porteous received from Amato, Levinson, Gardner and Creely continue a course of conduct begun when he was a state judge, and raise the same ethical problems detailed above. They likewise implicate an additional provision in the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, which provides that "A judge should refrain from financial and business dealings that . . . exploit the judicial position."⁷ The Liljeberg case, however, added a new dimension because in that case three of these same lawyers appeared before Judge Porteous as counsel in a major piece of commercial litigation. Of particular interest is the appearance of attorneys Jacob Amato and Leonard Levenson, who were retained as counsel for defendant under unusual circumstances described in the Judicial Conference Report:

[H]is [Judge Porteous's] friends Jacob Amato and Lenny Levenson appeared as counsel after the case was assigned to him. Amato had given money to Judge Porteous. Levenson had helped pay Judge Porteous's son's living expenses during an externship in Washington, D.C. and had treated Judge Porteous to lunch while he had matters pending before Judge Porteous. Although Amato and Levenson did not typically practice in federal court or frequently handle complex litigation, they were brought into Liljeberg with an 11% contingency fee to represent a client seeking a judgment of $110 million. Moreover, they had joined the case 39 months after it was originally filed just two months before it was to go to trial.

After Amato and Levenson appeared as counsel for the defendant, plaintiff moved to disqualify Judge Porteous, who denied the motion, explaining that “Courts have held that a judge need not disqualify himself just because a friend, even a close friend, appears as a lawyer.” Shortly thereafter, plaintiff retained Donald Gardner as counsel, because as co-counsel for plaintiff testified, Gardner was another friend of Judge Porteous, whose presence in the case would “level the playing field.”

Assuming these to be the facts, it is clear that Judge Porteous should have disqualified himself. Under the federal judicial disqualification statute and the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, a judge shall disqualify himself from any proceeding in which the judge’s “impartiality might reasonably be questioned.”⁸ It is a standard that must be assessed from the perspective of an objective lay person fully informed of the circumstances. Under this approach, courts have held that judges need not disqualify themselves simply because a good friend represents a party before the court: a reasonable person would recognize that in a collegial legal community a judge will know most if not all of the lawyers who appear before him, many of whom will be friends and acquaintances from law school and practice. But Amato and Levenson were more than friends: they were long-time benefactors upon whom Porteous had depended for tens of thousands of dollars in quick cash, meals and other favors over many years. Receiving payments and favors of this sort from lawyers who appear before the judge is not ordinary “social hospitality” in any sense of the phrase, and constitutes clear grounds for disqualification.⁹ Moreover, the need to disqualify was made even more manifest by the circumstances in which these long-time patrons of the judge were retained, being brought in at the eleventh hour to try a massive case before Judge Porteous in a non-jury trial on a matter outside of the lawyers’ normal practice area. Taken together, this confluence of events gives rise to the unshakable suspicion that Judge Porteous was subject to favoritism and could not be counted upon to remain impartial.

Disqualification is both a matter of procedure (hence its inclusion in title 28 of the U.S. Code) and a matter of ethics (hence its inclusion in the Code of Conduct). Ordinarily, when a judge erroneously declines to disqualify himself, the appropriate remedy is a procedural one: reversal. A much more serious problem arises, however, when non-disqualification is willful:

It has been held that a judge will be subject to discipline for incorrectly failing to disqualify himself only where the failure was willful. The test is an objective one, and therefore a willful failure to disqualify may be present even though a judge states on the record that that he or she does not believe that disqualification is necessary.¹⁰

¹⁰ ALFINI et al., supra note 7, at §4.01.

In this case, the facts as reported lead to the conclusion that Judge Porteous's failure to disqualify was willful. First, Judge Porteous was well aware of undisclosed information that made the need for him to disqualify himself obvious - so obvious that his failure to recuse cannot be attributed to an honest mistake. Second, the judge's statements during the disqualification proceedings were calculatedly misleading. Judge Porteous acknowledged his friendship with Amato and Levenson, without disclosing any of the details that made that "friendship" problematic. He conceded that he had "gone along to lunch" with them without revealing that he had done so countless times, that the lawyers always (or nearly always) paid, and that he had received much more from them than free meals. And when plaintiff's counsel alleged that Amato and Levenson had contributed to the judge's election campaigns, Porteous replied that "[t]he first time I ran, 1984, I think is the only time when they gave me money" - a statement he made with full knowledge that he had solicited many thousands of dollars from Amato over the years for other purposes. The cumulative effect of these statements supports the conclusion that Judge Porteous was willfully concealing information that would have revealed the need for him to disqualify himself. Such conduct is a gross and inexcusable violation of judicial ethics.

The Judicial Conference Report then states that "[a]fter denying the motion [to disqualify], and while a bench verdict was pending, Judge Porteous solicited cash from Amato," delivered "in an envelope picked up at Amato and Creely's office by Judge Porteous's secretary." The Report notes "Creely told Judge Porteous that this was not 'appropriate,'" because he "felt this practice was too 'blatant.'" Even if we credit assertions that the cash was solicited and accepted as a favor, not a bribe, Judge Porteous's misconduct here was of the gravest sort. The current Code of Conduct for United States Judges provides that "A judge should comply with the restrictions on acceptance of gifts and the prohibition on solicitation of gifts set forth in the Judicial Conference Gift Regulations."¹¹ The applicable regulations define "gift" to include gratuities, favors, loans or "similar item(s) having monetary value" and provide that "[a] judicial officer shall not solicit a gift from any person who is seeking official action from or doing business with the court . . . served by the judicial officer."¹² The judge who solicits or receives money from a lawyer who has an important case pending before the court, creates the taint of corruption that the Judicial Conference's gift regulations are designed to prevent; it is thus unsurprising that ethics rules universally condemn the practice.¹³ That Judge Porteous was told at the time that the payment was inappropriate, and did not report the payment as a gift, corroborates the view that he intentionally concealed a known impropriety.

¹¹ Code of Conduct Canon 4D(4) (2009).

¹² Regulations of the Judicial Conference of the United States Under Title III of the Ethics Reform Act of 1989 Concerning Gifts, §§3, 4. See also, Code of Conduct, Canon 5C4 (predecessor).

¹³ RICHARD C. FLAMM, JUDICIAL DISQUALIFICATION §9.1 (2d Ed. 2007) ("The practice of judges accepting gifts or favors from those who appear before them implicates fundamental policy concerns. Therefore, parties are usually not permitted to give such gifts and judges are not allowed to receive them."); JAMES ALFINI, et al, supra note 7, at §7.15A ("Courts tend to look with considerable skepticism at any gifts, favors, or favorable business deals that judges receive from lawyers who appear before them ")

Having improperly solicited thousands of dollars from a lawyer while he was representing a party in a case pending before him, the need for Judge Porteous to disqualify himself was even more plain, rendering his erroneous failure to withdraw more obviously willful. It is utterly inconceivable that a reasonable person would not question the impartiality of a judge who solicited thousands of dollars from a lawyer in a pending matter.¹⁴ That Judge Porteous subsequently decided the case in favor of the defendant and was later reversed in resounding terms only heightens the suspicions that the disqualification and gift rules aim to dispel. If the ethical duty to “act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary” means anything, it means that conduct of this kind is unacceptable.

The Bankruptcy Proceeding

Judge Porteous filed for bankruptcy in 2001, when he was a sitting federal district judge. The Judicial Conference Report summarizes his conduct in connection with the bankruptcy proceeding as follows:

Judge Porteous filed for bankruptcy under a false name. In sworn court documents, he understated his income, overstated his expenses, and failed to disclose gambling losses and an anticipated tax refund. Likewise, he failed to disclose the existence of various financial accounts, including a credit card. By using this credit card and by taking our markers at various casinos, he continued to accumulate debt in violation of court orders. Finally, he failed to report payments routed through his secretary’s checking account to preferred creditors. As a result of the foregoing, his creditors incurred unwarranted losses and he was enriched.

The Judicial Conference report concludes that his conduct violated federal perjury and bankruptcy fraud statutes. The alleged conduct likewise violates the judiciary’s core ethical principles. Codes of conduct direct judges to “respect and comply with the law”¹⁵ for obvious and compelling reasons: If we are to trust our judges to honor their oaths to uphold and apply the law in the courtroom, it is critical that they abide by the laws they have sworn to uphold. Unsurprisingly, then, criminal conduct, including fraud, has long been recognized as an extremely serious ethical lapse.¹⁶

One can argue whether violations of law that do not culminate in a criminal conviction technically qualify as a breach of the ethical duty to “follow the law,” but it is settled that such conduct runs afoul of even more elemental norms. The legitimacy of the judiciary as an institution depends on preserving public confidence in the courts. Public confidence in the courts turns on judges behaving honorably on and off the bench.

¹⁴ In the federal system, disqualification has been ordered where the risk of favoritism was far more attenuated. See, e.g., PepsiCo v. McMillen, 764 F.2d 458 (7th Cir. 1985) (Reversing refusal to disqualify where the judge—anonously and through a recruiter—was exploring future job opportunities with law firms representing parties in a pending case).

¹⁵ Code of Conduct Canon 2A (2009); Code of Conduct Canon 2A (predecessor), ABA Model Code Rule 1.1.

¹⁶ ALFINI et al., supra note 7, at §10.04A.

Accordingly, judges are admonished to “avoid impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in all activities” and to “act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary.”¹⁷ We therefore explain in our treatise, that “regardless of whether unprosecuted criminal conduct qualifies as a failure to comply with the law, within the meaning of the codes of conduct, it clearly runs afoul of the more general directives that judges must avoid the appearance of impropriety and must act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary.”¹⁸

The Judge’s Relationship With Bail Bondsmen

Deposition records and related documents indicate that over a period of years, starting when he was a state judge, Judge Porteous was given things of value from bail bondsmen Louis Marcotte and his sister, Lori Marcotte. They paid for numerous meals at high-end restaurants, paid for the judge’s home repairs, paid for his car repairs, and took Judge Porteous (and his secretary) to Las Vegas. In return, Judge Porteous set bonds at the Marcottes’ request so as to permit them to maximize their profits; he set aside felony convictions of employees; he helped them form relationships (particularly with other judges) that would assist them in their business; and he interceded on their behalf with other judges before whom the Marcottes had civil litigation pending.

Unlike the relationship between Judge Porteous and attorneys Amato, Creely, Levenson and Gardner, his relationship with the Marcottes was unobscured by longstanding friendships. Rather, as described immediately above, this was a business relationship featuring quid pro quo. Corruption of this magnitude is not addressed in codes of conduct explicitly: A judge’s ethical duty not to accept bribes, or take money or other favors in exchange for judicial or administrative action, quite literally goes without saying. As previously discussed, there are strict rules against judges soliciting or accepting favors from lawyers, parties, or others with whom the courts do business: Gift regulations for federal judges prohibit them from “solicit[ing] a gift from any person who is seeking official action from or doing business with the court,” and likewise prohibit them from accepting gifts from such persons, subject to exceptions that are inapplicable here.¹⁹ State ethics codes are similar.²⁰ As an ethical matter, however, the situation becomes “most egregious” when a judge receives improper “gifts” from interested individuals in exchange for official action, which are not really gifts or favors, but bribes and kickbacks.²¹ For ethical lapses this extreme, the violations cut to the quick of the core directives that judges must “uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary;”

“avoid impropriety;” and “act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary.”²²

After Porteous became a federal judge, Marcotte testified that he continued to include him at expense-paid lunches with state judges. Marcotte did so, he explained, because “whenever I brought Porteous to the table, I brought strength;” “other judges respected him and they listened to him when he talked;” and “he could tell them how great the bail bond business is.” If true, such conduct is an almost textbook violation of the ethical duty not to “lend the prestige of judicial office to advance the private interest of the judge or others.”²³

Financial Disclosure

In its report, the Judicial Conference found:

Judge Porteous’s annual financial disclosure forms repeatedly made false statements that were material to the integrity of the office. It is undisputed that Judge Porteous solicited and received things of value from attorneys appearing in litigation before him. It is also undisputed that none of these benefits were listed as “Income,” “Gifts,” “Loans,” or “Liabilities” on his financial disclosure forms, which he signed and attested to as accurate under oath.

To the extent Judge Porteous’s conduct violated perjury laws, it likewise signals a violation of his ethical duties to follow the law, to avoid impropriety, and to uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary, previously discussed in connection with his allegedly false statements under oath in the bankruptcy proceeding.²⁴ In addition, however, federal judges are under an independent ethical duty to “report the value of any gift, bequest, favor, or loan as required by statute or by the Judicial Conference of the United States.”²⁵

By itself, filing incomplete or inaccurate gift disclosure forms is highly undesirable, but can be attributed to simple carelessness or lack of time. To that extent, the ethical implications of such conduct are modest. When, however, failure to disclose is - as the Judicial Conference found here - a means for the judge to conceal the receipt of improper gifts and favors, the ethical implications become much more serious. Such conduct violates not just the duty to report gifts as required by applicable codes and regulations, but also the duty to avoid impropriety and to act at all times in a manner that promotes the integrity of the judiciary. It may be noted that the Model Code of Judicial Conduct defines “integrity” in terms of “probity” and “honesty,” which underscores why deliberate disregard of reporting requirements to conceal improper gifts undermines judicial integrity.²⁶

Hunting Trips and Meals from Oil Rig Companies

The evidentiary record reflects that Judge Porteous was assigned a number of cases in which two oil rig companies - Rowan Companies and Diamond Offshore - were litigants. Diamond and Rowan leased or owned hunting facilities in Texas, and both invited Judge Porteous on all-expense-paid hunting trips to their facilities. Diamond invited Judge Porteous in 2000, 2001, 2003, 2005, 2006, and 2007. The invitation from Diamond came at the suggestion of Judge Porteous's friend, attorney Richard Chopin, who frequently represented Diamond. Rowan invited Judge Porteous to attend hunting trips in 2002, 2004 and 2006. The invitation was extended by Rowan Vice-President Bill Hedrick who had met Judge Porteous on a different social hunting trip.

It is problematic for a judge to accept expense-paid hunting trips from parties in pending proceedings²⁷ unless the trips qualify as "social hospitality based on personal relationships," which falls outside the regulatory definition of gift.²⁸ In this case, however, the hospitality was provided not by a person, but by corporations. Accepting that Judge Porteous did not and could not have a "personal relationship" with an artificial entity, accepting the gift is problematic. The objective of a corporation is to make profits (or minimize losses) - not to make friends. Therefore, when a corporation is a regular party in litigation before a given judge, and that corporation extends special hospitalities to the judge on a recurring basis, it raises an unavoidable suspicion that the corporation's underlying motivation is to further its financial self-interest by currying favor. Having accepted inappropriate gifts from parties in litigation before him, disqualification was necessary. Put in terms of the language of the disqualification standard, an objective lay observer fully informed of the relevant circumstances might reasonably question the impartiality of a judge who enjoyed numerous expense-paid hunting trips courtesy of corporations that appeared regularly as parties in litigation.

Alan Baron, Esq.
Special Impeachment Counsel
Committee On the Judiciary, United States
House of Representatives
Seyfarth Shaw LLP
975 F Street, NW
Washington, DC 20004

Dear Mr. Baron:

You asked for my views on an issue that has arisen in the impeachment proceedings regarding United States District Judge Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. The House of Representatives has impeached Judge Porteous, and the matter is now before the Senate.

The question you asked me to address is whether the conduct for which a civil officer may be impeached, convicted, and removed from office includes only actions that took place while the officer held the office that is the subject of impeachment. Judge Porteous argues, in motions to dismiss two of the articles of impeachment, that conduct that took place prior to his appointment as United States District Judge cannot support impeachment.

In my view the Constitution imposes no such limitation. As I will explain, the important question concerning the relationship between the officer's alleged high crimes and misdemeanors and the officer's current office is not temporal. Rather, the question is whether the conduct, whenever it occurred, is such as to disqualify the officer from any longer holding the public trust.

Article II, Section 4 of the Constitution provides that "The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors." The text identifies the individuals who are subject to impeachment and the kind of conduct for which they may be impeached, but does not impose any explicit requirement regarding the time at which a high crime or misdemeanor must have occurred. While that silence is not dispositive, it is significant, especially because the Constitution elsewhere draws such a distinction. The Ineligibility Clause of Article I, Section 6, provides that "No Senator or Representative shall, during the Time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil Office under the Authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the Emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time." It would be too much to say simply that because the framers knew how to impose that kind of restriction, whenever they did not do so in so many words they did not do so implicitly, but the drafters' familiarity with the possible importance of terms of service does make it less likely that they would have left the restriction to be inferred.

Despite the absence from the text of such a limitation, the idea that impeachment must be based on conduct during office has some appeal. That appeal, though, derives from considerations that when thought through lead to a different limiting principle. An example in which those considerations are quite strong involves a civil office holder who, as a youth, committed a serious criminal offense and was convicted and punished for it, and who has since been a model of probity and public service. It is tempting to say that the Constitution does not authorize the House and Senate to bring back that long-past misconduct and remove the officer for it. But intuitions based on examples are only the beginning of analysis, and are often readily countered by seemingly contrary intuitions based on other examples. The case of the youthful offender can be countered by that of the civil officer who, shortly before being appointed, committed treason. If it is troublesome to think that the Constitution permits the removal of the former, it is shocking to think that the Constitution does not permit the removal of the traitor.

While the principle that impeachment may be based only on conduct during office cannot reconcile the contrary reactions to those cases, another principle can, and it is quite reasonably attributed to the Constitution. The difference between the two examples is that the youthful offender's past conduct does not bear on current fitness for office, whereas recent treason does. Two powerful considerations indicate that this, and not a temporal cut-off, is the actual constitutional principle. First, the context of the Constitution's provisions concerning impeachment is of course federal office, and context routinely supplies implicit limitations and other modifiers to seemingly general language. Hence it is natural to think that the high crimes and misdemeanors that support impeachment are those that have some connection to office. As the example of the traitor shows, that connection need not be contemporaneity. Second, the central instance of the kind of culpable conduct that gives rise to impeachment and removal is precisely culpable conduct that shows the officer to be, or makes the officer, unfit for the public's confidence. "Omitting qualifications, and recognizing that the definition is only an approximation, I think we can say that 'high Crimes and Misdemeanors,' in the constitutional sense, ought to be held to be those offenses which are rather obviously wrong, whether or not 'criminal,' and which so seriously threaten the order of political society as to make pestilent and dangerous the continuance in power of their perpetrator." Charles L. Black, Jr., Impeachment: A Handbook 39-40 (1974).

The question whether bad conduct has made an officer holder's continuance in office inconsistent with the public interest is fundamentally political. It is thus in keeping with the fundamentally political character of the impeachment process. While that process is of course in an important sense judicial, with Senators on oath or affirmation for the trial itself, U.S. Const., Art. I, sec. 3, it also involves the kind of judgments about what is good for the country that are properly made by elected and electorally accountable individuals, not judges whose primary expertise is in law. And just as the judgments to be made in an impeachment proceeding are political, so are the stakes. Conviction upon impeachment may entail no punishment other than removal from office and ineligibility to hold further office. Id. Life, liberty, and private property are not at stake, only eligibility to exercise power in the name of the people. Because impeachment is about the interests of the public, and not primarily about punishing wrongdoing, it is appropriate that a judgment of unfitness may be based on conduct that took place before an officer-holder's appointment. Wrongdoing before one enters office can demonstrate serious untrustworthiness just as can wrongdoing while in office, and the ultimate touchstone in impeachment is whether the people can trust the office holder.

It may be objected that if there is no absolute temporal limitation on the wrongdoing that can support impeachment, the House and Senate can ransack an officer's past, fixing on long-ago and now irrelevant actions in order to remove someone whom they do not like. But if the past conduct is indeed irrelevant to current fitness, then the two houses would be wrong to rely on it, if I am correct that the Constitution does require that impeachment and conviction be based on wrongdoing that renders the officer unfit. And if the two houses were intent on removing an officer in the face of all constitutional difficulties, they could easily enough decide that some action the officer committed while in office was a high crime or misdemeanor.

So far I have discussed the Constitution's provisions specifically regarding impeachment. Under Article III, section 1, of the Constitution, Judge Porteous was appointed to serve "during good Behaviour." One might infer that a judge may be removed through impeachment only for bad behavior that occurs during his term of office. The reasoning would be that the judge has been appointed to hold office until he behaves badly, so that bad behavior after the term begins is a necessary predicate for removal. Senator John D. Works of California gave this as a reason, in the impeachment trial of Judge Robert W. Archbald in 1913, for voting not to convict on the articles of impeachment that related to conduct before Judge Archbald was appointed to the office he held at the time of impeachment. S. Doc. No. 62-1140, v. II, at 1635-1636 (1913). (Judge Archbald was convicted on other articles and removed from office.) But the President is to hold his office "during the Term of four Years," U.S. Const., Art. II, sec. 1, and similar reasoning would lead to the conclusion that the President therefore may not be removed until four years are up, which would mean that a President could not be removed by impeachment at all. Yet Article II's list of impeachable officers begins with the President, id., sec. 4. Impeachment thus must be a particular exception to the general rule that the President serves for four years. In similar fashion, if there is a conflict between the term set out in Article III and the provision for removal through impeachment, the latter prevails.

As just indicated, some Senators were unwilling to vote to convict Judge Archbald on the articles related to conduct before he was appointed Circuit Judge, the office he held at the time of his impeachment. Those votes are part of the practice of the Senate, and hence must be weighed in assessing the bearing of precedent on this issue. So must the willingness of the House of Representatives to impeach Judge Archbald on those grounds. In weighing the Senators' statements, it important to bear in mind that they were not actually confronted with a situation in which a sitting judge had engaged in otherwise-impeachable conduct during a prior judgeship and no other impeachable misconduct could be proved. Indeed, Senator Borah made this point, explaining that he voted not to convict on counts based on prior behavior because of his doubts about the constitutional question and the fact that it was unnecessary to resolve that issue, "the object of the impeachment being fully accomplished." Id. at 1634-1635. What he and other Senators would have done had they been forced to make such a choice we do not know.

I have not examined in detail the facts on which the House of Representatives based its decision to impeach Judge Porteous, and so will comment only generally on the application of the foregoing principles to those facts. It does seem to me that the House and Senate reasonably could conclude that misconduct in a prior judicial office of the kind that would support impeachment and removal if engaged in during the officer's current judicial office is both sufficiently culpable and sufficiently indicative of unfitness to serve to lead to impeachment and removal now. The connection between the past misconduct and fitness for the current office is clear enough. So is the connection between an office and culpably false statements made in the process of obtaining that office. Whether the House's allegations are true, and whether if true they describe high crimes or misdemeanors that render Judge Porteous unfit to serve on the federal bench, is for the Senate to decide. In my view, the fact that the alleged conduct took place before Judge Porteous was appointed to his current position does not remove it from the category of high crimes and misdemeanors that can be the subject of impeachment.

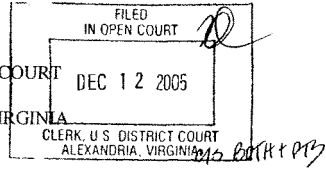

These views are my own. They are presented as a public service, not on behalf of any client or of my employer, the University of Virginia. If there is anything more I can do to be of assistance, please let me know.

Sincerely,

John C. Harrison

Chief Justice shall designate and appoint any circuit judge of the circuit to hold said district court.

Thus it appears that Judge Archbald now holds a civil office, within the meaning of the Constitution, of the same judicial nature as the office held by him at the time of the commission of the offenses charged in the said articles, and that under the existing laws he may be called upon at any time to perform precisely the same functions that he performed as a United States district judge.

In State v. Hill (37 Neb. 80) the Legislature of Nebraska had impeached certain ex-officers of the State for offenses alleged to have been committed during their respective terms of office. The Supreme Court of Nebraska held that inasmuch as they had ceased to be civil officers of the State they were not subject to impeachment. In the course of the decision the court said (pp. 88-89) :

Judge Barnard was impeached in the State of New York during his second term for acts committed in his previous term of office. His plea that he was not liable to impeachment for offenses occurring in the first term was overruled. Precisely the same question was raised in the impeachment proceedings against Judge Archbald. The court in State v. Hill said: "The court is satisfied in each of which the ruling was the same as in the Barnard case. The reason for overruling the plea to the jurisdiction in the three cases just mentioned. Each respondent was a civil officer at the time he was impeached and had been so during the entire term of his office. The offenses charged were material. The object of impeachment is to remove a corrupt or unworthy officer. If his term has expired and he is no longer in office, that object is attained and the reason for his impeachment no longer exists. But if the offender is still an officer, he is still subject to impeachment, although the acts charged were committed in his previous term of the same office."

In the cases discussed there was a constructive breach in the tenure of the offices held by the defendants between the time of the commission of the offenses charged and the adoption of the articles of impeachment. Even though the offices held by the defendants at the time of their impeachment had not been the same offices which they held at the time of the commission of the alleged offenses, it might well have been decided, on principle, that impeachment would lie if in fact the prescribed functions of such offices were of the same general nature and susceptible to the same malversations and abuse.

It is indeed anomalous if this Congress is powerless to remove a corrupt or unfit Federal judge from office because his corruption or misdemeanor, however vicious or reprehensible, may have occurred during his tenure in some other judicial office under the Government of the United States prior to his appointment to the particular office from which he is sought to be ousted by impeachment, although he may have held a Federal judgeship continuously from the time of the commission of his offenses. Surely the House of Representatives will not recognize nor the Senate apply such a narrow and technical construction of the constitutional provisions relating to impeachments.

CONCLUSION.

Judges "shall hold their offices during good behavior." Thus says the Constitution. The framers of that instrument were desirous of having "an independent and incorruptible judiciary, but they never intended to provide that any judge should hold his office upon non-

IMPEACHMENT OF JUDGE ROBERT W. ARCHBALD.*

In 1862 West H. Humphreys, United States district judge for the district of Tennessee, was impeached on several specifications, one of which was based on his action in making a speech at a public meeting, while off the bench, inciting revolt and rebellion against the Constitution and Government of the United States. The evidence clearly showed that he was in no wise acting in a judicial capacity, yet he was convicted on this charge.

A number of the impeachments of judges of the several States of the Union have been predicated on various acts of debauchery entirely separate from the performance of their official duties.

Any conduct on the part of a judge which reflects on his integrity as a man or his fitness to perform the judicial functions should be sufficient to sustain his impeachment. It would be both absurd and monstrous to hold that an impeachable offense must needs be committed in an official capacity. If such an atrocious doctrine should receive the sanction of the congressional authority, there is no limit to the variety and the viciousness of the offenses which a Federal judge might commit with perfect immunity from effective impeachment.

IMPEACHMENT FOR OFFENSES COMMITTED IN ANOTHER JUDICIAL OFFICE

Certain of the proposed articles of impeachment against Judge Archbald are based on offenses committed while he held the office of United States district judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania, whereas he now holds the office of circuit judge of the United States for the third judicial circuit, and is assigned to serve for a period of four years in the Commerce Court. In this respect the case here presented seems to be unique in the annals of impeachment proceedings under our Constitution.

By virtue of the provisions of section 609 of the Revised Statutes, which were then in force, Judge Archbald, while holding the office of United States district judge, was duly clothed with authority to sit or preside in the United States circuit court, and he was actually presiding over such circuit court at Scranton, Pa., during the time that some or all of the offenses charged in these articles were committed. Since his elevation to a circuit judgeship the United States circuit court has been abolished by the act of March 3, 1871 (16 Stat., 1837), entitled "An act to revise and amend the several acts relating to the judiciary," but the courts have continued to exercise the jurisdiction of district and circuit judges relative to the interchangeability of district and circuit judges remain substantially the same. Section 18 of this act provides that—

Whereas, in the judgment of the senior circuit judge of the circuit in which the district lies, or of the circuit judge assigned to such circuit, or of the Chief Justice, the public interest shall require, the said judge or associate judge or

The conduct of this judge has been exceedingly reprehensible and in marked contrast with the high sense of judicial ethics and probity that generally characterizes the Federal judiciary. Be it said to the credit of the wisdom of our fathers and in behalf of our American institutions that the judges have, as a rule, deported themselves in such manner as to merit and keep the confidence of the people. The public respect for the judicial branch of our Government has almost everywhere been deepened, and let us hope that this high regard for the judicial branch of our Government may be maintained for the perpetuation of our government of law.

A judge should be the personification of integrity, of honor, and of uprightness in his daily work and conversation. He should hold his exalted office and the administration of justice above the sordid desire to accumulate wealth by trading or trafficking with actual or probable litigants in his court. He should be free and unaffected by any bias born of avarice and unhampered by pecuniary or other improper obligations.

Your committee is of opinion that Judge Archibald is one of most responsible judges in the State. He has presided his high office for personal profit. He has attempted by various transactions to commercialize his position as judge. He has shown an overwhelming desire to make gainful bargains with parties having cases before him and is not likely to have cases before him. To accomplish this purpose he has not hesitated to use his official power and influence. He has degraded his high office and has destroyed the confidence of the public in his judicial integrity. He has forfeited the condition upon which he holds his commission and should be removed from office by impeachment.

Your committee reports herewith the accompanying resolution and articles of impeachment against Judge Robert W. Archbald, and recommends that they be adopted by the House and that they be presented to the Senate with a demand for the conviction and removal from office of said Robert W. Archbald. United States circuit judge designated as a member of the Commerce Court.

Rescinded. That Robert W. Archibald, additional circuit judge of the United States from the third judicial, appointed pursuant to the act of June 18, 1870 (U.S. Stat. L. vol. 36, 540), and having duly qualified and having been duly sworn, and that he was duly seated on the 31st day of January, 1871, to serve for four years in the Commission on the Commerce, Manufactures, Fisheries, and Navigation and midseamen; and that the evidence heretofore taken by the Commission on the Judiciary under House resolution 524 contains 13 articles of impeachment against the Honorable Robert W. Archibald, and that said articles be, and they are hereby, adopted by the Senate; and that the same shall be read to the same place exhibited to the Senate in the following words and figures, to wit:

That during the summer and fall of the year 1909 there was pending in the United States district court for the middle district of Pennsylvania, in the city of Scranton, over which court the said Robert W. Archbold was then presiding as the duly appointed judge thereof, a civil action wherein the said Marion Coal Co. was defendant, which action involved a large sum of money, and in which case the said Robert W. Archbold had been joined as plaintiff by the said Christopher G. Boland and one William P. Boland, all of which were well known to said Robert W. Archbold; and while said note was so pending the said Robert W. Archbold drew a note for $500, payable to himself, and which note was signed by one John Henry Jones and endorsed by the said Robert W. Archbold, and which note he delivered to the said Christopher G. Boland and the said William P. Boland, who thereupon cashed the same at the bank where they were respectively employed, and the said Robert W. Archbold wrongfully agreed and consented that the said Robert W. Archbold or one of them, for the purpose of having the said note discounted, corruptly intending that his name on said note would coerce and induce the bank to discount the same because of the said Robert W. Archbold's position as judge, and because the said Bolands were at that time litigants in his said court.

Therefore the said Robert W. Archbold was and is guilty of gross misconduct in office as Judge and was and is guilty of a misdemeanor in his said office as Judge.

Archibald, and which said note and mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the said John Henry Jones, which said note the said Robert W. Archibald endorsed for the purpose of securing the sum of $500, and the said Robert W. Archibald, well knowing that his indorsement would not secure money to the said John Henry Jones, did cause the said note to be paid to the said John Henry Jones, and the said Robert W. Archibald, well knowing that the said John Henry Jones was to present said note for discount at his law office, to one C. H. Von Storch, attorney at law and practitioner in said district court, did cause the said note to be presented by said John Henry Jones to the said C. H. Von Storch, at a short time prior thereto, was a party defendant in a suit in the said district court presided over by said Robert W. Archibald, and the said Robert W. Archibald, well knowing that the said note was to be presented to the said C. H. Von Storch, and when the said note was presented to the said C. H. Von Storch for discount, as aforesaid, the said Robert W. Archibald wrongfully and improperly used his influence as such judge to induce the said Von Storch to discount said note, and the said Robert W. Archibald, well knowing that the said note was to be presented to the said C. H. Von Storch, and the said note was then and there discounted by the said C. H. Von Storch, and the said money was then and there paid to the said John Henry Jones, and the said money was then and there so used by the said John Henry Jones, as aforesaid, to the said Robert W. Archibald, and owing Archibald, as a reward for his services rendered by him to the said Henry W. Cannon and so unlawfully and wrongfully received by the said Robert W. Archibald, judge as aforesaid, was for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a pleasure trip of the said Robert W. Akerman would fix the allowance it would relieve the writer, Judge Ritter, from any embarrassment if thereafter any question should arise as to his, Judge Ritter's, favoring said Rankin with an exorbitant fee.

Thereafterward, notwithstanding the said Judge Akerman, in compliance with Judge Ritter's request, allowed the said Rankin a fee of $15,000 for his services in said case, from which sum the said $2,500 theretofore allowed the said Rankin by Judge Ritter as an advance on his fee was deducted, the said Judge Ritter, well knowing that at his request compensation had been fixed by Judge Akerman for the said Rankin's services in said case, and notwithstanding the restraint of propriety expressed in his said letter to Judge Akerman, and ignoring the danger of embarrassment mentioned in said letter, did fix an additional and exorbitant fee for the said Rankin in said case. On or about December 24, 1930, when the final decree in said case "agreed to" by the said Judge Ritter allowed the said Rankin, additional to the said allowance of $15,000 theretofore allowed by Judge Akerman, a fee of $75,000 for his services in said case, and the said Rankin, on December 24, 1930, the receiver in said case paid the said Rankin, as part of his said additional fee, the sum of $25,000, and the said Rankin on the same day privately paid and delivered to the said Judge Ritter the sum of $2,000 in cash; $2,000 of said $2,500 was deposited in bank by Judge Ritter on, to wit, December 29, 1930, the remaining $500 being kept by Judge Ritter and not deposited in bank until, to wit, July 10, 1931. Between the time of such initial payment on said additional fee and April 6, 1931, the said receiver paid said Rankin thereon $5,000. On or about April 6, 1931, the said Rankin received the balance of the said additional fee allowed him by Judge Ritter, said balance amounting to $45,000. Shortly thereafter, on or about April 14, 1931, the said Rankin paid and delivered to the said Judge Ritter, privately, in cash, an additional sum of $2,000. The said Judge Halsted L. Ritter corruptly and fraudulently received for his own use and benefit from the said A. L. Rankin the aforesaid sums of money, amounting to $45,000.

Wherefore, the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of misbehavior and was and is guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor.

ARTICLE II

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, while holding the office of United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, did, in the exercise of his office, commit a high crime and misdemeanor in office, to wit, as follows:

On the 15th day of February 1929 the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been appointed as United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was duly qualified and commissioned to serve as such during good behavior in office. Immediately prior thereto and for several years the said Halsted L. Ritter had practiced law in said district in partnership with one A. L. Rankin, which partnership was

IMPEACHMENT OF JUDGE HALSTED L. RITTER

[H. Res. 422, 74th Cong. 2d sess.]

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

March 2, 1936.

Resolved, That Halsted L. Ritter, who is a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, in that he committed the crime and misdemeanors, and that the evidence heretofore taken by the subcommittees of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives under H. Res. 163 of the Seventy-third Congress sustains articles of impeachment, which are hereinafter set out; and that the said articles be, and they are hereby, adopted by the House of Representatives; and that the same shall be exhibited to the Senate in the following words and figures, to wit:

Articles of impeachment of the House of Representatives of the United States of America in the name of themselves and of all of the people of the United States of America against Halsted L. Ritter, who was appointed, duly qualified, and commissioned to serve, during good behavior in office, as United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, on February 15, 1929.

ARTICLE I

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and while acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of misbehavior and of a high crime and misdemeanor in office in manner and form as follows, to wit: On or about October 11, 1929, A. L. Rankin (who had been a law partner of said judge immediately before said judge's appointment as judge), as solicitor for the plaintiff, filed in the court of the said Judge Ritter a certain foreclosure suit and receivership proceeding, the same being styled "Bert E. Holland and others against Whitehall Building and Operating Company and others" (Number 6713-En). On or about May 15, 1930, the said Judge Ritter allowed the said Rankin an allowance of $2,500 for his services in said case. On or about July 2, 1930, the said Judge Ritter by letter requested another judge of the United States district court for the southern district of Florida, to wit, Honorable Alexander Akerman, to fix and determine the total allowance for the said Rankin for his services in said case for the reason as stated by Judge Ritter in said letter, that the said Rankin had formerly been the law partner of the said Judge Ritter, and he did not feel that he should pass upon the total allowance made said Rankin in that case and that if Judge disolved upon the appointment of said Ritter as said United States district judge.

On the 18th day of July 1928 one Walter S. Richardson was elected trustee in bankruptcy of the Whitehall Building and Operating Company, which company had been adjudicated in said district as a bankruptcy, and as such trustee took charge of the assets of said Whitehall Building and Operating Company, which consisted of a hotel property located in Palm Beach, in said district. That the said Richardson as such trustee retained said hotel property from the time of his said appointment to the 30th day of January 1929, under the foreclosure of a third mortgage thereon. On the 1st of November and the 13th of December 1929, the said Judge Ritter made orders in said bankruptcy proceedings allowing the said Walter S. Richardson as trustee the sum of $16,500 as compensation for his services as trustee. That before the discharge of said Walter S. Richardson as such trustee, said Richardson, together with said A. L. Rankin, one Ernest Metcalf, one Martin Sweeney, and the said Hasted L. Ritter, entered into an arrangement to secure permission of the holder or holders of at least $50,000 of first mortgage bonds on said hotel property for the purpose of filing a bill to foreclose the first mortgage on said premises in the court of said Hasted L. Ritter, by which means the said Richardson, Rankin, Metcalf, Sweeney, and Ritter were to continue said property in litigation before said Ritter. On the 30th day of August 1929, the said Walter S. Richardson, in furtherance of said arrangement and understanding, wrote a letter to the said Martin Sweeney, in New York, suggesting the desirability of contacting as many first-mortgage bondholders as possible in order that their cooperation might be secured, directing special attention to Mr. Bert E. Holland, an attorney, whose address was in the Tremont Building in Boston, and who, as cotrustee, was the holder of $50,000 of first-mortgage bonds, the amount of bonds required to institute the contemplated proceedings in Judge Ritter's court.

On October 3, 1929, the said Bert E. Holland, being solicited by the said Sweeney, requested the said Rankin and Metcalf to prepare a complaint to file in said Judge Ritter's court for foreclosures of said first mortgage and the appointment of a receiver. At this time Judge Ritter was holding court in Brooklyn, New York, and the said Rankin and Richardson went from West Palm Beach, Florida, to Brooklyn, New York, and called upon said Judge Ritter a short time previous to filing the bill for foreclosure and appointment of a receiver of said hotel property.

On October 10, 1929, and before the filing of said bill for foreclosure and receiver, the said Holland withdrew his authority to said Rankin and Metcalf to file said bill and notified the said Rankin not to file the said bill. Notwithstanding the said instructions to said Rankin not to file said bill, said Rankin, on the 11th day of October 1929, filed said bill with the clerk of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida but with the specific request to said clerk to lock up the said bill as soon as it was filed and hold until Judge Ritter's return so that there would be no newspaper publicity before the matter was heard by Judge Ritter for the public benefit a receiver, which request on the part of the said Rankin was complied with by the said clerk.

On October 16, 1929, the said Holland telegraphed to the said Rankin, referring to his previous wire requesting him to refrain from filing the bill and insisting that the matter remain in its then status until further instruction was given; and on October 17, 1929, the said Rankin wired to Holland that he would not make an application on his behalf for the appointment of a receiver. On October 28, 1929, a hearing on the complaint and petition for receivership was held before Judge Ritter at Miami, at which hearing the said Rankin and Bert E. Holland appeared in person before said Judge Ritter, and advised the judge that he wished to withdraw the suit and asked for dismissal of the bill of complaint on the ground that the bill was filed without the said authority.

But the said Judge Ritter, fully advised of the facts and circumstances herebefore recited, wrongfully and oppressively exercised the powers of his office to carry into execution such plan and agreement thereof arrived at, and refused to grant the request of the said Holland and the said Bert E. Holland to discontinue the suit. The said Richardson and Rankin, together with the said Judge Ritter, the said Richard and Rankin, and the said Metcalf, together with the said receiver of the said hotel property notwithstanding that objection was made to Judge Ritter that said Richardson had been active in fomenting this litigation and was not a proper person to act as receiver.

On October 15, 1929, said Rankin made oath to each of the bills for intervenors which were filed the next day.

On October 16, 1929, bills for intervention in said foreclosure suit were filed by said Rankin and Metcalf in the names of holders of approximately $5,000 of said first-mortgage bonds, which intervenors did not possess the said requisite $50,000 in bonds required by said first mortgage to bring foreclosure proceedings on the part of the bondholders.

The said Rankin and Metcalf appeared as attorneys for complainants and intervenors, and in response to a suggestion of the said Judge Ritter, the said Metcalf withdrew as attorney for complainants and intervenors and said Judge Ritter thereupon appointed said Metcalf as attorney for the said Richardson, the receiver.

And in the further carrying out of said arrangement and understanding, the said Richardson employed the said Martin Sweeney and one Benis, together with Ed Sweeney, as managers of said property, for which they were paid the sum of $60,000 for the management of said hotel for the two seasons the property remained in the custody of said Richardson as receiver.

On or about the 15th day of May 1930 the said Judge Ritter allowed on the said Rankin an advance on his fee of $2,500 for his services in said case.

On or about July 2, 1930, the said Judge Ritter requested Judge Alexander Akerman, also a judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, to fix the total allowance for the said Rankin for his services in said case, said request and the reasons therefor being set forth in a letter by the said Judge Ritter, in words and figures as follows, to wit:

July 2, 1930.

Hon. Alexander Akerman,
United States District Judge, Tampa, Fla.

My dear Judge:

In the case of Holland et al. v. Whitehall Building & Operating Co. (No. 33,341-Eq.), pending in my division, my former law partner, Judge L. R. Rankin, of West Palm Beach, has filed a petition for an order allowing compensation for his services on behalf of the plaintiff.

I do not feel that I should discuss the circumstances upon the total allowance to be made Judge Rankin in this matter. I did issue an order, which Judge Rankin will exhibit to you, approving an advance of $2,500 on his claim, which was approved by attorneys.

You will appreciate my position in the matter, and I request you to pass upon the total allowance which should be made Judge Rankin in the premises as an accommodation to me. This will relieve me from any embarrassment hereafter if the question should arise as to my favoring Judge Rankin in this matter by an exorbitant allowance.

Appreciating very much your kindness in this matter, I am,
Yours sincerely,

Halsted L. Ritter.

In compliance with said request the said Judge Akerman allowed the said Rankin $12,500 in addition to the $2,500 theretofore allowed by Judge Ritter, making a total of $15,000 as the fee of the said Rankin in the said case.

But notwithstanding the said request on the part of said Ritter and the compliance by the said Judge Akerman and the reasons for the making of said request by said Judge Ritter of Judge Akerman, the said Judge Ritter, on the 24th day of December 1930, allowed the said Rankin an additional fee of $75,000.

And on the same date when the receiver in said case paid to the said Rankin as a part of said additional fee the sum of $25,000, said Rankin already paid and delivered to said Judge Ritter out of the said $25,000 the sum of $2,500 in cash, $2,000 of which the said Judge Ritter deposited with the said $25,000 which was put in a tin box and not deposited until the 16th day of July 1931, when it was deposited in a bank with an additional sum of $600.

On or about the 6th day of April 1931, the said Rankin received as a part of the $75,000 additional fee the sum of $45,000 and shortly thereafter, on or before the 14th day of April 1931, the said Rankin paid and delivered to said Judge Ritter, privately and in cash, out of said $45,000 the sum of $2,000.

The said Judge Halsted L. Ritter corruptly and unlawfully accepted and received for his own use and benefit from the said Rankin the aforesaid sums of $2,500 in cash and $2,000 in cash, amounting in all to $4,500.

Of the total allowance made to said A. L. Rankin in said foreclosure suit, amounting in all to $90,000, the following sums were paid out by said Rankin with the knowledge and consent of said Judge Ritter, to wit: to said Walter S. Richardson, the sum of $5,000; to said Metcalf, the sum of $10,000; to Shuttis and Bowen, also attornys for the receiver, the sum of $25,000; and to said Halsted L. Ritter, the sum of $4,500.

In addition to the said sum of $5,000 received by the said Richardson as aforesaid, said Ritter by order in said proceedings allowed said Richardson a fee of $30,000 for services as such receiver.

The said fees allowed by said Judge Ritter to A. L. Rankin (who had been a law partner of said Judge Ritter immediately before said judge's appointment as judge), as solicitor for the plaintiff in said case were excessive and unwarranted, and said judge profited personally thereby in that out of the money so allowed said solicitor he received personally privately, and in cash, $4,500 for his own use and benefit.

While the Whitehall Hotel was being operated in receivership under said proceeding pending in said court (and in which proceeding the receiver in charge of said hotel by appointment of said Judge was allowed large compensation by said judge) the said judge stayed at said hotel from time to time without cost to himself and received free rooms, free meals, and free valet service, and, with the knowledge and consent of said judge, members of his family, including his wife, his son, Thurston Ritter, his daughter, Mrs. M. R. Walker, his secretary, Mrs. Lloyd C. Hooks, and her husband, Lloyd C. Hooks, each likewise on various occasions stayed at said hotel without cost to themselves or to said judge, and received free rooms, and some or all of them received from said hotel free meals and free valet service; all of which expenses were borne by the said receivership to the loss and damage of the creditors whose interests were involved therein.

The said judge willfully and neglected to perform his duty to collect the credits of the Whitehall Hotel and Operating Company in receivership in his willful and corrupt manner; he received and disposition of its assets, to the loss and damage of the creditors of said corporation, and was a party to the waste and dissipation of such assets while under the control of his said court, and personally profited thereby, in the manner and form hereinabove specifically set out.

Wherefore, the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of misbehavior, and was and is guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor in office.

ARTICLE III

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and while acting as a United States District Judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of a high crime and misdemeanor in office in manner and form as follows to-wit:

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, while such judge, was guilty of a violation of section 238 of the Judicial Code of the United States of America (U.S.C., Annotated, title 28, sec. 373) making it unlawful for any judge appointed under the authority of the United States to exercise the profession or employment of counsel or attorney, or to be engaged in the practice of the law, in that after the employment of the law firm of Ritter and Rankin (which, at the time of the appointment of Halsted L. Ritter to be judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, was composed of Halsted L. Ritter and A. L. Rankin) in the case of Trust Company of Georgia and Robert G. Stephens, trustees, against the Franklin Court Building Company, Inc., and others, No. 1764. In the Circuit Court of the Fifth Judicial Circuit in and for the State of Florida, which had been entered in said cause, and after the fee of $4,000 decree had been agreed upon at the outset of said employment had been fully paid to the firm of Ritter and Rankin, and after Halsted L. Ritter had on, to wit, February 15, 1929, become judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, Brodek, Ritter on, to wit, March 11, 1929, wrote a letter to Charles A. Brodek, of counsel for Mulford Realty Corporation, (the client which his former law firm had been representing in said litigation), stating that there had been much extra and unanticipated work in the case, that he was then a Federal judge; that his partner, A. L. Rankin, would carry through further proceedings in the case, but that he, Judge Ritter, would be consulted about the matter until the case was all closed up; and that "this matter is one among very few which I am assuming to continue my interest in until finally closed up"; and stating specifically in said letter:

"I do not know whether any appeal will be taken in the case or not, but if so, we hope to get Mr. Howard Paschal or some other person as receiver who will be amenable to our directions, and the hotel can be operated at a profit, of course, pending the appeal. We shall demand a heavy supersedeas bond, which I doubt whether D'Esters can give."

At the time said letter was written by Judge Ritter and said $2,000 received by him, Mulford Realty Corporation held and owned large interests in Florida real estate and citrus groves, and a large amount of securities of the Olympia Improvement Corporation, which was a company organized to develop and promote Olympia, Florida, said holdings being within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States District Court, of which Judge Ritter was a judge from February 15, 1929.

Which acts of said judge were calculated to bring his office into disrepute, constitute a violation of section 293 of the Judicial Code of the United States of America (U. S. C., Annotated, title 28, sec. 373), and constitute a high crime and misdemeanor within the meaning and intent of section 4 of article II of the Constitution of the United States.

Wherefore, the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of a high misdemeanor in office.

ARTICLE IV

That the said Halsted L. Ritter, while holding the office of United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, having been nominated by the President of the United States, confirmed by the Senate of the United States, duly qualified and commissioned, and while acting as a United States district judge for the southern district of Florida, was and is guilty of misbehavior and of high crimes and misdemeanors in office in manner and form as follows, to wit:

The said Judge Ritter by his actions and conduct, as an individual and as such judge, has brought his court into scandal and disrepute, to the prejudice of said court and public confidence in the administration of justice in this said State, and to the prejudice of public respect for and confidence in the said Federal Judiciary.

1. In fact in the Florida Power Company and others, numbered 1183-Light Company against City of Miami and others, numbered 1183-M-Eq., which was a case wherein said judge had granted the enforcement of an ordinance of the city of Miami, which ordinance prescribed a reduction in the rates for electric current being charged in said city, said judge improperly appointed one Cary T. Hutchinson, who had long been associated with and employed by power and utility interests, special master in chancery in said suit, and refused to revoke his order so appointing said Hutchinson. Thereafter, when criticism of such action had become current in the city of Miami, and within two weeks after a resolution (H. Res. 183, Seventy-third Congress) had been agreed to in the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, authorizing and directing the Judiciary Committee thereof to investigate the official conduct of said judge and to make a report concerning said conduct to said House of Representatives, an arrangement was entered into with the city commissioners of the city of Miami or with the city attorney of said city by which the said city commissioners were to pass a resolution expressing faith and confidence in the integrity of said judge, and the said judge, seeing himself thus protected, thereupon, after the manner was carried out by the city thereof, said judge, after the passage of such resolution, recused himself from sitting as judge in said power suit, thereby bartering his judicial authority in said case for a vote of confidence. Nevertheless, the succeeding judge allowed said Hutchinson as special master in chancery in said case a fee of $5,000, although he performed little, if any, service as such, and in the order making such allowance recited: "And it appearing to the court that a minimum fee of $5,000 was approved by the court for the said Cary T. Hutchinson, special master in this cause."

2. In that in the Trust Company of Florida cases (Illick against Trust Company of Florida and others, numbered 1043-M-Eq., and Edmunds Committee and others against Marion Mortgage Company and others numbered 1124-M-Eq.) after the State banking department of Florida, through its comptroller, Honorable Ernest Amos, had closed the doors of the Trust Company of Florida and appointed J. H. Thierrell liquidator for said Trust Company, and had intervened in the said Illick case, said Judge Ritter, wrongfully and erroneously arrogating the right of said State authority to administer the affairs of the said company, and appointing one John Starnes and Clark D. Stearns as receivers of said company, and the Trust Company, on appeal, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit reversed the said order or decree of Judge Ritter, and ordered the said property surrendered to the State liquidator. Thereafter, on, to wit, September 12, 1932 there were filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida the Edmunds Committee case, supra. Marion Mortgage Company was a subsidiary of the Trust Company of Florida. Judge Ritter being absent from his district at the time of the filing of said case, an application for the appointment of receivers therein was presented to another judge of said district, namely, Honorable Alexander Akerman. Judge Ritter, however, prior to the appointment of such receivers, telegraphed Judge Akerman, requesting him to appoint the said receivers, and said Akerman, in compliance with said request, made by Judge Akerman. Thereafter, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit reversed the order of Judge Akerman, appointing said Eaton and Stearns as receivers in said case. In November 1932 J. H. Therrell, as liquidator, filed a bill of complaint in the Circuit Court of Dade County, Florida—a court of the State of Florida—alleging that the various trust properties of the Trust Company of Florida were burdensome to the liquidator to keep, and asking that the court appoint a succeeding trustee. Upon petition for removal of said cause from said State court into the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, Judge Ritter took jurisdiction, notwithstanding the previous rulings of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals above referred to, and again appointed the said Eaton and Stearns as the receivers of the said trust properties. In December 1933 the said Therrell surrendered all of the trust properties to said Eaton and Stearns as receivers, together with all records of the Trust Company of Florida pertaining thereto. During the time said Eaton and Stearns, as such receivers, were in control of said trust properties, Judge Ritter, as such liquidator, approved all of their accounts, without notice or opportunity for objection thereto to be heard. With the knowledge of Judge Ritter, said receivers appointed the sister-in-law of Judge Ritter, namely, Mrs. G. M. Wickard, who had had no previous hotel-management experience, to be manager of the Julia Tuttle Hotel and Apartment Building, one of said trust properties. On, to wit, January 1, 1933, Honorable J. M. Lee succeeded Honorable Ernest Amos as comptroller of the State of Florida and appointed M. A. Smith liquidator in said Trust Company of Florida cases to succeed J. H. Therrell. An appeal was again taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit from the then latest order or decree of Judge Ritter, and again the order or decree of Judge Ritter appealed from was reversed by the said circuit court of appeals, which held that Judge Ritter, or the court in which he presided, had been without jurisdiction in the matter of the appointment of said Eaton and Stearns as receivers. Thereafter, and with the knowledge of the decision of the said circuit court of appeals, Judge Ritter wrongfully and improperly allowed said Eaton and Stearns and their attorneys some $20,000 as fees out of said trust-estate properties, and immediately thereafter, as a condition precedent to releasing said trust properties from the control of his said receivers, he promised on counsel for the said State liquidator not to appeal from his said order, allowing the said fees to said Eaton and Stearns and their attorneys.

3. In that the said Halsted L. Ritter, while such Federal judge accepted, in addition to $4,500 from his former law partner as alleged in article I hereof, other large fees or gratuities, to wit, $7,500 from J. R. Francis, on or about April 19, 1929, J. R. Francis at this said time having large property interests within the territorial jurisdiction of the court of which Judge Ritter was a judge. On, to wit, the 4th day of April 1929 the said Judge Ritter accepted the sum of $2,000 from said Brodek, Raphael and Eisner, representing Milford Realty Corporation, through his attorney, Charles A. Brodek, as a fee or gratuity at which time the said Milford Realty Corporation held and owned large interests in Florida real estate and citrus groves, and a large amount of securities of the Olympia and Improvement Corporation, which was a company organized to develop and promote Olympia, Florida, said holdings being within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States District Court of which Judge Ritter was a judge from February 15, 1929.

4. By his conduct as detailed in articles I and II hereof.

Wherefore, the said Judge Halsted L. Ritter was and is guilty of misbehavior, and was and is guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors in office.

JOSEPH W. BYRNS,
Speaker of House of Representatives.

Attest:

That the said Hansard J. Ritter, while court judge, was guilty of violation of section 146 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1926, making it unlawful for any person wilfully to attempt in any manner to evade or defeat the payment of the income tax by any individual, and that said Revenue Act of 1926, in that regard the year 1930, was in full force and effect at the time the said Judge Ritter was appointed to the office of judge of the said court.

That the said Hansard J. Ritter, while court judge, failed to report any part thereof in his income-tax return for the year 1930, yet failed to report any part thereof in his income-tax return for the year 1931, and paid no income tax thereon.

That the said Hansard J. Ritter, while court judge, failed to report for 1930 as two thousand five hundred dollars the said gross taxable income for 1930 was one thousand five hundred dollars.

That the said Judge Ritter by A. L. Rankin on December 24, 1930, as described in article 1.

ARTICLE VII

¹. In that in the Florida Power Company case (Florida Power and Light Co. v. City of Miami, 198 So. 2d 670), the court found no fault in the action against City of Miami and others, numbered 1192-M-En), which was a case wherein said judge had granted the complainant power company a temporary injunction restraining it from interfering with the business of the city of Miami, which ordinance prescribed punishment for interference by such company, which ordinance was subsequently affirmed by the appellate court.

"The following charges were made against the defendant city of Miami, namely: charging in said city, said judge improperly employed one Cary T. Hutchinson, who had long been associated with and employed by power and utility companies, as a confidential informant, in connection with his investigation in order to ascertain how said city might be able to retaliate to remove him from office; appointing said Hutchinson, thereafter within two weeks after the indictment became current in the city of Miami, said within two weeks after the indictment was returned, as a confidential informant, without having obtained the approval of the Board of Commissioners of the City of Miami; and directing the judicial Committee thereof to investigate the official conduct of said judge and to make a report concerning said conduct to said House of Representatives."

"The following charges were made against the defendant city commissioners of the city of Miami, to wit: that they had conspired with the defendant city commissioners were to pass a resolution expressing faith and confidence in the integrity of said judge, and the said judge recused himself as a result thereof, and said judge, after the passage of such resolution, by the parties thereto, sitting as judge in said power suit, thereby bartering his judicial authority for the sake of confidence. Nevertheless, the succeeding judge, who sat in said power suit, also sitting as judge in said power suit, likewise bartered his judicial authority for the sake of confidence. Accordingly, said Hutchinson received $35,000, although he performed little, if any, service as such, and in the order making such allowance recited: 'And it appearing to the court that a minimum master in this cause.'"

"It is respectfully recommended that the House of Representatives disapprove the action for the said Cary T. Hutchinson, special

SOUTH TRIMBLE, Clerk.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the pleasure of counsel for the respondent with reference to the amendments?

MR. HOWE. Mr. President, with reference to the amendments, we ask the honorable Senate sitting as a Court of Impeachment, to grant to us ample time within which to file our response to the amended or new articles. If I may be permitted to do so, I suggest that 48 hours will be ample time. We have no desire to take time that would interfere with the present arrangement for trial on the 6th of April.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Counsel for the respondent has indicated that 48 hours would be ample time. Is there objection to that?

MR. MANAGER STEVENS. There is no objection on the part of the managers for the House.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the pleasure of the Court? Is there objection?

MR. ASHURST. Mr. President, am I correct in the understanding that the honorable counsel for the respondent are granted 48 hours within which to reply to all the pleadings?

MR. HOWE. Just the new articles. We are ready to file pleadings this morning directed to articles I, II, III, and the original article IV, which is now article VII.

MR. ASHURST. Very well, Mr. President. I am sure there will be no objection to counsel for the respondent being granted 48 hours; and now is the appropriate time for counsel for the respondent to exhibit their reply to the various articles heretofore presented.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no objection, the 48 hours requested will be allowed; and the Court will now hear counsel for the respondent.

MR. ASHURST. Would the attorney for the respondent object to taking a place on the rostrum? It would facilitate audition very much if there is no objection.

MR. HOWE. There is no objection, sir.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no objection.

JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE USE OF HIS PREVIOUSLY IMMUNIZED TESTIMONY

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, by and through counsel, and files this Motion to Exclude the Use of His Previously Immunized Testimony.

INTRODUCTION

This is the first time in United States history that an official has been impeached after testifying under a grant of immunity. Judge Porteous testified under a grant of statutory immunity before the Judicial Conference of the Fifth Circuit about matters related to this impeachment proceeding. With the grant of immunity, Judge Porteous was assured that none of his testimony could be used against him in satisfaction of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. Despite this guarantee, the House now proposes to use his own testimony against Judge Porteous as a basis for his removal from office. This matter presents a number of precedents that could have a significant and deleterious impact on how Congress deals with appointed civil authorities in the future.¹

¹ This includes the effort to remove a federal judge on the basis of (1) an alleged denial of honest services (despite a recent Supreme Court decision rejecting such a theory) in Article I; (2) purely pre-federal conduct in Article II; and (3) the failure of a judicial nominee to disclose

Now, the House would add a new and disturbing element to impeachment where the accused is compelled to testify and then must face that immunized testimony as the basis for removal. The House's proposed use of this immunized testimony is contrary to all basic concepts of due process, degrades the constitutional process and tarnishes the image of the United States Senate. It premises a constitutional process of removal on the use of testimony barred under the Fifth Amendment.

BACKGROUND

After eight years of investigations touching upon Judge Porteous, the Department of Justice ("DOJ") determined that it would not bring any charges against him. Instead, unable to make out a criminal case, the DOJ filed a complaint with the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit. The Fifth Circuit Judicial Council (the "Judicial Council") convened a Special Investigatory Committee to review the DOJ's allegations against Judge Porteous. That Council subsequently appointed a three-judge panel to hold a hearing on Monday, October 29, 2007, chaired by Chief Judge Edith Jones. The hearing was held over the strenuous objections of Judge Porteous (representing himself at the time) who was barred from the very rights he and every other judge grant to any criminal defendant in a Federal court.

Judge Porteous was justifiably concerned about the manner in which the Judicial Council Panel compelled his testimony with a grant of immunity under 18 U.S.C. §§ 6002 and 6003. See Ex. 1 at 34 (Transcript of Judge Porteous's testimony before the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council information as part of subjective questions at confirmation on what he would consider to be embarrassing or detrimental to his confirmation. In addition, this matter raises a serious due process question if the Senate declines Judge Porteous's request for a trial of sufficient length to present fully relevant testimony, as was done in the case of past impeached judges like Alcee Hastings. In contrast, Judge Porteous has been given only a five-day evidentiary hearing, despite the fact that (unlike judges like Hastings) there is no existing court record because Judge Porteous has never been charged with or tried for any crime.

Panel). Remarkably, Chief Judge Jones compelled Judge Porteous to testify before he had received the actual order granting him immunity and before he could even review the extent of the immunity granted. At the hearing, Ron Woods, appointed as counsel for the Judicial Council, admitted to Judge Jones that Judge Porteous did not receive the order before the hearing—despite the fact that the order had been signed three weeks before the hearing. Id. at 33; see also Ex. 2 (October 5, 2007 Order granting Judge Porteous statutory immunity). Judge Porteous asked for a continuance so that he could review the order, correctly noting that witnesses are generally allowed to see the immunity order before testifying. See Ex. 1 at 34. Judge Jones, however, responded that “immunity is better than non immunity, sir. Continuance is denied. You may take the stand.” Id. Indeed, the manner of compelling the testimony was so unclear and unusual that another member of the panel, Judge Benavides, felt the need to clarify that Judge Porteous was granted immunity and would not be testifying but for that grant of immunity. See id. at 46. In response, Larry Finder, co-counsel for the Judicial Council, agreed and made clear that the grant of statutory immunity is co-extensive with Judge Porteous’s Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. Id. at 47.

Notably, after hearing Judge Porteous’s testimony and completing its investigation, the Judicial Council did not make a factual finding that Judge Porteous actually committed the acts alleged by the DOJ in its complaint, and it certainly made no factual finding that he committed either treason, bribery, or other high crimes or misdemeanors. See Ex. 3 at 4 (Opinion of Judge Dennis, dissenting from Special Investigatory Committee opinion recommending impeachment).

Had this been a court proceeding and had Judge Porteous been found guilty, the manner in which he was compelled to testify would have been the obvious basis for an appeal. He was denied the opportunity to review and to appeal the order. Now, the House seeks to use that very same testimony to convict him, in a complete denial of the procedural and substantive protections afforded by the Fifth Amendment.

ARGUMENT

In Kastigar v. United States, 406 U.S. 441 (1972), the Supreme Court held that statutory immunity “from use and derivative use is coextensive with the scope of the privilege against self-incrimination.” Id. at 453. That coextensive right, which precludes later use of previously immunized testimony, applies in this impeachment trial.

Judge Porteous recognizes that an impeachment trial is not a purely criminal proceeding, although it shares certain aspects. Historically – but not here – impeachments of judges have occurred after and as the result of criminal proceedings, in which the accused enjoys fundamental constitutional rights, including the right not to testify against himself. Since the 1880s, the Supreme Court has consistently held that the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination applies in certain types of civil proceedings that share elements of criminal proceedings. The Supreme Court has labeled such proceedings “criminal in nature” and has identified them as cases where the defendant stands to lose a property interest based on alleged misconduct. Thus, in Lees v. United States, 150 U.S. 476 (1893), the defendants faced $1,000 in civil penalties for violating an act of Congress that prohibited “importation and migration of foreigners and aliens” as contract laborers. Id. at 478. The Supreme Court stated that “[t]his, though an action civil in form, is unquestionably criminal in nature, and in such a case a defendant cannot be compelled to be a witness against himself.” Id. at 480.

The Court in Lees noted that it had previously decided this principle in Boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 616 (1886), overruled on other grounds, 387 U.S. 294 (1967). See Lees, 150 U.S. at 480-81. In Boyd, the Court held that “proceedings instituted for the purpose of declaring the forfeiture of a man's property by reason of offenses committed by him, though they may be civil in form, are in their nature criminal." Boyd, 116 U.S. at 634. The Boyd Court also held that since the proceeding was of a criminal nature, the proceeding implicated the defendants' rights under both the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Id. at 633.

Almost a century after first holding that the Fifth Amendment applies in some civil proceedings, the Supreme Court reaffirmed this principle, quoting Boyd and holding that "the Fifth Amendment applies with equal force" in cases where "money liability is predicated upon a finding of the owner's wrongful conduct[.]" United States v. United States Coin & Currency, 401 U.S. 715, 718 (1971). Finally, in 1980, the Supreme Court once again recognized that the Fifth Amendment is implicated in those types of civil cases where monetary penalties are involved. See United States v. Ward, 448 U.S. 242, 253 (1980) (stating that "[t]he question before us, then, is whether the penalty imposed in this case . . . is nevertheless so far criminal in its nature as to trigger the Self-Incrimination Clause of the Fifth Amendment") (internal quotation omitted).

Impeachment trials before the United States Senate are precisely analogous to those civil proceedings in which the Supreme Court has held that the Fifth Amendment applies. Indeed, impeachments – and particularly this impeachment – exemplify the Supreme Court's definition of just such a case. Judge Porteous is accused of misconduct, and if the Senate convicts, he will lose his most important property interests: his life tenured judgeship, salary and pension.² If convicted, he will also face the stigma of history as one of a handful of federal judges impeached by the House and convicted by the Senate. This is a clear case in which “proceedings instituted for the purpose of declaring the forfeiture of a man’s property by reason of offenses committed by him, though they may be civil in form, are in their nature criminal.” Boyd, 116 U.S. at 634.

² The Supreme Court has previously held that a tenured professorship can be considered a property interest when determining whether a state college violated a professor's procedural due process right by depriving him of his position without a hearing. See Perry v. Sindermann, 408 U.S. 593, 603 (1972).

Moreover, the text of the Constitution itself makes many explicit and implicit references to the criminal nature of an impeachment proceeding. Most obviously, the exclusive grounds for impeachment are either crimes or framed in criminal terminology: “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4. Similarly, Article III expressly excepts “cases of impeachment” from the requirement that the “Trial of all crimes . . . shall be by Jury,” an exception which would be unnecessary surplusage³ if impeachments were not otherwise within the scope of “Trial[s] of all Crimes.” U.S. CONST. art. III, § 2, cl. 4. Finally, the Senate impeachment clause of Art. I, § 3 frames impeachments as trials to occur before the Senate, which can result in a “conviction.” Indeed, the House’s own expert witness, Professor Akhil Amar, stated that “[i]mpeachment is a quasi-criminal affair, in which the Senate, sitting as a court, is asked to convict the defendant of high criminality or gross misbehavior[.]” Akhil R. Amar, A Symposium on the Impeachment of William Jefferson Clinton: Reflections on the Process, the Results, and the Future, 28 Hofstra L. Rev. 291, 307 (1999).

The test is not whether impeachment proceedings are criminal cases; they are not. That, however, is not the question under Kastigar. Rather, the question is whether impeachments are included in that class of proceedings sufficiently “criminal in nature” that the Fifth Amendment’s protections apply. In light of the relevant Supreme Court precedent, the constitutional text, and the scholarship of the House’s own expert witness, the answer to that question is an obvious yes.

³ Supreme Court precedent establishes that no term in the constitution “be treated as mere surplusage, for ‘[i]t cannot be presumed that any clause in the constitution is intended to be without effect.’” District of Columbia v. Heller, 128 S. Ct. 2783, 2826 (2008) (quoting Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803)).

Despite this clear authority demonstrating that the Fifth Amendment applies in Senate impeachment trials, the House of Representatives has stated that there is no credible basis to argue that “the Senate should not consider Judge Porteous’s . . . immunized Fifth Circuit testimony.” See 111 Cong. Rec. S2358 (Apr. 15, 2010); see also Ex. 4 (April 21, 2010 Letter from Alan Baron correcting the Senate Record). In making that argument, the House disregards Supreme Court case law, relevant constitutional text, and the scholarly analysis by its own expert, Professor Amar. Incredibly, the House argues that the concern about self-incrimination should not apply to Judge Porteous, and his testimony may be used against him, because he is a “highly educated Federal judge.” Id. This argument suggests that a person’s education, intellect, achievement and long service should be held against him and somehow diminish his Fifth Amendment rights. It suggests a class-based sliding scale approach to the granting of constitutional rights that is abhorrent in this nation and defies logic and legal principles. The Senate’s effort over the past 200-plus years to ensure that constitutional rights are shared equally by the least privileged amongst us should not be turned on its head to deprive the better educated and the long-serving of those same rights.

The House’s proposal to use immunized testimony from the Fifth Circuit in this impeachment trial would disregard the Judicial Branch’s grant of immunity to Judge Porteous. Congress frequently compels testimony through statutory immunity granted pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 6005. It rightly expects its promises barring the use of the testimony in a judicial proceeding to be honored. In this case, the House seeks to disregard such promises and build a case around just such compelled testimony.

An Impeachment Trial is meant to be a symbol of the careful balancing of interests between the Branches. The removal of a federal judge is done only after the satisfaction of exacting procedural and substantive standards laid down by the Framers. The trial itself is a symbol of fairness and circumspection by a body described by the late Sen. Robert C. Byrd as “the anchor of the Republic, the morning and evening star in the American constitutional constellation.” 145 Cong. Rec. S3460-02, at 3464 (daily ed. March 3, 1995) (Statement of Sen. Robert C. Byrd). This proposed use of immunized testimony creates a symbol of a different kind – a dark cloud of abridged rights and expedited process. It does not do justice to the Constitution or this institution.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate exclude from evidence all of Judge Porteous’s immunized testimony before the Fifth Circuit Judicial Conference Special Investigatory Committee and exclude any testimony, documents, or other evidence derived from the immunized testimony.

Respectfully submitted,

Exhibit 1

1 Justice had other documents under that grand jury subpoena log,
2 which weren't really relevant to this complaint.

3 JUDGE PORTEOUS: See, I have no way to know that
4 because I've never seen them.

10:35 5 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: As you know, Judge Porteous, the 6 grand jury investigation included a lot of people over a course
7 of years. So, we have no reason to question if the Justice
8 Department has produced those that are relevant to you.

9 JUDGE PORTEOUS: You mean people on call here for this 10:36 10 hearing?

11 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: There were people, I'm sure, who 12 are on call. There are people who pled guilty and served jail
13 time as a result of this investigation. So, I don't see why 14 those documents have anything to do with you or why they should 10:36 15 have been produced.

16 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Well, again, we're using -- I
17 understand. I'll -- okay, your Honor.

18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right, sir.

19 MR. WOODS: We would call as our next witness Judge
10:36 20 Porteous.

21 JUDGE PORTEOUS: And, Judge, on that issue, I just on 22 Friday realized I was going to be given immunity and just 23 hadn't had time to adequately contemplate the testimony. I
24 mean, I've been working on everything else.

25 I would simply ask that I be given through today

36 1 to at least get my thoughts together before I am compelled to
2 testify. Mr. Woods had that immunity notice; and I just saw it
3 today, just saw it for the first time today.

4 MR. WOODS: It was provided on Friday, your Honor.

10:36 5 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Yeah, on Friday. I understand. No.
6 The log was provided on Friday.

7 MR. WOODS: Right.

8 JUDGE PORTEOUS: The document was not provided on
9 Friday, and you know that.

10:37 10 MR. WOODS: That's correct.

11 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right, sir. We're not going
12 to go crosswise with each other. Thank you very much.

13 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I'm sorry, Judge.

14 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Mr. Finder will to respond.

10:37 15 MR. FINDER: Yes, thank you, Judge. Under the rules
16 under which we're operating, Rule 10C, Special Committee
17 Witness.

18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: You want to speak up there?

19 MR. FINDER: Yeah, I'm sorry. I'll use the podium.

10:37 20 Is this better?

21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.

22 MR. FINDER: "All persons who are believed to have
23 substantial information will be called as Special Committee
24 witnesses, including the complainant and the subject judge."

37 25 So, I think that there is no surprise here. It's

1 in the rules, which were provided a long, long time ago.

2 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I don't doubt that that's what the

3 rules say, your Honor. I'm not taking issue with that. I'm

4 taking issue with the fact that it's the first time I've been

5 given immunity, without ever seeing the document.

6 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Well, with --

7 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I'm only asking for the rest of the 8 day.

9 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: -- immunity is better than non

10 immunity, sir. Continuance is denied. You may take the stand.

11 JUDGE PORTEOUS: All right.

12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Thank you.

13 JUDGE LAKE: Raise your right hand to be sworn.

14 You do solemnly swear that the testimony you

15 shall give in this proceeding will be the truth, the whole

16 truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

17 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I do.

18 GABRIEL THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR., DULY SWORN, TESTIFIED:

19 DIRECT EXAMINATION

20 BY MR. FINDER:

21 Q. Judge Porteous, a little background information, please.

22 You were a judge in the 24th Judicial District

23 Court in the State of Louisiana from approximately 1984 to 24 October 1994. Is that correct?

25 A. That's correct.

38 1 Q. And prior to taking that judicial office, you were employed
2 as special counsel to the office of the Louisiana Attorney
3 General from approximately 1971 to approximately 1973. Is that
4 correct?

10:38 5 A. I believe that's correct.

6 Q. You were also a prosecutor and assistant district attorney
7 of Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, from approximately 1973 to
8 1975. Is that correct?

9 A. I'm sorry. Would you -- I'm sorry.

10:39 10 Q. I'm sorry. 1973 to approximately 1975?

11 A. I was what? I'm sorry.

12 Q. An assistant district attorney of Jefferson Parish?

13 A. I was an assistant DA from -- until I took the state bench.

14 Q. Okay. So, I'm incorrect, then?

10:39 15 A. I was an assistant DA from some -- some period of time,
16 probably '73 through '84.

17 Q. Okay. And you were also city attorney for Harahan,
18 Louisiana, from 1982 to 1984?

19 A. That sounds correct.

10:39 20 Q. Okay. You were nominated by the President of the United
21 States on August 25th, 1994, to become a United States district
22 judge. Is that correct?

23 A. Right.

24 Q. You were confirmed by the Senate on October 7th, 1994; and 39 25 at that time received your commission as a US district judge on

39 1 October 11th. Is that correct?
2 A. That is correct.
3 Q. And from that date to the present, you have been bound by
4 the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, correct?
10:40 5 A. Correct.
6 MR. FINDER: Your Honors, I'm going to be walking up
7 and back to use the Elmo; so, that's the reason I'm going to be
8 a little mobile here.
9 THE WITNESS: Put it right here if you want.
10:40 10 MR. FINDER: Okay. Thank you, sir.
11 BY MR. FINDER:
12 Q. Judge Porteous, I've marked for identification --
13 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Mr. Finder, you're going to have to 14 speak a little louder since you'll have your back to the 10:40 15 reporter.
16 MR. FINDER: Oh, forgive me. All right.
17 BY MR. FINDER:
18 Q. I've marked for identification purposes only as Exhibit 80,
19 a book called "Getting Started as a Federal Judge."
10:40 20 Judge Porteous, I'm going to -- this book, as 21 you'll see, bears a date of July of 1997, approximately three
22 years after you took the bench, correct?
23 A. It says that, yes.
24 Q. After you received your commission, Judge Porteous, you
25 took an oath of office, correct?

1 A. Yes.

2 Q. And that's a statutory oath, is it not?

3 A. Correct.

4 Q. I'd ask you to read along with me.

10:41 5 A. I cannot -- well, go ahead.

6 Q. Okay. Well, let's try and make it --

7 A. Just read it. I can --

8 Q. Okay. "I, your name, do solemnly swear or affirm that I

9 will administer justice without respect to persons and do equal

10:41 10 right to the poor and to the rich and that I will faithfully

11 and impartially discharge or perform all the duties incumbent

12 on me as a United States District Judge under the Constitution

13 and laws of the United States and that I will support and

14 defend the Constitution of the United States against all

10:41 15 enemies, foreign and domestic, that I will bear true faith and

16 allegiance to the same, that I take this obligation freely,

17 without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion, and that

18 I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office

19 of which I am about to enter, so help me God."

10:42 20 Sir, is that the oath that you took?

21 A. Yes, it is.

22 Q. Are you familiar with this book or an earlier edition of 23 it, sir?

24 A. I know we all have them in our chambers. I don't know that

25 I can tell you I've read every page of it.

12 1 Q. Okay. Let's go through a few provisions.
2 MR. FINDER: Can your Honors see that?
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Barely.
4 MR. FINDER: Let me --
10:42 5 JUDGE LAKE: It's all right. No, that's better.
6 MR. FINDER: It's a little temperamental.
7 THE WITNESS: Oh, now that's much better.
8 MR. FINDER:
9 BY MR. FINDER:
10:42 10 Q. Okay. Your Honor, would you agree or disagree with these 11 statements, "New judges should review the ethical guidelines
12 set forth in the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and 13 the financial disclosure requirements of the Ethics Reform Act
14 of 1989"?
10:43 15 A. It says that.
16 Q. Do you agree with that?
17 A. Yes.
18 Q. Do you agree that once judges are assigned cases they have
19 a continuing obligation to examine periodically their own
10:43 20 personal and fiduciary financial interests and those of their 21 spouses and minor children?
22 A. I agree that's quoting what's in the paragraph.
23 Q. I know it's in there, but do you agree with what it says?
24 A. Yeah.
3 25 Q. Do you agree that, as a general matter, although judges are

1 not required to sever all ties to former clients and
2 colleagues, they clearly must be vigilant if they continue such
3 relationships?
4 A. I agree with that.
10:43 5 Q. Do you agree, under Canon 3 of the code of conduct, which 6 addresses a judge's obligation to perform the duties of the 7 judicial office impartially and diligently, requires judges to 8 disqualify themselves in any proceeding in which their
9 impartiality might be reasonably questioned?
10:44 10 A. I agree with that.
11 Q. Do you agree with Canon 3C of the code of conduct, that it
12 addresses the general issue of disqualification and states that 13 judges must disqualify themselves from all cases in which their 14 impartiality might be reasonably questioned?
10:44 15 A. I agree.
16 Q. And, Judge Porteous, do you agree that all new judges
17 should be mindful that they continue to be the subject of 18 public attention in their activities after their appointment to 19 the bench, thus, they should consider carefully whether 10:44 20 participation in outside activities impinges upon their 21 performance of their judicial responsibilities; as noted in
22 commentary to Canon 2A of the Code of Conduct for US Judges,
23 that judges must accept freely and willingly restrictions on 24 their personal conduct and activities that might be viewed as
4 25 burdensome by the ordinary citizen?

44 1 A. I agree.

2 Q. Sir, I'm going to show you what's Exhibit 18, which has

3 been offered and accepted, the Code of Conduct for United

4 States Judges, which I believe you said you're familiar with,

10:45 5 correct?

6 A. Yes.

7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Speak up.

8 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry. Did I do it again?

9 BY MR. FINDER:

10:46 10 Q. The question was you are familiar with Exhibit 18, which is 11 the Code of Conduct for US Judges. Correct?

12 A. Yes, sir.

13 Q. And this code applies to district judges, correct?

14 A. Right.

10:46 15 Q. And the judicial conference has authorized the Committee on

16 the code of conduct to render advisory opinions concerning the

17 application and interpretation of the code when requested by a

18 judge to whom the code applies.

19 Have you ever asked that Committee for an

10:46 20 advisory opinion?

21 A. No.

22 Q. Are you familiar with Canon 1, your Honor, that a judge

23 should uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary?

24 A. Yes.

46 25 Q. And that an independent and honorable judiciary is 46 1 indispensable to justice in our society?

2 A. Yes.
3 Q. There's a commentary here, your Honor, "Deference to the 4 judges and rulings of courts depends upon public confidence and
10:46 5 the integrity and independence of judges."
6 Skipping a line, "Although judges should be
7 independent, they should comply with the law, as well as the 8 provisions of this code."
9 Do you have any dispute with that statement --
10:47 10 those statements?
11 A. No, sir.
12 Q. Canon 2, "A judge should avoid the appearance of 13 impropriety."
14 MR. FINDER: Can you try and make this -- can you all
10:47 15 see?
16 BY MR. FINDER:
17 Q. "A judge should respect and comply with the law and should 18 act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in 19 the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary." Do you agree
10:47 20 with that statement, sir?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. Canon 2A, which you can read, was fairly summarized in the 23 book we just talked about. Do you agree with that, about 24 accepting -- that judges must accept certain restrictions in
7 25 their personal lives once they take the bench?

8 1 A. It seems to say that, yes.

2 JUDGE LAKE: Sir, I didn't hear your answer.

3 THE WITNESS: It seems to say that.

4 I'm sorry, Judge Lake.

10:48 5 JUDGE LAKE: Thank you.

6 BY MR. FINDER:

7 Q. And, then, in Canon 2A, a commentary, "Actual improprieties
8 under this standard include violations of law, court rules, or 9 other specific provisions of this code." Do you agree with that?

10:48 10 A. Yes, sir.

11 Q. Canon 3 says, "A judge should perform the duties of the 12 office impartially and diligently."

13 Can you follow along with me to read this?

14 "The judicial duties of a judge takes precedence
10:48 15 over all other activities. In performing the duties prescribed
16 by law, the judge should adhere to the following standards."

17 And, then, let's move over to Section C, under 18 Disqualification. "A judge shall -- shall disqualify himself
19 or herself in a proceeding in which the judge's impartiality
10:49 20 might reasonably be questioned."

21 A. Right.

22 Q. Okay. And then D, Remittal of Disqualification, "A judge
23 disqualified by the terms of 3C(1) may, instead of withdrawing
24 from the proceeding, disclose on the record the basis of 49 25 disqualification. If the parties and their lawyers, after such

9 1 disclosure and an opportunity to confer outside of the presence
2 of the judge, all agree, in writing or on the record, that the
3 judge should not be disqualified and the judge then is willing
4 to participate, the judge may participate in the proceeding.
10:49 5 This agreement shall be incorporated in the record of the 6 proceeding."

7 Did I read that accurately?

8 A. Yes.

9 Q. Were you familiar with this prior to the reading of this?

10:49 10 A. Yes.

11 Q. Okay. Canon 5, "A judge should regulate extra-judicial 12 activities to minimize the risk of conflict with judicial 13 duties."

14 Section C, A judge should -- under Financial
10:50 15 Activities, "A judge should refrain from financial and business
16 dealings that tend to reflect adversely on the judge's
17 impartiality, interfere with the proper performance of judicial 18 duties, exploit the judicial position, or involve the judge in 19 frequent transactions with lawyers or other persons likely to 10:50 20 come before the court on which the judge serves."

21 Were you aware of this provision before reading
22 it today?

23 A. Yes, sir.

24 Q. Is that a "yes," sir?

25 A. Yes, sir. I'm sorry.

0 1 Q. Okay. "A judge should not solicit or accept anything of
2 value from anyone seeking official action from or doing
3 business with the court or other entity served by the judge or 4 from anyone whose interests may be substantially affected by 10:51 5 the performance or nonperformance of official duties."Did I
6 read that accurately?
7 A. You did.
8 Q. "Except that a judge may accept a gift as permitted by the 9 Judicial Conference gift regulations. A judge should endeavor
10:51 10 to prevent a member of the judge's family residing in the 11 household from soliciting or accepting a gift except to the 12 extent that a judge would be permitted to do so by the Judicial 13 Conference gift regulations."
14 Did I read that accurately?
10:51 15 A. You did.
16 Q. And were you aware of this provision before reading it in
17 court today?
18 A. In general, yes.
19 Q. And for purposes -- under (5), "For purposes of this
10:51 20 section, 'members of the judge's family residing in the judge's
21 household' means any relative of a judge by blood or marriage
22 or person treated by a judge as a member of the judge's family,
23 who resides in the judge's household."
24 Did I read that correctly?
2 25 A. Yes, sir.

1 Q. And Number 6, "A judge should report" --
2 A. I can't see that.
3 Q. Oh, I'm sorry. Can you read that?
4 A. Yes.
10:52 5 Q. "A judge should report the value of any gift, bequest,
6 favor, or loan as required by the statutes or by the Judicial
7 Conference of the United States."
8 Did I read that correctly?
9 A. You absolutely did.
10:52 10 Q. And were you aware of that provision before?
11 A. Yes, sir.
12 Q. Under commentary to Rule 5, Canon -- it says, "Canon 5C.
13 Canon 3 requires a judge to disqualify in any proceeding in 14 which the judge has a financial interest, however small;
10:52 15 Canon 5 requires a judge to refrain from engaging in business
16 and from financial activities that might interfere with the 17 impartial performance of the judge's judicial duties; Canon 6
18 requires a judge to report all compensation received for 19 activities outside the judicial office."
10:52 20 Did I read that accurately?
21 A. You did.
22 Q. And were you aware of that prior to today?
23 A. I'm sure I was. I'm sure I was. I'm sorry.
24 Q. Canon 6, "A judge should regularly file reports of
3 25 compensation received for law-related and extra-judicial

3 1 activities."

2 Section C, "Public Reports, A judge should make

3 required financial disclosures in compliance with applicable

4 statutes and Judicial Conference regulations and directives."

10:53 5 Did I read that accurately, sir?

6 A. You did.

7 Q. And you were aware of that prior to today, correct?

8 A. Yes, sir.

9 Q. And, in fact, you have filed reports with the 10:53 10 Administrative Office of the United States courts, haven't you?

11 A. I have.

12 Q. Now, these canons of ethics for judges, that I read to you,

13 that you said you are familiar with, were not unlike the canons

14 of ethics that you were bound by as a state district judge in

10:54 15 Louisiana, correct?

16 A. I believe that's correct.

17 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Counsel, can I interrupt you just

18 for a little while --

19 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

10:54 20 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- and question Judge Porteous?

21 It struck me that we discussed immunity, and it

22 struck me that Judge Porteous was advised that he would be

23 granted immunity. And it struck me that this is going on, I

24 think, in the belief that, but for that, he would not be

54 25 testifying. But we have not, in the record, actually presented

1 his testimony with the understanding -- with the explicit
2 understanding that immunity has been extended. And I don't
3 want to get down the road where we don't have that in the 4 record. But out of fairness, it would seem that is the reason
10:54 5 that Judge Porteous is testifying.

6 So, for the record, you're proceeding with the 7 request and asking for immunity for Judge Porteous?

8 MR. FINDER: You're absolutely correct, your Honor. I
9 do have the actual original application for compulsion as well
10:55 10 as the order of compulsion. Judge Porteous has a true and 11 accurate copy, but I'm happy to give him the originals.

12 THE WITNESS: I've seen it, if it's the same one you
13 gave me a copy of.

14 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I just want to get that straight
10:55 15 because there is some formality usually associated with taking
16 the Fifth Amendment.

17 MR. FINDER: Right. Right.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But we've been going a long time on 19 that basis, and I didn't want to have any misunderstanding.

10:55 20 MR. FINDER: As long as you bring it up, your Honor, I
21 do need, without -- hopefully, without sounding didactic, I do
22 need to make certain that the witness knows that, while this is
23 a grant of use immunity coextensive with his Fifth Amendment
24 rights, it would not prevent him any kind of immunity from 55 25 false statement or perjury, just as in any case under 6001 and

1 6002 of the United States Code.
2 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: And you're aware of that, Judge
4 Porteous?
10:56 5 THE WITNESS: Yes, ma'am.
6 MR. FINDER: May I proceed, Your Honors?
7 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
8 MR. FINDER: What exhibit number is the Louisiana Code
9 of Judicial Conduct? 86?
10:56 10 THE WITNESS: Can I just get a cup of water real
11 quick?
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sure.
13 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Yes, Judge, you can bring the
14 pitcher with you.
10:56 15 THE WITNESS: Oh, thank you. I don't want to knock
16 something over.
17 MR. FINDER: I may have misspoke. It's Exhibit 85.
18 Forgive me.
19 THE WITNESS: The list, other than this morning, that
10:57 20 I was provided, only went to Exhibit 84 as of Friday.
21 MR. WOODS: Right, and I gave you the updated list
22 this morning.
23 THE WITNESS: Well, it's in the box somewhere.
24 MR. WOODS: No. It's on top of the box.
(57 25 THE WITNESS: Maybe it is.

1 Okay. All right.

2 BY MR. FINDER:

3 Q. Mr. Porteous, I'm calling your attention to the Louisiana
4 Code of Judicial Conduct, Canon 1. I believe you testified
10:57 5 you're familiar with these.

6 It states, "The Judge shall uphold the integrity
7 and independence of the judiciary. An independent and
8 honorable judiciary is indispensable to justice in our 9 society."

10:57 10 And without taking up all the Court's time, I
11 believe you -- will you agree with me that this language is 12 almost verbatim of the language we just read from the canons of 13 federal judicial --

14 A. It seems to be. Certainly similar.

10:58 15 Q. Very similar.

16 Secondly, Canon 2, "A judge shall avoid
17 impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in all
18 activities."

19 And I believe that language is also very similar
10:58 20 to what we just read, correct?

21 A. Yes.

22 Q. Canon 3, "A judge shall perform the duties of office
23 impartially and diligently."

24 And, then, moving on to page -- to Section C of 25 that rule, which in the Louisiana version is titled

1 "Recusation, To Recuse."
2 It states, "A judge shall disqualify himself or
3 herself in a proceeding to which the judge's impartiality might
4 reasonably be questioned and shall disqualify himself or
10:58 5 herself in a proceeding in which disqualification is required
6 by law or applicable Supreme Court rule."
7 Did I read that accurately?
8 A. You did.
9 Q. And you are -- and these were the rules that you were bound
10:58 10 by as a judge in Louisiana, correct?
11 A. I believe that's correct.
12 Q. Canon 5, titled Extra-Judicial Activities, Section C, "A
13 judge shall refrain from financial and business dealings that
14 tend to reflect adversely on the judge's impartiality, interfere
10:59 15 with the proper performance of judicial duties, exploit the 16 judge's judicial position, or involve the judge in frequent
17 transactions with lawyers or persons likely to come before the 18 court on which he or she serves."
19 Did I read that accurately?
10:59 20 A. You did.
21 Q. That's also similar to the canons of federal ethics, isn't
22 it?
23 A. It is.
24 Q. Canon 6, "A judge shall not accept compensation or gifts
10:59 25 for quasi-judicial and extra-judicial activities, only under

1 restricted circumstances."

2 Section C, "Gifts. A judge, a judge's spouse, or

3 member of the judge's immediate family residing in the judge's

4 household shall not accept any gifts or favors which might

11:00 5 reasonably appear as designed to affect the judgment of the

6 judge or influence the judge's official conduct."

7 Did I read that accurately?

8 A. You did.

9 Q. And then there's also the Louisiana version of annual 11:00 10 financial reporting, correct?

11 A. Yes.

12 Q. Okay. And I believe the amount was raised effective 2006.

13 But even when you were a judge, it was a lower amount, correct?

14 A. I believe that's correct.

11:00 15 Q. The point is, Judge Porteous, in the more than two decades

16 that you have been a judge, whether state or federal, you have

17 been bound by very, very similar terms of judicial ethics

18 canons, correct?

19 A. Yes, somewhat, of course.

11:01 20 Q. Judge Porteous, you were married to Carmella Porteous, who

21 passed away December 22nd, 2005, correct?

22 A. Yes, sir.

23 Q. How long were you married, approximately?

24 A. Got married in '69. Thirty-six years.

25 Q. Isn't it true, Judge Porteous, that on March 28th, 2001,

1 you and your wife filed a voluntary Chapter 13 bankruptcy
2 petition in this district, the Eastern District of Louisiana,
3 in Docket Number 01-12363?
4 A. I know we filed, and I'm assuming that is the date number
11:01 5 and the record number.
6 Q. I'll show you the actual petition.
7 A. That's okay. I mean --
8 Q. And is it also true that the trustee assigned to the file
9 was SJ Beaulieu -- spelled B-E-A-U-L-I-E-U -- Jr.?
11:02 10 A. Correct.
11 Q. And your lawyer at the time was Claude C. Lightfoot --
12 spelled L-I-G-H-T-F-O-O-T -- Jr. Is that correct?
13 A. Correct.
14 Q. And you filed -- I'll show you what's part of Exhibit 1,
11:02 15 Bates Number SC122.
16 A. What's the Bates number? I'm sorry.
17 Q. SC12 -- 00122. One of these days I'll get the hang of 18 this.
19 A. That's fine.
11:02 20 Q. This is a voluntary petition that you filed. Isn't that 21 correct, Judge?
22 And please look it over.
23 A. It appears to be.
24 Q. Okay. Under "Name of Debtor," it says "Ortous" -- spelled
3 25 O-R-T-O-U-S -- comma, G, period, T, period, correct?

1 A. It does.
2 Q. And under "Name of Joint Debtor, Spouse," it's "Ortous" --
3 O-R-T-O-U-S -- comma, capital C, period, capital A, period,
4 correct?
11:03 5 A. That's correct.
6 Q. It has as the street address of the debtor PO Box 1723 in
7 Harvey, Louisiana, ZIP Code 70059-1723, correct?
8 A. Yes, sir.
9 Q. And the case number, the docket number, 01-12363, which I
11:03 10 believe I mentioned a few moments ago, correct?
11 A. I believe you did.
12 Q. Let me show you, Judge Porteous -- I'll come back to that.
13 Do you recognize this as an application for a
14 PO box, Judge Porteous?
11:04 15 It's SC exhibit -- Special Committee Exhibit 23,
16 Bates Number SC00599.
17 Do you recognize that, sir?
18 A. Yeah. If you tell me that's what it is, I agree. I
19 mean --
11:04 20 Q. Well, but I can't testify; so, I have to ask you those 21 questions.
22 A. I'm assuming it is an application for a post office box. I
23 can't read the print, but I have no reason to doubt what you
24 represent. I'm not trying to take issue. I agree.
4 25 Q. I know. I'm trying to be fair.

1 There's a signature here. Do you recognize that
 2 signature?
 3 A. That's mine.
 4 Q. That is your signature.
 11:04 5 And it's dated March 20th, 2001, correct?
 6 A. It is.
 7 Q. Now, March 20th, 2001, was -- and we'll get to this in a
 8 moment -- just about a week before you filed your Chapter 13,
 9 correct?
 11:05 10 A. What was the date?
 11 Yeah. I agree. I mean --
 12 Q. All right. And on your PO box request, you have an address
 13 here, 4801 --
 14 A. "Neyrey."
 11:05 15 Q. -- Neyrey -- N-E-Y-R-E-Y -- Drive in Metairie, Louisiana.
 16 That's your residence, correct?
 17 A. That's correct.
 18 Q. So, going back to Exhibit 1, the voluntary petition -- oh,
 19 wrong one -- the PO box that you have on here, you put in lieu
 11:05 20 of your home address, correct?
 21 A. That's correct.
 22 Q. Now, this voluntary petition --
 23 MR. WOODS: Larry, it's off.
 24 MR. FINDER: Oh, thank you.
 6 25 Can your Honors read that?

1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. "Signature of debtor, individual" -- tell me if I'm reading
3 this accurately -- "I declare under penalty of perjury that the
4 information provided in this petition is true and correct."
11:06 5 And there are two signatures with the date 3-28-01, correct?
6 A. That's correct.
7 Q. And 3-28-01 was about eight days after the PO box was taken
8 out, correct?
9 A. That's correct.
11:06 10 Q. Your name is not Ortous, is it?
11 A. No, sir.
12 Q. Your wife's name is not Ortous?
13 A. No, sir.
14 Q. So, those statements that were signed -- so, this petition
11:06 15 that was signed under penalty of perjury had false information,
16 correct?
17 A. Yes, sir, it appears to.
18 Q. I'll show you something else on this petition, Judge
19 Porteous. There's a list of unsecured creditors, and I'm 11:07 20 referring now to Bates Number Page SC00126.
21 A. All right.
22 Q. Regions Bank?
23 A. Yes, sir.
24 Q. That's a bank you've done business with?
07 25 A. Yeah, I did some business with them.

37 1 Q. Right. And Regions Bank is on this voluntary petition,
2 correct?
3 A. I assume that's the petition, yes, sir. I mean --
4 Q. Well, we'll go back to the first page.
11:07 5 A. Okay.
6 Q. Voluntary petition?
7 A. All right. Yeah, it's on there.
8 Q. But if Regions Bank or any other unsecured creditor such as
9 these were to get word that a GT Ortous had filed bankruptcy,
11:08 10 they wouldn't necessarily know it was you, would they, unless
11 they ran the Social Security number?
12 A. If they had have got notice, you're correct.
13 Q. Now, let's jump ahead a little bit. Still in Exhibit 1 --
14 A. All right.
11:08 15 Q. -- and I'm going to refer you and the Court to Bates
16 Number SC120. This is an amended voluntary petition, is it
17 not?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. This time the name of the debtor is Gabriel T. Porteous,
11:08 20 Jr. That's you, correct?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. And Carmella A. Porteous, the joint debtor, your wife,
23 correct, sir?
24 A. Yes, sir.
18 25 Q. This time the address is 4801 Neyrey Drive, Metairie,

1 Louisiana, correct?

2 A. Yes, sir.

3 Q. This petition -- blow this up a little bit; that's about as

4 clear as I can make it -- was signed by you and your wife on 11:09 5 April 9th. Those are your signatures, correct?

6 A. Yes, sir.

7 Q. And the date is April 9th, correct?

8 A. Yes, sir.

9 Q. And your attorney's name, Claude Lightfoot, is on there,

11:09 10 also?

11 A. Right.

12 Q. So, between -- strike that.

13 After your voluntary -- your amended petition was

14 filed, there was an order of recusal entered in your bankruptcy

11:09 15 case, in the matter of Gabriel T. Porteous, Jr. and Carmella A.

16 Porteous, an order of recusal -- I'm going to have to -- and

17 the order, which was dated June 1st, 2001, says it is ordered

18 that the three judges of the US Bankruptcy Court for the

19 Eastern District of Louisiana, naming the three judges, are

11:10 20 hereby recused from the case, correct?

21 A. Yes, sir.

22 Q. And then procedurally, your case was temporarily assigned

23 to Judge William R. Greendyke on assignment to the Eastern

24 District of Louisiana, correct?

o 25 A. Right.

10 1 Q. And that's the same cause number?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. Signed by then Chief Judge Carolyn Dineen King of the Fifth
4 Circuit, correct?
11:10 5 A. Right.
6 Q. I don't believe I stated the date. Judge Greendyke was
7 assigned to this -- at least the order of Judge King assigns
8 Judge Greendyke June 4th, 2001. Is that accurate?
9 A. Yes, sir.
11:11 10 Q. Judge Porteous, we've already talked about Claude Lightfoot
11 being your attorney.
12 Jacob J. Amato, do you know Jacob Amato, Jake
13 Amato?
14 A. Absolutely.
11:11 15 Q. He is a lawyer, correct?
16 A. Yes, sir.
17 Q. And he is a friend of yours. Isn't that correct?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. Warren A. Forstall, Jr., also known as Chip?
11:11 20 A. Yes, sir.
21 Q. He is a lawyer?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. And he is your friend, correct?
24 A. Yes, sir.
11 25 Q. Robert G. Creely, again, a lawyer and a friend of yours?

1 A. Yes, sir.
2 Q. Don C. Gardner, a lawyer and a friend of yours?
3 A. Yes, sir.
4 Q. Leonard L. -- also known as Lenny -- Levenson, your friend
11:11 5 and an attorney, right?
6 A. Yes, sir.
7 Q. Joseph Mole, an attorney?
8 A. Yes, sir.
9 Q. Not one of your close friends?
11:12 10 A. We've never gone anywhere together. That would be a
11 correct statement.
12 Q. And Rhonda Danos has been your -- D-A-N-O-S -- has been 13 your secretary and assistant for more than 20 years now,
14 correct?
11:12 15 A. Since I was on the state bench. Twenty-three years.
16 Q. Twenty-three years.
17 Okay. Judge Porteous, before you filed your
18 voluntary petition for bankruptcy in March of 2001, let's go
19 back to the year -- calendar year 2000.
11:13 20 A. All right.
21 Q. You had engaged Mr. Lightfoot as your counsel in the latter
22 part of 2000, correct?
23 A. I knew it was in 2000. I don't remember the exact date;
24 but if that's what you say, I'm sure it is.
3 25 Q. Well, I will refresh your recollection.

3 1 But would you agree with me that at least by
2 November, December of 2000 he was your lawyer?
3 A. I believe that's correct, yeah.
4 Q. Now, after bankruptcy, you had a meeting with the trustee,
11:13 5 SJ Beaulieu, correct?
6 A. After what?
7 Q. After bankruptcy was filed.
8 A. After it was filed, that's correct.
9 Q. And you recall that Mr. Beaulieu handed you a pamphlet
11:13 10 called "Your Rights and Responsibilities in Chapter 13," which
11 we have marked as the Committee's Exhibit 11?
12 A. I believe that's -- yeah, right.
13 Q. And it bears the name of Mr. Beaulieu and has his local 14 New Orleans phone number?
11:14 15 A. Yes, sir.
16 Q. That is on Bates Page 399.
17 I'm sorry. I have my back to you.
18 A. All right.
19 Q. Calling your attention to this exhibit, there are 11:14 20 enumerated paragraphs. Paragraph 6, follow me while I read.
21 "Credit While in Chapter 13. You may not borrow money or buy
22 anything on credit while in Chapter 13 without permission from 23 the bankruptcy court. This includes the use of credit cards or 24 charge accounts of any kind."
14 25 Did I read that accurately, sir?

1 A. You did.
2 Q. And do you recall reading that and discussing that with
3 Mr. Beaulieu?
4 A. I don't specifically recall it, but I'm not saying it
11:14 5 didn't happen.
6 Q. All right. Do you recall, on or about May 9th, 2001,
7 having a -- what's called a 341 bankruptcy hearing, where
8 Mr. Beaulieu as trustee was present; your attorney,
9 Mr. Lightfoot, was present; and you were present?
11:15 10 A. Yes, sir, I remember meeting with Mr. Beaulieu.
11 Q. And that meeting was recorded, if you -- do you recall
12 that?
13 A. I believe that's correct, yeah, tape recorded.
14 Q. Right.
11:15 15 Do you recall Mr. Beaulieu stating the following?
16 "Any charge cards that you may -- you have you cannot use any
17 longer. So, basically, you're on a cash basis now.
18 "I have no further questions except have you made
19 your first payments."
11:15 20 Did I read that accurately?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. So, you were told by Mr. Beaulieu that you couldn't incur
23 any more credit there, on credit cards, correct?
24 A. I'm not sure it was there, but I'm sure it was part of the 16 25 explanation at some point.

1 Q. Well, going back to --

2 A. When you ask -- I only meant in reference to the statement.

3 Yes, it's --

4 Q. Right.

11:16 5 A. -- contained in there, and I knew that.

6 Q. And it was your understanding -- and that's what I'm trying

7 to find out, sir -- that you couldn't incur more credit while

8 in bankruptcy, correct?

9 A. That's correct.

11:16 10 Q. Okay. Now, on June 2nd, are you familiar with the order

11 signed by Bankruptcy Judge Greendyke?

12 And this is from Exhibit 1, Bates Number SC50,

13 Exhibit 1 being the certified copy of the bankruptcy file.

14 "It is ordered that," going down to Number 4,

11:16 15 "the debtors shall not incur additional debt during the term of 16 this plan except upon written approval of the trustee."

17 Did I read that correctly?

18 A. You did.

19 Q. Was that your understanding at the time?

11:17 20 A. In the order, it was.

21 JUDGE LAKE: What's the date of that document?

22 MR. FINDER: July 2nd, 2001, was the docket date. It

23 was signed by Judge Greendyke June 28th, 2001.

24 JUDGE LAKE: Thank you.

17 25 BY MR. FINDER:

18 1 Q. Judge Porteous, we talked a little bit about the Ethics in
2 Government Act earlier, the Ethics in Government Act of 1978,
3 which has to do with your judicial filings. Under Title 5,
4 United States Code Appendix Section 101, et seq., "Judicial
11:18 5 officers" -- and tell me if you agree with this -- "Judicial
6 officers shall include a full and complete statement with 7 respect to the source, type, and amount or value of income from 8 any source, other than the current employment by the United
9 States, received during the preceding calendar year aggregating
11:18 10 $200 or more in value."

11 Is that your understanding, sir?

12 A. Right.

13 Q. And the law goes on to state that it must be reported --
14 "the identity of the source, a brief description, and the value
11:18 15 of all gifts aggregating more than $250, received from any 16 source other than a relative of the reporting individual during 17 the preceding calendar year."

18 A. Yes, sir.

19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: For what year is that?

11:19 20 MR. FINDER: This is just from the statute, your
21 Honor.

22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. I think those gift
23 amounts vary from year to year.

24 MR. FINDER: Actually, they were lower; and these are 19 25 the current amounts.

9 1 BY MR. FINDER:

2 Q. So, what -- the amounts I just read to you apply to today.

3 When you first took the bench, presumably they were slightly

4 lower?

11:19 5 A. Presumably, yes.

6 Q. Okay. And these have to do with income and gifts?

7 A. Right.

8 Q. As I just read?

9 A. Yes, sir.

11:20 10 Q. Judge Porteous, you're familiar with the term "marker,"

11 aren't you?

12 A. Yes, sir.

13 Q. Would it be fair to state that, "A marker is a form of

14 credit extended by a gambling establishment, such as a casino,

11:20 15 that enables the customer to borrow money from the casino. The

16 marker acts as the customer's check or draft to be drawn upon

17 the customer's account at a financial institution. Should the

18 customer not repay his or her debt to the casino, the marker

19 authorizes the casino to present it to the financial

11:20 20 institution or bank for negotiation and draw upon the

21 customer's bank account any unpaid balance after a fixed period

22 of time." Is that accurate?

23 A. I believe that's correct and probably was contained in the 24 complaint or -- or the second complaint. There's a definition

20 25 contained.

40 1 Q. And you have no quarrel with the definition?
2 A. No, sir.
3 Q. Okay. Judge Porteous, if markers are a form of borrowing
4 or an extension of credit, by definition, would you agree that 11:21 5 from approximately August 20th to 21st, a two day period in
6 2001, you borrowed approximately $8,000 from Treasure Chest
7 Casino in Kenner, Louisiana, by taking out approximately eight
8 1,000-dollar markers over a two day period?
9 A. Well, did I sign $8,000 worth of markers? You have records
11:21 10 that suggest I did that. I agree with you.
11 Q. Okay.
12 A. The issue is that we haven't -- I have an issue with 13 whether that's credit. The statement itself says it acts like 14 a check against your account. Now, I did not have an 11:21 15 8,000-dollar line of credit at -- where was that? Treasure
16 Chest?
17 Q. Treasure Chest. I didn't ask you about a line of credit,
18 though.
19 A. I understand, but I'm explaining to you why that's 11:21 20 misrepresentative.
21 Q. Okay. Well --
22 A. Those are just repetitive 1,000 -- had I written a check
23 for a thousand, I do not believe I would have been in violation
24 of any court order.
72 25 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But you're saying that you didn't

1 not -- for instance, you could not sign a marker for $8,000
2 because that was above your limit but that would not have
3 precluded you from making out eight different markers for
4 $1,000 during a two day period?

11:22 5 THE WITNESS: Only if that line -- only if I had the
6 funds for the line of credit. In other words, I may have
7 signed a thousand dollar marker, played a little while, won,
8 paid it back. That's what it sounds like to me.

9 I have no specific recollection of that, Judge.
11:22 10 But that's what I'm saying, yes, sir.

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, you're not disputing that there
12 may have been eight markers for $1,000. What you're saying is 13 that at any one time you dispute that you owed $8,000.

14 THE WITNESS: That's correct, your Honor. I couldn't
11:22 15 get it. I mean --

16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I understand what you mean.

17 BY MR. FINDER:

18 Q. Judge Porteous, I'm going to show you what's from 19 Exhibit 54, Bates Number SC1436. These are records from the 11:23 20 Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana. And we'll have 21 more testimony about this later through Agent Horner.

22 But just by way of illustration, you see where it
23 has "MRK," "marker"?

24 A. Right.

25 Q. And it shows various 1,000-dollar markers?

1 A. Uh-huh.
2 Q. And remember, these were taken out August 20 and 21, the
3 dates --
4 A. Well, that's not those dates.
5 Q. That's the wrong page. Here we go.
6 JUDGE LAKE: What exhibit is that?
7 MR. FINDER: It's SC1438. I had the wrong page.
8 MR. WOODS: Exhibit 54.
9 MR. FINDER: Exhibit 54.
10 BY MR. FINDER:
11 Q. August 21st, '01, you were in Chapter 13 bankruptcy,
12 correct?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. Let's look at this entry. "MK" for "marker"?
15 A. Uh-huh.
16 Q. Taken out August 21 in the amount of a thousand dollars?
17 A. Uh-huh.
18 Q. Paid back September 9th, correct?
19 A. If that's what it says, yeah.
20 Q. That's what it says.
21 Next entry highlighted, marker, 8-21-01,
22 apparently paid back right way?
23 A. Right..
24 Q. Next marker, also -- also for a thousand dollars, not paid
25 back till September 9th?

1 A. All right.

2 Q. Next marker, August 21, a thousand dollars, not paid back

3 till September 15, correct?

4 A. It looks like that, yeah. Yeah.

11:24 5 Q. This is --

6 A. Yes. I got it.

7 Q. I don't think it's going to --

8 JUDGE LAKE: So, the net effect of this was that

9 $3,000 of the 8,000 was paid back at a later date. Is that

11:24 10 what the document shows?

11 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

12 JUDGE LAKE: Approximately within a month of that?

13 MR. FINDER: That's correct. It wasn't just taking

14 out a marker and paying it back within hours or the same day.

11:25 15 JUDGE LAKE: So, 5,000 was paid back; 3,000 was

16 some -- some form of extension of credit?

17 MR. FINDER: That's correct, that's what this record

18 tends to show.

19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, let's say on March 21st at the 11:25 20 end of the day there would have been outstanding balance on the

21 markers --

22 MR. FINDER: That's correct.

23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- for a debt exceeding the $1,000?

24 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

25 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And you could actually figure this

1 out on a daily basis?

2 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir. And we'll get into greater
3 detail on that later but this is an introduction to it and that
4 is correct.

11:25 5 BY MR. FINDER:
6 Q. We could do the same exercise for all of them for -- that
7 are listed in the charge. For example, on October 13th, 2001,
8 you borrowed approximately a thousand dollars Treasure Chest in
9 the form of two 500-dollar markers.

11:26 10 Yeah, here it is.
11 MR. FINDER: That's the best I can do. I hope you can 12 read it.

13 BY MR. FINDER:
14 Q. And those apparently were paid back the same day, correct?

11:26 15 A. Yes, sir.

16 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: What page number is that?
17 MR. FINDER: This is Page 1437.
18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Okay.

19 BY MR. FINDER:
11:27 20 Q. But, then, on October 17th and 18th -- and I'm talking
21 about the same exhibit, Pages 1436 and '37 -- there were -- can
22 you read this, Judge Porteous?
23 A. If you'll stop moving it, I might be able to.
24 Q. I don't mean to get you dizzy.

17 25 A. Yeah. Two 500. Well, five --

7 1 Q. Okay. On October 17th and 18th, you borrowed in excess of
2 $5900 from Treasure Chest, taking out approximately ten markers
3 of various denominations over the two days, 4400 of which was
4 paid back on November 9th. Do you recall that?

11:27 5 A. I don't recall it. I'm sorry.
6 That's what year?

7 Q. If that's what the records show, though, you don't dispute
8 it?

9 A. If that's what the record says, the record says it.

11:28 10 Q. Okay. We'll go into that with Agent Horner.
11 JUDGE LAKE: Do you have a summary exhibit which shows
12 what the -- the dates the items were paid? In other words,
13 there's a portion of this 5900 apparently was repaid the same
14 day and the balance was paid the next month?

11:28 15 MR. FINDER: We believe our FBI witnesses will be able
16 to summarize that. This was just an introduction to it.

17 MR. WOODS: To answer your question, we do not have a
18 specific chart summarizing that but we do have charts
19 summarizing gambling debt.

11:28 20 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But the records themselves reflect
21 the date of payment?

22 MR. WOODS: Yes, sir.

23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, whether we have a summary person
24 or not, we could figure those things out?

25 MR. FINDER: They're all --

1 MR. WOODS: The agent will tell us.

2 JUDGE LAKE: You might ask the agent to be attuned to

3 do that.

4 MR. FINDER: I think he's been so instructed.

11:29 5 BY MR. FINDER:

6 Q. We've talked about the filing of your bankruptcy, your

7 Honor, and not incurring new debt. That was in the pamphlet,

8 that was in the court order, and that was in the recorded

9 hearing. Do you remember those?

11:29 10 A. Yes, sir.

11 Q. Okay. Judge Porteous, on March 28th --

12 A. What year?

13 Q. 2001.

14 A. Okay.

11:29 15 Q. Following the filing of your Chapter 13 bankruptcy

16 petition, you and Mrs. Porteous did, in fact, incur additional

17 credit card debt on your Fleet Credit Card. Do you recall

18 that?

19 A. I do not recall that. I believe the exhibit says it's my 11:29 20 wife's card, but I don't remember that.

21 Q. Your wife was your co-debtor on the bankruptcy petition,

22 was she not?

23 A. She was.

24 Q. And the bankruptcy -- we'll get into this later; but the

29 25 bankruptcy schedule required all credit cards, everything, to

1 be scheduled, to be listed, correct?
2 A. Right.
3 And what date was that? March 28th, you said?
4 I'm sorry.
11:30 5 Q. March 28th, 2001 --
6 A. Yes.
7 Q. -- following the bankruptcy, the original petition,
8 correct?
9 A. Yes.
11:30 10 Q. All right. Now, as of March 5th -- and I'm referring to 11 Exhibit 21 -- okay. Showing you what's Exhibit 21, a statement
12 from Fleet Credit Card, Judge.
13 A. Right.
14 Q. You'll notice that it's Account Number 5447195123210658,
11:30 15 correct?
16 A. Yes, sir.
17 Q. And from Fleet Credit Card Service for the account of 18 Carmella Porteous, right?
19 A. Right.
11:31 20 Q. Now, if you look at these dates under the account
21 transactions, you'll see from March 5th through March 19th,
22 correct?
23 A. I can't see it, but I'm satisfied it says that. I just 24 can't see --
21 25 Q. Well --

11:11 1 A. I'm not disputing it says that, counsel.
2 Q. All right. This is -- March 5th is right before the
3 bankruptcy, right?
4 A. Yes, sir.
11:31 5 Q. March 19th we're in the bankruptcy -- we're into the
6 bankruptcy period, correct?
7 A. Well, before the bankruptcy was filed; but you're right.
8 Q. March 28th. If you'll look at March 8th, you'll see that
9 this credit card in the amount of $157.99 was used at Harrah's
11:31 10 Casino in New Orleans.
11 Well, maybe you can't see it; but I'll be happy
12 to show you.
13 A. No. I'm satisfied you're not misrepresenting it.
14 MR. WOODS: Your Honor, you have documents in the 11:32 15 boxes, that he's using, if you want to refer to them.
16 THE WITNESS: Well, I don't want to -- I have to stay
17 up here. I don't want to necessarily -- I mean, I'm not --
18 MR. WOODS: I could move them there if you want me to.
19 THE WITNESS: I don't dispute he's reading this 11:32 20 correctly. I jut -- he asked me could I see it, and I just 21 can't see it.
22 BY MR. FINDER:
23 Q. Now, again, bankruptcy was March 28th, the amended petition
24 was April 9th, correct?
2 25 A. Right.

1 Q. I'm going to show you now, Judge Porteous, from Exhibit 1
2 the Chapter 13 schedules and plan.
3 A. All right.
4 Q. This will be a little bigger and easier to read, hopefully.
11:32 5 This is in your case, with your docket number,
6 submitted by Claude Lightfoot, your attorney, correct?
7 A. Yes, sir.
8 Q. And I wish you did have it in front of you, and I'll show
9 you mine.
11:33 10 A. I'll pull it out if it's --
11 Q. But I would like you to tell me where Fleet Credit Card is 12 listed in here on the schedule of your credit cards.
13 A. Well, if it's not listed, it's not listed.
14 Q. So, you'll take my word it's not listed?
11:33 15 A. Yeah.
16 Q. Okay.
17 A. I don't know whether it was in existence, whether it was 18 paid off or not. I don't know anything about that. I mean, as 19 I'm sitting here, I don't recall.
11:33 20 Q. Well, whether it was paid off or not -- let's look at the 21 schedule -- I believe it's at Schedule F -- which lists
22 numerous credit cards --
23 A. All right.
24 Q. -- such as American Express at Surety Bank, Bank of
4 25 Louisiana MasterCard, Chase Platinum MasterCard, Citibank

1 Advantage, Citibank Advantage. The list goes on.
2 A. Right.
3 Q. This is in alphabetical order. Fleet does not appear,
4 correct?
5 A. Does not appear.
6 Q. And is it your testimony that if it was paid off it
7 wouldn't have to be on this list? If you had a zero balance on
8 the date this was filed, it wouldn't have to be on the list?
9 A. Well, it was not a -- if there was no debt, they weren't a
10 credit, to my understanding. It says "creditors' names." The 11 ones you -- as I understood, the instruction was that you owed
12 money to.
13 Q. Well, when you use a credit card, it's an extension of 14 credit, correct?
15 A. Correct.
16 Q. So, you pay it?
17 A. Right.
18 Q. So, if it's not on this list because it has a zero balance
19 and then you use it to go to JC Penney or the casino and you
20 rack up credit on it, that's incurring credit, incurring debt?
21 A. That's incurring additional credit, correct.
22 Q. Okay.
23 JUDGE LAKE: Was credit extended on that account after
24 the date of the bankruptcy filing?
25 MR. FINDER: I think the evidence -- they were

1 showing, Judge, that the card was not listed but was used as a
2 credit card after the date of the bankruptcy and the amended
3 petition of bankruptcy.

4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, it wasn't included in the list
11:35 5 of creditors while the card had been used before and -- before
6 the petition was filed and prior to the payment that was made
7 for the charge upon the card?

8 MR. FINDER: That's correct.

9 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, you're contending there was a
11:35 10 transaction existing --

11 MR. FINDER: That's my next exhibit.

12 JUDGE LAKE: It was used -- I guess to follow up, and (13 it was used after the bankruptcy filing? Is that what you
14 said?

11:35 15 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir. That's my next exhibit.

16 JUDGE LAKE: All right. Sorry.

17 BY MR. FINDER:

18 Q. From Exhibit 21, also --

19 A. All right.

11:35 20 Q. -- Bates Page 592, again, same account number, Fleet Credit
21 Card, your wife's name?

22 A. Right.

23 Q. Now, it shows here purchases and cash advances, $734.31,
24 correct?

6 25 A. Yes, sir.

1 Q. Do you see that?
2 Okay. And this credit card was used throughout
3 the month of May and June, correct?
4 You can see the entries on the left-hand side,
11:36 5 highlighted in the yellow, one of whom -- one entry which is in 6 red for the Treasure Chest, which is á casino, is it not?
7 A. Yes, sir.
8 Q. And that's $174.99, correct?
9 A. That's what it says.
11:36 10 Q. So, if it's on this statement, that means there was an 11 extension of credit, correct?
12 A. That appears to be correct.
13 Q. Okay. Moving on to the next month's statement, also from 14 Exhibit 21, Bates Page 593, would you agree, Judge Porteous,
11:36 15 this is the same account, same account number?
16 A. (Nodding head.)
17 Q. Is that a "yes"?
18 A. Yeah.
19 Q. Okay. And from June 15th to July 18th -- and this is the 11:37 20 best copy we have. So, I know it's a little hard to read.
21 This card was used, including for Harrah's in New Orleans, for 22 $91.99 and Treasure Chest for $68.99. I'll be happy to show
23 you this..
24 A. No. I'm satisfied that's what you're reading.
17 25 Q. All right. Judge Porteous, are you aware that -- strike

1 that.

2 Let's go back to the Chapter 13 schedules and

3 plans, which, again, is from Exhibit 1, starting with Bates

4 Number 91.

11:38 5 Judge Porteous, would you agree that you did

6 conceal assets and income from the bankruptcy estate and from

7 your attorney by filing false and misleading schedules with the

8 bankruptcy court and signing them under penalty of perjury?

9 A. I would not agree with that.

11:39 10 Q. All right.

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Counsel, I hesitate to interrupt

12 you. And perhaps you will get into this at a later time; but

13 before we leave Fleet, your record evidence suggests that a

14 number of charges on Mrs. Porteous' card prior to and during

11:39 15 the time that the bankruptcy petition or case was on file --

16 MR. FINDER: Yes.

17 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- with the bankruptcy judge. Do

18 you intend at a later time or not to present evidence with

19 respect to payments made with -- during that period of time and

11:39 20 when the payments were made and how the -- and who made those

21 payments?

22 MR. FINDER: We do intend to show evidence that the

23 card was paid off in full through a check by Rhonda Danos. But

24 I'm just not there yet, but I will get there.

10 25 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. So, you'll get to that

1 and who -- who authorized payments and things like that?

2 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: The judge had mentioned something

4 about it was his wife's account, and I wanted to --

11:40 5 MR. FINDER: That's correct.

6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right."

7 BY MR. FINDER:

8 Q. All right. Judge Porteous, again, from the Exhibit 1,

9 starting with Bates Number 91 --

11:40 10 A. All right.

11 Q. -- the Chapter 13 schedule and plan, we've already talked

12 about?

13 A. Yes, sir.

14 Q. Okay. Let's go through this for a moment.

11:40 15 Under Schedule B, "Personal Property."

16 A. All right.

17 Q. "Type of property, checking, savings, or other financial

18 accounts, certificates of deposit, shares in banks, savings and

19 loan, thrift, building and loan, homestead association, or

11:41 20 credit unions, brokerage houses, or cooperatives."Did I read

21 that accurately?

22 A. Yes, sir.

23 Q. And you listed Bank One Checking Account 002379554. Is

24 that correct?

11 25 A. That's correct.

1 Q. And the current value of that interest is $100, correct?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. And that's on Page 95?
4 A. Bates Page 95.
11:41 5 Q. Bates Page 95. Bates Page 96, Schedule B, Question 17,
6 "Other liquidated debts -- other liquidated debts owing debtor,
7 including tax refunds, give particulars." And in the next box,
8 it's checked off "none," correct?
9 A. Yes, sir.
11:42 10 Q. Attached to this exhibit, starting on Bates Page 112, the 11 statement of financial affairs, are you familiar with that,
12 sir?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. And on the last page of that statement of financial
11:42 15 affairs, with Bates Number SC116?
16 A. Right.
17 Q. "I declare under penalty of perjury that I have read the 18 answers contained in the foregoing statement of financial 19 affairs and any attachments thereto and they are true and 11:42 20 correct," dated April 9th, '01, the date of the amended
21 petition, signed by you and your wife, correct?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. So, you would agree with me, Judge Porteous, this is a
24 document that had a jurat that required that it be signed --
13 25 well, that it be signed under penalty of perjury, correct?

3 1 A. Yes, sir. You just read that.

2 Q. Right. There was another one. This -- that had to do with

3 statement of financial affairs.

4 On Page 111, "Declaration concerning debtors'

11:43 5 schedules," just about the schedules. Now, "Declaration under

6 penalty of perjury by individual debtor," it states, "I declare

7 under penalty of perjury that I have read the foregoing summary

8 and schedules consisting of 16 sheets plus the line summary

9 page and that they are true and correct to the best of my

11:43 10 knowledge, information, and belief," dated April 9th, '01,

11 signed by you and your wife, correct?

12 A. Right.

13 Q. Isn't it true, Judge Porteous, that although you replied

14 "none" to "tax returns," that you and your wife filed for a

11:44 15 federal tax refund on March 23rd, 2001, in the amount of

16 $4,143.72, which was just five days before your original

17 Chapter 13 petition was filed? Do you recall that?

18 A. I know we filed for a tax refund. ..

19 Q. All right. Let me show it to you.

11:44 20 Exhibit 24, do you recognize this as being your

21 1040 return?

22 A. Yes, sir.

23 Q. For tax year -- for 2000 --

24 A. 2000.

4 25 Q. -- correct?

1 And this is Bates Page 600?

2 A. Right.

3 Q. This is going to be tough to read, but feel free to look at

4 your copy.

11:45 5 Under the section "Refund," which is sort of cut

6 off on my copy, Line 67a, "Amount of Line 66 you want refunded

7 to you, $4,143.72" --

8 A. Yes, sir.

9 Q. -- correct?

11:45 10 It's signed, again under penalty of perjury, by

11 you and your wife on March 23rd, 2001, correct?

12 A. Yes, sir.

13 Q. And has your occupation as judge and your wife -- your

14 wife's occupation as housewife?

11:45 15 A. Right.

16 Q. And this is on Page 601, correct, Bates page?

17 A. Yes, sir.

18 Q. March 23rd, 2001, less than a week before you filed

19 Chapter 13, correct?

11:45 20 A. Yes, sir.

21 Q. And on your schedule, you put that you had no refund?

22 A. When that was listed, you're right.

23 Q. Okay. From your Exhibit 25, from your Bank One bank

24 account, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., Account 6902379554 --

6 25 actually, that number is a little bit different than the one

1 that was on the schedule. Maybe there was a typo.

2 If you look on Schedule B that we've read before,

3 this account starts with 002379554, but the actual statement

4 has a different few numbers that start. Probably just a typo,

11:46 5 don't you think?

6 A. I know there's bottom numbers on those checks. I always

7 called that account, I think, 00.

8 Q. All right. Now, going back to this Exhibit 25 --

9 A. Uh-huh.

11:47 10 Q. And I regret that I can't get this clearer; but it shows on

11 April 13th, a deposit of an IRS tax refund of $4,143.72,

12 correct?

13 A. Yes, sir.

14 Q. And that deposit was April 13th?

11:47 15 A. Yes, sir.

16 Q. Just four days after your amended return was filed,

17 correct?

18 A. Yes, sir.

19 Q. Your amended return was April 9th?

11:47 20 A. Yes, April 9th.

21 Q. But nothing was mentioned on that return?

22 A. No. I know I called my -- I called Claude when I got it.

23 And by Claude, I meant Mr. Lightfoot. I'm sorry.

24 Q. You discussed that with Mr. Lightfoot?

7 25 A. I did.

1 Q. Did he tell you not to put it on the return?
2 A. No, no. I discussed that I received the refund, what
3 should I do with it.
4 Q. What did Mr. Lightfoot tell you?
11:48 5 A. Said, "If the trustee didn't put a lien on it, put it in
6 your account; but they may -- they may ask for it back."
7 Q. But, Judge Porteous, that schedule was signed under penalty
8 of perjury.
9 A. It was omitted. I don't know how it got omitted. There
11:48 10 was no intentional act to try and defraud somebody. It just 11 got omitted. I don't know why.
12 We had been fighting this, trying not to go into
13 bankruptcy for a long time. And I don't know. It just didn't 14 appear on the schedule.
11:48 15 Q. Okay.
16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How many days before the schedule
17 was made that omitted that was the request for refund made of 18 the filing?
19 MR. FINDER: About five days, five days from the 11:49 20 original petition, your Honor. The schedule was on the amended
21 petition and --
22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Well, I'm trying to get the
23 difference in date between the date he signs the statement
24 saying he has no refund coming --
9 25 MR. FINDER: Right.

9 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- and the date that he asked for a
2 refund from -- on his tax return.

3 MR. FINDER: Right. The original petition was
4 filed -- it was about five days before the original petition.

11:49 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.

6 MR. FINDER: Right. And the schedule was April 9th,
7 but -- and it was listed -- it was not listed on it. It was
8 listed as "none."

9 BY MR. FINDER:

11:49 10 Q. Okay. Judge Porteous, let's go back to Schedule B,
11 Question 2 --
12 A. All right.

13 Q. -- where it says, "checking, savings or other financial 14 accounts."

11:50 15 A. Right.

16 Q. And you listed a hundred dollars?

17 A. Right.

18 Q. Can you see -- okay. And again, this was in April, right?

19 A. Yeah.

11:50 20 Q. Okay. April 9th?

21 A. Yes, sir.

22 Q. And we have -- do you recall, Judge Porteous, owning a
23 Fidelity money market account, Account Number 8-00-114933-7?

24 A. Right.

10 25 Q. Okay. Let me show you, Judge Porteous, Exhibit 28.

1 A. All right.

2 Q. Which is your Fidelity money market account, correct?

3 A. Yes, sir.

4 Q. And this is for you and your wife, correct?

11:51 5 A. Right.

6 Q. The account number I just read, correct?

7 A. Right.

8 Q. Statement period March 21, 2000, through April 20th,

9 2000 -- I'm sorry, 2001 through April 20th, 2001, correct?

11:51 10 A. Right.

11 Q. And you see on March 28th, Check Number 581 for $283.42,

12 your balance, right? That was your balance in that account?

13 A. That's what it says, that's correct.

14 Q. Okay. Yet, on your bankruptcy schedule, you put that the

11:51 15 account -- this was the day before bankruptcy; and on your

16 bankruptcy schedule you put you only had a hundred dollars in

17 the account, correct?

18 A. It appears this is the Fidelity account.

19 Q. Right.

11:51 20 A. And since it's not listed, for some reason it didn't

21 appear, apparently, on my bankruptcy, because only Bank One

22 appeared, it looks like.

23 Q. Okay.

24 A. Although, I thought I told Claude about all the -- I only

52 25 had two.

1 Q. Well, your attorney told you to get all your records --
 2 A. Right.
 3 Q. -- and make --
 4 A. I could have sworn --
 5 Q. Correct.
 6 A. I honestly believed we told Claudé about Fidelity. There
 7 was really no reason not to tell him about Fidelity. The
 8 account at any given time which would have had the most money
 9 would have been the Bank One account because my checks were
 10 deposited in there.
 11 JUDGE LAKE: Mr. Finder, I'm not clear. Are we 12 talking about the difference in the Bank One disclosure and --
 13 MR. FINDER: No. It wasn't listed, Judge, and was an 14 account -- there was more money than was listed on the 15 schedule.
 16 JUDGE LAKE: You're saying the account was not
 17 disclosed at all?
 18 MR. FINDER: I don't believe it was.
 19 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Fidelity or Bank One?
 20 MR. FINDER: Bank One was -- Bank One was disclosed.
 21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: For too small an amount?
 22 MR. FINDER: Right.
 23 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Fidelity was not disclosed?
 24 MR. FINDER: Correct.
 25 JUDGE LAKE: And where in the charge is Fidelity

1 referred to? That's the question.

2 MR. FINDER: I believe it was in -- on Page 12. It's

3 not -- the name of the institution isn't in there, but

4 that's --

11:53 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How much was in Fidelity at the time

6 of the filing?

7 MR. FINDER: The balance on the day before bankruptcy

8 was $283.42.

9 JUDGE LAKE: So, that's the last bullet point on Page

11:53 10 12, is the Fidelity account?

11 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And, then, the one that was

13 listed --

14 MR. FINDER: The Bank One for a hundred, I believe

11:53 15 we'll have more evidence later on that.

16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay. That's not here yet.

17 THE COURT REPORTER: I'm sorry, Judge?

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: That's not presently before us. I

19 think Mr. Finder is saying he's getting to that later.

11:53 20 MR. FINDER: Actually, in the charge, we had a balance

21 of 280 and the actual amount was $283.42; so, there was a $3.42

22 variance.

23 BY MR. FINDER:

24 Q. Now, Judge Porteous, we already discussed, from Exhibit 1,

4 25 Bates Page 112, the statement of financial affairs and the

1 jurat that had to be -- it was being signed under penalty of
2 perjury. Do you remember that?

3 A. Right.

4 Q. Okay. And on this page it says, "Payments to creditors.
11:54 5 List all payments on loans, installment purchases of goods or 6 services, and other debts aggregating more than $600 to any 7 creditor made within 90 days immediately preceding the
8 commencement of this case."

9 And then in parenthesis, "Married debtors filing
11:55 10 under Chapter 12 or Chapter 13 must include payments by 11 either/or both spouses whether or not a joint petition is 12 filed, unless the spouses are separated and a joint petition is 13 not filed." "

14 Did I read that accurately?

11:55 15 A. You did.

16 Q. And where it requests the name and address of the 17 creditors, it just says "Normal Installments," correct?

18 A. Yes, sir.

19 Q. Let's go back to our Fleet Credit Card, Exhibit 29.

11:55 20 And, again, here is a -- sorry. I had the wrong
21 page. Give me a moment. Here it is.

22 This is the account number we discussed before,
23 correct, from the Fleet Credit Card for Mrs. Porteous?

24 A. Yes, sir.

36 25 Q. The balance of $1,088.41, correct?

1 A. That's what it says, yes, sir.

2 Q. That's what it says.

3 And the date of this statement -- under the
4 account number, it has payment due date April 15th, 2001, with 11:56 5 a new balance of 1088.41, correct?

6 A. Yes, sir.

7 Q. Now, the next statement, for the end of March and April,
8 shows past due amount zero because of the previous balance a
9 thousand -- there was a previous balance of 1,088.41. Do you
11:57 10 see that?

11 A. All right. Yes, sir.

12 Q. And then there was a payment recorded by the credit card
13 company on March 29th, 2001?

14 A. All right.

11:57 15 Q. Of 1,088.41?

16 A. Right.

17 MR. FINDER: Your Honor, this is what you were getting 18 at a little earlier.

19 BY MR. FINDER:

11:57 20 Q. Plus charges -- new charges for GameCash. Is that a
21 casino?

22 A. Is what? I'm sorry.

23 Q. GameCash?

24 A. I'm sure it is.

7 25 Q. Biloxi, Mississippi?

11:57 1 A. Sounds like it.

2 Q. And Beau Rivage Hotel in Biloxi, that's a casino, isn't it?

3 A. It is.

4 Q. For $215.99 and $231, respectively, correct?

11:57 5 A. Yes, sir, that's what it reflects.

6 Q. So, that was not listed on your schedule, was it, that

7 payment?

8 A. No, sir.

9 JUDGE LAKE: Which payment?

11:58 10 MR. FINDER: The Fleet.

11 JUDGE LAKE: Where --

12 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry?

13 JUDGE LAKE: Where are you referring when you say,

14 "That payment was not listed on your schedule"?

11:58 15 MR. FINDER: On page --

16 JUDGE LAKE: Are you referring to the 1,088 payment?

17 MR. FINDER: That's correct.

18 JUDGE LAKE: What about the subsequent payments?

19 MR. FINDER: Well, the 1,088, which was paid right

11:58 20 before the bankruptcy was filed -- at the time of the

21 bankruptcy filing, was not listed even though the schedule

22 called for all such payments prior to the filing of bankruptcy.

23 And this is the payment that --

24 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Well, then new charges were

38 25 incurred at the casino?

1 MR. FINDER: Among other places.
2 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: After -- yes, after.
3 Mr. Finder, we're going to take a break around
4 noon; so, you have about five minutes.
5 MR. FINDER: Okay. Thank you.
6 BY MR. FINDER:
7 Q. Judge Porteous, do you recall obtaining two 1,000-dollar
8 markers -- we may have -- we touched on this earlier --
9 2,000 -- two 1,000-dollar markers from Grand Casino Gulfport on 10 or about February 27th, 2001, which were deposited against your 11 bank account on April 4th, one week after the filing of your
12 Chapter 13 petition?
13 A. Do you have an independent recollection of that?
14 A. No, I do not have an independent recollection.
15 Q. Or five days before the amended voluntary petition?
16 A. I do not have an independent recollection of that.
17 Q. All right.
18 MR. FINDER: Judges, this may be a good place to stop
19 before I go on to the next area, as long as we're going to 20 break for lunch.
21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Okay. We'll take about an hour.
22 THE WITNESS: 1:00 o'clock, your Honor?
23 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
24 THE WITNESS: Judge, just for my own information, what
25 time will we be going till today? I'm not --

1 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: We think until around 5:00.
 2 THE WITNESS: Okay. I just was asking. That's all.
 3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
 4 THE WITNESS: Thank you.
 5 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right. Thank you.
 6 We'll be in recess.
 7 (Recess taken from 12:00 p.m. to 1:05 p.m.)
 8 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Be seated, please. We're ready to 9 resume.
 10 MR. FINDER: Your Honors, I would like to clarify a
 11 couple questions you had asked me at the bench.
 12 BY MR. FINDER:
 13 Q. Judge Porteous, let me call your attention again to 14 Schedule B.
 15 JUDGE LAKE: I can't hear you.
 16 MR. FINDER: Oh, I'm sorry.
 17 JUDGE LAKE: Just pretend there is a whole platoon out
 18 here awaiting your instructions.
 19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You may proceed. She has indicated
 20 she'll be right back.
 21 MR. FINDER: Oh, okay. Okay. Your Honors had asked
 22 me a question regarding one of the matters about the Bank One
 23 bank account, the hundred dollars. I don't recall which one of 24 you asked me, but it was in regard to Number 22 in the charge
 25 on Page 12; and I wanted to clarify that.

1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. Judge Porteous, let me call your attention again, please,
3 to Schedule B --
4 A. Okay.
5 Q. -- Number 2, the check where you were asked to list your
6 checking accounts.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I'm sorry, counsel. I can't hear
8 you.
9 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry, Judge.
10 BY MR. FINDER:
11 Q. Call your attention to Schedule B, where you're asked --
12 Number 2, where you're asked to list your checking accounts and 13 I believe you put Bank One and a checking account number for 14 $100. I believe we established that the account number had a
15 typographical error and was close but not exact.
16 Do you recall that?
17 A. All I think that meant was that the -- at the bottom of the 18 check, the banks use additional numbers. I think it was 690
19 would have been left out is all.
20 Q. That's fine. You're correct.
21 I'm going to show you now from Exhibit 27, which 22 we've already referenced but I -- there's a line on here I had 23 not referenced. This is from your Bank One statement. You can 24 see your name on there with the actual account number; and the 25 date of the statement is March 23rd to April 23rd, 2001.

06 1 It says, "Summary of Account Balance." The
2 balance as of April 23rd, which is the last day of the
3 statement period, was $5,493.91. April 23rd being five days
4 before the amended petition was filed, correct?

01:07 5 A. Correct.
6 Q. Moving up a little bit, I believe it says --
7 A. Wait. I'm sorry. You said April 23rd being five days
8 before the amended petition was filed?
9 Q. I'm sorry. I'm wrong. It was after the amended petition
01:07 10 was filed. Forgive me.
11 Beginning balance, five fifty-nine oh seven;
12 ending balance 5493.91, correct?

13 A. Yes, sir.

14 MR. FINDER: Your Honors asked me to -- a question
01:07 15 about Number 23 in the charge, appearing on Pages 13 and 14,
16 having to do with who paid the Fleet Credit Card.
17 BY MR. FINDER:
18 Q. Judge Porteous, I'm going to show you Exhibit 29. And,
19 again, to refresh your recollection, this is the account number
01:08 20 to your Fleet Credit Card with a balance of $1,088.41 on a
21 statement that is for the month of March.
22 You can see the account transactions, March 5th
23 through March 19th, correct?
24 A. Yes, sir.
18 25 Q. And the end -- and the new balance as of the -- this

1 statement is $1,088.41. Did I --
2 A. Yes.
3 Q. -- state that correctly?
4 Okay. That's Page 618.
01:08 5 A. All right.
6 Q. Page 620, another Fleet Credit Card statement for the same
7 account shows the payment of $1088.41, which Fleet recorded on
8 March 29th, correct?
9 A. Yes, sir.
01:09 10 Q. And that's one day after you filed the voluntary petition,
11 the first -- the original petition, correct?
12 A. The date they recorded it, yes.
13 Q. All right. Now showing you from Bates Number 619 --
14 MR. FINDER: What's the exhibit number for this?
01:09 15 MR. WOODS: Twenty-nine, I believe.
16 MR. FINDER: Exhibit --
17 MR. WOODS: Twenty-nine.
18 MR. FINDER: -- 29. Right, 29.
19 BY MR. FINDER:
01:09 20 Q. Check Number 1660 on the account of Rhonda F. Danos, dated 21 3-23-01, right -- five days before bankruptcy?
22 A. All right.
23 Q. Payable to Fleet in the same amount, $1088.41, correct?
24 A. Yes, sir.
0 25 Q. And here in the highlighted portion for the memo, where it

10 1 says "For," "Carmella Porteous." And it has the Fleet bank
2 account number, correct?
3 A. Yes.
4 Q. So, it appears that Ms. Danos paid off Fleet, correct?
01:10 5 A. Well, her check did, yes.
6 Q. Her check did.
7 Which would have preferred Fleet as -- which was
8 paid off right before bankruptcy, as opposed to the other --
9 other creditors, correct?
01:10 10 A. I presuppose [sic] so. I'm not --
11 Q. Now, why was it, sir, that Rhonda Danos happened to pay off
12 your wife's credit card days before you filed bankruptcy?
13 A. I have no idea. I'm sorry.
14 MR. FINDER: Did your Honors have any more questions
01:10 15 about --
16 A. What date was that? I'm sorry, counselor.
17 BY MR. FINDER:
18 Q. The date of --
19 A. I have no idea.
01:11 20 Q. Judge Porteous, was Rhonda Danos in the habit of paying off
21 your wife's bills?
22 A. No, not that I'm aware of. I mean, she's paid some bills
23 for me, though.
24 Q. But you're not aware of her paying your wife's bills?
1 25 A. No. She didn't pay my wife's bill. A check paid it.

1 Q. Well, the check is made payable to your wife's creditor,
2 Fleet.
3 A. Right, a check paid it.
4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Can I see that check again?
01:11 5 MR. FINDER: Yes, your Honor.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
7 MR. FINDER: Can you see?
8 BY MR. FINDER:
9 Q. Judge Porteous, did you ask Rhonda Danos to write that
01:11 10 check for payment of the Fleet account?
11 A. I have no recollection of asking her to do that.
12 Q. All right. Judge Porteous, on April 9th, 2001, when you
13 signed the statement of financial affairs in your bankruptcy
14 under penalty of perjury, which was on Exhibit 1, Bates
01:12 15 Number 116, Item 8 talks about losses.
16 Do you -- do you recall that independently, sir,
17 or do you have it in front of you?
18 A. I do not have that in front of me.
19 Q. All right. Can you read that?
01:12 20 A. Yes, sir.
21 Q. Okay. It asks you to list all losses for fire, theft,
22 other casualty, gambling within one year immediately preceding
23 the commencement of this case -- meaning your case -- or since
24 the commencement of this case. And I believe we read this 13 25 before, about married debtors filing under Chapter 12 and

1 Chapter 13.

2 And you list "none," correct?

3 A. That's what's listed, correct.

4 Q. Judge Porteous, do you recall that in the -- that your

01:13 5 gambling losses exceeded $12,700 during the preceding year?

6 A. I was not aware of it at the time, but now I see your

7 documentation and that -- and that's what it reflects.

8 Q. So, you -- you don't dispute that?

9 A. I don't dispute that.

01:13 10 Q. Therefore, the answer "no" was incorrect, correct?

11 A. Apparently, yes.

12 Q. Even though this was signed under oath, under penalty of 13 perjury, correct?

14 A. Right.

01:13 15 The casino, you don't get a gratuitous statement

16 every year from them. I mean, you would have to get it from

17 them.

18 Q. You would have to ask for it?

19 A. Yes.

01:13 20 JUDGE LAKE: I couldn't hear. What you did you say?

21 THE WITNESS: You have to ask -- they don't send a

22 statement or anything, Judge. If you want to know your status,

23 you can go ask them; but they don't routinely send -- in fact,

24 they never send it out.

14 25 JUDGE LAKE: Okay. But they -- if you call them, they

1 will tell you?

2 THE WITNESS: What's that? I'm sorry.

3 JUDGE LAKE: If you call them, then they will tell

4 you?

01:14 5 THE WITNESS: Yes, sir. I assume they would.

6 JUDGE LAKE: Okay. Thank you.

7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How much was owing?

8 MR. FINDER: Sir? I'm sorry.

9 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Gambling losses.

01:14 10 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How much was the amount owing?

11 JUDGE LAKE: He said 12,700 the previous year.

12 MR. FINDER: Twelve thousand seven hundred.

13 And we'll -- through our summary witness, we'll

14 get into more detail about gross versus net; but for the

01:14 15 present purpose, that's -- that's the information.

16 BY MR. FINDER:

17 Q. Judge Porteous, we've talked about your bankruptcy lawyer,

18 Claude Lightfoot, right?

19 A. Yes, sir.

01:15 20 Q. And we also mentioned earlier in our examination the fact

21 that Regions Bank, where you had done some business, was listed

22 as an unsecured creditor in the original voluntary petition,

23 correct?

24 A. Right.

5 25 Q. Is it a fact, sir, that Circuit Judge W. Eugene Davis made

1 a finding of crime fraud as to attorney-client privilege as to
2 discussions between you -- discussions and documents between
3 you and Mr. Lightfoot regarding the Regions Bank?
4 A. That's my understanding, correct.
01:15 5 Q. Let me show you what's been marked as Exhibit 12, an order,
6 which at the time it was under seal, the order of crime fraud.
7 Have you seen this order before?
8 A. I believe so.
9 Q. Okay. And the actual order for crime fraud was signed by 01:16 10 Judge Davis on October 19th, 2004. Is that correct?
11 A. That -- if that's what it says, of course.
12 Q. October 19th, 2004?
13 A. That's what it says.
14 Q. Okay. Therefore -- I wanted to establish that before I ask
01:16 15 you questions --
16 A. I understand.
17 Q. -- about this transaction.
18 You and Mr. Lightfoot agreed, at least by
19 December 21st, 2000 --
01:16 20 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry. Can you hear me?
21 BY MR. FINDER:
22 Q. -- by December 21st, 2000, to send out workout letters to
23 your various unsecured creditors, correct?
24 A. We talked about that, that's correct.
25 Q. And the decision was made between you and Mr. Lightfoot to

1 exclude Regions Bank, which was an unsecured creditor in the 2 amount of $5,000 plus finance charges, from the list of
3 unsecured creditors that received the workout letter, correct?
4 A. That's correct.

01:17 5 Q. Showing you, sir, what's been marked as Exhibit 5, on the 6 stationery of Claude Lightfoot to you" and Mrs. Porteous, dated
7 December 21st, 2000, "Regarding workout proposal."
8 "Dear Judge and Mrs. Porteous, I enclose a copy
9 of the letters and one copy of the attachments. I included
01:17 10 with each that have sent -- that I have sent to all the 11 unsecured creditors with the exception of Regions Bank, which 12 we wanted to exclude."

13 " Did I read that accurately?
14 A. You did.

01:17 15 Q. Signed by Mr. Lightfoot, correct?
16 A. Right.
17 Q. On -- on a copy. This is Bates Number 296.
18 297, Bates Number 297, is a sample letter that 19 went to Bank of Louisiana MasterCard. Are you familiar with
01:18 20 that?
21 A. I've seen -- I don't know if I'm familiar with that
22 exactly, but I think they all said the same thing.
23 Q. Now, we've talked about the Fleet Credit Card, also; and 24 here are the lists of credit -- unsecured creditors that were
6 25 listed in Mr. Lightfoot's letter.

1 Fleet is not on here, is it?

2 A. It is not.

3 Q. Okay. But of those that are listed, the 13, Mr. Lightfoot

4 totals them up to a sum of $182,330.23 in credit card debt,

5 correct?

6 A. Right.

7 Q. Mr. Lightfoot goes on in his letter to tell these unsecured

8 creditors they should accept the workout proposal and there

9 would be a -- the universe of cash available to pay them out is

10 $39,398.90, which represents about 21 percent of the balances,

11 correct?

12 A. That's what it says, correct.

13 Q. Right.

14 Also, it says Regions Bank was being excluded.

15 And, in fact, Regions Bank is not listed anywhere in the 16 letter, is it?

17 A. That's right.

18 Q. The loan with Regions Bank -- and I'll show you Exhibit 4.

19 A. All right.

20 Q. The loan with Regions Bank, the original loan --

21 A. Yes, sir.

22 Q. -- was for $5,000 plus a finance charge of $30; and it was

23 taken out on January 27, 2000, correct?

24 Boy, it's hard to read.

25 A. You're right.

1 Oh, yeah, that's better.

2 Yes, sir, it says --

3 MR. FINDER: Can you all see?

4 BY MR. FINDER:

01:20 5 Q. And this Account 436-64-1366 represents the account for 6 that loan, right?

7 A. Yes, sir.

8 Q. And you are the borrower?

9 A. That's correct.

01:20 10 Q. You are the borrower, and the lender is Regions Bank. Have 11 I read that correctly?

12 A. Yes, sir.

13 Q. All right. And this is on Bates Number 272.

14 A. All right.

01:20 15 Q. In fact, sir, you signed the note, correct?

16 A. Yes, sir.

17 Q. That's your signature, right?

18 A. Yes, sir.

19 Q. And that's on Page 273.

01:20 20 On the workup papers for this loan, it says
21 the -- again, same account number, same principal, loan date,
22 etcetera, which matures July 24th, 2000.

23 A. All right.

24 Q. Primary purpose of the loan is a personal loan, correct?

25 A. Uh-huh.

1 Q. Stated purpose, "Tuition for son," correct?
2 A. Uh-huh.
3 Q. Now, who was the son for whom you were asking for tuition?
4 A. Timmy or Tommy, I would think.
01:21 5 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
6 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Timothy or Tommy.
7 BY MR. FINDER:
8 Q. But you're not sure sitting here today?
9 A. Sitting here today, I don't know.
01:21 10 Q. Okay. There was a statement in the middle of the workout
11 paper -- I'm sorry -- the loan application paper, "Financial 12 Condition."
13 " I'll read it. "By signing this authorization, I
14 represent and warrant to lender that the information provided
01:21 15 above is true and correct and that there has been no federal
16 material adverse change in my financial condition as disclosed
17 in my most recent financial statement to lender."
18 This authorization is dated June -- January 27,
19 2000, signed by you, correct?
01:22 20 A. Yes, sir.
21 Q. And that's on Page 274 --
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. -- right?
24 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Is that 2000 or 2001?
2 25 MR. FINDER: 2000.

1 THE WITNESS: 2000.

2 MR. FINDER: I'm building up to it.

3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: I see.

4 BY MR. FINDER:

01:22 5 Q. On this other loan -- page to the loan application, dated
6 January 24th, it says -- and this is a little hard to read, but 7 follow with me -- "In the last ten years, have you been 8 bankrupt or are you in the process of filing bankruptcy?" And
9 it's checked off, "No."

01:22 10 A. Right.

11 Q. And that's accurate, correct?

12 A. I believe so.

13 Q. That was Page 276.

14 A. Yes, sir.

01:22 15 Q. Now, this loan got extended a couple of times, right?

16 A. I don't recall, but was that a 60 -- a six --

17 Q. Six months.

18 A. Six months. Had to have gotten renewed at least once.

19 Q. Okay. Well, let's talk about the renewal.

01:23 20 Here's the loan date, 7-24. It's the same amount
21 plus another $30 for the loan fee?

22 A. Right.

23 Q. So, it's the same loan because -- I believe it's the same
24 account number.

25 A. It is.

1 Q. All right. To you from Regions Bank. Everything else is
2 pretty much the same on this page, correct?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. And that page being 279?
5 A. Yes, sir.
6 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry, Judges. It's 279.
7 BY MR. FINDER:
8 Q. This loan is also signed by you, correct?
9 A. Yes, sir.
10 Q. And on the loan request it says, "Renewal of existing,"
11 right?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. And the loan officer -- or the branch -- who happens to be 14 the branch manager, I believe, Loretta Young, correct?
15 A. Yes, sir.
16 Q. As part of this loan package, you filled out the 17 information page, for, again, personal loan?
18 A. Right.
19 Q. "Specific Purpose," now it says, "Refinance existing." So
20 that's still for your son's tuition, correct?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. And the financial condition, you have still signed it?
23 A. Yes, sir.
24 Q. And this is July 24th, 2000?
25 A. Right.

1 Q. Let's jump ahead.
2 That was the first extension?
3 A. Yes, sir.
4 Q. Showing you now Bates 288, the second extension.
01:24 5 A. Yes.
6 Q. This loan is dated January 17th, 2001, correct?
7 A. Yes, sir.
8 Q. Matures July 17th, 2001?
9 A. Yes, sir.
01:25 10 Q. Now, January 17th, 2001, was a couple months before
11 bankruptcy, correct?
12 A. Ultimately, yes.
13 Q. Yes.
14 And, again, the rest of the terms are very
01:25 15 similar to the original and first extension, right?
16 A. Yes, sir, it appears to be.
17 Q. Okay. However, on January 17th, you had already engaged
18 Mr. Lightfoot to be your bankruptcy attorney, correct, because 19 we just saw the letters that went out for December?
01:25 20 A. I retained him to try and work out my debt and, if it
21 couldn't be worked out, to maybe consider bankruptcy.
22 Q. Right.
23 A. Correct.
24 Q. And on this loan, the second extension, you signed it?
5 25 A. Yes.

1 Q. And on the workup sheet to process the loan, again, by
2 Loretta Young?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. Your name?
5 A. Right.
6 Q. Same account number but here it says, "In the last -- In
7 the last ten years, have you been bankrupt or are you in the 8 process of filing bankruptcy?" And now it's checked "No"?
9 A. Right.
10 Q. In fact, by this time you had already -- as you just 11 stated, you had already talked to Mr. Lightfoot about trying to 12 work it out or going bankrupt, correct?
13 A. That's correct.
14 Q. So, that's a false statement, is it not?
15 A. I didn't mean it to be false, because I wasn't in the 16 process of declaring -- I was doing everything I could not to 17 file a bankruptcy. That's why I attempted for so long to do a
18 workout.
19 Q. But this is dated in January?
20 A. Right. We had not filed the bankruptcy.
21 Q. You hadn't filed yet.
22 A. I think the letters may have just gone out previous to
23 that.
24 Q. Okay. Let's look at the next page, Page 291 -- sorry.
25 The page we just referenced was Page 290?

1 A. Right.

2 Q. Let's move to the next page..

3 "Financial condition, by signing this

4 authorization, I represent and warrant to lender that the

01:27 5 information provided above is true and correct and there has

6 been no material adverse change in my "financial condition."

7 Now, there had been a material adverse change in

8 your financial condition, hadn't there, since the last time you

9 received the loan from the bank?

01:27 10 A. I probably stood at the same amount of debt that I had when

11 I got the loan, but was I now in the process of trying to work

12 out a settle -- a payoff, yes.

13 Q. I'm sorry, sir. Maybe it's the way I asked the question.

14 Let me try it again.

01:27 15 Since your last -- since the last time you took

16 an extension on this loan, your financial condition had stayed

17 the same or deteriorated; it hadn't gotten any better, had it?

18 A. Hadn't gotten any better, that's correct. --

19 Q. So, if you were in the banker's shoes, you would have no

01:27 20 reason to know that you were contemplating bankruptcy or

21 contacting bankruptcy counsel, because you have checked off on

22 this sheet that there's been no material change, correct?

23 A. I would have to object to that question. You're asking me

24 to presuppose my --

01:27 25 Q. You're right and -- you're correct, and I withdraw the

1 question.
2 A. Thank you.
3 Q. That is Page 291.
4 A. Right.
01:28 5 Q. Well, we know that Regions Bank eventually was given notice
6 of the bankruptcy, as were all --
7 A. They were.
8 Q. -- the other unsecured creditors, correct?
9 A. They were.
01:28 10 Q. But by then, Regions Bank had already given you a loan and 11 two extensions, correct?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. And when your bankruptcy --
14 MR. FINDER: I'm referring to Exhibit 1, Bates
01:28 15 Number 27.
16 BY MR. FINDER:
17 Q. When the trustee filed its final report in your bankruptcy,
18 where it says this case is completed, final meeting of 19 creditors, et cetera, it lists Regions Bank, does it not,
01:29 20 Number 23?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. And Regions Bank is getting a percentage of its outstanding
23 debt as an unsecured creditor at 34.55 percent, correct?
24 A. Right.
1:9 25 Q. Which means Regions Bank only got $1,782.43 in this

1 bankruptcy, correct?

2 A. That's -- that's exactly what those documents show.

3 Q. But, again, when you applied for the last extension,

4 Regions Bank had no idea that you were -- that you were

01:29 5 discussing your financial condition with bankruptcy counsel,

6 correct?

7 A. They did not.

8 Q. Regions Bank didn't ask you for any kind of collateral to

9 collateralize the loan or move itself up from an unsecured

01:29 10 creditor to a higher level, did it?

11 A. No. Mr. Butler was a friend. No, they didn't.

12 Q. Mr. Butler, for the record, is Ed Buddy Butler, correct?

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. And you didn't tell him Mr. -- even though he was a friend,

01:29 15 you didn't tell him that you were having financial problems,

16 did you?

17 A. No, I did not.

18 Q. In fact, you and Mr. Butler even go to the same church,

19 right?

01:30 20 A. I can't say we haven't been to a church together. I don't 21 know that we go to the same church. It's possible.

22 Q. Okay.

23 A. I may have seen Buddy.

24 Q. Moving on, back to the workout letters that Mr. Lightfoot

10 25 sent out -- and, again, we're talking about Exhibit 5.

1 A. Uh-huh.

2 Q. With the exception of Regions Bank?

3 A. Right.

4 JUDGE LAKE: What exhibit are you looking at now?

01:30 5 MR. FINDER: Exhibit 5.

6 JUDGE LAKE: Okay.

7 MR. FINDER: I am going to work backwards. We just

8 talked about 5, and we're on it again.

9 JUDGE LAKE: All right.

01:31 10 A. Is that Exhibit 5, counselor?

11 BY MR. FINDER:

12 Q. Yes, sir.

13 A. Or your Bates Number 5?

14 Q. No. Exhibit 5, Bates Number 296.

01:31 15 A. Okay. I just -- I saw an "SC" up at the top.

16 Q. And I think we may have discussed this briefly; but

17 Mr. Lightfoot listed approximately a hundred eighty -- a little

18 over $182,000 in unsecured credit card --

01:31 20 Q. Right?

21 When bankruptcy was filed and then your amended

22 bankruptcy, you have Schedule F --

23 A. Right.

24 Q. -- from Exhibit 1, Bates Number 102; and here Mr. Lightfoot

11 25 actually lists every single credit card that you've told him

1 about, right?

2 A. Yes, sir.

3 Q. Because he can't list credit cards that he doesn't know

4 about, he relies on you and/or Mrs. Porteous to give him the

01:32 5 financial picture so he can make a true and correct listing on

6 here?

7 A. That's correct.

8 Q. Of course, Fleet, as we determined earlier, is not on it?

9 A. It's not on it.

01:32 10 Q. Okay. I believe -- and just by manual counting, there are

11 now 15 credit cards. And I -- you can take my word for it or

12 I'll hand you the exhibit and you can count them up.

13 A. I have no reason to doubt your representation.

14 Q. And now -- and now Regions Bank --

01:32 15 A. Right.

16 Q. -- is also listed, for $5,000, correct?

17 A. Yes, sir.

18 Q. More importantly, the amount of unsecured debt has gone up

19 to 196,000, correct?

01:32 20 A. Yes, sir, that's what it says.

21 Q. That's from the workout letter, where it was less?

22 A. Whatever it was, yeah.

23 Q. You were a federal judge at this time, of course?

24 A. Right.

32 25 Q. And you filed a financial disclosure report for calendar

1 year 2000 and -- on May 10th, '01, correct?
2 A. Right.
3 Q. I'm referring to Exhibit 3, Bates Number 20 -- I'm sorry,
4 2 --
01:33 5 A. 00239.
6 Q. 239.
7 And this is your disclosure, is it not, sir?
8 A. Appears to be, of course.
9 Q. Well --
01:33 10 A. It is. I mean, it says it's me.
11 Q. Let's look at the last page, Bates Number 242.
12 A. That's me.
13 Q. That's your signature, right?
14 A. (Nodding head).
01:33 15 Q. Okay. Now, here, under Section VI -- Roman Numeral VI, I
16 believe, "Liabilities" --
17 A. Yes, sir.
18 Q. -- you list but two credit cards: MBNA credit card, Value
19 Code J; and Citibank credit card, Value Code J?
01:33 20 A. Right.
21 Q. And the legend on the bottom that has "Value Code" says,
22 "J, $15,000 or less," correct?
23 A. Right.
24 Q. So, according to your financial disclosure, your
14 25 liabilities did not exceed $30,000, correct?

01:34 1 A. According to the disclosure.
2 Q. Okay. Now, according to the disclosure, you have to
3 certify these. Isn't that right, Judge?
4 A. Right. Right.
01:34 5 Q. And I believe it says, "I certify that all information
6 given above, including information pertaining to my spouse and
7 minor dependent children, if any, is accurate, true, and 8 complete to the best of my knowledge and belief, and that any
9 information not reported was withheld because it met applicable
01:34 10 statutory provisions permitting nondisclosure," with your 11 signature and signed on the 10th of May, 2001, correct?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. It also says that, "Any individual who knowingly and
14 willfully falsifies or fails to file this report may be subject
01:35 15 to civil and criminal sanctions," citing -- citing 5 United
16 States Code Appendix, Section 104, which I believe we covered
17 earlier this morning, correct?
18 A. I believe we did.
19 Q. All right. Well, Judge Porteous, you listed, as I said,
01:35 20 two credit cards, which you have admitted to, MBNA and Citi?
21 A. Right.
22 Q. In fact, if we go back to Schedule F of Exhibit 1, starting
23 on Bates Number 102, you have not just a Citibank account; but
24 you have -- one, two -- three Citibank accounts, right?
5 25 A. There are three accounts. I don't know if they were in my

1 name or my wife's; but, yeah, there were three Citi. That's
2 what listed.

3 Q. Right. But, again, you filed jointly?

4 A. Yeah. But I'm just saying I -- there are three accounts
01:35 5 listed. You're correct.

6 Q. The first one under Number 4 -- the next one under 4, is
7 $23,987 and change, correct?

8 A. I can't see it because your arm is there.

9 Q. I'm sorry.

01:36 10 A. But, again, whatever is reflected is reflected.

11 Q. The second one to Citi is $20,719.58?

12 A. Right.

13 Q. The third one is -- the third Citi account --

14 A. Right.

01:36 15 Q. -- 17,711.35.

16 These are both on Pages 102 and 103 of the 17 exhibit, that being Exhibit 1.

18 Similarly, going back, you say -- you list an 19 MENA credit card, again, just like Citi, $15,000 or less debt.

01:36 20 Now, the debts for all of the three Citi accounts
21 exceeded 15,000, didn't they?

22 A. Yes, sir.

23 Q. MENA does have one less than 15,000. It has one for 24 $3,212.80, right?

25 A. Yes.

7 1 Q. But it also has a second one at $30,931.02, correct?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. Therefore, Judge Porteous, your certification of the -- of
4 your liabilities that you signed on April 10th --
01:37 5 A. May 10th.
6 Q. I'm sorry. May 10th. Forgive me?
7 -- was false, correct?
8 A. It was not correct. It was not accurate, correct.
9 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Which of the financial reports --
01:38 10 which year are you --
11 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Year 2000.
12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: 2000 -- of course, if it was filed
13 in 2001, it would refer to the calendar year ending 2000.
14 MR. FINDER: Correct.
01:38 15 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
16 MR. FINDER: For calendar year 2000, that is on 17 Page 239. That is correct, your Honor.
18 BY MR. FINDER:
19 Q. Judge Porteous, over the years, how much cash have you
01:38 20 received from Jake Amato and Bob Creely or their law firm?
21 A. I have no earthly idea.
22 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
23 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry. Jake Amato, A-M-A-T-O. Jacob
24 Amato, Robert Creely, C-R-E-E-L-Y, or their law firm.
19 25 BY MR. FINDER:

9 1 Q. Amato & Creely, I believe they are called.
2 A. Right.
3 Q. Is that correct?
4 A. Yeah.
01:39 5 Q. You do not know how much you've received from them?
6 A. I do not.
7 Q. Those men or their -- and/or their firm, correct?
8 A. That's correct.
9 Q. It could have been $10,000 or more. Isn't that right?
01:39 10 A. Again, you're asking me to speculate. I have no idea is 11 all I can tell you.
12 Q. When did you first start getting cash from Messrs. Amato,
13 Creely, or their law firm?
14 A. Probably when I was on state bench.
01:39 15 Q. And that practice continued into 1994, when you became a
16 federal judge, did it not?
17 A. I believe that's correct.
18 Q. Now, when Messrs. Amato and Creely -- and I'm only talking
19 about them right now --
01:39 20 A. I understand.
21 Q. -- and their law firm, not -- we'll talk about others
22 later. But when those men gave you money, did you consider it
23 a gift or a loan or income?
24 A. I never considered it income. It was either a gift or a
10 25 loan.

1 Q. Okay. If it was a loan, did you ever pay it back?
2 A. No, I didn't.
3 Q. Then, it became income, correct?
4 A. I don't know.
01:40 5 Q. Well, again, your Honor, I don't want to argue with you;
6 but --
7 A. I'm not arguing with you.
8 Q. -- if I loan you a hundred dollars and you don't pay it
9 back, that becomes income, correct?
01:40 10 A. It still may be a gift.
11 Q. If it was a loan and it's not forgiven as a gift, then it's
12 income, correct?
13 A. Right.
14 Q. But none of that ever appeared in your federal tax
01:40 15 return --
16 A. No --
17 Q. -- as income, correct?
18 A. -- it did not.
19 Q. Now, if it was a gift, it would have been on your financial
01:40 20 disclosure reports for 1994, which starts at Bates 215; 1995,
21 which starts at Bates 219; 1996, which starts at Bates 223;
22 1997, which starts at Bates 227; 1998, Bates 231; through 1999,
23 Bates 235, which we already reviewed.
24 I could show you these, Judge Porteous; but I'll 41 25 just ask you the question. Did you ever list any gifts from

1 Amato or Creely, cash gifts, in any of these financial
2 disclosures?
3 A. No.
4 Q. But you certified every one as being true and correct?
01:41 5 A. Correct.
6 Q. And there was an omission, then, correct?
7 A. Not that I'm aware of.
8 Q. Well, if someone gave you money during those years and it
9 was more than $250, wouldn't that be reportable?
01:41 10 A. I do not recall receiving any cash from them during that -- 11 Q. Do you recall in 1999, in the summer, May, June, receiving
12 $2,000 for them?
13 A. I've read Mr. Amato's grand jury testimony. It says we 14 were fishing and I made some representation that I was having 01:42 15 difficulties and that they loaned me some money or gave me some 16 money.
17 Q. You don't -- you're not denying it; you just don't remember
18 it?
19 A. I just don't have any recollection of it, but that would 01:42 20 have fallen in the category of a loan from a friend. That's 21 all.
22 Q. Has the loan ever been paid back --
23 A. No.
24 Q. -- if you got it?
12 25 A. No.

2 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Were any loans reported on the
2 disclosure statements?
3 MR. FINDER: No, sir.
4 THE WITNESS: I believe -- I'm not sure, but I don't
01:42 5 know the reported amount on the loans.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But whether a loan or a gift, it
7 wasn't -- it wasn't --
8 THE WITNESS: It wasn't reported.
9 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- to the extent that they might
01:42 10 exist, they weren't reported, either as a loan or a gift?
11 THE WITNESS: That's correct, Judge.
12 MR. FINDER: Right.
13 BY MR. FINDER:
14 Q. The exhibits that I just talked about, the years 1994
01:42 15 through '99, all have sections on liabilities and those are not 16 reported?
17 A. That's right.
18 Q. If I misstate, please correct me.
19 A. No. You're correct.
01:43 20 Q. Other than gifts of cash, did you ever fail to report --
21 from lawyers or others, not just Creely and Amato or their law
22 firm, but anybody else, not including your personal family
23 members -- cash gifts for entertainment or family needs,
24 including but not limited to hunting trips, fishing trips,
25 3 airfare, lodging, dining, trips out of the country or out of

1 state, such as Washington, D.C. or Las Vegas, parties for your
2 children, stipends for your children, tuition for your
3 children, car notes, mortgage payments, or gambling expenses
4 for you or your wife?

01:43 5 A. I'm sure I didn't include anything on that.

6 Q. And I have the reports here if you want to refresh your 7 recollection.

8 A. I understand.

9 Q. Did you ever report gifts that your court staff may have 01:43 10 received along with you, such as dining, travel, or 11 entertainment?

12 A. I'm sure I didn't.

13 Q. And I could go through that for every one of these 14 reporting years, but would that be -- your answer be the same
01:44 15 for years 1994, 19 -- through 1999 inclusive?

16 A. I absolutely agree that that's what those documents show
17 and certify.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You're referring to the same
19 questions as to reporting on those other years?

01:44 20 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

21 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. Counsel, with respect to
22 that last question, was -- was there an exception -- I thought
23 there was a report of a couple of fishing -- hunting trips or 24 fishing trips.

5 25 MR. FINDER: I believe those were Bar -- related to

5 1 Bar associations, but let me look quickly so I don't make a
2 mistake.

3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I thought there were a couple of
4 trips that he reported, at least in the exhibits that I saw.

01:45 5 MR. WOODS: Two hunting trips.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Two hunting trips.
7 MR. WOODS: Rowan and the other --
8 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
9 MR. WOODS: I'm sorry.

01:45 10 THE WITNESS: There were two included in the original
11 complaint filed by Justice, but not included in the ultimate
12 charge from the Court.

13 BY MR. FINDER:
14 Q. In the documents that I referred to, I didn't see hunting
01:46 15 trips. I've seen reimbursements from Bar associations, but not 16 hunting trips; and if I missed it, please correct me.
17 A. We had --

18 MR. WOODS: Judge Porteous is correct. There are two
19 instances on his financial disclosure forms where he reports a
01:46 20 Rowan -- Rowan Drilling Company trip.
21 THE WITNESS: "Rowan." Yeah.
22 MR. WOODS: And one other, Diamond.
23 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
24 THE WITNESS: Diamond.
46 25 MR. WOODS: Diamond Drilling Company.

6 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, with those exceptions, there was
2 no reports --

3 MR. WOODS: Yes.

4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- of loans or gifts or anything
01:46 5 with respect to hunting trips or any of these other things,
6 with the exceptions of those ones? "

7 MR. WOODS: That's correct. There are none except
8 those two.

9 MR. FINDER: And I'm still looking, and I haven't seen
01:47 10 them. So, I'm not sure if it's for these years or not; but I
11 think --

12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I don't know. It may be a
(13 different reporting period.

14 (Sotto voce discussion between counsel)

11:59 15 BY MR. FINDER:

16 Q. Judge Porteous, I'm going to show you from Exhibit 20 --

17 MR. FINDER: Bates Number 585, your Honors. Let me
18 make this smaller.

19 BY MR. FINDER:

01:48 20 Q. Do you recognize this, sir, a casino credit application for 21 Harrah's casino?

22 A. Yes, sir, that's what it says.

23 Q. Okay... And the purpose of this is what?

24 A. To be able to sign markers.

'8 25 Q. Correct.

1 And it is dated April 30th, 2001, correct?

2 A. Right.

3 Q. And that is just two days -- three days -- March has 31

4 days -- three days after bankruptcy, correct?

01:48 5 A. Yes, sir.

6 No. Wait.

7 MR. WOODS: April.

8 BY MR. FINDER:

9 Q. April. I'm sorry.

01:48 10 After your -- forgive me. After your amended

11 petition, it was a couple -- two and half, three weeks after

12 your amended petition?

13 A. Yes, sir.

14 Q. You list under "Financial Information" income of over a

01:48 15 hundred thousand --

16 A. Right.

17 Q. -- in salary.

18 Over $250,000 in a home?

19 A. Right.

01:48 20 Q. Indebtedness, zero, correct?

21 A. That's not my handwriting. I don't -- I don't know who

22 filled that out.

23 Q. Is this your handwriting?

24 A. That is.

19 25 Q. So, you don't know --

9 1 A. That is not my handwriting.

2 Q. Well, when you signed this, was there anything on there?

3 Did somebody put it on there after you signed it?

4 A. I have -- cannot tell you that. I don't know that. But

01:49 5 that is not my handwriting.

6 Q. And --

7 A. If I look at the rest of it, I can tell you if it is.

8 Q. Well -- (Indicating).

9 A. The rest of it -- now, don't -- okay. You get towards the

01:49 10 top, that's --

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: There's a certification above your

12 handwriting. "I certify that I reviewed all the information

13 provided above and it is true and accurate."

14 THE WITNESS: I don't -- yeah, Judge. I'm just saying

01:49 15 it's not my handwriting is all.

16 BY MR. FINDER:

17 Q. So, even though it's certified as being true and correct,

18 you don't take responsibility for the indebtedness --

19 A. I don't know that that was on there when I signed it. I

01:49 20 just don't have any recollection.

21 Q. We talked about Messrs. Creely and Amato and their law

22 firm, the law firm of Creely & Amato.

23 A. Right.

24 Q. Mr. Creely is what kind of a lawyer? What kind of a

50 25 practice would you say he has?

1 A. Over the years, I think it's changed. Now he -- he was
2 in -- for awhile into multidistrict litigation, complex
3 litigation, class action type litigation.
4 Q. Mr. Amato started off pretty much as a personal injury
01:50 5 lawyer, didn't he?
6 A. Yeah.
7 Q. And throughout most of his career considered himself --
8 A. I think he was a personal injury lawyer. I never knew Jake
9 to take a divorce case or anything like that.
01:50 10 Q. And nor did he practice that often in federal court,
11 correct? As far as you know?
12 A. As far as I know.
13 Q. Other than Messrs. Creely and Amato and their law firm, we
14 talked about other lawyers in this case, such as Mr. Levenson.
01:51 15 Have you received any cash from Mr. Levenson?
16 A. No, not that I -- to the best of my knowledge, I have never
17 received any cash from Mr. Levenson.
18 Q. But Mr. Levenson, along with Messrs. Creely and Amato, it
19 would not be uncommon for them to take you out to lunch?
01:51 20 A. That's correct.
21 Q. And -- or dinners?
22 A. Yeah. On an occasion, I would think, yeah.
23 Q. Well, Mr. Levenson took you out to some places for lunch
24 or -- and/or dinner, such as Ruth's Chris or, before Hurricane 25 Katrina, Smith & Wollensky's. Isn't that correct?

1 A. I'm sure that's correct.

2 Q. And some -- and you were never -- you never paid, did you?

3 A. No.

4 Q. Now, other than Messrs. Amato and Creely, who else had --

01:52 5 what other lawyers -- lawyer friends of yours have given you

6 money over the years?

7 A. Given me money?

8 Q. Money, cash.

9 A. Gardner may have. Probably did.

01:52 10 Q. Let's talk about --

11 A. But I don't recall any others.

12 Q. Let's talk about Mr. Gardner.

13 A. All right.

14 Q. He's also a -- he was a divorce lawyer, wasn't he?

01:52 15 A. Mr. Gardner tries to do everything.

16 Q. So, if he said that he's a family lawyer, he -- that would

17 be --

18 A. I think that's what his practice is now.

19 Q. But not -- as far as you know, his practice is not

01:52 20 primarily in federal court?

21 A. No, not that I'm aware of.

22 Q. And when is the last time Mr. Gardner gave you money?

23 A. Before I took the federal bench, I'm sure.

24 Q. Okay. And do you recall how much?

32 25 A. Absolutely not.

2 1 Q. Now, when you were a state judge, did you ever report any
2 of these cash gifts on your Louisiana disclosure forms?
3 A. No. I don't think we actually received forms, but I don't
4 remember that.

01:53 5 Q. Okay.
6 A. Whether you received a form like the federal government,
7 where you have to fill it out, I don't believe they had
8 reporting forms at the time. I know what the statute says, but
9 I don't think it's like it is in federal court.

01:53 10 Q. Before you became a federal judge, you used -- as a state
11 judge, you used to send something called "curatorships" over to 12 the Creely-Amato firm, did you not?
13 A. And Gardner and all those, yeah.

01:53 14 Q. Just talking about Creely and Amato and their law firm
15 right now. You would occasionally, after sending them
16 curatorships -- and for the record, what is a -- how would you
17 describe a curatorship?
18 A. It's for an absent defendant. It could be in a variety of 19 situations. The most common two are executory process and then
01:53 20 interdiction.
21 Q. And after receiving curatorships, Mr. -- Messrs. Creely
22 and/or Amato and/or their law firm would give you money,
23 correct? ..
24 A. Occasionally.

25 Q. You mentioned before that you read the grand jury

4 1 transcript of Mr. Amato and were familiar with his allegations
2 about a fishing trip?
3 A. Right.
4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Are you leaving the curatorship?
01:54 5 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You had an "open-ended question about
7 whether he received money from these people after they were
8 appointed a curatorship.
9 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.
01:54 10 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Do you intend to establish any
11 relationship between the receipt of money and the curatorship?
12 MR. FINDER: Not through this witness.
13 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay.
14 MR. FINDER: But if the Court has questions --
01:54 15 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I just didn't know whether to -- I
16 don't want to interrupt you --
17 MR. FINDER: That's all right.
18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- or your train of thought about it
19 but --
01:54 20 MR. FINDER: Okay. Well, let -- well, we'll -- so I
21 won't have it open-ended, let me ask the question.
22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Go ahead.
23 BY MR. FINDER:
24 Q. During the time you were giving Creely and Amato and the 55 25 law firm curatorships and you were getting cash back, was that

35 1 cash that you received a kickback for the curatorship, in your
2 mind?

3 A. No, sir.

4 Q. Not in your mind?

01:55 5 A. Not in my mind.

6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Let me ask a question. According --
7 and it's -- you have been afforded the grand jury testimony, we
8 have seen the grand jury testimony, everybody has seen the 9 grand jury testimony. But it would seem that there is 01:55 10 testimony before the grand jury that there was a return in the 11 exact same amount, minus expenses, of the curatorship that was 12 returned to you, according to one of the witnesses.

13 THE WITNESS: That's apparently what it says. I
14 agree.

01:55 15 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Is that true or not?

16 THE WITNESS: Not -- to the best of my knowledge, that
17 is not correct.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You would not know whether you would 19 receive the same money after appointing someone a curator that
01:55 20 he would get, minus his expenses?

21 THE WITNESS: I don't recall that occurring.
22 You're ask -- again, we're back to 1994 and before. I know I
23 sent them curators --

24 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You know, you have immunity --

56 25 THE WITNESS: I know.

1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- from all criminal prosecution --
2 THE WITNESS: I understand.
3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- except perjury.
4 THE WITNESS: I understand that.
01:56 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And your -- and, so, that would
6 be -- if it matched the expense -- the amount each time --
7 THE WITNESS: I don't --
8 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- except for expenses, that would
9 be a coincidence?
01:56 10 THE WITNESS: I don't know if it matched each time.
11 That's all I can tell you, Judge. I don't know.
12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I understand.
13 BY MR. FINDER:
14 Q. Didn't you start sending -- Judge Porteous, didn't you
01:56 15 start sending curatorships over to Mr. Creely when he demurred
16 to get -- give you more money?
17 A. I've read his testimony. I know that's what he says. I
18 just -- he "demurred."
19 Q. Maybe I'll use a different word instead of "demurred."
01:57 20 A. "Refused."
21 Q. Objected to or refused to give you more money, isn't that
22 when the curatorships started?
23 A. I don't know the date the curatorships started; so, I can't 24 tell you that.
57 25 Q. Do you recall --

7 1 A. I don't remember when I first started sending them.
2 Q. Do you recall calling Mr. Creely's secretary and saying,
3 "How much have you received in curatorships" before asking for
4 money?
01:57 5 A. I don't recall calling her. I'm not saying I've never
6 spoken with his secretary.
7 Q. Do you recall Mr. Creely refusing to pay you money before
8 the curatorships started?
9 A. He may have said I needed to get my finances under control,
01:57 10 yeah.
11 Q. And the curatorships, therefore, would be a source of 12 income for Mr. Creely -- to pass through Mr. Creely and his 13 firm to you, correct?
14 A. That's a speculation or opinion. I don't -- I don't know
01:57 15 what you want to call it.
16 Q. What is your recollection in May or June of 1999 of going
17 on a fishing trip with Mr. Amato? Do you recall going on a
18 fishing trip?
19 A. I know I went with Jake on a trip with Mitch Mullin.
01:58 20 Q. Actually, you went on a lot of fishing trips with Amato and
21 Creely, mainly Creely.
22 Have you heard of a place called Delacroix?
23 A. Oh, yeah, "Delacroix."
24 Q. "Delacroix." Excuse me for my mispronunciation.
58 25 That's property that he either owned or had a

1 lease on, correct?

2 A. Correct.

3 Q. And fishing would often take place there, correct?

4 A. Oh, yeah.

01:58 5 Q. And not just you but other elected officials would be
6 invited?

7 A. The judges, yes.

8 Q. And you went fishing there numerous times?

9 A. Over the years?

01:58 10 Q. Yes.

11 A. Yeah.

12 Q. You never were charged for any mode of --

13 A. No, sir.

14 Q. -- transportation, any refreshments, things of that nature?

01:58 15 A. No, sir.

16 Q. All right. So, getting back to the fishing trip with

17 Mr. Amato in May or June of 1999, which you -- which you

18 referenced, you brought up, Mr. Amato -- do you recall telling

19 Mr. Amato in a very emotional way that you had a wedding coming

01:59 20 up and you needed cash?

21 A. I did have a wedding coming up. You're asking me if I -- I

22 don't recall a conversation with Jake.

23 Q. Who was getting married?

24 A. Timmy.

59 25 In '99?

1 Q. Yes.
2 A. Timmy.
3 Q. Your son Timmy?
4 A. Right.
01:59 5 Q. And that's the bachelor party you also went to in
6 Las Vegas. We'll get --
7 A. That's correct.
8 Q. -- to in a moment. Correct?
9 A. Correct.
01:59 10 Q. Well, whether or not you recall asking Mr. Amato for money
11 during this fishing trip, do you recall getting an envelope
12 with $2,000 shortly thereafter?
13 A. Yeah. Something seems to suggest that there may have been
14 an envelope. I don't remember the size of an envelope, how I
01:59 15 got the envelope, or anything about it.
16 Q. Do you recall sending Rhonda Danos over to get the 17 envelope?
18 A. Rhonda has gone to Jake and Bob's office on numerous
19 occasions. I don't even know if she went in '99.
02:00 20 Q. Judge, I know 1999 was almost a decade ago; but if you
21 received an envelope from lawyers -- a sealed envelope that had 22 a couple thousand dollars cash in it, do you think you would 23 remember that?
24 A. That's what I'm saying. I don't know if it was a sealed
25 envelope, a bank envelope, or what.

0 1 Q. Okay. Let me --
2 JUDGE LAKE: Wait a second. Is it the nature of the
3 envelope you're disputing?
4 THE WITNESS: No. Money was received in envelope.
02:00 5 JUDGE LAKE: And had cash in it?
6 THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.
7 JUDGE LAKE: And it was from Creely and/or --
8 THE WITNESS: Amato.
9 JUDGE LAKE: -- Amato?
02:00 10 THE WITNESS: Yes.
11 JUDGE LAKE: And it was used to pay for your son's
12 wedding?
13 THE WITNESS: To help defray the cost, yeah.
14 JUDGE LAKE: And was used --
02:00 15 THE WITNESS: They loaned -- my impression was it was 16 a loan.
17 JUDGE LAKE: And would you dispute that the amount was 18 $2,000?
19 THE WITNESS: I don't have any basis to dispute it.
01:05 20 JUDGE LAKE: All right. Thank you.
21 BY MR. FINDER:
22 Q. Your impression was that it was a loan was what you just 23 said, correct?
24 A. Yes.
00 25 Q. Did you ever pay back the loan?

02:00 1 A. No, I didn't. I declared bankruptcy in 2001; and, of
2 course, I didn't list it.
3 Q. But it wasn't listed as paid --
4 A. No, it wasn't listed.
02:01 5 Q. So, did you ever pay back the loan --
6 A. No.
7 Q. -- was my question.
8 A. No.
9 Q. Then, it was income. Is that right?
02:01 10 A. You're saying it's income. If that's what the rules
11 provide --
12 Q. Sir, I don't say anything. I'm asking you a question.
13 .. If it's a loan and it's not paid back, you're a
14 federal judge, you know some law --
02:01 15 A. It's income.
16 Q. -- it's income, right?
17 A. All right.
18 Q. But it was never reported on your tax returns, was it?
19 A. No, it was not.
02:01 20 Q. It was never reported on the judicial disclosure form under 21 "Other Income," was it?
22 A. No.
23 Q. Let's talk about the bachelor party.
24 A. All right.
01 25 Q. In approximately May of 1999, your son Timmy was going to

01 1 get married that summer, correct?
2 A. Right.
3 Q. And Rhonda, I believe, even helped with the arrangements
4 for a party, for you, some of your lawyer and non-lawyer
02:01 5 friends, and Timmy to go to Las Vegas, correct?
6 I believe you stayed at New York-New York?
7 A. No. I believe we stayed at Caesars.
8 Q. Was it Caesars? Maybe it was just the ride at New York-New
9 York. There was a picture taken. Do you remember that?
02:02 10 A. Yeah, there was a -- some kind of amusement there.
11 Q. Now, lawyers paid for you to go, did they not? They gave 12 you money to go on that trip, did they not?
13 A. I believe the allegations are that there was a ticket that
14 Forstall had purchased at some point, that I used.
02:02 15 Q. Mr. Forstall is Chip Forstall, right?
16 A. Right.
17 Q. He gave you a ticket; and then he ended up not going,
18 correct?
19 A. Not for this trip. This was another trip.
02:02 20 Q. Okay. The other trip was to San Francisco, I believe; and 21 he didn't go?
22 A. None of us went.
23 Q. Okay. But you had the ticket?
24 A. Right.
02 25 Q. And you used that ticket, you're saying, to go to

2 1 Las Vegas?

2 A. I may have.

3 Q. Well, once you get to Las Vegas, you have to stay in a

4 room, right?

02:02 5 A. Right.

6 Q. You didn't pay for the room, did you?

7 A. It appears I did not.

8 Q. And do you know who paid for it?

9 A. It appears Mr. Creely paid for it.

02:02 10 Q. Mr. Creely, that's right.

11 Now, that was over a period of approximately four

12 days, as I recall, from the records?

13 A. Three or four.

14 Q. Three or four.

02:03 15 That exceeded $250 total for the room, correct?

16 A. Yeah.

17 Q. Did that ever appear on your judicial --

18 A. No, it did not.

19 Q. -- your form that you file with the administrative office?

02:03 20 A. No, it did not.

21 Q. It did not.

22 Although you considered that a gift, correct?

23 A. Yeah, it was a gift. I mean, Creely got there before we

24 all did. I know he checked me in.

03 25 Q. And it wasn't just for you. It was also for Timmy?

03 1 A. What?
2 Q. Timmy stayed for free?
3 A. Not because of Mr. Creely.
4 Q. Well, somebody paid for Timmy, right?
02:03 5 A. I went down and asked the casino to comp their room, and I
6 think they did.
7 Q. So, if -- so, it's your testimony here today it was not
8 Mr. Creely or one of your other friends that picked up the tab
9 for his room?
02:03 10 A. Not that I -- for Timmy's room?
11 Q. For Timmy.
12 A. No, sir, not that I'm aware of.
13 " I'm trying to remember who was in that room.
14 Probably all my sons were in that room.
02:04 15 Q. And when you were in Las Vegas, you had to eat?
16 A. Yes.
17 Q. And you didn't just eat in the hotel you were staying at;
18 you ate in other places, too, correct?
19 A. We had one outside meal that I can recall.
02:04 20 Q. But you didn't pay for that meal, did you?
21 A. No, I did not.
22 Q. Who paid for it?
23 A. A variety -- I think Creely did and maybe some other people
24 picked up various portions.
04 25 Q. But the bottom line is that wasn't comped?

1 A. That was not comped.
2 Q. And when I say "comped," I'm talking about complimentary --
3 A. No.
4 Q. -- where a hotel --
02:04 5 A. No.
6 Q. -- would pick up the fee, correct?
7 A. No.
8 Q. And nothing from that trip to Las Vegas, for you and your 9 sons -- who was your other son, by the way, that went?
02:04 10 A. Michael.
11 Q. Michael.
12 Nothing that went to you or your two children, in 13 your immediate family, was ever reported under a judicial 14 disclosure form, correct?
02:05 15 A. No, sir.
16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How old were the children at that
17 time?
18 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry?
19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How old were the boys at that time?
02:05 20 THE WITNESS: Give me a second, Judge. '99?
21 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Oh, let me ask --
22 THE WITNESS: 28, 26, and 23.
23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay. They weren't dependents
24 living at home?
25 THE WITNESS: Oh, no, sir.

5 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.

2 JUDGE LAKE: Did Mr. Creely or Mr. Amato or the other

3 attorneys reimburse the casino for any gambling losses you had,

4 Judge?

02:05 5 THE WITNESS: Absolutely not.

6 BY MR. FINDER:

7 Q. Let me jump ahead, then, in light of that question. On

8 Exhibit 48 -- I believe it's 48 -- yeah, Bates Number 997, 998,

9 the records from Caesar -- I believe that is from Caesars

02:06 10 Palace.

11 A. All right.

12 Q. May 20th, 1999, that's when you were in Las Vegas for the 13 bachelor party, correct?

14 A. I believe so.

02:06 15 Q. Okay. Well --

16 A. May -- I know we went '99. It's before the wedding.

17 That's the right date.

18 Q. I mean --

19 A. It's before the wedding.

02:06 20 Q. For the record, that's your name, correct?

21 A. Right.

22 Q. And that's the city where you live, correct?

23 A. Right.

24 Q. And were you also there in October of '99?

06 25 A. Certainly appears that I was.

1 Q. Okay. Well, let's talk about May.
2 A. All right.
3 Q. May 20th, 1999, looks like gambling losses of $1200,
4 correct?
02:06 5 MR. FINDER: And we're going to follow up with a
6 summary witness on this, but I wanted to jump ahead.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I don't know if you got a response
8 to that last question.
9 MR. FINDER: I'm going to clarify it with the next
02:07 10 page.
11 BY MR. FINDER:
12 Q. In all fairness, since -- I should have asked you this 13 question, Judge. Forgive me.
14 A. All right.
02:07 15 Q. Have you ever seen this record before?
16 A. If it's one of the exhibits, I know you sent it to me.
17 Q. Yes. It's from Exhibit 48.
18 A. Okay. But I don't recall -- I didn't look at it. If you
19 sent it to me, I've got it.
02:07 20 Q. Okay. The very next page, Bates Number 998 --
21 A. All right.
22 Q. -- the same exhibit, 48 --
23 A. Fine..
24 Q. -- it shows from the period May 20 to May 22. And on the 07 25 prior page, we were talking about May 20. So, that's

1 consistent, correct?

2 A. All right. All right.

3 Q. "Win/loss," and it shows negative -- or 1,200 with a minus

4 sign, correct?

02:08 5 A. Yeah.

6 Q. Would that suggest to you that's a loss of $1200?

7 A. It appears to be.

8 Q. Okay.

9 A. Okay. Wait. Let me just see something.

02:08 10 Okay. All right.

11 Q. For the record, that's the number, "998"?

12 A. Yeah.

13 Q. Now, as you said, you were only in Las Vegas for about

14 three or four days, right?

02:08 15 A. Yeah.

16 Q. Okay. Let's look at your Fidelity Bank statement for

17 May 25th. Shows a deposit of $5,000?

18 A. Correct.

19 Q. Was that -- were those winnings?

02:08 20 A. They were.

21 Q. So, you won at some casino, even though it wasn't the one

22 we just looked at?

23 A. I was able to bring that much money home, but it was still

24 owed on credit cards. So, I -- when you say it was a winning,

08 25 I basically broke even when you added it all up.

1 Q. So, let's get this straight. You've -- your amended
2 petition was filed -- or your bankruptcy, was filed in 2000.
3 About six months -- or nine months, perhaps, before that, you
4 were in Las Vegas, gambling, and you came back with $5,000
02:09 5 after you lost about 1200 at a different casino, correct?
6 A. I don't know if it's a different casino.
7 Q. It could have been the same one?
8 A. Could have been the same one.
9 Q. Well, but the records don't show winnings, do they?
02:09 10 A. You know -- well, when you're playing at a table and 11 winning, casinos do not traditionally keep track of that.
12 That trip, if you have those records, I think
13 would probably establish that the markers I signed on the very 14 first night there were paid off that very same day; but they 02:09 15 don't show the -- how the money was given out. They just don't 16 do it that way. That's between the casinos and how they
17 transact business. You're not given a 1099.
18 So, all I can tell you is I did win.
19 Q. So, it's your testimony that that money, the 5,000, was
02:10 20 from gaming; it wasn't from lawyers or friends?
21 A. Came from no one.
22 Q. Okay.
23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What was the difference? 3800,
24 roughly?
10 25 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

.0 1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. Judge, do you remember a case called "Liljeberg"?
3 A. I do.
4 Q. Very complex litigation, wasn't it?
02:10 5 A. I would say.
6 Q. As a matter of fact, before you got it, I think it went
7 through several district judges.
8 A. Oh, it went through a bunch of different judges.
9 Q. And, then, one day it ended up in your court; and you were
02:10 10 ultimately the trial judge, correct?
11 A. Right.
12 Q. That lawsuit, sir, was filed -- well, let's not guess.
13 Let me show you what's been marked as Exhibit 82.
14 Do you recognize this as the docket sheet for Liljeberg?
02:11 15 A. Exhibit 82.
16 Q. That's what I have up on the screen.
17 A. Yeah, that would be the docket sheet, which seems to 18 indicate it was filed in '93.
19 Q. What did I say?
02:11 20 A. May --
21 Q. I'm sorry. June 1, 1993. What did I say?
22 A. I don't know.
23 Q. I thought you --
24 A. No, no.
1 25 Q. -- said I misspoke.

1 Okay. Does this appear to be the docket sheet?
2 I'm happy to show it to you.
3 A. Yeah, it appears to be the docket sheet.
4 Q. All right. Let's look at the some of the lawyers on there.
02:11 5 We already talked about this gentleman, Joe -- Joseph Mole --
6 A. Right.
7 Q. -- correct?
8 A. Right.
9 Q. And Don Gardner?
02:11 10 A. Right.
11 Q. Now, Don Gardner, as you said, as far as you know, isn't a
12 federal court practitioner?
13 A. No, as far as I know.
14 Q. And this is a complex case?
02:11 15 A. Very complex.
16 Q. But he's your buddy and he's appearing for the plaintiff,
17 correct?
18 A. Correct.
19 Q. Let's look at some of the defense lawyers.
02:11 20 MR. WOODS: Appearing for the defense.
21 MR. FINDER: "Plaintiff, Lifemark."
22 MR. WOODS: Okay.
23 BY MR. FINDER:
24 Q. For the defendant in Liljeberg -- on -- this docket sheet
12 25 says "Defendant Liljeberg," correct?

1 A. Right.
2 Q. Jacob Amato?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. Who was -- unlike his partner Mr. Creely, who did MDL
02:12 5 cases, Mr. Amato typically didn't do this kind of case, did he?
6 A. I would think that's correct.
7 Q. You don't think I'm correct?
8 A. No. I would think that was correct.
9 Q. Oh, forgive me.
02:12 10 Lenny Levenson?
11 A. Correct.
12 Q. Also not typically trying these type of cases in federal
13 court, correct?
14 A. He -- maybe not federal court, but he did some fairly
02:12 15 complex litigation.
16 Q. Both of whom are your friends, correct?
17 A. Absolutely.
18 Q. And I believe, according to the docket sheet, the case was 19 originally filed June 1, 1993. That's what it says, right?
02:12 20 A. That's what it says.
21 Q. June 1, 1993.
22 A. All right.
23 Q. Now, let's jump ahead to September 19th, 1996. The case
24 has been around for two years, right?
13 25 A. Right.

1 Q. Motion by Party Liljeberg to bring in, among the following
2 attorneys, Jacob Amato and Lenny Levenson, correct?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. You're the judge at this point, right?
02:13 5 A. Right.
6 Q. And you allow them in?
7 A. Yeah.
8 Q. Okay. I skipped one.
9 Let's go back to April 4th, 1996. Lifemark
02:13 10 brings in Joe Mole --
11 A. All right.
12 Q. -- to be one of their lawyers, right?
13 A. Yeah, right.
14 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What was the name? Was that Mole?
02:13 15 MR. FINDER: M-O-L-E, Joe Mole, Joseph Mole.
16 BY MR. FINDER:
17 Q. Then, on September 12th -- and I think we covered this on 18 September 19th, but on September 12th it looks like St. Jude
19 Hospital brings in Lenny Levenson, correct?
02:14 20 A. Right.
21 Q. But St. Jude was affiliated with Liljeberg, right?
22 A. I believe that's correct.
23 Q. And that's why a week later, on September 19th, Levenson is 24 joined by Jake Amato, right?
14 25 A. Yeah.

4 1 Q. Okay. Both of whom I believe you said typically wouldn't
2 be in this kind of case.
3 A. I'm not saying Levenson wouldn't, but Amato typically would
4 not be in this kind of case. Not that he didn't have the 02:14 5 capacity, he just typically wouldn't be in this kind of case.
6 Q. Okay. Then October 2nd, 1996 -- "
7 A. All right.
8 Q. -- Plaintiff Lifemark files a motion to recuse you,
9 correct?
02:15 10 A. Right.
11 Q. And that is scheduled for a hearing, if I'm reading this 12 docket order right, on October 16th, 1996, correct?
13 A. Correct..
14 Q. All right. Frankly, I can't figure out what day you heard
02:15 15 the motion to recuse. Maybe it was by submission. But it
16 looks like on October 17th -- on -- I'm sorry. October 17th
17 the hearing was held.
18 You deny Lifemark's motion to recuse, correct?
19 A. Right.
02:15 20 Q. I'm sorry?
21 A. Yes.
22 Q. All right. After Lifemark loses -- well after -- on 23 March 11th, 1997, they bring in your other friend, Don Gardner,
24 right?
15 25 A. Correct.

5 1 Q. Who also, as I believe you testified before, typically
2 wouldn't be in this kind of case?
3 A. Absolutely.
4 Q. He's a divorce lawyer, right?
02:16 5 A. Right.
6 Q. Or family lawyer. I don't mean to disparage any area --
7 kind of practice.
8 A. Call him a divorce lawyer.
9 Q. Okay. I'm only saying what he calls himself.
02:16 10 A. I understand.
11 Q. And did you think it was unusual for lawyers that don't
12 typically practice in this kind of complex litigation to, all
13 of a sudden, appear before you?
14 A. Yeah, sure do.
02:16 15 Q. Did that concern you or trouble you?
16 A. No, only to the extent that somebody thought they needed to 17 bring somebody else in.
18 Q. Well, did you ever bring it to the attention of any party
19 that, "Hey, guys, here's -- here's Amato and Creely. They've 02:16 20 given me money in the past. I want you to know about that 21 because under the canons of ethics I'm supposed to avoid the 22 appearance of impropriety and tell you about these kind of 23 things and recuse myself if the parties have an objection"?
24 A. I didn't do that.
16 25 Q. So, looks like Mr. Mole, on behalf of Lifemark, brings in

7 1 Don Gardner to kind of even the playing field, so to speak,
2 correct?
3 A. That's --
4 Q. For whatever reason he had, he brought in Mr. Gardner,
02:17 5 right?
6 A. Correct.
7 Q. Because he's already lost the recusal motion, right?
8 A. I don't know if that's why, but he -- he brought him in.
9 Q. Well, it followed the recusal?
02:17 10 A. It followed the recusal.
11 Q. Now, we have a non-jury trial, a bench trial, correct?
12 A. Yeah.
13 Q. And that starts June 16th, 1997?
14 A. Right.
02:17 15 Q. And that's some years after this lawsuit has been filed,
16 correct?
17 A. Yeah.
18 Q. Moving ahead to April 26th -- tried June 16th, and it looks
19 like the trial went, according to -- if I'm reading this right,
02:17 20 Smoothman --
21 A. It ran on for a period of time.
22 Q. At least until July 23rd, 1997, correct, because it says,
23 "matter taken under submission" --
24 A. Yes. Yes.
18 25 Q. -- 1997. And judgment was not rendered until April 26,

8 1 2000, if I'm reading this right --
2 A. You're reading correctly.
3 Q. -- when you had your findings of fact, conclusions of law?
4 A. Right.
02:18 5 Q. Not to beat a dead horse, Judge Porteous, but you've told
6 this panel that Amato and Creely have given you money, although 7 you can't remember specifics, and you think that Gardner has
8 given you money, but that was not disclosed to any of the other
9 lawyers in this case, correct?
02:18 10 A. That was not.
11 Q. Lenny Levenson -- I'm sorry.
12 Don Gardner was -- you stood up at his wedding,
13 correct?
14 A. I went to his wedding. I don't know if I was in it; but,
02:19 15 yeah, I went to his wedding.
16 Q. And you're the godfather of his daughter -- one of his
17 daughters, right?
18 A. Uh-huh.
19 Q. And, Judge Porteous, as we just looked on the docket sheet,
02:19 20 Liljeberg was pending in 19 -- in May, June, 1999 --
21 A. It was.
22 Q. -- when you went to Vegas courtesy of Creely and others and 23 when you got an envelope, whether it's a banker's envelope or 24 manila, some kind of envelope from the Creely-Amato law firm,
19 25 right?

.9 1 A. Yes, sir, it was pending.
 2 Q. That was during the pendency of that lawsuit?
 3 A. Right.
 4 Q. You didn't tell anybody about that, did you?
 02:20 5 A. I did not.
 6 MR. FINDER: May I have a moment to confer with my
 7 co-counsel?
 8 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sure.
 9 (Sotto voce discussion between counsel)
 02:20 10 MR. FINDER: Judge, may we -- Judges -- excuse me --
 11 may we have a ten minute break?
 12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
 13 MR. FINDER: Thank you.
 14 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sure. Ten minutes?
 02:20 15 THE WITNESS: I -- at 2:30? I mean --
 16 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, till 2:30.
 17 THE WITNESS: Okay.
 18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Thank you.
 19 (Recess taken from 2:20 p.m. to 2:35 p.m.)
 02:35 20 MR. WOODS: We're excusing Claude Lightfoot from our 21 witness list, but Judge Porteous may want to call him; so, he's 22 going to be on call for --
 23 MR. WINSBERG: We'll be available if there's any need.
 24 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right.
 16 25 MR. WOODS: And we are also excusing Don Gardner.

6 1 JUDGE LAKE: I want to ask -- may I ask Judge Porteous
2 a question about Mr. Gardner?

3 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor. I think Mr. Finder was
4 going to finish up; and then we were going to allow him to 02:36 5 either testify or for you-all to ask questions, however -- what
6 procedure do you want to follow?

7 JUDGE LAKE: Let me just ask him a question.

8 Judge Porteous, during the Liljeberg case, while
9 you were assigned to the case, did Mr. Gardner give you any 02:36 10 money or give you any consideration of any type, in the form of 11 expenses for trips or anything of that nature?

12 THE WITNESS: No, Judge, not to my recollection, he
13 did not. Now, the bachelor party, of course, being at the same
14 time, I'm not saying that when we were in Vegas he didn't buy a
02:36 15 round of drinks or something; but to the best of my knowledge,
16 no.

17 JUDGE LAKE: Okay. So, other than the bachelor party,
18 you don't recall Gardner giving you anything of value during
19 the pendency of the Liljeberg case?

02:37 20 THE WITNESS: No, I do not, Judge.

21 JUDGE LAKE: Thank you.

22 THE WITNESS: He and I have been friends for a long --

23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And you're fixing to let Gardner
24 leave?

17 25 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor.

1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What do we have with respect to
2 Gardner's role, if any, in the bachelor party and the time
3 period for that?
4 MR. WOODS: Merely the fact that he attended,
02:37 5 your Honor. We have no testimony from Gardner that he gave him
6 money during that period of time.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: During the time that he was
8 associated with the Liljeberg case?
9 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor. Yes, your Honor.
02:37 10 MR. FINDER: All right. May I finish up now?
11 JUDGE LAKE: Yes.
12 BY MR. FINDER:
13 Q. Judge Porteous, I showed you Exhibit 80 when we started off
14 this morning --
02:38 15 A. You did.
16 Q. -- your oath. Do you feel you have given true faith and 17 allegiance to the United States since you've been a United
18 States District Judge?
19 A. Yes, because I've been fair and impartial in every
02:38 20 proceeding that comes before me.
21 MR. FINDER: No further questions of the witness.
22 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Are you going to ask some more
23 questions about the casino markers?
24 MR. FINDER: About what, your Honor?
38 25 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Are you going to ask more

02:38 1 questions about the casino markers?

2 MR. WOODS: We're going to have a witness testify
3 about those.

4 MR. FINDER: Not of this witness, but we are going to 02:39 5 ask more questions of other witnesses.

6 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Okay.

7 Judge Porteous, if you had all this to do over
8 again, would you have filed different financial disclosure
9 statements?

02:39 10 THE WITNESS: Likely, Judge. I mean, maybe now in 11 hindsight some of it was -- should have been included. The 12 debt was -- the failure to list the correct debt, that was 13 right after the bankruptcy. It was like the end of the world.
14 I mean, my wife was nervous, a wreck, upset. My finances were
02:39 15 all over the paper. Everybody in America knew my finances. It
16 was just inadvertence, not any intent to hide my finances.

17 Hell, they were part of the bankruptcy record.
18 They were all over the newspaper.

19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. The letter from
02:39 20 Lightfoot to the creditors made specific reference to the 21 exclusion of the -- to exclude this bank with the $5,000 loan.
22 Why was there a specific reference to exclude them from those
23 unsecured-creditors that you and Lightfoot were seeking a
24 workout agreement with?

10 25 THE WITNESS: Buddy Butler, as I said before, was --

02:40 1 is and was a friend of mine. To the extent possible, I wanted
2 to try and pay Buddy back all of his money.

3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, you don't, then, disagree
4 that -- that this bank was not put -- or reported in your 02:40 5 bankruptcy proceeding as an unsecured creditor, that that was
6 purposefully done?

7 It was done because you wanted to take care of 8 what you thought was an obligation to a good friend; but there
9 was a specific, conscious decision to exclude it from --
02:41 10 exclude them as -- from your list of unsecured creditors?

11 THE WITNESS: No, no, not from my ultimate list of 12 unsecured creditors. They were listed as -- when I filed the 13 bankruptcy. But in the potential attempt to avoid bankruptcy,
14 Claude Lightfoot attempted to work out payoffs with all of 02:41 15 these creditors where I would pay them X percentage, but I was 16 omitting Regions from that.

17 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You conscious -- it seems like there
18 was a conscious desire in the workout agreements not to include
19 the bank with the $5,000 loan to it.

02:41 20 THE WITNESS: That's correct.

21 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And then -- and, then, there was a
22 provision, with respect to payments made prior to the 23 bankruptcy filing, which would have been -- which would have 24 shown that -- well, it's kind of like they weren't there but
2 25 they -- did you actually pay them off?

2 1 Actually, they wound up not protected, right,
2 with the rest of the unsecured creditors?
3 THE WITNESS: Who is that, Judge?
4 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: The Regions Bank.
02:42 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Regions Bank.
6 THE WITNESS: They were always an unsecured creditor.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And you're saying that every
8 application that you've had, everything that you had in the --
9 in the bankruptcy court listed the bank?
02:42 10 THE WITNESS: Oh, in the bankruptcy court?
11 Absolutely.
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: I guess what rings a bit hollow --
13 and maybe you can comment on this, because it's not quite a
14 question. But you say you thought -- were thinking you wanted
02:42 15 to treat your friend fairly. Well, you didn't write down the 16 Fleet Credit Card, and that got paid off so you could maintain
17 that while the bankruptcy was going on. And, then, you also 18 continued to pay off some of the gambling debts. But you could 19 have -- you could have excluded Fleet and paid that one on the 02:42 20 side, too, even though that wouldn't be standard bankruptcy.
21 THE WITNESS: Judge, I've read Mr. Lightfoot's grand
22 jury testimony; and I see that Fleet was paid off. I see that.
23 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: By your secretary.
24 THE WITNESS: Yeah, it appears it was paid by my 43 25 secretary. It was. That is a card -- it was my wife's card.

1 My understanding --

2 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Did you --

3 THE WITNESS: My understanding was all the cards were

4 torn up. I did not know she had kept that card active until

02:43 5 well after the fact. And that is something she should not have

6 done, but she did. And I've got no defense for her, but she

7 did.

8 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Who is that that shouldn't have done

9 that?

02:43 10 THE WITNESS: My wife.

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Not the secretary? It wasn't the

12 secretary that shouldn't have paid it?

13 THE WITNESS: No, I'm not talking about the payment.

14 I'm talking about the use of the card thereafter, Judge.

02:43 15 That is just something I regret her doing. As

16 you can tell, it had some casino charges on it, probably

17 several. I don't know when that card was ultimately ended.

18 But I thought she had torn up and cut up all the cards, but

19 that apparently did not happen.

02:44 20 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: So, she paid that with her

21 separate income?

22 THE WITNESS: I don't know how it got paid, Judge. It

23 probably came out of my checking -- most of the times checks

24 written on my checking account -- I know you-all find this

4 25 incredible but -- I may have some checks there that I signed,

02:44 1 but the -- my wife dealt with paying the bills. So, I just --
 2 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: That's not what Rhonda Danos said.
 3 THE WITNESS: My home bills, my wife -- all you had --
 4 I'm sure they have the checks. You'll find that her name
 02:44 5 appears on 90 percent of them. So, I don't know what Rhonda
 6 Danos may say about that.
 7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Well, how would -- how would
 8 Ms. Danos -- I'm just trying to understand. If your wife
 9 normally took care of those type of bills, how would have Danos
 02:44 10 been authorized or why she would -- why would she have paid
 11 that bill?
 12 THE WITNESS: I don't -- I didn't know that -- till I
 13 just saw it; I didn't realize it happened. I don't know,
 14 Judge. I can't give you an answer. I'm just being
 02:45 15 straightforward with you. I can't tell you why. I don't know.
 16 What I would like to do is make a statement in 17 response to that, but I'd rather wait till they complete their
 18 case before I do that.
 19 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: That's fine.
 02:45 20 THE WITNESS: Okay?
 21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
 22 MR. WOODS: Our next witness is Joseph Mole, and
 23 Robert Creely and Amato are on their way. They were ten
 24 minutes away, and they were called five minutes ago. So,
 02:45 25 they -- those are our next three witness.

02:45 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Mole will be a short witness?

2 MR. WOODS: Joseph Mole will be a very short witness,

3 your Honor.

4 And I have offered -- based on Judge Porteous'

02:46 5 testimony, I have offered whether or not he wants to stipulate

6 to the grand jury testimony of Creely and Amato -- and I think

7 he wanted to consider that -- in lieu of -- in lieu of their

8 testimony.

9 JUDGE LAKE: Why don't you call Mr. Mole, then?

02:46 10 MR. WOODS: Yes, sir. He's just right here in the 11 hall. It will just take a moment.

12 Will you ask Mr. Mole in Room 204 to come in?

13 (Witness being summoned to the stand)

14 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Is Ms. Darios coming on as a

02:46 15 witness?

16 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor.

17 Mr. Mole, if you would, come up here, sir.

18 The witness is going to be seated here.

19 And that's his counsel, Pat Fanning, that is with

02:47 20 him, your Honor. He's seated back there.

21 JUDGE LAKE: Raise your right hand.

22 Do you solemnly swear that the testimony that you

23 shall give in this proceeding will be the truth, the whole

24 truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

7 25 THE WITNESS: I so swear.

District Judge; Louis Guirola, Jr., U. S. District Judge; Sam R. Cummings, U. S. District Judge; Hayden Head, U. S. District Judge; Thad Heartfield, U. S. District Judge; Fred Biery, U. S. District Judge

DOCKET NO. 07-05-351-0085

CONFIDENTIAL

IN RE: Complaint of Judicial Misconduct against United States District Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. under the Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980

DENNIS, Circuit Judge, joined by MELANÇON, HEARTFIELD, and BRADY, District Judges, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

1 I agree that this judicial council must publicly
2 reprimand Judge Porteous for legal and ethical misconduct
3 during his tenure as a federal judge. But I disagree with 4 the council majority's conclusion that the evidence
5 demonstrates a possible ground for his impeachment and 6 removal from office.

7 The Framers of the Constitution provided that federal 8 judges, both of the supreme and inferior courts, shall

9 hold their offices during good behavior and shall be 10 removed from office only upon impeachment for, and 11 conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and 12 misdemeanors; that the House of Representatives shall 13 have the sole power of impeachment; that the Senate shall 14 have the sole power to try all impeachments; and that no
15 person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two 16 thirds of the Senate members present. These requirements
17 make removal by impeachment a difficult process, reserved
18 only for the most egregious cases. Thus, the founders
19 intended for judges to have a high degree of independence
20 and to be removable only upon constitutionally specified
21 grounds; they did not intend for judges to serve simply 22 at the pleasure of a majority of the Congress.

23 Congress has authorized a judicial council to take 24 the initial step towards invoking the impeachment process
25 only when there is a possibility that the foregoing 26 requirements can be met. Accordingly, in fidelity to the 27 Constitution and in the interest of judicial 28 independence, as well as fairness to individual judges, 29 a judicial council should not certify a case for 30 consideration of impeachment unless it has carefully and 31 judiciously weighed the evidence and determined that the 32 judge committed specified acts of possible "Treason, 33 Bribery, or other high Crimes or Misdemeanors." Because 34 the Constitution mandates only this one definition of 35 impeachable conduct, a judicial council may not create 36 its own definition of impeachable offenses, either by 37 aggregating non-impeachable conduct or otherwise.

38 "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors"
39 are the only grounds.

40 A careful and judicious analysis of the evidence in 41 the present case fails to demonstrate that Judge Porteous
42 committed possible treason, bribery, or a high crime or 43 misdemeanor. As an initial matter, it is undisputed that 44 the evidence does not support a finding of any 45 possibility that Judge Porteous committed treason or 46 bribery. Further, the evidence does not support a 47 finding that Judge Porteous committed a possible high 48 crime or high misdemeanor as the terms have been 49 understood by the Framers and ratifiers of the 50 Constitution and by the members of Congress. The 51 constitutional convention proceedings, the ratification
52 history, and the congressional precedents demonstrate 53 that finding a high crime or high misdemeanor requires a 54 showing that the subject judge abused or violated the 55 constitutional judicial power entrusted to him. The 56 evidence here does not support a finding that Judge
57 Porteous possibly abused or violated the federal 58 constitutional judicial power entrusted to him. Instead, 59 the evidence shows that in one case he allowed the 60 appearances of serious improprieties but that he did not 61 commit an actual abuse or violation of the constitutional 62 power entrusted to him. The other offenses and 63 improprieties alleged against Judge Porteous relate to 64 his actions and omissions as a private citizen and his

65 failure to accurately disclose personal financial data.
66 None of these alleged improprieties amount to an abuse or 67 violation of constitutional judicial powers.

68 Moreover, neither the special investigating committee
69 nor the judicial council majority performed the difficult 70 tasks of making a careful, judicious analysis of the 71 evidence, determining the definition of "high Crimes and 72 [high] Misdemeanors," applying that constitutional
73 concept to the evidence, and making specific findings
74 that particular acts or omissions by Judge Porteous
75 possibly constituted such impeachable offenses.
76 Consequently, neither the committee nor the council
77 majority actually made a principled determination that 78 any particular act or omission by Judge Porteous
79 constituted a possible high crime or misdemeanor.
80 Instead, the special investigating committee presented a
81 report setting forth, in the manner of a charging 82 document or prosecutorial brief, each ethical and 83 statutory violation that it thought the evidence possibly 84 supported and concluded, without making the 85 constitutional interpretation and analysis called for,
86 that the record might contain one or more grounds for 87 possible impeachment. The judicial council majority, in 88 its Memorandum Order and Certification, simply summarized
89 the special committee report's allegations and findings,
90 determined that there was "substantial evidence" to 91 support them, and determined, without making its own 92 written analysis of the evidence or applying the

93 constitutional test of high crime or high misdemeanor, 94 that Judge Porteous engaged in conduct which might 95 constitute one or more grounds for impeachment under 96 Article II of the Constitution. Thus, it is evident that 97 the committee and the council majority approved the 98 certification of possible impeachment without reaching an 99 agreement as to what constitutes an impeachable offense
100 or as to which particular high crime or high misdemeanor,
101 if any, was adequately supported by the evidence.
102 Consequently, in my opinion, the council majority fell
103 into error by certifying the existence of possible
104 grounds for impeachment without carefully and judiciously
105 analyzing the evidence, determining the constitutional
106 meaning or definition of "high Crimes and Misdemeanors," 107 applying that definition to a judicious assessment of the 108 evidence, and making specific findings that particular 109 and certain conduct met the definition of "high Crimes 110 and [high] Misdemeanors," i.e., actual abuses and 111 violations of constitutional judicial powers.

112 Finally, the record in this case does not present a
113 reliable basis upon which to carefully and judiciously
114 assess the evidence of whether specific high crimes or 115 high misdemeanors were possibly committed because Judge
116 Porteous was not afforded all minimal due process rights
117 required by law. Because Judge Porteous's attorney
118 resigned two weeks prior to the special committee hearing
119 and he was denied a continuance to employ new counsel 120 with which to prepare for the hearing, he was denied his right to counsel in these proceedings. Further, the special investigating committee and judicial council majority determinations were in part based on alleged misconduct by Judge Porteous as a state judge before he was commissioned as a federal judicial officer, which does not constitute grounds for impeachment.

Accordingly, I respectfully suggest that the Judicial Conference should vacate the judicial council majority's order of certification and enter in its place a public reprimand with appropriate precautionary conditions, or, in the alternative, vacate the judicial council's actions and order it to grant Judge Porteous a rehearing and to afford him full rights of minimal due process, including an opportunity to employ an attorney and to adequately prepare for the rehearing.

The Constitution's founders intended for impeachment and removal of a federal officer to be difficult and reserved for the most egregious crimes against the United States, which they named as "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors." They believed that, if our American system of democracy and justice was to survive, and respect for the rule of law to flourish, judges must be free to interpret and apply the law with neither the fear of retribution nor the influence of favor.¹ The founders intended that an independent federal judiciary would serve as a check against unconstitutional conduct by executive and legislative officers and as fair and impartial fora for all litigants.² Thus, they designed the Constitution's clauses to give federal judges maximum freedom from possible coercion or influence by factions or the other branches of government.

Congress reaffirmed these values in enacting the Judicial Councils Reform and Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980, recognizing that the framers meant for impeachment to be used to rectify only the most egregious cases, those that cannot be remedied by any other means.³ In explaining that Act, which governs these proceedings, the House of Representatives Committee on the Judiciary stated:

Impeachment . . . is the heaviest piece of artillery in the congressional arsenal, but because it is so heavy it is unfit for ordinary use. It is like a hundred-ton gun which needs complex machinery to bring it into position, an enormous charge of powder to fire it, and a large mark to aim at.⁴

² See, e.g., The Federalist Nos. 78 and 79 (Alexander Hamilton).

⁴ H.R. Rep. No. 96-1313, at 2 (1980) (quoting J. Bryce, 1 American Commonwealth 212 (1920)).

171 Accordingly, Congress provided in the Act⁵ that a judicial 172 council must certify a complaint against a judge to the 173 Judicial Conference for consideration of impeachment only
 174 when there is a possibility that a judge has committed 175 one of the impeachable crimes named by Article II,
 176 section 4, of the Constitution.⁶ In the Act, Congress
 177 anticipated that the vast majority of complaints would be 178 dismissed by Chief Circuit Judges as frivolous,
 179 irrelevant, or as collateral attacks on final court
 180 decisions;⁷ that a relatively fewer number of complaints
 181 would be referred by the Chief Circuit Judge to a special 182 committee of the circuit judicial council; and that only 183 the rare and most egregious case would be certified by 184 judicial councils to the Judicial Conference for referral
 185 and consideration of possible impeachment.⁸

186 This is not one of those rare and egregious cases
 187 presenting the possibility of an impeachable offense
 188 against the nation. Under a proper application of the 189 Constitution and the Act, Judge Porteous's misconduct is 190 serious and clearly warrants his public reprimand, as

⁵ 28 U.S.C. §§ 354 (b)(2).

⁸ See H.R. Rep. No. 96-1313, at 2 (1980) ("Over the past 200 years, articles of impeachment have been voted against nine federal judges, four of whom have been convicted and removed from the bench. well as his willingness to accept and obey strict precautionary conditions for his continuation in office; but it does not amount to a case of possible treason, bribery, or other high crimes or misdemeanors as those terms have been understood by the founders and Congress as the exclusive grounds for impeachment and removal.

The Constitution limits Congress when it makes a choice for or against impeachment to that very particular class of cases: "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors."⁹ Similarly, when judges serve as members of a judicial council in making a choice for or against possible impeachment, they, by virtue of their oaths and the enabling statute, have an obligation of fidelity to the fundamental design of the Constitution to limit the possible instrument of impeachment to that same narrow class of cases.¹⁰

Bound by the constitutional impeachment standards, a judicial council does not have authority to create its own definition of impeachable offenses or to consider a cumulation of non-impeachable offenses as grounds for possible impeachment. As the statutory text and the legislative history of the act authorizing this council

⁹U.S. Const. art. II, § 4.

215 make clear, judicial councils may not alter or interfere
 216 with the constitutionally defined impeachment process.¹¹
 217 Rather, the concept underlying the act was to allow the 218 judicial council to deal with matters falling short of 219 impeachment but that could affect the administration of 220 justice.¹² Therefore, Congress did not authorize judicial 221 councils to create their own definitions of impeachable
 222 offenses or suggest removal for offenses falling short of 223 the Article II "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes
 224 and Misdemeanors" standard.¹³

225 In contravention of these principles, this council

¹¹ See 28 U.S.C. § 354(b)(2)(A) (prompting certification of a complaint to the Judicial Conferences when it "might constitute one or more grounds for impeachment under article II of the Constitution") (emphasis added).

The legislative history underlying this act confirms this reading. For example, the Senate report terms the act "a supplement to, but not a substitute for, the seldom used process of impeachment" and states "nor is any effort made to alter or modify the constitutional impeachment process." S. Rep. No. 96-362, at 3-4 (1979). The Senate Report reiterated this limitation, noting that the primary purpose of the act was to "deal with matters which for the most part fall short of being subject to impeachment. And, where impeachment may be appropriate, traditional constitutional procedures continue to govern." Id. at 4.

¹² The act intended judicial councils "to deal with those matters which do not rise to the level of impeachable offenses Complaints relating to the conduct of a member of the judiciary which are not connected with the judicial office or which do not affect the administration of justice are without jurisdiction and therefore outside the scope of this legislation." S. Rep. No. 96-362, at 3 (1979). As the Senate report re-emphasized, the act was intended to "deal with matters which for the most part fall short of being subject to impeachment," to "fill in the void which currently exists in the law between the impeachable offenses and doing nothing at all." Id. at 4-5. See also Hastings v. Judicial Conference of U.S., 593 F. Supp. 1371, 1382 (D.D.C. 1984).

may have overstepped its constitutional and congressionally intended bounds by mistakenly proceeding under the erroneous assumption that it may properly accumulate non-impeachable offenses to find the possibility of impeachment for an aggregate of less serious crimes. Such a practice, though, exceeds the council's congressional authorization and defies the Constitution because it essentially creates an anomalous and eccentric definition of an impeachable offense.¹⁴

To avoid such errors and to evaluate possible impeachable offenses intelligently and constitutionally, members of both Congress and judicial councils must address the difficult problem of ascertaining what qualifies as treason, bribery, and other high crimes and misdemeanors for which a judge may constitutionally be impeached and removed from office.¹⁵ Accordingly, in determining the limits of the constitutional phrase "treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors," congressional and judicial council members should generally conform to the historical practice of relying on the same sources courts have consulted in construing other constitutional provisions: the language of the Constitution; the evident intent of the framers and ratifiers; the body of precedent created by prior impeachment proceedings; and the views of scholars and

The Framers were influenced by the law and practice of England in deciding that "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors" would be the only offenses for which a federal judge or other constitutional officer could be impeached. In the preceding English experience, impeachable offenses were political crimes, impeachment was a political proceeding, and "high crimes and misdemeanors" was a category of political crimes against the state.¹⁷ Initially in the constitutional convention, Mason proposed to expand the Constitution's definition of impeachable offense by adding the word "maladministration" to follow the words "treason and bribery."¹⁸ Madison objected to this proposal, arguing that "[s]o vague a term [would] be equivalent to a tenure during the pleasure of the Senate."¹⁹ Mason then withdrew "maladministration," substituting instead "other high crimes and misdemeanors agst. the State."²⁰ The ratification debates confirm that "other high Crimes and Misdemeanors" include only "great offenses" against the federal government.²¹ Thus, delegates to state ratification conventions often referred to impeachable offenses as "great" offenses and said impeachment should apply if the official "deviates from his duty" or if he "dare to abuse the powers vested in him by the people."²²

Alexander Hamilton similarly observed that:

The subject [of the Senate's] jurisdiction [in an impeachment trial] are those offenses which proceed from the misconduct of public men, or, in other words, from the abuse or violation of some public trust. They are of a nature which may with peculiar propriety be denominated POLITICAL, as they relate chiefly to injuries done immediately to the society itself.²³

In sum, although the framers and ratifiers of the Constitution saw the need, in extraordinary cases, for a vehicle to remove a president, judge, or other constitutional civil officer, they sought to ensure that those officers would retain a high degree of independence and not be subjected to removal simply at the pleasure of Congress. Accordingly, they provided for removal of judges and other officers only upon impeachment by the House and conviction by a super-majority of the Senate for a specific class of offenses, "Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes or Misdemeanors," that include only those political or public crimes which constitute an abuse or violation of the constitutional powers entrusted to the officer.

Congress, when dealing with federal judges, has faithfully restricted its use of the impeachment power to the core of the constitutional impeachable offenses as intended by the framers and ratifiers.²⁴ Accordingly, throughout United States history, a total of twelve federal judges have been impeached, and an analysis of their cases shows that Congress has only voted to impeach in instances of judges abusing their official, constitutional powers.²⁵ Of the twelve judges impeached, only seven have been convicted and removed from office by ²⁴ See Pollitt, supra note 16, at 277; The Federal Impeachment Process, supra note 17, at xii ("The seven federal officials whom the Senate has convicted and removed — all judges— shared misconduct that caused serious injury to the republic and had a nexus with the official's formal duties."); see also id. at 194 ("[I]n over two hundred years Congress has impeached only sixteen officials (including two presidents) but removed only seven judges. Judge John Pickering was impeached in 1803 and convicted by the Senate in 1804 for improper rulings, drunkenness on the bench, and blasphemy.²⁷ Pickering allegedly rendered judgment on the merits of a case while refusing to hear relevant testimony offered by the attorney general, disregarded and attempted to evade federal law, and refused to permit an appeal; further, he appeared on the bench while intoxicated and apparently suffered from insanity.²⁸

Judge West H. Humphreys was impeached and convicted by the Senate in 1862 for actions most akin to treason, i.e., incitement to revolt and rebellion.²⁹ Humphreys joined the Tennessee secession and served as a District Court Judge in the Confederate States of America without retiring from the federal bench; during his impeachment he made no appearance and offered no defense.³⁰

Judge Robert W. Archbald was impeached in 1912 and convicted by the Senate in 1913 for bribery, using his position as a judge to induce numerous litigants to allow him profitable financial deals, and hearing cases in which he had a financial interest.³¹ In a number of instances, Archbald coerced a railroad company, which had several cases pending before him, and a series of other litigants to sell or lease him and a partner certain profitable property.³² Archbald also received a $500 bribe in exchange for attempting to induce other litigants to lease profitable property to Archbald's associate.³³

Judge Halstead L. Ritter was impeached and convicted by the Senate in 1936 for creating kickback schemes, continuing to work on a case as a lawyer while already a judge, evading federal income tax, bartering his judicial authority for a vote of confidence, and bringing his court into scandal and disrepute.³⁴ Among his articles of impeachment were findings that he awarded a receivership to a former partner and increased the receivership fees by $75,000 in return for a $4,500 kickback, which led to the income-tax evasion because he failed to report the sum.³⁵

Judge Harry Claiborne was impeached and convicted by the Senate for tax evasion in 1986.³⁶ Prior to his impeachment, Claiborne had been judicially convicted of criminal tax evasion for substantially under-reporting his income in 1979 and 1980; the income he failed to report was profit from bribes.³⁷ He was sent to prison but refused to resign, so he continued to draw his federal salary while serving jail time.³⁸ This apparently prompted his impeachment proceedings.

Judge Alcee L. Hastings was impeached in 1988 and convicted by the Senate in 1989 for conspiracy to solicit a bribe and perjury after having been criminally indicted and acquitted for bribery and conspiracy.³⁹ Hastings allegedly attempted to obtain $150,000 from a defendant in a case before him in exchange for a sentence not requiring jail time and then allegedly lied to a grand jury about the matter.⁴⁰ Though Hastings was acquitted in his criminal trial for bribery and conspiracy, Hastings' alleged co-conspirator was convicted in a separate trial.⁴¹

Finally, Judge Walter L. Nixon was impeached and convicted by the Senate for perjury in 1989.⁴² Prior to his impeachment, Nixon had been judicially convicted on federal criminal charges of perjury and was serving a five-year sentence.⁴³ Nixon's perjury conviction arose out of statements he made to a grand jury, which was investigating bribery charges alleging that Nixon accepted a gratuity in exchange for attempting to influence a state's drug prosecution against a business partner's son.⁴⁴ Like Judge Claiborne, Nixon was sentenced to imprisonment and refused to resign, so that he continued to receive federal judicial compensation while in prison, prompting Congress to institute impeachment proceedings.⁴⁵

Supreme Court Justice Samuel Chase was impeached but acquitted by the Senate in 1804 for bias in charging a grand jury and other action from the bench.⁴⁶ The articles of impeachment against Chase state that he attempted to prejudice juries before defense counsel could be heard, prohibited defense counsel from addressing the jury on the law, seated a juror who had

402 delivered political speeches from the bench.⁴⁷

403 Judge James H. Peck was impeached 1830 but acquitted
404 by the Senate in 1831 for holding a lawyer who criticized 405 his rulings in contempt.⁴⁸ When a local newspaper printed
406 a letter, written by a lawyer, criticizing one of Peck's
407 rulings, Peck had the lawyer arrested, held him in 408 contempt, ordered him imprisoned for 24 hours, and 409 suspended him from practicing before the court for 410 eighteen months.⁴⁹ The impeachment was based on "[Peck's]
411 unjust, oppressive, and arbitrary contempt order and his 412 general gross abuse of power as a judge," but "the Senate
413 voted not to convict because criminal intent had neither
414 been charged nor proved."⁵⁰

415 Judge Charles H. Swayne was impeached in 1904 but 416 acquitted by the Senate in 1905 for falsifying expense
417 accounts and using property held in receivership.⁵¹ The 418 articles of impeachment alleged three instances of Swayne
419 falsely inflating his travel expenses in an attempt to 420 defraud the federal government into over-paying him; in 421 two separate instances, Swayne also appropriated the use 422 of a railroad car, which was held under receivership, to transport himself, his family, and friends from Delaware to Florida and from Florida to California.⁵² Swayne then allowed the receiver to claim these expenses as necessary costs of operating the railroad.⁵³ The Senate ultimately acquitted Swayne, whose "defense was that even if the charges against him were accepted as true, those acts did not satisfy the constitutional definition of high crimes and misdemeanors."⁵⁴

Judge George English was impeached in 1926 for favoritism, improper conduct, and improper use of bankruptcy funds in his court; he resigned before the Senate could take action on the matter.⁵⁵ Among English's articles of impeachment were allegations that he disbarred two lawyers without giving notice, proffering charges, or allowing them to speak in their own defense.⁵⁶ He also allegedly threatened to incarcerate jurors if they did not return guilty verdicts and constructed a fake trial for the purpose of summoning and berating local officials.⁵⁷

Judge Harold Louderback was impeached but acquitted by the Senate in 1933 for using favoritism in appointing receivers.⁵⁸ The articles of impeachment against Louderback alleged four separate instances of Louderback creating kickback schemes to enrich his friends at litigants' expense; "lacking evidence that Louderback had received any direct personal financial gain from these appointments, however, the Senate voted to acquit him."⁵⁹

iii.

As the examples above demonstrate, Congress has applied the meaning of "high crimes and misdemeanors" by voting to impeach judges only when their alleged conduct has included abuses of constitutionally entrusted powers. Among the judges convicted by the Senate, for example, Judges Nixon's and Claiborne's convictions for perjury to cover up bribery before a grand jury and tax evasion, respectively, demonstrate their abuse of their judicial power. Both also allegedly engaged in bribery, a specifically identified impeachable offense. Similarly, Judge Hastings was alleged to have accepted bribes, and Judge Ritter's kickback schemes and Archbald's financial manipulations, both of which arguably involved bribery, also hinged on their abuse of official judicial power. The allegations that Judge Pickering took the bench while intoxicated, improperly denied an appeal, refused to allow the attorney general to present witnesses' testimony, and arbitrarily entered judgment without conducting trial or hearing witnesses similarly implicate abuse of his official judicial duty and power. Finally, Judge Humphreys' actions essentially constituted treason, another specifically identified impeachable offense.

⁵⁸ Id. at 1586-87.

⁵⁹ Id.; Pollitt, supra note 16, at 274.

Even for those judges impeached but not convicted by the Senate, the impeachment grounds hinged on abuses of official constitutional powers. Judges Louderback and Swayne, acting in their official federal capacities, allegedly abused the receivership process and, in Swayne's case, attempted to defraud the federal government into over-paying judicial expenses. Judge Peck acted in his official capacity by ordering arrest and contempt charges; and all of the allegations against Justice Chase and Judge English similarly implicate abusive conduct from the bench toward litigants and jurors.

C.

According to the constitutional text, the evident intent of the framers and ratifiers, the body of precedent created by prior judicial impeachment proceedings, and the views of scholars and other commentators, impeachable high crimes and misdemeanors are limited to abuses or violations of constitutional judicial power. Thus, any conduct short of an abuse or violation of constitutionally entrusted power cannot constitute a possible impeachable offense.

3.

499 The special investigating committee and the judicial 500 council majority neither alleged nor found that Judge
501 Porteous had committed treason, bribery, or other high 502 crimes or misdemeanors, or that he had engaged in 503 misconduct which constituted an abuse or violation of 504 constitutional judicial power. The only violations of 505 law or canons of judicial conduct that the committee or 506 the council majority alleged or found Judge Porteous to 507 have committed do not amount to impeachable offenses
508 because they do not amount to an abuse or violation of 509 the constitutional judicial powers entrusted to him.
510 Accordingly, although the misconduct which the committee
511 and council majority attributed to Judge Porteous
512 warrants a public reprimand, it does not constitute any 513 of the constitutional grounds for impeachment, and the 514 council majority therefore erroneously certified this 515 case for possible impeachment.

516 The DOJ as complainant, the special investigatory
517 committee, and the judicial council majority have never 518 alleged that Judge Porteous committed treason or 519 bribery.⁶⁰ In fact, the special committee expressly 520 concedes that there is no allegation of bribery in the 521 complaint or charge against Judge Porteous.⁶¹ Although 524 committee admitted that it has no authority over such 525 non-federal judicial conduct.⁶² Furthermore, because the 526 only constitutional grounds for impeachment of a federal 527 judge are his commission, while on the federal bench, of 528 treason, bribery and other high crimes and misdemeanors

 529 against the United States, the Congress lacks
 530 jurisdiction to impeach, and the judicial council lacks
 531 authority to certify for possible impeachment, Judge
 532 Porteous for any misconduct prior to his appointment as 533 a federal judge.⁶³

⁶² The Special Committee concedes that it has “never taken the position that it has authority over Judge Porteous’s judicial misconduct as a state judge.” Special Committee Response to Reply Memorandum at 4.

⁶³ See The Federal Impeachment Process, supra note 17, at 108-09. See also Special Committee Response to Reply Memorandum at 4 (conceding that the committee has “never taken the position that it has authority over Judge Porteous’s judicial misconduct as a state judge.”).

Records of past impeachment proceedings also demonstrate that evidence relating to state-level judicial misconduct falls outside the proper scope of an impeachment inquiry into misconduct as a federal judge. During the Senate conviction proceedings for Judge Archbald in 1913, the Judge’s counsel presented an extensive brief arguing why the last six articles of impeachment should not stand. Counsel argued that because those articles related to Judge Archbald’s tenure as a district court judge and the impeachment concerned his position as a judge on the Commerce Court, the evidence of conduct occurring during Archbald’s district court tenure, i.e., prior to his then-current federal office, was irrelevant and outside the scope of a proper impeachment inquiry. In response, the senate found Archbald “not guilty” for all six articles wholly concerned with his actions during his district court tenure though they convicted Archbald on the other articles.

The argument in Judge Archbald’s case, equally applicable here, revolved around Article I, section 3, of the Constitution, which states “Judgment in the Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States.” As primary legal authority, Judge Archbald’s counsel cited to Justice Story’s Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States, which interprets the relevant clause as follows:

534 Thus, the special committee and council majority
 535 erred in certifying this matter, having found only 536 non-impeachable offenses but mistakenly averring that 537 there might be an impeachable offense among them. The 538 council majority's Memorandum Order and Certification
 539 describes the offenses it found as follows:
 540

As it is declared in one clause of the Constitution, that 'judgment, in cases of impeachment, shall not extend further, than a removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honour, trust, or profit, under the United States;' and in another clause, that "the president, vice president, and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes or misdemeanors;" it would seem to follow, that the Senate, on the conviction, were bound, in all cases, to enter a judgment of removal from office, though it has a discretion, as to inflicting the punishment of disqualification. If, then, there must be a judgment of removal from office, it would seem to follow, that the Constitution contemplated, that the party was still in office at the time of the impeachment. If he was not, his offence was still liable to be tried and punished in the ordinary tribunals of justice. And it might be argued with some force, that it would be a vain exercise of authority to try a delinquent for an impeachable offence, when the most important object, for which the remedy was given, was no longer necessary, or attainable. And although a judgment of disqualification might still be pronounced, the language of the Constitution may create some doubt, whether it can be pronounced without being coupled with a removal from office. There is also much force in the remark, that an impeachment is a proceeding purely of a political nature. It is not so much designed to punish an offender, as to secure the state against gross official misdemeanors. It touches neither his person, nor his property; but simply divests of his political capacity.

Story, Commentaries on the Constitution § 801 (1833) (emphasis added).

Since Judge Porteous is no longer a state court judge, it is up to the "tribunals of justice" to hold Judge Porteous liable for his actions in that capacity-- which they have not. The scope of the current impeachment inquiry only pertains to Judge Porteous's actions consonant to the remedy at issue-- removal of Judge Porteous from his current federal judicial capacity for abuse of constitutional power related to his current position-- not to actions taken while in state-level positions he no longer holds.

(a) Porteous filed numerous false statements under oath during his and his wife's Chapter 13 bankruptcy, including filing the petition under a false name; concealing assets of the bankruptcy estate; failing to identify gambling losses; and failing to list all creditors. Porteous additionally violated bankruptcy court orders forbidding him from incurring debt during the course of the Chapter 13 case without approval of the trustee or bankruptcy judge, in that he continued regularly to incur short-term extensions of credit from various casinos. Porteous additionally made unauthorized and undisclosed payments to preferred creditors after the commencement of the bankruptcy case.

(b) Porteous engaged in fraudulent and deceptive conduct concerning the debt he owed to Regions Bank prior to bankruptcy.

(c) Porteous received gifts and things of value from attorneys who had cases pending before him. During one particular case (Liljeberg), Porteous was requested to recuse from the case but instead ruled against the movant without disclosing to any party his history of financial relationships with at least one counsel in the case.

(d) Porteous's financial disclosure statements for the years 1994-2000 are inaccurate and misleading insofar as they fail to report the gifts and things of value he received from attorneys, and in the year 2000 failed to report accurately significant amounts of reportable indebtedness owed by Judge Porteous.

None of these offenses or ethical violations constitutes a high crime or other impeachable offense because none represents an abuse or violation of constitutional judicial power.

582 A. Appearances of Improprieties in Connection with the 583 Liljeberg Case

584 In essence, the judicial council majority finds that 585 Judge Porteous committed several serious appearances of 586 improprieties under the Code of Conduct. I agree with 587 that finding and think that Judge Porteous should be 588 given the most severe sanction at the council's disposal
 589 for these infractions, a public reprimand. I emphatically 590 disagree with the council majority, however, if, without 591 specifically finding or saying so, it believes that these 592 appearances of improprieties are high crimes or 593 misdemeanors.

594 Judge Porteous presided over the Liljeberg case, in 595 which Judge Porteous's long-time friends Amato, Levenson,
 596 and Gardner represented opposing parties.⁶⁴ Arising out
 597 of these circumstances, the judicial council found
 598 several appearance-of-impropriety violations of the Code
 599 of Conduct: first the council found that, before Gardner

⁶⁴Though the special committee report mentions Levenson, he is not the primary focus of the allegations because his role in the appearances of improprieties during the Liljeberg case is less significant than those of Amato, Creely, or Gardner. The special committee report notes that Levenson paid for some expenses related to one of Judge Porteous's son's externships in Washington, D.C. prior to the Liljeberg case and also often took Judge Porteous out to lunch and paid for the meals. Special Committee Report at 60. Such conduct appears fitting with Judge Porteous's and Levenson's relationship because, like Amato, Creely, and Gardner, Levenson is also a long-time friend of Judge Porteous's. Levenson Grand Jury Testimony at 6-8.

At the outset of their relationship, Levenson treated Judge Porteous to lunch, which Levenson testified was often the case in social relationships between judges and lawyers, and this practice continued when Judge Porteous became a federal judge. Id. at 11-12. Levenson testified that though he paid for lunches during the pendency of the Liljeberg case, he never did so during the actual trial. Id. at 44. Furthermore, Levenson testified that his payment of expenses for Judge Porteous's son was a "long time ago," hence before, and unrelated to, the Liljeberg case, and amounted to "a couple of hundred dollars." Id. at 65-6.

entered the case as an attorney, Judge Porteous declined to either recuse himself or disclose to the parties the closeness of his thirty-year friendships with Amato and Levenson, and second the council found that during the pendency of Liljeberg, Judge Porteous received financial assistance from Amato and Amato's partner Creely, another long-time friend, to help pay for his son's wedding and also attended his son's bachelor party in Las Vegas with Gardner and Creely, among a score of other guests, where Creely paid for his hotel room.

In the absence of Judge Porteous's and his lawyer friends' involvement in the Liljeberg case, of course, there would have been nothing wrong with his receiving gifts from them in connection with his son's wedding. This would have been the natural result of their 30 year relationship during which their families regularly celebrated such occasions together.⁶⁵ But because of the serious appearance of impropriety that these gifts presented in light of Liljeberg, Judge Porteous should have avoided the situation entirely by recusal or disclosure.

Thus, because of the intersection between the close

⁶⁵ Judge Porteous, Amato, Gardner, and Creely have been close friends for over 30 years. See Special Committee Hearing Transcript ("SCHT") at 461. Amato, Creely, and Judge Porteous met as young lawyers practicing together. See SCHAT at 198, 236-37. All four frequently enjoyed such diversions as hunting, fishing, or having lunch together. See SCHAT at 229. Over time their families also became close. See SCHAT at 259. They attend each others' various parties, birthdays, weddings, and other events. See SCHAT at 154. In fact, Judge Porteous is godfather to one of Gardner's daughters. See SCHAT at 154. In connection with this social interchange, they engaged in the customary mutual benevolence of reciprocal gift-giving and funding of costs of celebrations and social events. See SCHAT at 461-62.

622 friendships, the Liljeberg case, and Judge Porteous's
 623 son's wedding, Judge Porteous's failure to take 624 corrective action resulted in serious appearance-of-625 impropriety ethical violations. However, because all of 626 the sworn testimony indicates without dispute that Judge
 627 Porteous did not commit bribery, i.e., he did not solicit 628 or accept any private favor or benefit in exchange for 629 official action, Judge Porteous's ethical infractions
 630 during the Liljeberg case did not amount to a high crime
 631 or high misdemeanor because he did not abuse or violate
 632 the constitutional judicial power entrusted to him.
 633 Further, because Judge Porteous created only appearances 634 of improprieties, his misconduct was not as serious as 635 actual ethical improprieties under the Code.⁶⁶

⁶⁶ The creation of an appearance of impropriety is distinguishable from an actual impropriety or actual misconduct under the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. As the Commentary to Canon 2A notes, "actual improprieties . . . include violations of law, court rules, or other specific provisions of this code," whereas "the test for appearance of impropriety is whether the conduct would create in reasonable minds . . . a perception that the judge's ability to carry out judicial responsibilities with integrity, impartiality, and competence is impaired."

Here, there is no evidence, allegation, or finding that Judge Porteous violated a law or court rule through his actions during the Liljeberg case because there is no evidence or allegation that Judge Porteous's relationship with lawyers on either side of the case influenced his impartial judgment or disposition in the matter. Further, in light of this lack of evidence of bribery or other actual bias during Liljeberg, the only canonical violations alleged against Judge Porteous, violations of Canons 1, 2, 3, 5, and 6, are necessarily limited to his creating only an appearance of partiality. Thus, his failure to recuse or disclose his relationship constitutes a mere appearance of impropriety rather than actual impropriety under the canons.

As evidenced by the remedies often awarded to litigants, a Judge's appearance of impropriety is less serious than an actual impropriety. For example, a finding that a judge failed to recuse for an actual impropriety generally requires the remedy of vacatur, whereas a finding of failure to recuse for appearance of impropriety often calls only for prospective recusal. See In re Cargill, Inc., 66 F.3d 1256, 1264 (1st Cir. 1995) (holding that an appearance of impropriety does not require immediate relief whereas actual impropriety would); In re Allied-Signal Inc., 891 F.2d 967, 973 (1st Cir. 1989) (reasoning that because no actual impropriety was alleged, retroactive relief was unnecessary in a case of appearance of impropriety); U.S. v. Widgery, 778 F.2d 325, 328 (7th Cir. 1985) ("Disqualification for the appearance of impropriety runs

636 Equally important here, Congress's impeachment
 637 precedents demonstrate that Judge Porteous's Liljeberg
 638 conduct falls far short of impeachable crimes under the 639 Constitution. The congressional impeachments of Judges
 640 Nixon, Hastings, Claiborne, Archbald, and Humphreys, for 641 example, resulted in their removal for treason and 642 bribery. Judge Porteous engaged in no treason or bribery
 643 at anytime, either in connection with Liljeberg or 644 otherwise.⁶⁷ Also unlike the cases of Judges Ritter, 645 Louderback, and Swayne, no evidence here suggests that 646 the gifts Judge Porteous received during Liljeberg
 647 constituted a quid pro quo for official action or in any 648 way connected to his official powers.

649 During the pendency of Liljeberg, Judge Porteous
 650 accepted gifts from Creely and Amato to defray his adult
 651 son's wedding expenses and attended his son's bachelor 652 party with Creely and Gardner, and both of these 653 instances fit within the context of their extensive 654 social relationships and had nothing to do with the 655 Liljeberg case. Thus, the difference between Judge
 656 Porteous's conduct during Liljeberg and the impeachable
 657 conduct of Ritter, Archbald, Louderback, and Swayne, is 658 that all the impeached judges' conduct involved abuses of prospectively only; even a successful motion does not vitiate acts taken before the motion was filed Disqualification under . . . for an actual impropriety would indeed require a new hearing") (internal citation omitted).

As such, the appearance of an impropriety is deserving of a lesser sanction, if any, than an actual impropriety or actual misconduct.

⁶⁷ See Special Committee Response to Reply Memorandum at 9 ("no specific allegations of bribery appear in the Complaint or in the Charge").

659 official power, viz., awarding receiverships, using 660 property in receivership, accepting bribes, influencing
 661 litigants' financial decisions, and falsifying expense
 662 accounts,⁶⁸ whereas it is undisputed that Judge Porteous
 663 never acted out of fear or favor of any litigant or 664 attorney and never abused or violated the constitutional 665 power entrusted to him.⁶⁹ Finally, the violations alleged 666 against the impeached judges spanned multiple cases, 667 whereas the committee and council's allegations against 668 Judge Porteous center on only the Liljeberg case.

669 Furthermore, the special committee and council
 670 majority do not dispute, but, in effect, concede that 671 Judge Porteous's conduct amounted only to a non-672 impeachable appearance of impropriety. They never find 673 that Judge Porteous's conduct constituted an actual 674 impropriety, much less an abuse or violation of official
 675 constitutional judicial power. The special investigating
 676 committee's report finds that none of Judge Porteous's
 677 ethical violations was more egregious than his conduct

⁶⁹ In rebutted testimony, 1) Judge Porteous stated that he has "been fair and impartial in every proceeding [before him]," SCHAT at 157; 2) Creely stated that he never thought that his gifts to Judge Porteous would influence his decision in Liljeberg or any other case and that he did not believe Judge Porteous's rulings to rely "one way or the other" on these gifts, SCHAT at 229, 231; and 3) Amato testified that there was no quid pro quo or expectation of judgment tied to his gifts to Judge Porteous, SCHAT at 256, and that any money given to Judge Porteous was "because we're friends and we've been friends for 35 years," rather than because Judge Porteous is a judge or to influence his decisions. SCHAT at 258-59.

678 during the Liljeberg case but concludes 1) that Judge
679 Porteous should have advised the parties of his financial 680 relationship with Amato and the Creely & Amato law firm 681 as soon as the recusal motion was filed; and 2) that 682 Judge Porteous should have granted the motion to recuse
683 or given the parties the choice of keeping him as a trial
684 judge. The committee further found that Judge Porteous's 685 asking for and receiving Amato's and Creely's financial 686 assistance with his son's wedding and allowing Creely to 687 pay for his hotel room in connection with his son's 688 bachelor party compounded the appearances of 689 improprieties. But the committee correctly did not find 690 that anything other than appearances of improprieties, 691 rather than actual improprieties,⁷⁰ resulted from this 692 conduct under the Code. Thus, the committee found that 693 the failure to recuse, Judge Porteous's worst ethical 694 offense, was not an irremediable actual impropriety under 695 the Code but rather an appearance of impropriety, which,
696 if disclosed, the parties could have cured by agreement.
697 The appearances of serious improprieties allowed by Judge
698 Porteous warrant the most severe sanction that the 699 judicial council can impose, a public reprimand, but 700 because Judge Porteous did not commit an actual abuse or 701 violation of the constitutional judicial power entrusted 702 to him, he did not commit a high crime or high 703 misdemeanor for which he may be impeached and removed 704 from office.

⁷⁰ See supra note 66.

705 B. Offenses Related to Personal Bankruptcy, Personal
 706 Bank Loan, and Personal Financial Disclosure
 707 The committee's and council majority's findings that 708 Judge Porteous violated criminal statutes relating to his 709 bankruptcy, bank loan, and financial disclosure
 710 statements do not constitute findings of possible
 711 impeachable offenses, because, rather than constituting
 712 the exercise of the constitutional judicial power
 713 entrusted to Judge Porteous, his misconduct in these 714 respects was restricted to private conduct and reporting
 715 of private financial affairs.⁷¹ These alleged crimes
 716 implicate no bribery or treason on Judge Porteous's part.
 717 Moreover, they involve neither Judge Porteous's actions
 718 from the bench nor any litigants or lawyers involved in 719 cases before Judge Porteous. So, unlike the conduct
 720 underlying the charges against every federal judge ever
 721 impeached, Judge Porteous's conduct in his bankruptcy,
 722 bank loan, and financial disclosure statements neither 723 depended upon nor utilized his constitutionally entrusted 724 powers. In sum, these offenses involve only Judge
 725 Porteous the private citizen and disclosure of his ⁷¹ In Duplantier v. United States, 606 F.2d 654 (5th Cir. 1979), the Fifth Circuit examined the statutory financial disclosure obligations that Judge Porteous allegedly violated. The disclosure obligation entails filing a "personal financial report," id. at 659 and its statutory intent was to require judges to report for public disclosure judges' private financial interests, id. at 668 n.30. In Duplantier, The Fifth Circuit concluded: "Judges should not be harassed in the legitimate exercise of their duties, and we should tread softly before imposing publicity on their private financial affairs which may be a serious threat to judicial independence and may erode that independence so necessary to the proper functioning of the judiciary. Federal judges may properly inquire what necessity brought about the provisions of the Act of Congress which will cause many of their intimate personal and confidential financial affairs to be open to public inspection." Id. at 672.

726 private wealth and financial affairs, not Judge
727 Porteous's use or abuse of constitutional judicial power.
728 As such, because these allegations entail no abuse of 729 official constitutional power, these alleged offenses
730 involving personal, private conduct generically and 731 categorically fall outside the scope of impeachable
732 offenses.

4.

735 For the foregoing reasons, a detailed examination of 736 the evidence may be unnecessary to a determination that 737 this case does not present a possible treason, bribery, 738 high crime or misdemeanor, or an abuse or violation of 739 constitutional judicial power. Nevertheless, every judge
740 participating in deciding whether to refer this or any 741 case to the House of Representatives for consideration of 742 possible impeachment will wish to have a good
743 understanding of the evidence and record in the case.
744 Accordingly, in the interest of aiding other judges in 745 reviewing and evaluating the evidence, I respectfully 746 suggest that a fair and impartial assessment of the 747 evidence reveals that the case against Judge Porteous, 748 while still warranting a public reprimand, is not as 749 formidable as the committee report represents for many of 750 the same reasons that the DOJ or the grand jury, or both,
751 decided that a criminal prosecution of Judge Porteous was 752 not warranted.

753 The Federal Bureau of Investigation ("FBI") and a
754 grand jury empaneled in the Eastern District of Louisiana

755 spent nearly five years investigating Judge Porteous in 756 connection with a number of potential criminal charges.⁷²
757 Specifically, the FBI investigated Judge Porteous for 758 conspiracy to bribe a public official in violation of 18
759 U.S.C. §§ 201 and 371, commission or conspiracy to commit
760 honest services mail- or wire-fraud in violation of 18
761 U.S.C. §§ 371, 1341, 1343, and 1346, submission of false
762 statements to federal agencies and banks in violation of 763 18 U.S.C. §§ 1001 and 1014, and filing false
764 declarations, concealing assets, and acting in criminal
765 contempt of court during his personal bankruptcy action
766 in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 152 and 401.⁷³

767 After this extensive investigation, the DOJ decided 768 to press no criminal charges against Judge Porteous based 769 both on statute of limitations bars to certain charges
770 and on determination that the government could not meet 771 its burden of proof for the non-barred charges.⁷⁴ It is 772 unclear whether the DOJ decided not to continue or the 773 grand jury returned submitted charges without an 774 indictment. The DOJ specifically said "the government's 775 heavy burden of proof in a criminal trial, and the 776 obligation to carry that burden to a unanimous jury;
777 concerns about the materiality of some of Judge
778 Porteous's provably false statements; the special
779 difficulties in proving mens rea and intent to deceive

beyond a reasonable doubt in a case of this nature" led to a decision not to prosecute.

The same evidence presented to the grand jury was before the judicial council, and considered under any reasonable standard of proof,⁷⁵ it still arguably cannot support a conclusion that Judge Porteous should be held responsible for the alleged criminal offenses to the extent claimed by the committee because the record cannot support an essential element of the criminal allegations, viz., intent to deceive or defraud, save for the least serious offense which does not require proof of this element. The Complaint alleges, and the Special Committee agreed, that the pertinent allegations of criminal offenses are violations of 18 U.S.C. § 1621, perjury; § 152, bankruptcy fraud; § 1001, false statements to federal agencies; § 1014, false statements to a financial institution; § 1344, bank fraud; and § 371, conspiracy.

To prove a violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1621, 152, or 1344 requires proof of a specific intent to defraud; and 18 U.S.C. § 1014 requires proof of a specific intent to influence the bank.⁷⁶ "The requisite intent to defraud is established if the defendant acted knowingly and with the specific intent to deceive, ordinarily for the purpose of causing some financial loss to another or bringing about some financial gain to himself.”⁷⁷ As I discuss in the balance of this section, the record evidence forms an arguably insufficient foundation for the conclusion that Judge Porteous harbored the requisite specific intent for the aforementioned alleged criminal offenses.

⁷⁶ For perjury under § 1621(2), "in order to constitute perjury, a false statement must be made with criminal intent, that is, with intent to deceive, and must be wilfully, deliberately, knowingly and corruptly false." Beckanstin v. United States, 232 F.2d 1, 4 (5th Cir. 1956). For bankruptcy fraud under § 152, according to the Fifth Circuit pattern jury instructions, to convict under Section 152(1), the Government must prove: (1) "That there existed a proceeding in bankruptcy"; (2) "That certain property or assets belonged to the bankrupt estate"; (3) "That defendant concealed such property from the creditors [custodian] [trustee] [marshal] [some person] charged with control or custody of such property"; and (4) "That the defendant did so

The Special Committee finds a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1621(2), the general perjury statute, because Judge Porteous submitted a bankruptcy petition using an alias (“Orteous”) as suggested by his attorney to avoid negative publicity. However, the record shows that Judge Porteous and his attorney intended to correct the name soon after the petition was filed and, in fact, did correct it just twenty days later. Since (1) Judge Porteous relied on his lawyer’s advice⁷⁸ and (2) corrected knowingly and fraudulently.” (emphasis added); see United States v. Maturin, 488 F.3d 657, 662 n.3 (5th Cir. 2007). For bank fraud under 18 U.S.C. § 1344, the prosecution must show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant (1) engaged in a scheme or artifice to defraud, or made false statements or misrepresentations to obtain money from; (2) a federally insured financial institution; and (3) did so knowingly. United States v. Brandon, 17 F.3d 409, 424 (1st Cir. 1994). For § 1014, “the only specific intent that matters for purposes of § 1014 is the intent to influence the bank’s actions.” United States v. Sparks, 67 F.3d 1145, 1152 (4th Cir. 1995).

The last alleged infraction, § 1001, false statement to a federal agency, does not require an “intent to defraud.” While Section 1001 proscribes only deliberate, knowing, willful false statements,” it “does not require an intent to defraud—that is, the intent to deprive someone of something by means of deceit.” United States v. Lichenstein, 610 F.2d 1272, 1276-77 (5th Cir. 1980).

⁷⁷ United States v. Doke, 171 F.3d 240, 243 (5th Cir. 1999).

⁷⁸ Generally, a debtor is entitled to rely on the advice of his bankruptcy counsel where the reliance is reasonable and in good faith. See Hibernia Nat’l Bank v. Perez, 124 B.R. 704, 710-11 (E.D. La. 1991), aff’d 954 F.2d 1026 (5th Cir. 1992); see also First Beverly Bank v. Adeeb (In re

the name within twenty days,⁷⁹ arguably a neutral finder of fact could follow our criminal law precedents and infer a lack of bad faith or no intent to defraud.⁸⁰

Judge Porteous's assertion of a good-faith belief in his conduct, and thus a lack of intent to defraud, also tends to weaken the evidentiary basis for the other allegations of fraud relating to his bankruptcy. In fact, no direct evidence of intent to defraud, a necessary element for the bankruptcy fraud allegation under 18 U.S.C. § 152, rebuts the testimony about Judge Porteous's "good-faith."

For example, the record arguably contravenes a finding of intent to defraud for the allegation that Judge Porteous improperly obtained credit during his bankruptcy by using gambling markers and intentionally concealed this credit from his bankruptcy proceedings.

Adeeb), 787 F.2d 1339, 1343 (9th Cir. 1986) (noting that reasonable and good faith reliance on advice of counsel sufficient to show debtor lacked requisite fraudulent intent to revoke or deny discharge); Beckenstein v. United States, 232 F.2d 1, 4 (5th Cir. 1956) ("The advice of counsel is also important in determining whether appellant made the statement with a corrupt motive.").

The Special Committee attempts to strip Judge Porteous of this defense by declaring "a federal judge cannot reasonably avail himself of such a defense," Special Committee Report at 18, but this statement appears contrary to the Code of Conduct for United States Judges. According to the Commentary to Canon 5C of the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, "[a] judge has the rights of an ordinary citizen with respect to financial affairs," which arguably includes the right to rely on bankruptcy counsel when such reliance is reasonable and in good faith.

⁷⁹ "Recantation may have a bearing on whether an accused perjurer intended to commit the crime." United States v. McAfee, 8 F.3d 1010, 1017 (5th Cir. 1993) (internal citations omitted).

⁸⁰ Further evidence of a lack of bad faith may be inferred from the facts that Judge Porteous's bankruptcy was completed, all creditors were paid a percentage of their claims, and no creditor opposed Judge Porteous's discharge from bankruptcy. See Porteous Hearing Exhibit 1 part 1, Bates No. SC00009-10, SC00015.

834 The FBI agents noted in their testimony that the casino
835 records involving markers are "very confusing" and 836 "there's certain nuances to each casino,"⁸¹ so good faith
837 disagreement or confusion over the financial definition
838 of a marker seems possible. Judge Porteous testified 839 that he understood casino markers as equivalent to 840 checks, which could be held by a casino for as much as 10
841 to 30 days before being presented for payment, and not 842 "credit" in the sense intended by the bankruptcy court 843 order. Under Louisiana commercial law, markers are 844 considered "checks" as defined by Louisiana statute.⁸²
845 Whether each marker was, under the varying underlying 846 circumstances, an actual extension of credit is 847 debatable; thus, whether Judge Porteous knew or should 848 have known each marker was a forbidden extension of 849 credit within the intention of the court's order is also 850 debatable. Based on the complexity of the marker system, 851 the varying circumstances, and the opportunity for 852 misunderstanding, the evidence may support an inference 853 that Judge Porteous did not knowingly incur credit or 854 intend to deceive the bankruptcy court.

855 As for Mrs. Porteous's use of the Fleet credit card 856 to charge around $1,100 during bankruptcy, Judge

⁸¹ SCHAT at 296.

⁸² TeleRecovery of Louisiana, Inc. v. Gaulon, 738 So.2d 662, 667 (La. Ct. App. 1999). I do not suggest that "markers" are necessarily treated as checks and not loans in the bankruptcy context, see In re Armstrong, 291 F.3d 517, 523 (8th Cir. 2002), however legal authority for the position that markers should be considered "checks" (even if not in the bankruptcy context) is some support for a good-faith understanding that "markers" would be treated as checks and not credit in the bankruptcy context within Louisiana and the Fifth Circuit.

857 Porteous's testimony of his ignorance arguably
858 demonstrates a lack of intent to defraud. Judge Porteous,
859 in un rebutted testimony, stated that "my understanding 860 was all the cards were torn up. I did not know she had 861 kept that card active until well after the fact."⁸³ It is 862 undisputed that Judge Porteous relied heavily upon Mrs.
863 Porteous, who is now deceased, and his secretary to 864 handle his personal bank accounts, credit cards, and 865 personal financial affairs.

866 Similarly, regarding the failure to disclose assets,
867 Judge Porteous repeatedly noted that he did not fully 868 understand his financial status, and therefore never 869 knowingly misrepresented his bank accounts. First,
870 explaining his non-disclosure of less than $900 total in 871 various accounts, Judge Porteous stated, "[i]t was just 872 inadvertence, not any intent to hide my finances."⁸⁴ Other 873 factors corroborate that Judge Porteous was not fully 874 aware of his financial situation; his wife handled their 875 bank accounts and his secretary often paid his bills from 876 her personal account before seeking reimbursement from 877 him. Second, Judge Porteous testified that his failure 878 to report a tax refund of $4143.72, like his use of an 879 alias, was in reliance on the advice of his attorney.⁸⁵

⁸³ SCHAT at 161.

⁸⁴ SCHAT at 158. Judge Porteous's non-disclosure of $900 in assets arises out of his representation that a bank account was valued at $100 when it actually contained $559.07, Special Committee Report at 25, and his failure to disclose a Fidelity money market account containing a balance somewhere between $283.42 and $320.29. Special Committee Report at 25.

⁸⁵ SCHAT at 84.

880 Judge Porteous testified that this omission, done on the 881 advice of his attorney, was "no intentional act to try
 882 and defraud somebody. It just got omitted. I don't know 883 why."⁸⁶ His attorney could not recall giving advice on 884 this subject, but his testimony indirectly supports Judge
 885 Porteous's contentions. His attorney, in response to a 886 question about his standard practice under these 887 circumstances, stated that "at the time [of Judge
 888 Porteous's bankruptcy] . . . [as part of my standard
 889 practice,] it was not included in the confirmation order
 890 that the debtor turn over either tax returns or tax
 891 refunds from year to year as the plan progresses."⁸⁷

892 The same lack of evidence regarding specific intent
 893 also applies to allegations of submitting false
 894 statements to Regions bank and bank fraud regarding the 895 renewal of a $5,000 signature loan.⁸⁸ Judge Porteous made 896 two statements: (1) that he was not "in the process of 897 filing bankruptcy" and (2) that there had been no 898 "material adverse change in [his] financial condition as 899 disclosed in [his] most recent financial statement to 900 lender" (emphasis added). In both of these statements, 901 Judge Porteous arguably did not intend to defraud or 902 influence the bank because, in unrebutted testimony, he

⁸⁶ SCHAT at 84.

⁸⁷ SCHAT at 438.

⁸⁸ Alleged against Judge Porteous are violations of both 18 U.S.C. § 1014, false statements to a financial institution, and 18 U.S.C. § 1344, bank fraud; the evidence is insufficient to support these charges' respective specific intent requirements, i.e., the evidence does not support a finding of specific intent to influence the bank or specific intent to defraud.

903 testified that he actually believed the two statements
 904 were true when he filed the renewal form with the bank,
 905 and the record tends to supports this "good-faith"
 906 assertion. The loan renewal form was completed "a couple 907 of months before [he filed] bankruptcy,"⁸⁹ during a period
 908 when Judge Porteous and his lawyer were actively pursuing 909 a work-out with debtors, so as to avoid bankruptcy.
 910 Judge Porteous testified: "I didn't mean [the statement]
 911 to be false, because I wasn't in the process of declaring
 912 - I was doing everything I could not to file a 913 bankruptcy. That's why I attempted for so long to do a 914 workout."⁹⁰ There is evidence and legal authority
 915 establishing Judge Porteous's correct understanding that 916 the work-out is an alternative to avoid bankruptcy.⁹¹

917 Similarly, Judge Porteous's statement to Regions Bank 918 that there was "no material adverse change" to his 919 financial status as disclosed by financial statements 920 also appears to have been true; though his finances were

⁸⁹ SCHAT at 108.

⁹⁰ SCHAT at 109.

⁹¹ In fact, the very "workout" letter that the Special Committee points to as evidence of Judge Porteous's intent to file bankruptcy specifically stated that it was an attempt to "workout of the debts . . . by settlement and release as opposed to the filing of bankruptcy." SCHAT at 280 (emphasis added). The very purpose of a "work-out" agreement is for use outside bankruptcy. See In re Colonial Ford, Inc., 24 B.R. 1014 (Bankr. Utah 1982) ("Congress designed the Code, in large measure, to encourage workouts in the first instance, with refuge in bankruptcy as a last resort."); see also In re Pengo Indus., Inc., 962 F.2d 543, 549 (5th Cir. 1992) ("We strongly disfavor a judicial interpretation of the Bankruptcy Code that contravenes the substantial congressional policy favoring out-of-court consensual workouts."). The testimony of Judge Porteous's bankruptcy attorney, Lightfoot, corroborates Judge Porteous's: "we first started on a workout proposal . . . hoping to avoid bankruptcy" by looking into leveraging home equity and other possible strategies. SCHAT at 433-34.

921 in poor shape at the time he renewed the loan, the same
922 was true at the time he initially sought the loan.
923 Therefore, he may not have believed his financial 924 condition was any worse in respect to his ability to 925 repay a $5000 bank loan than it was a year before when 926 the loan was first made. Moreover, his statement appears
927 to have been literally true; the financial statement
928 forms were never filled out in the initial loan
929 application or in the renewal application. He was only 930 obliged to provide financial statements "as Lender may 931 reasonably request," and there is no evidence showing the 932 Lender so requested. Thus, no material change was 933 technically reflected in the financial condition
934 information as disclosed to the Lender, since both 935 initial and renewal applications contained identical
936 blank financial statement forms.

937 In respect to each of these criminal allegations
938 above, the evidence permits and supports the argument
939 that the record lacks evidence to support these 940 allegations on a critical element: evidence of an intent
941 to defraud or intent to influence the bank.

942 Further, the record demonstrates several mitigating 943 considerations in respect to the remaining allegation and 944 finding that Judge Porteous failed to carefully update
945 his financial disclosure statements to provide an 946 accurate picture of his debt and gifts from friends in 947 the required financial disclosures under 5 U.S.C. App. 4 948 § 101, or the "Ethics in Government Act," in violation of 949 18 U.S.C. § 1001. This statute does not require an intent

950 to deceive for its violation. Without an intent to 951 deceive element, violations of this statute do not entail
 952 the moral culpability associated with the previous 953 alleged criminal violations.⁹² Moreover, Judge Porteous's
 954 violation of this provision arguably does not arise to a 955 level of seriousness that would trigger a criminal 956 investigation and/or indictment.⁹³ The Department of 957 Justice Manual restricts discretion to prosecute to 958 violations of 18 U.S.C. § 1001 when nondisclosures
 959 "conceal significant underlying wrongdoing."⁹⁴ It is not 960 alleged that any impropriety was concealed other than a 961 possible appearance of impropriety (not actual 962 impropriety) created by the unreported gifts and the 963 level of his already-substantial reported private debt.

964 As I have discussed above, the evidentiary support
 965 for the specific intent element is weak in these criminal 966 allegations,⁹⁵ save the least serious alleged violation.
 967 As for the least serious infraction, it arguably does not 968 even warrant criminal investigation. Moreover, the DOJ
 969 and a grand jury investigated similar charges involving ⁹² McBride v. United States, 225 F.2d 249, 254-55 (5th Cir. 1955) (noting that § 1001 does not require proof of an "evil" intent).

⁹³ That Judge Porteous's actions did not, in fact, trigger an investigation further supports this conclusion.

⁹⁵ The final allegation of conspiracy is subject to the same analysis as the independent charges.

970 the same evidence for nearly five years and did not find 971 sufficient evidence to submit or obtain an indictment on 972 any of the charges.

973
974 5.

975 There is reason to conclude that due process concerns
976 render the entire record compiled by the special
977 committee, and considered by the judicial council 978 majority, an unreliable basis for a certification of 979 possible impeachment.

980 Each judicial council must demonstrate that it has 981 fully protected the values of judicial independence and 982 integrity in every disciplinary proceeding; otherwise,
983 the prospect of judges evaluating each other's integrity
984 risks chilling to an extreme degree individual judges'
985 exercise of independent judgment as a matter of fairness
986 to litigants.⁹⁶ In recognition of this, Congress drafted
987 the Judicial Councils Reform and Judicial Conduct and 988 Disability Act of 1980 to control "potential excesses" of 989 a circuit council by "requir[ing] that minimal due 990 process rights be accorded any judicial officer whose 991 actions or state of health are being investigated by a 992 circuit council."⁹⁷ Accordingly, each judicial council
993 must adopt rules requiring that adequate prior notice of 994 any investigation be given to the judge complained 995 against and that the judge be afforded an opportunity to ⁹⁶ The Federal Impeachment Process, supra note 17, at 101-02.

⁹⁷ H.R. Rep. No. 96-1313, at 14 (1980).

996 appear in person or by counsel at investigating panel
 997 proceedings, to present oral and documentary evidence, to 998 compel the attendance of witnesses or the production of 999 documents, to cross-examine witnesses, and to present
 1000 argument orally or in writing.⁹⁸ Additionally, this 1001 judicial council, prior to this case, adopted other rules
 1002 designed to lend fairness and due process to the judicial 1003 disciplinary proceedings.⁹⁹

1004 Judge Porteous was afforded most of these rights, but 1005 he was not provided with all that would appear to be 1006 required for minimal due process and fairness. First,
 1007 Judge Porteous was not represented by an attorney at 1008 either the Special Committee hearing or the Judicial 1009 Council hearing.¹⁰⁰ Judge Porteous's former attorney
 1010 resigned two weeks before the Special Committee hearings
 1011 in which all of the evidence was taken; the judge's
 1012 motion for continuance and for time to obtain new counsel 1013 was denied; and he was forced to appear without the 1014 assistance of counsel before the committee, which 1015 retained two former United States Attorneys to present
 1016 the case for Judge Porteous's sanctioning and possible

⁹⁸ 28 U.S.C. § 358(a)&(b); H.R. Rep. No. 96-1313, at 14 (1980) ("The net effect is . . . that the possibility of one group of federal judges arbitrarily 'ganging up' or 'hazing' another is prevented." (citing Chandler v. Judicial Council, supra 398 U.S. at 140 (Douglas, dissenting).)

The subject judge may choose to be represented by counsel in the exercise of any of the rights enumerated in this Rule. The costs of such representation may be borne by the United States as provided in Rule 20(e).")

1017 impeachment. Before the Special Committee, the attorneys 1018 compiled a voluminous record in an effort to prove 1019 violations of the Code of Judicial Conduct canons and 1020 several complex federal criminal statutes. Judge
1021 Porteous, representing himself, presented very little 1022 evidence and failed to cross examine vigorously the 1023 witnesses called by the committee.

1024 Second, at the beginning of the Special Committee
1025 hearing, Judge Porteous moved to exclude from the 1026 proceedings any evidence of his alleged misconduct that 1027 occurred prior to his appointment and confirmation as a 1028 federal district court judge in 1994. The Chief Judge,
1029 for the Special Committee, denied his motion, and as a
1030 result the record, upon which the Special Committee's 1031 recommendations are made and the Judicial Council's 1032 determinations are based, improperly contains evidence of 1033 his alleged misconduct between 1984 and 1994, when he was 1034 a state judge and before he took office as an Article III
1035 judge. As discussed above and conceded by the special 1036 committee, this conduct is beyond the authority of the 1037 judicial council¹⁰¹ and cannot be considered by Congress
1038 as grounds for its impeachment decision.¹⁰² Thus, this 1039 evidence did nothing but prejudice the record against 1040 Judge Porteous by raising extraneous allegations.

¹⁰¹ See Special Committee Response to Reply Memorandum at 4.

¹⁰² See supra note 63.

1043 For these reasons, I respectfully dissent from the 1044 Judicial Council majority's certification of possible
 1045 grounds for impeachment and instead would issue a public
 1046 reprimand subject to strict precautionary conditions.¹⁰³

¹⁰³ For these same reasons, I had, prior to the certification of this issue, respectfully recommended to the Judicial Council that Judge Porteous's conduct warrants a public reprimand but not certification to the Judicial Conference as possible grounds for impeachment. Accordingly, I recommend 1) that Judge Porteous be reprimanded by means of public announcement; 2) that on a temporary basis for a period of two years no criminal matters in which the United States is a party be assigned to him; 3) that he be required to enter a contract with the Lawyer Assistance Program of the Louisiana State Bar Association for counseling, monitoring, and such programs as it may require for recovery and rehabilitation from alcohol abuse and gambling addiction for a period of not less than five (5) years; 4) that, if such restrictions are not already imposed by the Lawyer Assistance Program, he be required to undergo alcohol testing and treatment and be prohibited from entering any gambling establishment, and 5) that he be required to make such written and personal reports to a monitor to be appointed by the Chief Circuit Judge in respect to his recovery, rehabilitation and financial condition, upon terms and conditions to be specified by the monitor during his tenure in office. This resolution was ultimately rejected, though Judge Porteous was amenable to such measures, See Judge Porteous's Reply Memorandum at 13.

It is unfortunate that the Judicial Council did not reach such a collegial settlement on this basis because a Judicial Council should strive to resolve these matters collegially when it can. See Hastings, 593 F. Supp. at 1383. Moreover, a resolution by reprimand is consonant with the circumstances surrounding Judge Porteous's transgressions, his contrition for those transgressions, and his strong commitment to turning his life around. Judge Porteous admits he committed non-impeachable transgressions; he "sincerely apologizes" for that conduct, and acknowledges he is "ultimately responsible for [his] actions and lapses." Judge Porteous's Reply Memorandum at 13. However, a number of undiscussed tragic mitigating factors surround Judge Porteous's actions. His transgressions occurred at a time when he was beset by undiagnosed depression, alcoholism, and gambling addiction. Id. at 2. These problems were exacerbated by the worsening state of his finances, his loss of his home to Hurricane Katrina, and his wife's sudden death soon thereafter. Id. at 12.

In reaction to this string of misfortune, though, Judge Porteous's conduct in the two years after his wife's death in 2005 displays Judge Porteous' strong commitment to change his life and eliminate the causes of his past indiscretions. Id. at 2. He has not gambled for over two years and has been free from alcohol for at least twenty months. Id. at 2; see also SCHAT at 481. He also is continuing his over two-year treatment for his depression. Judge Porteous's Reply Memorandum at 2. At the time of he filed his Reply Memorandum, Judge Porteous was in the process of signing a five-year contract with the Louisiana Bar's Lawyers Assistance Program, which involves weekly Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, meetings with support groups, meetings with a monitor, and random alcohol testing. Id. at 2. The Chief Judge and other judges of the Eastern District of Louisiana have expressed their belief that Judge Porteous has always performed his judicial duty with integrity and their confidence in his ability to carry out his judicial responsibilities with fairness, impartiality and competence. They also note Judge Porteous's commitment to turning his life around. For these reasons, I believe that a public reprimand subject to strict precautionary conditions is the appropriate sanction in this case.

Re: Impeachment of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.
United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana Replication - Errata

Dear Ms. Erickson:

On behalf of the House Managers, I am writing to inform the Senate of the following errata in the Replication that the House filed April 15, 2010.

- Page 5, first sentence in the Section entitled "Fourth Affirmative Defense," the word "voluntary" should be deleted, so that the sentence now reads: "The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, which, in effect, seeks to suppress the statements of a highly educated and experienced Federal judge, made under oath, before other Federal judges."
- Page 6, last sentence in the Section entitled "Fourth Affirmative Defense," the words "voluntary and" should be deleted, so that the sentence now reads: "Accordingly, there is simply no credible basis to argue that the Senate should not consider Judge Porteous's immunized Fifth Circuit testimony."
- Page 9, first sentence in the Section entitled "Fourth Affirmative Defense," the word "voluntary" should be deleted, so that the sentence now reads: "The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, which, in effect, seeks to suppress the statements of a highly educated and experienced Federal judge, made under oath, before other Federal judges."

- Page 9, last sentence in the Section entitled "Fourth Affirmative Defense," the words "voluntary and" should be deleted, so that the sentence now reads: "There is simply no credible basis to argue that the Senate should not consider Judge Porteous's immunized Fifth Circuit testimony."

I would request that any future published versions of this Replication incorporate and reflect the above changes. Further, in that the Replication has been published in the Congressional Record, to the extent consistent with the Senate rules, we respectfully request that this letter likewise be published.

A copy of this letter will be served upon counsel for Judge Porteous today through electronic mail.

Re Impeachment of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.,
United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Hon. NANCY ERICKSON,
Secretary of the Senate,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MS. ERICKSON: Pursuant to Senate Resolution 457 of March 17, 2010, enclosed is the Replication of the House of Representatives to the Answer of G. Thomas Porteous
Jr., to the Articles of Impeachment.

A copy of the Replication and of this letter will be served upon counsel for Judge
Porteous today through electronic mail.

Sincerely,

ALAN I. BARON,

Special Impeachment Counsel.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES
Sitting as a Court of Impeachment

IN RE: IMPEACHMENT OF G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR., UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA

REPLICATION OF THE HOUSE OF REP-RESENTATIVES TO THE ANSWER OF G.
THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR., TO THE ARTI-CLES OF IMPEACHMENT

The House of Representatives, through its Managers and counsel, respectfully replies to the Answer to Articles of Impeachment as follows:

RESPONSE TO THE PREAMBLE

Judge Porteous in his Answer to the Articles of Impeachment, denies certain of the allegations and makes what are primarily technical arguments as to the charging language that do not address the factual substance of the allegations. However, it is in Judge Porteous's Preamble that he sets forth his real defense and, without denying he committed the conduct that is alleged in the Articles of Impeachment, insists that nevertheless he should not be removed from Office.

At several points in his Preamble, Judge
Porteous notes that he was not criminally prosecuted by the Department of Justice, the implication being that the House and the Senate should abdicate their Constitutionally assigned roles of deciding whether the conduct of a Federal judge rises to the level of a high crime or misdemeanor and warrants the Judge's removal, and should instead defer to the Department of Justice on this issue. Judge Porteous maintains that impeachment and removal may only proceed upon conduct that resulted in a criminal prosecution, no matter how corrupt the conduct at issue, or what reasons explain the Department's decision not to prosecute.
Judge Porteous provides no support for this contention because there is none—that is not what the Constitution provides.

Indeed, the Senate has by its prior actions made it clear that the decision as to whether a Judge's conduct warrants his removal from Office is the Constitutional prerogative of the Senate—not the Department of Justice—and the existence of a successful (or even an unsuccessful) criminal prosecution is irrelevant to the Senate's decision. The Senate has convicted and removed a Federal judge who was acquitted at a criminal trial (Judge Alcee Hastings). The Senate has also convicted a Federal judge for personal financial misconduct (Judge Harry Claiborne) while at the same time acquitting that same Judge of the Article that was based specifically on the fact of his criminal conviction.¹ Thus, Judge Porteous's repeated references to what the Department of Justice did or did not do adds nothing to the Senate's evaluation of the charges or the facts in this case.²

Further, according to Judge Porteous, pre-Federal bench conduct cannot be the basis of Impeachment, even if that conduct consisted of egregious corrupt activities that was beyond the reach of criminal prosecution because the statute of limitations had run, and even if Judge Porteous fraudulently concealed that conduct from the Senate and the White House at the time of his nomination and confirmation. There is nothing in the Constitution to support this contention, and it flies in the face of common sense. The Senate is entitled to conclude that Judge Porteous's pre-Federal bench conduct reveals him to have been a corrupt state judge with his hand out under the table to bail bondsmen and lawyers. Such conduct, which, as alleged in Articles I and II, continued into his Federal bench tenure, demonstrates that he is not fit to be a Federal judge.

Finally, the notion that Judge Porteous is entitled to maintain a lifetime position of Federal judge that he obtained by acts that included making materially false statements to the United States Senate is untenable.
Judge Porteous would turn the confirmation process into a sporting contest, in which, if he successfully were to conceal his corrupt background prior to the Senate vote and thereby obtain the position of a Federal judge, he is home free and the Senate cannot remove him.

ARTICLE I

The House of Representatives denies each and every statement in the Answer to Article
I that denies the acts, knowledge, intent or wrongful conduct charged against Respondent.

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense and further states that Article I sets forth an impeachable offense as defined in the Constitution of the United States.

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each
and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, namely, that Article I is vague. To the contrary, Article I sets forth several precise and narrow factual assertions associated with Judge Porteous's handling of a civil case (the Liljeberg litigation), including allegations that Judge Porteous "denied a motion to recuse himself from the case, despite the fact that he had a corrupt financial relationship with the law firm of Amato & Creely, P.C. which had entered the case to represent Liljeberg" and that while that case was pending, Judge Porteous "solicited and accepted things of value from both Amato and his law partner Creely, including a payment of thousands of dollars in cash." There is no vagueness whatsoever in these allegations. Article I's allegation that Judge Porteous deprived the public and the Court of Appeals of his "honest services"—a phrase to which Judge Porteous raises a particular objection—could not be more clear and free of ambiguity as used in this Article, and accurately describes Judge Porteous's dishonesty in handling a case, including his distortion of the factual record so that his ruling on the recusal motion was not capable of appellate review.³

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of the purported affirmative defense that Article I charges more than one offense. The plain reading of Article
I is that Judge Porteous committed misconduct in his handling of the Liljeberg case by means of a course of conduct involving his financial relationships with the attorneys in that case and his failure to disclose those relationships or take other appropriate judicial action. The separate acts set forth in Article I constitute part of a single unified scheme involving Judge Porteous's dishonesty in handling Liljeberg. Further, the charges in this Article are fully consistent with impeachment precedent.⁴

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each
and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, which, in effect, seeks to suppress the voluntary statements of a highly educated and experienced Federal judge, made under oath, before other Federal judges. Judge Porteous was provided a grant of immunity in connection with his Fifth Circuit Hearing testimony, and the immunity order provided that his testimony from that proceeding could not be used against him in "any criminal case." Simply put, an impeachment trial is not a criminal case.⁵
Accordingly, there is simply no credible basis to argue that the Senate should not consider Judge Porteous's voluntary and immunized Fifth Circuit testimony.

ANSWER TO ARTICLE II

The House of Representatives denies each and every statement in the Answer to Article
II that denies the acts, knowledge, intent or wrongful conduct charged against Respondent.

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each
and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense and further states that Article II sets forth an impeachable offense as defined in the Constitution of the United States.

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each
and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, namely, that the Article is vague. To the contrary, Article II sets forth several precise and narrow factual assertions associated with Judge Porteous's relationship with the Marcottes—both prior to and subsequent to Judge Porteous taking the Federal bench. Article II alleges with specificity the things of value given to Judge Porteous over time and identifies the judicial or other acts taken by Judge Porteous for the benefit of the Marcottes and their business.

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each
and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, namely, that the Article improperly charges multiple offenses. The plain reading of Article II is that Judge Porteous engaged in a corrupt course of conduct whereby, over time, he solicited and accepted things of value from the Marcottes, and, in return, he took judicial acts or other acts while a judge to benefit the Marcottes and their business.

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each
and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, namely, that Article II improperly charges pre-Federal bench conduct as a basis for impeachment. First, Article II plainly alleges that Judge Porteous's corrupt relationship with the Marcottes continued while he was a Federal Judge. Second, Judge Porteous's assertion that pre-Federal bench conduct may not form a basis for impeachment finds no support in the Constitution and is not supported by any other sound legal or logical basis.⁶ As a factual matter, it is especially appropriate for the Senate to consider Judge Porteous's pre-Federal bench corrupt relationship with the Marcottes where it was affirmatively concealed from the Senate in the confirmation process.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S2359

where it involved conduct as a judicial officer directly bearing on whether he was fit to hold a Federal judicial office, and where that conduct, having now been exposed, brings disrepute and scandal to the Federal bench.

ARTICLE III

The House of Representatives denies each and every statement in the Answer to Article III that denies the acts, knowledge, intent or wrongful conduct charged against Respondent.

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense and further states that Article III sets forth an impeachable offense as defined in the Constitution of the United States.

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, which alleges in substance that the allegations in Article III are vague. To the contrary, Article III sets forth several specific allegations associated with Judge Porteous's conduct in his bankruptcy proceedings. There is no credible contention that Judge Porteous cannot understand what he is charged with in this Article.

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, which alleges, in substance, that Article III charges more than one offense. The plain reading of Article III is that Judge Porteous committed misconduct in his bankruptcy proceeding by making a series of false statements and representations, and by incurring new debt in violation of a Federal Bankruptcy Court order. This Article alleges a single unified fraud scheme, with the purpose of deceiving the bankruptcy court and creditors as to his assets and his financial affairs, so that Judge Porteous could enjoy unlawful wealth and income for personal purposes including gambling.

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, which, in effect, seeks to suppress the voluntary statements of a highly educated and experienced Federal judge, made under oath, before other Federal judges. Judge Porteous was provided a grant of immunity in connection with his Fifth Circuit Hearing testimony, effectively eliminating the possibility that any of that testimony could be used against him in any criminal case. An impeachment trial is not a criminal case. There is simply no credible basis to argue that the Senate should not consider Judge Porteous's voluntary and immunized Fifth Circuit testimony.

FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense—which does not take issue with the proposition that Judge Porteous committed misconduct in a Federal judicial bankruptcy proceeding, but contends only that the acts as alleged do not warrant impeachment. First, this is not an affirmative defense. It is up to the Senate to decide whether the facts surrounding the bankruptcy warrant impeachment.

Second, the Senate has in fact removed a judge for personal financial misconduct, and in 1986 convicted Federal Judge Harry Claiborne and removed him from office for evading taxes. It is significant that the Senate did not convict Judge Claiborne for the crime of evading taxes. Rather, the Senate acquitted Judge Claiborne of the one Article that charged him with having committed and having been convicted of a crime.

Third, what the Department of Justice may consider material for purposes of a criminal prosecution has nothing to do with what the Senate may deem to be material for purposes of determining whether Judge Porteous should be removed, from Office—an Office which requires that he oversee bankruptcy cases and administer and enforce the oath to tell the truth?

ARTICLE IV

The House of Representatives denies each and every statement in the Answer to Article IV that denies the acts, knowledge, intent or wrongful conduct charged against Respondent.

FIRST AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense and further states that Article IV sets forth an impeachable offense as defined in the Constitution of the United States.

SECOND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, which alleges the Article is vague. The allegations sets forth in Article IV are specific and precise. In fact, Judge Porteous's description of the charge fairly characterizes the offense: "In essence, Article IV alleges that Judge Porteous gave false answers on various forms that were presented in connection with the background investigation. . . . It is apparent, therefore, that Judge Porteous has a clear understanding of these allegations in Article IV, which specify the dates and circumstances when the statements were made, and the contents of the statements that are alleged to have been false. There is no credible contention that Article IV does not provide Judge Porteous specific notice as to what this Article alleges.

THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense. The allegations set forth in Article IV are specific and precise. They charge in substance that Judge Porteous made a series of false statements to conceal the fact of his improper and corrupt relationships with the Marcottes and with attorneys Greely and Amate in order to procure the position of United States District Court Judge. Charging these four false statements, all involving a single issue, in a single Article is consistent with precedent.

FOURTH AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE

The House of Representatives denies each and every allegation of this purported affirmative defense, alleging that the Senate cannot impeach Judge Porteous based on pre-Federal bench conduct. First, Judge Porteous's assertion that pre-Federal bench conduct may not form a basis for impeachment is not supported by the Constitution. Notwithstanding Judge Porteous's assertions to the contrary, the Constitution does not limit Congress from considering pre-Federal bench conduct in deciding whether to impeach, and there are compelling reasons for Congress to consider such conduct—especially where such conduct consists of making materially false statements to the Senate. The logic of Judge Porteous's position is that he cannot be removed by the Senate, even though the false statements he made to the Senate concealed dishonest behavior that goes to the core of his judicial qualifications and fitness to hold the Office of United States District Court Judge. The proposition that the Senate lacks power under these circumstances to remedy the wrong committed by Judge Porteous is simply untenable.

ENDNOTES

¹ Judge Harry E. Claiborne was acquitted of Article III, charging that he "was found guilty by a twelve-person jury" of criminal violations of the tax code, and that "a judgement of conviction was entered against [him]." See "Impeachment of Harry E. Claiborne," H. Res. 471, 96th Cong., 2d Sess. (1986) (Articles of Impeachment), 132 Cong. Rec. S15761 (daily ed. Oct. 9, 1986) (acquitting him on Article III).

² Moreover, the Department of Justice's investigation, hardly vindicated Judge Porteous. To the contrary, the Department viewed Judge Porteous's misconduct as so significant that it referred the matter to the Fifth Circuit for disciplinary review and potential impeachment, and set forth its findings in its referral letter.

³ Judge Porteous treats Article I as if it alleges the criminal offense of "honest services fraud," in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1346, and that because the term "honest services" has been challenged as vague in the criminal context, the term is likewise vague as used in Article I. Despite Judge Porteous's suggestion to the contrary, Article I does not allege a violation of the "honest services" statute. Moreover, it could hardly be contended that proof that Judge Porteous acted dishonestly in the performance of his official duties does not go to the very heart of the Senate's determination of whether he is fit to hold office.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES' OPPOSITION TO JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE USE OF HIS PREVIOUSLY IMMUNIZED TESTIMONY

The House of Representatives (the "House"), through its Managers and counsel, respectfully opposes Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s Motion to Exclude the Use of His Previously Immunized Testimony (the "Motion to Exclude").¹ Judge Porteous has failed to present any credible argument to justify the exclusion before the Senate of his previous immunized testimony. Moreover, the Judicial Conference of the United States² considered it proper to provide Judge Porteous's testimony to the House of Representatives for use in the consideration of Judge Porteous's impeachment, and the United States District Court for the District of Columbia specifically denied Judge Porteous's emergency request to prevent the House Impeachment Task Force from using Judge Porteous's prior testimony in these impeachment proceedings.

¹ The House incorporates by reference into this Opposition its "Notice of Intent to Introduce at Trial Judge Porteous's Testimony Before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee," filed with the Committee on July 21, 2010, which contains a detailed discussion of the key substantive admissions made by Judge Porteous during his Fifth Circuit testimony.

² The Judicial Conference of the United States is chaired by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and is comprised of the Chief Justice, the chief judge of each United States Court of Appeals, a district court judge from each regional judicial circuit, and the chief judge of the Court of International Trade.

To exclude Judge Porteous's prior sworn testimony from the Senate's consideration, after the Judicial Conference determined that this testimony was proper for consideration by the House, would deny the Senate the ability to assess the full and complete record in this case.³ Judge Porteous's Motion to Exclude should therefore be denied. In support of its Opposition, the House respectfully submits:

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

Judge Porteous was afforded full and complete due process rights during the Fifth Circuit Special Committee proceedings. He was first notified of the appointment of the Fifth Circuit

³ As one example of the inaccurate record that would be created if Judge Porteous's prior sworn testimony were excluded, consider the argument raised by Judge Porteous's lawyers in their Motion to Dismiss Article III, related to Judge Porteous's bankruptcy. On page 16 of the Motion to Dismiss Article III, Judge Porteous's lawyers argue that Judge Porteous understood markers to be "checks (which are used to 'buy' chips from the casino, and which can be cashed at any time by the casino via electronic money transfer), not debt." No citation is given to this assertion, because Judge Porteous testified to the exact opposite conclusion before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee:

Q: Judge Porteous, you're familiar with the term "marker," aren't you?

A: Yes, sir.

Q: Would it be fair to state that, "A marker is a form of credit extended by a gambling establishment, such as a casino, that enables the customer to borrow money from the casino. The marker acts as the customer's check or draft to be drawn upon the customer's account at a financial institution. Should the customer not repay his or her debt to the casino, the marker authorizes the casino to present it to the financial institution or bank for negotiation and draw upon the customer's bank account any unpaid balance after a fixed period of time." Is that accurate?

A: I believe that's correct and probably was contained in the complaint or . . . the second complaint. There's a definition contained.

Q: And you have no quarrel with the definition?

A: No, sir.

Special Committee to investigate the judicial misconduct complaint filed by the United States Department of Justice (the “DOJ Complaint”) against him, and he was also advised of the Rules Governing Complaints of Judicial Misconduct or Disability, on May 24, 2007 – five months before the Special Committee hearing ultimately took place.⁴ Also on May 24, 2007, Judge Porteous was provided with a copy of the DOJ Complaint. The DOJ Complaint contained a detailed factual statement of the allegations against Judge Porteous.⁵

At the Fifth Circuit Special Committee hearing on October 29, 2007, Judge Porteous argued both for a continuance of the hearing in its entirety and for a continuance before he would be required to testify pursuant to a grant of immunity. First, in response to Judge Porteous’s request for a continuance of the proceedings in their entirety, Mr. Woods explained to the Special Committee the detailed amount of evidence and materials that Judge Porteous had been given prior to the hearing:

Mr. Woods: Yes, your Honor. To respond to Judge Porteous, beginning in August [2007], we invited his counsel to come and inspect all documents that we had, which were in boxes that had been received from the Department of Justice. His counsel at that time, Mike Ellis, said that he did not intend to offer any documents, he did not need to review the documents, he was only going to offer the medical records.

Nonetheless, I started sending him grand jury testimony and the bankruptcy file and a number of other voluminous files back in August, that he could begin to review. And then in September and October, we provided documents unsolicited to try and give him all the documents in the case.

⁴ See Letter from the Honorable Edith H. Jones to the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. (May 24, 2007) (Attachment 2). It should be noted that Rule 10(c) of the Rules Governing Complaints of Judicial Misconduct or Disability for the Fifth Circuit, as amended through July 15, 2003, specifically stated that “[a]ll persons who are believed to have substantial information will be called as special committee witnesses, including the complainant and the subject judge. The witnesses may be questioned by the special committee or its counsel. The subject judge will be afforded the opportunity to cross-examine committee witnesses, personally or through counsel.”

⁵ See Judicial Misconduct Complaint filed by United States Department of Justice (May 18, 2007). (A copy of the DOJ Complaint is attached to Judge Porteous’s Motion to Dismiss Article III as Exhibit 1. It is also marked as HP Exhibit 4 on the House’s Exhibit List.)

The charge itself is very detailed. He knows the allegations and the – it could not be more specific, naming what the offense is, what – the date of the offense, what document was falsified, what witness will testify to certain events. He's been on notice since May the 24th [2007] of very specific allegations, and we've offered the documents as soon as we got them from the Department of Justice.

Judge Benavides: Mr. Woods, you refer to the May 24th date. Is that the date that the complaint was forwarded to Judge Porteous?

Mr. Woods: Yes, your honor.

Judge Benavides: And that complaint, as I understood it, referred to the activities and details of the activities that were subsequently the basis of the complaint?

Mr. Woods: That's correct, your Honor.

Judge Benavides: So, the factual allegations have been made known with reference to the complaint since at least May 24th?

Mr. Woods: Yes, your Honor. And Judge Porteous was under criminal investigation by the Department of Justice, as he pointed out, for a number of years. His attorney at that time, Kyle Schonckas, appeared to be very much on top of the case, appeared at grand jury, and instructed various witnesses – well, one witness, Claude Lightfoot, Judge Porteous's bankruptcy counsel, not to answer certain questions. So, he was on top of the investigation, knew the allegations, and I'm sure kept this counsel of Judge Porteous advised.

Judge Benavides: Is there anything with – in reference to the actual complaint that was tendered later, that wasn't the subject of – or already information contained in the complaint from the Justice Department of May 24?

Mr. Woods: No, your Honor. We developed no new evidence other than to try to confirm everything in the complaint. I would point out that Judge Porteous was examined by Dr. Gabbard, and that report was furnished . . . to Judge Porteous as soon as we received it. So, that is the only new information that comes outside of that period of time alleged in the complaint.⁶

Second, regarding Judge Porteous's request for a continuance before he would be required to testify under a grant of immunity, Mr. Woods's co-counsel, Larry Finder, pointed out that the Rules Governing Complaints of Judicial Misconduct or Disability (which had been identified to Judge Porteous in May 2007) specifically identified the subject judge as a witness to be called to testify:

⁶ See Fifth Circuit Transcript, supra note 3, at 6–8.

Mr. Finder: . . . Under the rules under which we're operating, Rule 10C, Special Committee Witness. . . .

"All persons who are believed to have substantial information will be called as Special Committee witnesses, including the complainant and the subject judge."

So, I think that there is no surprise here. It's in the rules, which were provided a long, long time ago.⁷

Judge Porteous thereafter testified pursuant to a standard compulsion and immunity order, signed by Chief Judge Edith H. Jones (the "Immunity Order"). By immunizing Judge Porteous, the Fifth Circuit assured that Judge Porteous would have the opportunity to testify freely without fear of potential criminal consequences. Under any interpretation of the procedures, this was of benefit to Judge Porteous. It reflects not overreaching by the Special Committee, but rather, the Special Committee's concerns about not putting Judge Porteous in a position in which his testimony could be used against him in a criminal case. These concerns naturally flowed from a consideration of the DOJ complaint letter. As Judge Jones correctly stated: "[I]mmunity is better than non immunity, sir."⁸

The testimony that Judge Porteous thereafter gave contained numerous statements highly relevant to three of the Articles of Impeachment subsequently passed by the House of Representatives – Articles I, III, and IV. As explained in detail in the House's Notice of Intent to Introduce at Trial Judge Porteous's Testimony Before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee, these statements included (i) admissions regarding the receipt of cash from Messrs. Amato and Creely, (ii) admissions that these cash transactions “occasionally” followed Judge Porteous’s assignment of curatorships to Creely, (iii) admissions that Judge Porteous received an envelope of cash containing approximately $2,000 from Amato while the Liljeberg case was pending before him, and (iv) numerous admissions pertaining to Judge Porteous’s false statements in his bankruptcy case.

ARGUMENT

Judge Porteous’s Motion to Exclude should be denied. The Immunity Order was properly granted by Chief Judge Jones for the purpose of considering whether Judge Porteous had engaged in judicial misconduct. Thereafter, Judge Porteous raised his “due process”-type complaints at numerous stages of the review, including before judges sitting as members of the Judicial Conference of the United States. For the same reasons that there was no cognizable legal impediment to the consideration of his immunized testimony for purposes of judicial discipline, there is likewise no constitutional principle that would support the exclusion of Judge Porteous’s prior immunized testimony from consideration by the Senate. Indeed, the impeachment proceedings are, in a sense, a continuation of the judicial misconduct inquiry that began in the Fifth Circuit.⁹ Neither the proceedings in the House nor the Senate are criminal and therefore Judge Porteous’s testimony should not be precluded.

⁹ The maximum disciplinary action that the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council could impose against Judge Porteous was a suspension from office without pay, which the Council imposed. Any further action to be taken against Judge Porteous, such as removal from office, must be done by Congress. Thus, based on the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council’s inability to take any further action, it forwarded the Porteous matter to the Judicial Conference of the United States.

I. IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS ARE NOT A “CRIMINAL CASE” AND PRIOR IMMUNIZED TESTIMONY IS THEREFORE ADMISSIBLE

The Immunity Order signed by Chief Judge Jones, compelling Judge Porteous to testify before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee, specifically tracked the language of 18 U.S.C. § 6002, which provides use immunity to compel testimony in response to a witness’s Fifth Amendment claim:

ORDERED, in compliance with 18 U.S.C. §§ 6002-6003 and pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 353, that the witness, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., shall provide testimony and other information as to all matters about which he may be interrogated in a proceeding before or ancillary to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit; and that no testimony or other information that he provides under this order and no information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or other information shall be used against him in any criminal case, except in a prosecution for perjury, making a false statement, or failure to comply with this order.¹⁰

The Porteous Immunity Order neither limited the House of Representatives Impeachment Task Force from using Judge Porteous’s prior testimony, nor does it limit the Senate from admitting and using Judge Porteous’s prior sworn testimony, because neither proceeding is a criminal case.

Judge Porteous has conceded that an impeachment proceeding is not a criminal case.¹¹ It is entirely lawful in a disciplinary proceeding concerning a judge or lawyer for the sworn immunized testimony of the individual in question to be considered by the body charged with determining whether removal from office is warranted. No judge has a property interest in his office. Removal from office is not an imprisonment, fine, or forfeiture of private property, nor are life or liberty in jeopardy in an impeachment. Indeed, this idea was put to rest by the Supreme Court, which held in Nixon v. United States that impeachment proceedings are separate and distinct from criminal proceedings:

There are two additional reasons why the Judiciary, and the Supreme Court in particular, were not chosen to have any role in impeachments. First, the Framers recognized that most likely there would be two sets of proceedings for individuals who commit impeachable offenses – the impeachment trial and a separate criminal trial. In fact, the Constitution explicitly provides for two separate proceedings The Framers deliberately separated the two forums to avoid raising the specter of bias and to ensure independent judgments.¹²

Judge Porteous’s assertion that impeachment is “criminal in nature” adds nothing to his argument. Either the impeachment is a “criminal case,” at which his immunized testimony may not be used against him, or it is not such a case. Removal from office is not a criminal sanction, and therefore the use of Judge Porteous’s immunized testimony cannot be precluded in the Senate proceedings.

Judge Porteous relies on Federal case law (dating back to as early as 1886) in support of his “criminal in nature” argument. Those cases reference such topics as a customs fraud statute and the forfeiture of money after a defendant was convicted of violating gambling and tax statutes. All of the cases to which Judge Porteous cites are inapposite to these impeachment proceedings because none of those cases even remotely involved judicial impeachments.¹³

¹² 506 U.S. 224, 234 (1993) (emphasis added).

¹³ See Michael J. Gerhardt, Rediscovering Nonjusticiability, Judicial Review of Impeachments after Nixon, 44 DUKE L. J. 231, 233–34 (1994) (“[N]o area of constitutional law needs to be nonjusticiable more than impeachment, . . . because the textual, historical, and structural bases for its nonjusticiability are stronger than those for any other area. . . . In other words, impeachment and the political question doctrine make each other possible.”); Akhil Reed Amar, On Impeaching Presidents, 28 HOFSTRA L. REV. 291, 301 (1999) (“Impeachment is, technically, what judges call a ‘political question’ that ordinary courts will not touch. . . . There is indeed ‘judicial review’ of impeachment issues, but this review occurs in the Senate itself, which sits as a high court of impeachment.”) (emphasis added).

Judge Porteous's second argument that impeachments are "criminal in nature" purports to be based on the text of the Constitution itself. However, the historical development of impeachment in this country makes it abundantly clear that the Framers of the Constitution had no intention of impeachment proceedings being treated akin to criminal proceedings. As Alexander Hamilton observed at the time of the debates surrounding the adoption of the Constitution, impeachment trials were understood as deliberative sessions for the Senate to decide whether an official had committed an "abuse or violation of some public trust."¹⁴ Justice Story likewise observed, in the early nineteenth century, that "an impeachment is a proceeding of a purely political nature. It is not so much designed to punish an offender as to secure the state against gross official misdemeanors. It touches neither his person nor his property; but simply divests him of his political power."¹⁵ And, as noted, the text of the Constitution specifically provides for a single remedy upon impeachment: removal from Office. This is not a criminal punishment.

Any possible doubt after the Constitution's adoption on whether impeachment proceedings were criminal in nature was settled in the early impeachment inquiries, such as, for example, the impeachment of Judge John Pickering in 1803 for performing his judicial functions while drunk and for acts of indecency.¹⁶ And indeed, the Senate in the modern era has removed a Federal judge, for example, on a single article of impeachment charging that the Judge's actions had "brought his court into scandal and disrepute, to the prejudice of said court and public confidence in the administration of justice.”¹⁷ It is the preservation of the integrity of the courts that is at issue in Judge Porteous’s impeachment.

The third and final argument Judge Porteous raises to support his contention that impeachment proceedings are “criminal in nature” is that one sentence of one law review article written by the House’s expert, Professor Akhil Amar of Yale Law School, states that “[i]mpeachment is a quasi-criminal affair.” However, Judge Porteous’s reliance on this single phrase, taken out of context, from an article written in 1999, does not advance his position. In the article in question, Professor Amar does not, of course, suggest that there are any procedural consequences that result from his characterization of impeachment as “quasi-criminal.” Rather, Professor Amar’s publications over the last fifteen years contravene Judge Porteous’s assertions.¹⁸

II. THE JUDICIAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNITED STATES CONCLUDED THAT IT IS PROPER FOR JUDGE PORTEOUS'S IMMUNIZED TESTIMONY TO BE USED IN THESE IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS

The use of Judge Porteous's immunized Fifth Circuit testimony in these impeachment proceedings has been sanctioned by the Judicial Conference of the United States.¹⁹ It would be extraordinary indeed for the Senate to reject the uniform view of the judicial branch (including judges from Judge Porteous's own Circuit) that Judge Porteous's immunized testimony is properly to be considered in determining his fitness for Office.

A. The Judicial Conference of the United States's Receipt of the Record from the Fifth Circuit and Transmittal of the Record to the House of Representatives

After the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee concluded its investigation and hearing into the possible judicial misconduct of Judge Porteous, it forwarded to the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council (the "Judicial Council") a comprehensive written Report presenting both the findings of the investigation and the Special Committee's recommendation for necessary and appropriate action by the Judicial Council. On November 20, 2007, the Judicial Council informed Judge Porteous that he could examine the Special Committee Report and re-examine the evidence on which it was based at the headquarters of the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in New Orleans, Louisiana. Judge Porteous was also extended the opportunity to file a written reply to the Special Committee Report, which he submitted on December 4, 2007, to which the Special Committee replied.

Constitution, "the words 'high . . . Misdemeanors' most sensibly meant high misbehavior or high misconduct, whether or not strictly criminal.").

¹⁹ Unlike the miscellaneous federal cases that Judge Porteous cites to in his Motion to Exclude, the Judicial Conference has concluded it is appropriate for Judge Porteous's prior immunized testimony to be used in these impeachment proceedings.

On December 13, 2007, the Judicial Council held a meeting at which it fully considered the Special Committee's Report, Judge Porteous's Reply, the Special Committee's Response, and the record of the proceedings before the Special Committee. Judge Porteous appeared before the Judicial Council and spoke in his own defense. By a majority vote, the Judicial Council determined that the Report and the record contained "substantial evidence supporting the allegations listed in the Special Investigatory Committee Report," and concluded that Judge Porteous had "engaged in conduct which might constitute one or more grounds for impeachment under Article II of the Constitution."²⁰ The Judicial Council thereafter transmitted to the Chief Justice of the United States, as presiding officer of the Judicial Conference, all relevant materials related to Judge Porteous, including the full transcript which contained Judge Porteous's testimony from the Fifth Circuit Special Committee hearing.

The Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability (the "Judicial Conference Committee") thereafter issued a Report and Recommendations to the Chief Justice of the United States and Members of the Judicial Conference of the United States finding "substantial evidence that Judge Porteous has engaged in misconduct that may warrant consideration by the Congress of impeachment under Article II of the United States Constitution."²¹ The Judicial Conference Committee's Report and Recommendations specifically addressed Judge Porteous's arguments that he had been denied his due process rights at the Fifth Circuit Special Committee hearing and concluded:

²⁰ See Memorandum Order and Certification by the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit, at 4 (December 20, 2007). (A copy of the Memorandum Order and Certification is marked as HP Exhibit 6(a) on the House's Exhibit List.)

²¹ See Report and Recommendations of the Judicial Conference Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability, at 2 (June 2008). (A copy of the Report and Recommendations is marked as HP Exhibit 7(c) on the House's Exhibit List.)

The Committee finds no deprivation of procedural due process.

With regard to the opportunity to be heard, adequate time for preparation, and the right to counsel, Judge Porteous had two different counsel, was given several extensions of time to respond to the complaint, and obtained two postponements of the SC hearing.

* * *

Any lack of preparation time or of counsel to represent him was the result of Judge Porteous's indecision as to his future course of action rather than a failure by the SC to accord sufficient time. There is no reason to conclude that Judge Porteous was caught unaware by the evidence or charges against him or that additional time would have altered the record in even a trivial, much less material, way. The hearing and evidence drew upon the long DOJ investigation in which he had been represented by counsel. The salient issues concern evidence of conduct about which there is little dispute. Judge Porteous does not deny that there were false statements in his financial disclosure forms, that he solicited and received cash and things of value from lawyers who appeared before him, that he failed to recuse in matters where such lawyers appeared, [or] that he made false statements in his personal bankruptcy proceedings

Accordingly, the process afforded to Judge Porteous easily met the due process standard.²²

Thereafter, on June 17, 2008, the Judicial Conference of the United States, chaired by Supreme Court Chief Justice Roberts, determined unanimously, upon the recommendation of the Judicial Conference Committee, to transmit a Certificate to the United States House of Representatives which provided, in part:

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 355(b)(1), the Judicial Conference of the United States certifies to the House of Representatives its determination that consideration of impeachment of United States District Judge G. Thomas Porteous (E.D. La.) may be warranted. This determination is based on evidence provided in the Report by the Special Investigatory Committee to the Judicial Council of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and the Report and Recommendations of the Committee on Judicial Conduct and Disability. Said certification is transmitted with the entire record of the proceeding in the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit and in the Judicial Conference of the United States.²³

The Judicial Conference thus explicitly chose to transmit to the House Judge Porteous's Fifth Circuit immunized, sworn testimony, for the House's use in the possible impeachment of Judge Porteous. The propriety of using Judge Porteous's prior immunized testimony could hardly receive a more compelling endorsement.

B. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia Denied Judge Porteous's Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order to Preclude the House of Representatives from Using His Immunized Fifth Circuit Testimony

On the eve of the House Impeachment Task Force hearings, Judge Porteous filed a lawsuit in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, seeking a temporary restraining order preventing the House from using Judge Porteous's prior immunized testimony "in any way, whether direct or indirect, evidentiary or non-evidentiary, in connection with the work of the Impeachment Task Force."²⁴ After fully considering Judge Porteous's arguments, and hearing oral argument on the matter, the United States District Court denied Judge Porteous's Motion, thereby refusing to issue an order that effectively would have enjoined the House from utilizing Judge Porteous's prior sworn testimony.²⁵

²³ Certificate of the Judicial Conference of the United States to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives (June 17, 2008) (emphasis added). (A copy of the Certificate of the Judicial Conference is marked as HP Exhibit 7(b) on the House's Exhibit List.)

Baron, et al., Case No. 09-02131 (D.D.C. Nov. 13, 2009), at 1 (Attachment 3). Judge Porteous's arguments in his present Motion to Exclude are in many respects identical to the arguments Judge Porteous presented to the United States District Court.

²⁵ See PACER Docket Report, Porteous v. Baron, et al., Case No. 09-02131 (D.D.C.), at 3-4 ("Minute Entry for proceedings held before Judge Richard J. Leon. Motion Hearings held on 11/16/2009. Plaintiff's Motion for Temporary Restraining Order – DENIED.") (Attachment 4). On April 7, 2010, in light of the House's supplemental pleading in support of its motion to

CONCLUSION

Judge Porteous's attempts to suppress key evidence from consideration by the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee – namely, his prior sworn, immunized testimony – can only serve to warp the fact finding process. The Committee's main function is to receive evidence and to take testimony, and to thereafter report all of the evidence to the full Senate. The Committee and the Senate would be severely harmed in their ability to fully understand and consider the facts in this case if they are deprived of the opportunity to consider the prior sworn immunized testimony of Judge Porteous.

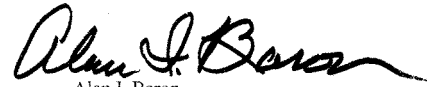

WHEREFORE, the House respectfully requests that Judge Porteous's Motion to Exclude the Use of His Previous Immunized Testimony be denied, and that Judge Porteous's immunized testimony before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee be admitted into evidence before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee.

1 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sir, for the reasons stated --
2 Mr. Woods?

3 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor. To respond to 4 Judge Porteous, beginning in August, we invited his counsel to 5 come and inspect all the documents that we had, which were in 6 boxes that had been received from the Department of Justice.
7 His counsel at the time, Mike Ellis, said that he did not 8 intend to offer any documents, he did not need to review the 9 documents, he was only going to offer the medical records.

10 Nonetheless, I started sending him grand jury
11 testimony and the bankruptcy file and a number of other
12 voluminous files back in August, that he could begin to review.
13 And then in September and October, we provided documents 14 unsolicited but to try to give him all the documents in the 15 case.

16 The charge itself is very detailed. He knows the 17 allegations and the -- it could not be more specific, naming 18 what the offense is, what -- the date of the offense, what 19 document was falsified, what witness will testify to certain 20 events. He's been on notice since May the 24th of very 21 specific allegations, and we've offered the documents as soon
22 as we got them from the Department of Justice.

23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Mr. Woods, you refer to the May 24th
24 date. Is that a date that the complaint was forwarded to Judge
25 Porteous?

10:03 1 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor.

2 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And that complaint, as I understand
3 it, referred to the activities and details of the activities
4 that were subsequently the basis of the complaint?

10:03 5 MR. WOODS: That's correct, your Honor.

6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, the factual allegations have 7 been made known with reference to the complaint since at least
8 May the 24th?

9 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor. And Judge Porteous was 10:03 10 under criminal investigation by the Department of Justice, as 11 he pointed out, for a number of years. His attorney at that 12 time, Kyle Schonekas, appeared to be very much on top of the 13 case, appeared at grand jury, and instructed various witness --
14 well, one witness, Claude Lightfoot, Judge Porteous' bankruptcy
10:04 15 counsel, not to answer certain questions. So, he was on top of 16 the investigation, knew the allegations, and I'm sure kept this 17 counsel of Judge Porteous advised.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Is there anything with -- in 19 reference to the actual complaint that was tendered later, that 10:04 20 wasn't the subject of -- or already information contained in 21 the complaint from the Justice Department of May 24?

22 MR. WOODS: No, your Honor. We developed no new 23 evidence other than to try to confirm everything in the 24 complaint. I would point out that Judge Porteous was examined
10:04 25 by Dr. Gabbard, and that report was furnished to Gabbard as

10:04 1 soon as we -- was furnished to Judge Porteous as soon as we
2 received it. So, that is the only new information that comes
3 outside of that period of time alleged in the complaint.
4 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Might I just make one quick response?
10:05 5 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
6 JUDGE PORTEOUS: This originally started out pursuant 7 to documentation I received from you, as a complaint instituted
8 by the Court for justice, when I called issue with the fact
9 that it did not meet the proper format. At a later date, I was 10:05 10 informed that this is a 2J proceeding instituted by the chief
11 judge.
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
13 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I still don't have anything signed by 14 the chief judge. The complaint I received is signed by 10:05 15 Mr. Woods; and it says, "on behalf of the Committee." I just 16 got that.
17 Now, granted, it does have some of the material
18 from the original allegations; but some are, in fact, omitted,
19 which can only suggest that those items clearly did not 10:05 20 establish any proof of a crime or that they were too old to 21 bring or that it had nothing to do with my actions as a federal 22 judge. And I'm speaking with particular reference to nothing
23 about bail bonds and Wrinkled Robe is in any way included in 24 this particular proceeding.
10:06 25 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: What has all that got to do with a

10:36 1 to at least get my thoughts together before I am compelled to
2 testify. Mr. Woods had that immunity notice; and I just saw it
3 today, just saw it for the first time today.

4 MR. WOODS: It was provided on Friday, your Honor.

10:36 5 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Yeah, on Friday. I understand. No.
6 The log was provided on Friday.

7 MR. WOODS: Right.

8 JUDGE PORTEOUS: The document was not provided on
9 Friday, and you know that.

10:37 10 MR. WOODS: That's correct.

11 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right, sir. We're not going
12 to go crosswise with each other. Thank you very much.

13 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I'm sorry, Judge.

14 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Mr. Finder will to respond.

10:37 15 MR. FINDER: Yes, thank you, Judge. Under the rules
16 under which we're operating, Rule 10C, Special Committee
17 Witness.

18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: You want to speak up there?

19 MR. FINDER: Yeah, I'm sorry. I'll use the podium.

10:37 20 Is this better?

21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.

22 MR. FINDER: "All persons who are believed to have
23 substantial information will be called as Special Committee
24 witnesses, including the complainant and the subject judge."

10:37 25 So, I think that there is no surprise here. It's

10:37 1 in the rules, which were provided a long, long time ago.
2 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I don't doubt that that's what the
3 rules say, your Honor. I'm not taking issue with that. I'm
4 taking issue with the fact that it's the first time I've been
10:37 5 given immunity, without ever seeing the document.
6 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Well, with --
7 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I'm only asking for the rest of the 8 day.
9 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: -- immunity is better than non
10:38 10 immunity, sir. Continuance is denied. You may take the stand.
11 JUDGE PORTEOUS: All right.
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Thank you.
13 JUDGE LAKE: Raise your right hand to be sworn.
14 You do solemnly swear that the testimony you
10:38 15 shall give in this proceeding will be the truth, the whole
16 truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?
17 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I do.
18 GABRIEL THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR., DULY SWORN, TESTIFIED:
19 DIRECT EXAMINATION
10:38 20 BY MR. FINDER:
21 Q. Judge Porteous, a little background information, please.
22 You were a judge in the 24th Judicial District
23 Court in the State of Louisiana from approximately 1984 to 24 October 1994. Is that correct?
10:38 25 A. That's correct.

11:19 1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. So, what -- the amounts I just read to you apply to today.
3 When you first took the bench, presumably they were slightly
4 lower?
11:19 5 A. Presumably, yes.
6 Q. Okay. And these have to do with income and gifts?
7 A. Right.
8 Q. As I just read?
9 A. Yes, sir.
11:20 10 Q. Judge Porteous, you're familiar with the term "marker,"
11 aren't you?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. Would it be fair to state that, "A marker is a form of 14 credit extended by a gambling establishment, such as a casino,
11:20 15 that enables the customer to borrow money from the casino. The 16 marker acts as the customer's check or draft to be drawn upon
17 the customer's account at a financial institution. Should the 18 customer not repay his or her debt to the casino, the marker
19 authorizes the casino to present it to the financial 11:20 20 institution or bank for negotiation and draw upon the 21 customer's bank account any unpaid balance after a fixed period
22 of time." Is that accurate?
23 A. I believe that's correct and probably was contained in the 24 complaint or -- or the second complaint. There's a definition
11:20 25 contained.

11:20 1 Q. And you have no quarrel with the definition?
2 A. No, sir.
3 Q. Okay. Judge Porteous, if markers are a form of borrowing
4 or an extension of credit, by definition, would you agree that 11:21 5 from approximately August 20th to 21st, a two day period in
6 2001, you borrowed approximately $8,000 from Treasure Chest
7 Casino in Kenner, Louisiana, by taking out approximately eight
8 1,000-dollar markers over a two day period?
9 A. Well, did I sign $8,000 worth of markers? You have records
11:21 10 that suggest I did that. I agree with you.
11 Q. Okay.
12 A. The issue is that we haven't -- I have an issue with 13 whether that's credit. The statement itself says it acts like
14 a check against your account. Now, I did not have an 11:21 15 $8,000-dollar line of credit at -- where was that? Treasure
16 Chest?
17 Q. Treasure Chest. I didn't ask you about a line of credit,
18 though.
19 A. I understand, but I'm explaining to you why that's 11:21 20 misrepresentative.
21 Q. Okay. Well --
22 A. Those are just repetitive 1,000 -- had I written a check
23 for a thousand, I do not believe I would have been in violation
24 of any court order.
11:22 25 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But you're saying that you didn't

Civil Action No.

1. Introduction

The Supreme Court has held a grant of immunity pursuant to Title 18, United States Code, §6002 is coextensive with the protections provided by the Fifth Amendment. See Kastigar v. United States, 406 U.S. 441, 453 (1972). The Fifth Amendment's protection against compulsory self-incrimination is not limited to proceedings which are labeled "criminal." The self-incrimination clause has long been held to apply to proceedings of a "quasi-criminal nature" which involve the imposition of punishment on an individual "by reason of offenses committed by him, which though they may be civil in form, are in their nature criminal." See Boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 633-34 (1886); see also Lees v. United States, 150 U.S. 476, 480-81 (1893); United States v. United States Coin & Currency, 401 U.S. 715, 718 (1971); and United States v. Ward, 448 U.S. 242, 251-55 (1980) (applying Boyd, but concluding that the proceeding in which the penalty was imposed was not "quasi-criminal" as that term is used in Boyd).

This motion and the related civil action seek to prevent defendants from violating Judge Porteous' Fifth Amendment right not to be compelled to be a witness against himself. The defendants have violated this right, and continue to do so, through their use of Judge Porteous' immunized testimony in pursuing his impeachment and removal from office. In order to protect his Fifth Amendment rights and to preserve the protections of the immunity conferred upon him by the Fifth Circuit pursuant to § 6002, Judge Porteous asks this Court to enter a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction restraining and enjoining defendants, in their capacity as Counsel to the Impeachment Task Force, from using his immunized testimony in any way, whether direct or indirect, evidentiary or non-evidentiary, in connection with the work of the Impeachment Task Force.

2. Factual Background

For approximately nine years the United States Department of Justice (the “Department”), through the Public Integrity Section of the Criminal Division, conducted a criminal investigation of Judge Porteous. The investigation concluded without the filing of criminal charges. Despite its decision to decline to bring charges, on May 18, 2007, the Department submitted a formal complaint of judicial misconduct to Edith H. Jones, Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit (“Chief Judge Jones”).

This letter led to the appointment of a Special Investigatory Committee (the “Special Committee”) to investigate the Department’s allegations of judicial misconduct. The Special Committee held a hearing on October 29, 2007, at which Judge Porteous was called as a witness by counsel to the Special Committee. The Special Committee obtained a compulsion order and Judge Porteous’ testimony was compelled under a grant of statutory immunity pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 6002. While testifying under the immunity order, Judge Porteous answered numerous questions relating to the allegations of judicial misconduct in the complaint, resulting in a transcript of more than 125 pages.

Based upon the hearing, the Special Committee issued a report to the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit (the “Judicial Council”), concluding that Judge Porteous had committed misconduct that might constitute one or more grounds for impeachment. This report was accepted and approved by a majority of the Judicial Council, while a minority of judges filed a dissenting report. These reports were forwarded to the Judicial Conference of the United States (the “Conference”), and on June 17, 2008, the Conference transmitted a certificate to the Speaker of the House expressing the Conference’s determination that consideration of impeachment of Judge Porteous might be warranted.

On September 17, 2008, the House of Representatives of the 110th Congress passed House Resolution 1448. This Resolution provides that the Judiciary Committee shall inquire whether the House should impeach Judge Porteous. This was followed by the engagement of Alan I. Baron as Special Counsel to lead an inquiry into Judge Porteous' impeachment. On January 13, 2009, the House of Representatives of the 111th Congress passed House Resolution 15 which continued the authority of House Resolution 1448 of the 110th Congress, in order to permit the work of the Impeachment Task Force to continue.

Since that time, defendants Alan I. Baron, Mark Dubester, and Harold Damelin have been reviewing the materials provided by the Fifth Circuit, including the Special Committee Report, the hearing testimony, and other information. In their official capacity as counsel to the Impeachment Task Force, defendants have received the immunized testimony of Judge Porteous but have failed to implement measures designed to prevent the immunized testimony from being used against Judge Porteous, as is typical when a subsequent prosecution is brought against an individual who has provided testimony under a grant of immunity.

Defendants have reviewed the immunized testimony and made use of it in determining the course of the impeachment investigation, in interviewing witnesses, and in considering what additional evidence to seek or what investigative leads to pursue. Upon information and belief, defendants have published Judge Porteous' immunized testimony by exposing potential witnesses to the testimony or its contents, either through the questioning of these witnesses based upon Judge Porteous' testimony or by seeking the witnesses' reaction to his testimony. See Declaration of Richard W. Westling in Support of Motion for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction, dated October 12, 2007 (Attached as Exhibit "1").

3. Applicable Law and Argument

a. The Standard for Injunctive Relief

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia has adopted a four-part test for granting a preliminary injunction. The Court must weigh:

(1) whether the plaintiffs have demonstrated that there is a substantial likelihood that they will prevail on the merits on one of their claims; (2) whether the plaintiffs have shown that they will sustain irreparable harm if injunctive relief is not awarded; (3) whether the issuance of injunctive relief will not “substantially harm” the other parties; and (4) whether awarding the relief is in the public interest.

Mova Pharm. Corp. v. Shalala, 140 F.3d 1060, 1066 (D.C. Cir. 1998). The factors “must be viewed as a continuum, with more of one factor compensating for less of another. If the arguments for one factor are particularly strong, an injunction may issue even if the arguments in other areas are rather weak.” Blackman v. District of Columbia, 277 F. Supp. 2d 71, 77-78 (D.D.C. 2003) (internal citation and quotations omitted). Issuing an injunction may be justified “where there is a particularly strong likelihood of success on the merits even if there is a relatively slight showing of irreparable injury.” Id. at 78 (internal citation and quotations omitted). In this case, Judge Porteous has a very high likelihood of success on the merits and also meets the remaining three elements of the test.

b. Judge Porteous is Likely to Succeed on the Merits

i. The Fifth Amendment Claim

The Fifth Amendment's privilege against compulsory self-incrimination provides that "[n]o person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself." U.S. Const. amend. V. In Kastigar v. United States, the Supreme Court considered whether the government could compel a witness to testify "by granting immunity from the use of compelled testimony and evidence derived therefrom ('use and derivative use immunity')" without violating the witness' Fifth Amendment rights. 406 U.S. 441, 443 (1972). The Court held that use and derivative use immunity conferred under 18 U.S.C. §6002 – the same type of immunity conferred on Judge Porteous – "is coextensive with the scope of the privilege against self-incrimination, and therefore is sufficient to compel testimony over a claim of privilege." Id. at 453.¹

The Court noted that where an individual can demonstrate that he has given immunized testimony, prosecutors:

have the burden of showing that their evidence is not tainted by establishing that they had an independent, legitimate source for the disputed evidence. . . . This burden of proof, which we reaffirm as appropriate, is not limited to the negation of taint; rather, it imposes on the prosecution the affirmative duty to prove that the evidence it proposes to use is derived from a legitimate source wholly independent of the compelled testimony.

406 U.S. at 460 (citations omitted).

¹ The Fifth Amendment and the immunity order in this case both provide protections in a "criminal case." As discussed in Section 3(b)(ii) below, however, the Fifth Amendment's privilege against self-incrimination has also been extended to quasi-criminal cases and, accordingly, under Kastigar, the reach of the immunity statute and the immunity order in this case must be coextensive with the Fifth Amendment.

Under Kastigar, the first requirement for obtaining relief and, thereby, protection of an individual's Fifth Amendment right, is to demonstrate that the individual provided immunized testimony. This is clearly established here. See Immunity Order, dated October 5, 2007 (Attached as Exhibit "2") and Transcript of Testimony of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr. before the Special Committee (Attached as Exhibit "3"). This showing alone is sufficient to trigger the prosecution's "heavy" burden under Kastigar to show affirmatively that its effort to impeach Judge Porteous rests on independent and untainted evidence.

ii. Impeachment is Quasi-Criminal

It is anticipated that the defendants will argue that the ruling in Kastigar is limited to criminal prosecutions in the criminal courts and that it has no application to an impeachment proceeding before Congress. The Supreme Court, however, has placed no such limits on the Fifth Amendment's protection against compelled self-incrimination. Indeed, the Supreme Court has held that the contours of the Fifth Amendment protection against compulsory self-incrimination are not limited to traditional criminal prosecutions; rather they extend to quasi-criminal proceedings which involve the imposition of punishment on an individual "by reason of offenses committed by him, which though they may be civil in form, are in their nature criminal." See Boyd, 116 U.S. at 633-34; see also Lees, 150 U.S. at 480-81; United States Coin & Currency, 401 U.S. at 718; and Ward, 448 U.S. at 251-55.

There is, perhaps, no clearer example of a quasi-criminal proceeding than the impeachment of a civil officer under the Constitution. As a noted constitutional scholar has observed "[i]mpeachment is a quasi-criminal affair, in which the Senate, sitting as a court, is asked to convict the defendant of high criminality or gross misbehavior in a trial designed not merely to remove but also to stigmatize the offending officeholder." Akhil Reed Amar, Impeaching Presidents, 28 HOFSTRA L. REV. 291, 307 (1999). Compare Hastings v. United States Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, 716 F. Supp. 38, 41 (D.D.C. 1989)(holding that for Double Jeopardy purposes an impeachment is not a criminal proceeding and finding that impeachment trials are sui generis).

The view that impeachment is quasi-criminal finds significant support in the text of the Constitution itself. First, Article II, Section 4 provides that “[t]he President, Vice President and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of, treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors.” U.S. Const. art. II, §4. This provision clearly reflects the quasi-criminal nature of the impeachment process. That the offenses supporting impeachment are grave offenses (even though they are not necessarily limited to indictable offenses) supports the view that liability in an impeachment is based upon criminal acts. Second, Article I, Section 3 provides that “[j]udgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of honor, Trust or Profit under the United States: but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.” U.S. Const. art. I, § 3. This clause also supports the view of impeachment as quasi-criminal in its reference to “conviction” and in permitting punitive measures including removal from office and disqualification to hold office in the future. Finally, Article III, Section 2, provides that “[t]he Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.” U.S. Const. art. III, §2. Here, the Constitution makes clear that trials in cases of impeachment will be a “trial of a crime” but will be exempted from the requirement of a trial by jury. In light of its quasi-criminal character, Supreme Court precedent supports the view that the Fifth Amendment's protection against compulsory self-incrimination applies to an impeachment proceeding. As a result, the principles in Kastigar should apply to the use of Judge Porteous' immunized testimony.

iii. The Speech and Debate Clause

A threshold issue to the ability of Judge Porteous to succeed on the merits of his claim is a determination as to whether this action is barred by the Constitution's Speech and Debate Clause. The Clause provides that: "for any Speech or Debate in either House, [Members of Congress] shall not be questioned in any other Place." U.S. Const. art. I, §6, cl. 1. This clause has been interpreted to provide immunity to Members of Congress and their staff for actions "that fall within the sphere of legitimate legislative activity." Eastland v. United States Servicemen's Fund, 421 U.S. 491, 501 (1975). The Supreme Court has noted that:

In determining whether particular activities other than literal speech or debate fall within the legitimate legislative sphere we look to see whether the activities took place 'in a session of the House by one of its members in relation to the business before it. More specifically, we must determine whether the activities are an integral part of the deliberative and communicative processes by which Members participate in committee and House proceedings with respect to the consideration and passage or rejection of proposed legislation or with respect to other matters which the Constitution places within the jurisdiction of either House.

The power to investigate and to do so through compulsory process plainly falls within that definition. This Court has often noted that the power to investigate is inherent in the power to make laws because a legislative body cannot legislate wisely or effectively in the absence of information respecting the conditions which the legislation is intended to affect or change.

Servicemen's Fund, 421 U.S. at 503-504 (internal quotations and citations omitted). Here, while no legislation is contemplated, the House is involved in an impeachment inquiry and, clearly, impeachment is another matter “which the Constitution places within the jurisdiction of either House.” Id. See also Hastings v. United States Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, 716 F. Supp. 38, 42 (D.D.C. 1989)(holding impeachment falls under the Speech and Debate Clause).

While the impeachment process may be protected by the Speech and Debate Clause, as with any other assertion of the Clause, its protections are not absolute. In this suit challenging a constitutional violation during an impeachment inquiry, the corollary to the Supreme Court’s reference to the “legitimate legislative sphere” is that the action complained of must be within the “legitimate impeachment sphere” in order for the action to be protected by the Clause. Based on this precedent, the question for this Court is whether the use of immunized testimony in violation of an individual’s Fifth Amendment self-incrimination right can ever be a “legitimate” activity for Congress, whether undertaken as part of its power to legislate or to impeach.

The Supreme Court has published language that seems to mandate otherwise. For instance, in Gravel v. United States, 408 U.S. 618 (1972) that “no prior case has held that Members of Congress would be immune if they executed an invalid resolution by themselves carrying out an illegal arrest, or if, in order to secure information for a hearing, themselves seized the property or invaded the privacy of a citizen. Neither they nor their aides should be immune from liability or questioning in such circumstances.” Id. at 621. As pointed out in Servicemen’s Fund, the actions referred to in this passage were not essential to legislating and could easily be contrasted with the routine subpoena for information which confronted the Servicemen’s Fund Court. Nor can it be argued that failing to protect against the improper use of Judge Porteous’ immunized testimony or that its publication to witnesses is essential to impeaching. Indeed, prosecutors are regularly confronted with the problem of prosecuting a witness who has received statutory immunity and have learned to put measures in place to protect against the improper use of such testimony. See e.g., Untied States v. North, 920 F.2d 940, 942-3 (D.C. Cir. 1990).

More recently, the District of Columbia Circuit noted that the Speech and Debate Clause “privilege permits Congress to conduct investigations and obtain information without interference from the courts, at least when these activities are performed in a procedurally regular fashion.” Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. v. Williams, 62 F.3d 408, 416 (D.C. Cir. 1995)(emphasis added). While the Clause confers immunity on Members of Congress for all actions “within the legislative sphere, even though their conduct, if performed in other than legislative contexts, would in itself be unconstitutional or otherwise contrary to the criminal or civil statutes,” the Clause “is not, to be sure, a blanket prohibition on suits against congressmen” or their staffs. Id. at 415. “Closely related – indeed a corollary – to this right to pursue investigations is Congress’ privilege to use materials in its possession without judicial interference. In this context, the privilege operates to insulate materials held by Congress from claims based on actions or occurrences other than Congress’ present use.” Id. at 416-17 (internal quotations and citations omitted). The Court noted that:

The law is clear that even though material comes to a legislative committee by means that are unlawful or otherwise subject to judicial inquiry the subsequent use of the documents by the committee staff in the course of official business is privileged legislative activity. Although Members and (more likely) their agents can be held accountable for illegal seizures, that does not affect Congress’ privilege to use illegally seized materials, so long as that use is consistent with legislative purposes. Uses that fall outside the confines of legislative action, however such as the dissemination of investigatory information outside Congress are not protected.

Id. (internal quotations and citations omitted).

Judge Porteous' action is not based upon the Congress' receipt of the immunized testimony; rather it is based upon the "present use" of those materials by counsel to the Impeachment Task Force in violation of Judge Porteous' Fifth Amendment rights. This use is not within the "legitimate impeachment sphere" nor is it "essential to impeaching." While the protections afforded by the Speech and Debate Clause are broad, there is no prior case holding that where the "use" itself violates a constitutional right there is absolute immunity from suit. In all the cases cited, the courts were called upon to determine whether the actions complained of were committed by congressional staff as part of the "legitimate" or "essential" function of one of the Houses. Judge Porteous suggests that the use of immunized testimony in violation of the Fifth Amendment cannot be deemed part of the legitimate impeachment function and, as a result, the Speech and Debate Clause should not bar this suit.

iv. Justiciability

Defendants will doubtless attempt to avoid consideration of this case by claiming that all issues related to impeachment are nonjusticiable under the political question doctrine. See Nixon v. United States, 506 U.S. 224 (1993); see also Hastings v. United States Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, 716 F. Supp. 38, 43 (D.D.C. 1989)(holding senate trial procedures were non-justiciable).² While the Supreme Court's ruling in Nixon did find that the procedures used by the Senate to try a federal judge were not subject to review by the Court, the issues raised here do not fall under the ruling in Nixon. The ruling of nonjusticiability in Nixon relied on the concept of “textual commitment” which the Supreme Court expressed as:

² The district court's ruling in Hastings was affirmed by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in an unpublished opinion. See Hastings v. United States Senate, 887 F.2d 332, 1989 WL 122685 (D.C. Cir., Oct. 8, 1989). The District of Columbia Circuit, while affirming the district court, did not find the matter was non-justiciable. The Court based its decision on problems of ripeness and prematurity, and upon the lack of precedent supporting the issuance of injunctive or declaratory relief intercepting ongoing proceedings of the legislative branch. In contrast, here Judge Porteous is not seeking to enjoin the proceedings of the legislative branch, rather he is seeking to enjoin violations of his constitutional rights that are occurring, and which will continue to occur, because of Impeachment counsels' use of his immunized testimony to further the impeachment process.

A controversy is nonjusticiable – i.e., involves a political question – where there is “a textually demonstrable constitutional commitment of the issue to a coordinate political department; or a lack of judicially discoverable and manageable standards for resolving it” Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 217 (1962). But the courts must, in the first instance, interpret the text in question and determine whether and to what extent the issue is textually committed. See ibid.; Powell v. McCormack, 395 U.S. 486, 519 (1969). As the discussion that follows makes clear, the concept of a textual commitment to a coordinate political department is not completely separate from the concept of a lack of judicially discoverable and manageable standards for resolving it; the lack of judicially manageable standards may strengthen the conclusion that there is a textually demonstrable commitment to a coordinate branch.

Nixon, 506 U.S. at 228-29. Here there is no textual commitment of the Fifth Amendment right against compulsory self-incrimination. Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution vests the power of impeachment solely in the House of Representatives and Article I, Section 3 provides that the Senate has the sole power to try all impeachments. However, these textual provisions do not suggest that the Congress alone is constitutionally committed to determining if an individual’s Fifth Amendment rights have been violated based upon the government use of his immunized testimony in an attempt to impose a punishment in a quasi-criminal proceeding. Moreover, the determination and vindication of the self-incrimination rights guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment are clearly not the types of questions for which there is “a lack of judicially discoverable and manageable standards to be used for resolving it.” Id.

Judge Porteous’ claim is based upon the improper use of his immunized testimony in violation of his Fifth Amendment rights. This violation has occurred, and will continue to occur, while defendants, in their capacity as counsel to the Impeachment Task Force, make direct and indirect use of his immunized statements in pursuing the quasi-criminal impeachment process. Because he has established a constitutional violation and is likely to succeed on the merits, injunctive relief is appropriate in this matter.

c. Judge Porteous Will Sustain Irreparable Harm

“It has long been established that the loss of constitutional freedoms, ‘for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury.’” Mills v. District of Columbia, 571 F.3d 1304, 1312 (quoting Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976)). Here, Judge Porteous is subject to a continuing infringement of his rights under the Fifth Amendment in the absence of injunctive relief. Moreover, given the anticipated commencement of hearings by the Impeachment Task Force on November 17, 2009 it is imperative that this Court order injunctive relief to prevent continuing use of the immunized testimony. Further, if the Court fails to act and to preserve the status quo pending a review of Judge Porteous’ constitutional claims, the impeachment process will likely moot any pending review. While Judge Porteous suggests that this Court can determine the extent of any violation of his Fifth Amendment rights at this point in time, it is also clear that the legacy of Nixon v. United States is to deny any post-hearing consideration of his constitutional claims in the event he is impeached and removed from office based, in part, upon the use of his immunized testimony.

d. Injunctive Relief Will Not Substantially Harm Defendants

While defendants will claim that they will be harmed by the entry of a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction, any such harm will be limited to a delay in the proceedings while Judge Porteous’ constitutional claims are considered by the Court. Defendants clearly have a right to pursue their impeachment inquiry of Judge Porteous expeditiously and efficiently. However, their right to do so does not trump Judge Porteous' right to have his Fifth Amendment rights protected. While this litigation may be the source of some temporary delay, it will not prejudice the defendants except to the extent that a ruling limiting the use of the immunized testimony and protecting Judge Porteous' constitutional rights may have an impact upon their ability to further the impeachment inquiry.

e. Injunctive Relief Is in the Public Interest

The public has an interest in having the courts ensure that the individual rights guaranteed by the Constitution are protected. See, e.g., G&V Lounge, Inc. v. Michigan Liquor Control Commission, 23 F.3d 1071, 1079 (citing Gannett Co., Inc. v. DePasquale, 443 U.S. 368, 383 (1979)). The public interest is also served by allowing the defendants to expeditiously conduct a full and fair impeachment inquiry into the allegations against Judge Porteous. However, the public interest is clearly not served where the tension between protecting individual rights and expedition in pursuing the impeachment inquiry is resolved by deferring to expediency at the expense of constitutional rights. Because pursuit of the impeachment inquiry can only be in the public interest where that inquiry is conducted in a manner which is entirely consistent with Judge Porteous' constitutional rights, thereby ensuring public confidence in the process and its result, injunctive relief here is in the public interest.

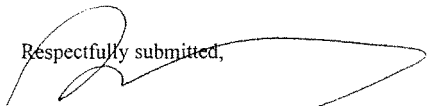

4. Conclusion

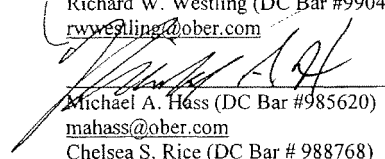

For these reasons, the Judge Porteous requests that the Court issue an order:

(1) granting a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction enjoining defendants, in their capacity as counsel to the Impeachment Task Force, from making any use of Judge Porteous immunized testimony, whether direct or indirect, evidentiary or non-evidentiary, in connection with the impeachment inquiry; and

(2) setting an adversary hearing to determine the extent of any prior use of Judge Porteous' immunized testimony in order to fashion an appropriate form of injunctive relief to protect Judge Porteous from any and all past violations of his constitutional rights.

In The Senate of the United States

Impeachment of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.,)
United States District Judge for the) Eastern District of Louisiana)

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES' NOTICE OF INTENT TO INTRODUCE AT TRIAL JUDGE PORTEOUS'S TESTIMONY BEFORE THE FIFTH CIRCUIT SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Pursuant to the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee's Scheduling Order of June 21, 2010, the House of Representatives (the "House"), through its Managers and counsel, respectfully provides notice to the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee and to Judge Porteous that it will introduce as evidence Judge Porteous's immunized testimony that he provided under oath before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee on October 30, 2007.¹ In support of this notice, the House respectfully submits:

On October 29, 2007, Judge Porteous testified under oath before the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee that was hearing evidence related to his possible judicial misconduct, for purposes of determining whether Judge Porteous should be disciplined and/or whether other official actions – such as referring Judge Porteous for possible impeachment – was warranted. In connection with that hearing, Judge Porteous was provided a standard compulsion order, signed by Chief Judge Edith H. Jones of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. That Order stated that it was hereby:

ORDERED, in compliance with 18 U.S.C. §§ 6002-6003 and pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 353, that the witness, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., shall provide testimony and other information as to all matters about which he may be interrogated in a proceeding before or ancillary to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit; and that no testimony or other information that he provides under this order and no information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or other information shall be used against him in any criminal case, except in a prosecution for perjury, making a false statement, or failure to comply with this order.²

Because the Impeachment proceeding is not a “criminal case” – the only proceeding in which Judge Porteous’s immunized testimony may not be used against him – the Immunity Order does not preclude the use of Judge Porteous’s immunized Fifth Circuit testimony in the Impeachment trial. As this Senate Trial Committee has noted, in a “Disposition” signed by all twelve Senators on the Committee, “the impeachment proceeding is independent of, and not akin to, a civil or criminal proceeding.”³

In his testimony, Judge Porteous made numerous statements that are relevant to the Articles I, III and IV of the Articles of Impeachment. For example, he admitted receiving cash from attorneys Creely and Amato:

Q. When did you first start getting cash from Messrs. Amato, Creely, or their law firm?

A. Probably when I was on state bench.

²Order, In Re Matters Involving U.S. District Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., Dckt. No. 07-05-351-0085 (emphasis added). That Order, as well as the various application materials, is attached as “Attachment I.”

³ Disposition of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.s Motion for Continuance” (June 21, 2010).

Q. And that practice continued into 1994, when you became a federal judge, did it not?

A. I believe that's correct.⁴

Judge Porteous also admitted that these transactions "occasionally" followed his assignment of curatorships to Creely, though he claimed that these transactions were not linked:

Q. Just talking about Creely and Amato and their law firm right now. You would occasionally, after sending them curatorships – and for the record, what is a – how would you describe a curatorship?

A. [Porteous] It's for an absent defendant. It could be in a variety of situations. ...

Q. And after receiving curatorships, Mr. – Messrs. Creely and/or Amato and/or their law firm would give you money, correct?

A. Occasionally.

Q. [Judge Benavides]: ... [T]here is testimony before the grand jury that there was a return in the exact same amount, minus expenses,

⁴Porteous Fifth Circuit Hearing Testimony (hereinafter "Fifth Cir. Hrg.") at 119. Judge Porteous's testimony was made "HP Exhibit 10" on the House's Exhibit list. A copy of the testimony, along with the preceding colloquy, is attached at "Attachment 2." Judge Porteous also made statements in his questioning of witnesses that are functionally admissions. For example, he asked Attorney Amato why Amato gave him money:

Q. [Porteous]: [J]ust so I'm clear, this money that was given to me, was it done because I'm a judge, to influence me, or just because we're friends?

A. [Amato]: Tom, it's because we were friends and we've been friends for 35 years. And it breaks my heart to be here.

See Amato Fifth Cir. Hrg. at 258-59 (HP Ex. 20). Judge Porteous is well aware of the significance of this testimony, and had sought, by filing an action in the United States District Court, to preclude the House from using it. Judge Porteous's determined efforts to deprive Congress of this critical evidence is described in the Judiciary Committee Report that accompanied the Articles of Impeachment at pages 10-11.

of the curatorship that was returned to you, according to one of the witnesses.

A. That's apparently what it says, I agree.

Q. Is that true or not?

A. Not – to the best of my knowledge, that is not correct.

* * *

Q. [So] if it matched the expense – the amount each time –

A. I don't –

Q. Except for expenses, that would be a coincidence?

A. I don't know if it matched each time. That's all I can tell you, Judge. I don't know.⁵

Judge Porteous further testified that he received an envelope containing approximately $2,000 in cash from Attorney Amato when the Liljeberg case was pending:

Q. [W]hether or not you recall asking Mr. Amato for money during this fishing trip, do you recall getting an envelope with $2,000 shortly thereafter?

A. Yeah. Something seems to suggest that there may have been an envelope. I don't remember the size of an envelope, how I got the envelope, or anything about it.

Q. [Judge Lake]: Wait a second. Is it the nature of the envelope you're disputing?

A. No. Money was received in [an] envelope.

Q. And had cash in it?

A. Yes, sir.

⁵Porteous Fifth Cir. Hrg. at 130-33 (emphasis added).

Q. And it was from Creely and/or –

A. Amato.

Q. Amato?

A. Yes.

Q. And it was used to pay for your son's wedding.

A. To help defray the cost, yeah.

Q. And was used --

A. They loaned -- my impression was it was a loan.

Q. And would you dispute that the amount was $2,000?

A. I don't have any basis to dispute it.⁶

Judge Porteous made numerous other statements that are highly probative to Article III (bankruptcy) as well.⁷

Not only is there no legal impediment exists to the House's use of this highly relevant evidence, it would constitute a miscarriage of the fact-finding process if the Senate were to be kept in the dark about Judge Porteous's own statements concerning the conduct at issue. For example, only Judge Porteous and Mr. Amato have first-hand knowledge of the money that Mr. Amato gave Judge Porteous when the Liljeberg case was pending, and, presumably, if Judge Porteous's testimony were not admitted, he would be free to claim the event never happened (or cannot be proven), even though he admitted that conduct under oath. Though the Federal Rules of Evidence do not pertain ⁶Porteous Fifth Cir. Hrg. at 136-37 (Ex. 10).

⁷The House is willing to designate the entirety of Judge Porteous's testimony for admission to avoid any claim that it is picking and choosing testimony out of context.

to Impeachment proceedings, we note that prior testimony of a party would be admissible in any Federal trial.⁸

Finally, the introduction of Judge Porteous's prior testimony is consistent with Senate Impeachment precedent. In the Claiborne Impeachment, the House moved the Senate to "accept prior admissions of Judge Claiborne as substantive evidence."⁹ The Claiborne Impeachment Committee granted the motion, and Judge Claiborne's prior testimony was in fact admitted in the impeachment trial.¹⁰

WHEREFORE, the House provides notice of its intent to introduce Judge Porteous's Fifth Circuit Hearing testimony.

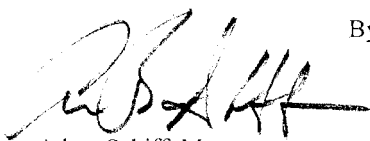

⁸See Federal Rules of Evidence 801(d)(2) (a statement does not constitute excludable hearsay if "[t]he statement is offered against a party and is (A) the party's own statement....").

Claiborne, reprinted in Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, Hearings before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, United States Senate, S. Hrg. 99-812, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. (1986) at 389 [hereinafter "Judge Claiborne Senate Impeachment Report"].

¹⁰Proceedings of the Claiborne Impeachment Trial Committee, Sept. 10, 1986, printed in Judge Claiborne Senate Impeachment Report at 110 (statement of Sen. Mathias). The Motion was granted in a summary fashion. Judge Claiborne was permitted leave to raise particular objections to testimony that the House sought to use, though it does not appear that he in fact made any. At trial, when the House Managers sought to introduce Judge Claiborne's testimony, Judge Claiborne's counsel stated: "Mr. Chairman, it is our understanding that the ruling has already been made and that the statements attributed to Judge Claiborne are in fact admissible." JUDGE PORTEOUS: And, Judge, on that issue, I just on Friday realized I was going to be given immunity and just hadn't had time to adequately contemplate the testimony. I mean, I've been working on everything else.

I would simply ask that I be given through today

17:36 1 to at least get my thoughts together before I am compelled to
2 testify. Mr. Woods had that immunity notice; and I just saw it
3 today, just saw it for the first time today.
4 MR. WOODS: It was provided on Friday, your Honor.
10:36 5 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Yeah, on Friday. I understand. No.
6 The log was provided on Friday.
7 MR. WOODS: Right.
8 JUDGE PORTEOUS: The document was not provided on
9 Friday, and you know that.
10:37 10 MR. WOODS: That's correct.
11 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right, sir. We're not going
12 to go crosswise with each other. Thank you very much.
13 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I'm sorry, Judge.
14 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Mr. Finder will to respond.
10:37 15 MR. FINDER: Yes, thank you, Judge. Under the rules
16 under which we're operating, Rule 10C, Special Committee
17 Witness.
18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: You want to speak up there?
19 MR. FINDER: Yeah, I'm sorry. I'll use the podium.
10:37 20 Is this better?
21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
22 MR. FINDER: "All persons who are believed to have
23 substantial information will be called as Special Committee
24 witnesses, including the complainant and the subject judge."
10:37 25 So, I think that there is no surprise here. It's

10:37 1 in the rules, which were provided a long, long time ago.
2 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I don't doubt that that's what the
3 rules say, your Honor. I'm not taking issue with that. I'm
4 taking issue with the fact that it's the first time I've been
10:37 5 given immunity, without ever seeing the document.
6 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Well, with --
7 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I'm only asking for the rest of the 8 day.
9 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: -- immunity is better than non
10:38 10 immunity, sir. Continuance is denied. You may take the stand.
11 JUDGE PORTEOUS: All right.
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Thank you.
13 JUDGE LAKE: Raise your right hand to be sworn.
14 You do solemnly swear that the testimony you
10:38 15 shall give in this proceeding will be the truth, the whole
16 truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?
17 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I do.
18 GABRIEL THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR., DULY SWORN, TESTIFIED:
19 DIRECT EXAMINATION
10:38 20 BY MR. FINDER:
21 Q. Judge Porteous, a little background information, please.
22 You were a judge in the 24th Judicial District
23 Court in the State of Louisiana from approximately 1984 to 24 October 1994. Is that correct?
10:38 25 A. That's correct.

Cheryl K. Barron, CSR, CM, FCRR

713.250.5585

10:38 1 Q. And prior to taking that judicial office, you were employed
2 as special counsel to the office of the Louisiana Attorney
3 General from approximately 1971 to approximately 1973. Is that
4 correct?

10:38 5 A. I believe that's correct.

6 Q. You were also a prosecutor and assistant district attorney
7 of Jefferson Parish, Louisiana, from approximately 1973 to
8 1975. Is that correct?

9 A. I'm sorry. Would you -- I'm sorry.

10:39 10 Q. I'm sorry. 1973 to approximately 1975?

11 A. I was what? I'm sorry.

12 Q. An assistant district attorney of Jefferson Parish?

13 A. I was an assistant DA from -- until I took the state bench.

14 Q. Okay. So, I'm incorrect, then?

10:39 15 A. I was an assistant DA from some -- some period of time,
16 probably '73 through '84.

17 Q. Okay. And you were also city attorney for Harahan,
18 Louisiana, from 1982 to 1984?

19 A. That sounds correct.

10:39 20 Q. Okay. You were nominated by the President of the United
21 States on August 25th, 1994, to become a United States district
22 judge. Is that correct?

23 A. Right.

24 Q. You were confirmed by the Senate on October 7th, 1994; and
10:39 25 at that time received your commission as a US district judge on

10:39 1 October 11th. Is that correct?
2 A. That is correct.
3 Q. And from that date to the present, you have been bound by
4 the Code of Conduct for United States Judges, correct?
10:40 5 A. Correct.
6 MR. FINDER: Your Honors, I'm going to be walking up
7 and back to use the Elmo; so, that's the reason I'm going to be
8 a little mobile here.
9 THE WITNESS: Put it right here if you want.
10:40 10 MR. FINDER: Okay. Thank you, sir.
11 BY MR. FINDER:
12 Q. Judge Porteous, I've marked for identification --
13 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Mr. Finder, you're going to have to 14 speak a little louder since you'll have your back to the 10:40 15 reporter.
16 MR. FINDER: Oh, forgive me. All right.
17 BY MR. FINDER:
18 Q. I've marked for identification purposes only as Exhibit 80,
19 a book called "Getting Started as a Federal Judge."
10:40 20 Judge Porteous, I'm going to -- this book, as 21 you'll see, bears a date of July of 1997, approximately three
22 years after you took the bench, correct?
23 A. It says that, yes.
24 Q. After you received your commission, Judge Porteous, you
10:41 25 took an oath of office, correct?

10:41 1 A. Yes.
2 Q. And that's a statutory oath, is it not?
3 A. Correct.
4 Q. I'd ask you to read along with me.
10:41 5 A. I cannot -- well, go ahead.
6 Q. Okay. Well, let's try and make it --
7 A. Just read it. I can --
8 Q. Okay. "I, your name, do solemnly swear or affirm that I
9 will administer justice without respect to persons and do equal
10:41 10 right to the poor and to the rich and that I will faithfully
11 and impartially discharge or perform all the duties incumbent
12 on me as a United States District Judge under the Constitution
13 and laws of the United States and that I will support and 14 defend the Constitution of the United States against all
10:41 15 enemies, foreign and domestic, that I will bear true faith and
16 allegiance to the same, that I take this obligation freely,
17 without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion, and that
18 I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office
19 of which I am about to enter, so help me God."
10:42 20 Sir, is that the oath that you took?
21 A. Yes, it is.
22 Q. Are you familiar with this book or an earlier edition of 23 it, sir?
24 A. I know we all have them in our chambers. I don't know that
10:42 25 I can tell you I've read every page of it.

10:42 1 Q. Okay. Let's go through a few provisions.
2 MR. FINDER: Can your Honors see that?
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Barely.
4 MR. FINDER: Let me --
10:42 5 JUDGE LAKE: It's all right. No, that's better.
6 MR. FINDER: It's a little temperamental.
7 THE WITNESS: Oh, now that's much better.
8 MR. FINDER:
9 BY MR. FINDER:
10:42 10 Q. Okay. Your Honor, would you agree or disagree with these 11 statements, "New judges should review the ethical guidelines
12 set forth in the Code of Conduct for United States Judges and 13 the financial disclosure requirements of the Ethics Reform Act
14 of 1989"?
10:43 15 A. It says that.
16 Q. Do you agree with that?
17 A. Yes.
18 Q. Do you agree that once judges are assigned cases they have
19 a continuing obligation to examine periodically their own
10:43 20 personal and fiduciary financial interests and those of their 21 spouses and minor children?
22 A. I agree that's quoting what's in the paragraph.
23 Q. I know it's in there, but do you agree with what it says?
24 A. Yeah.
10:43 25 Q. Do you agree that, as a general matter, although judges are

10:43 1 not required to sever all ties to former clients and
2 colleagues, they clearly must be vigilant if they continue such
3 relationships?

4 A. I agree with that.

10:43 5 Q. Do you agree, under Canon 3 of the code of conduct, which 6 addresses a judge's obligation to perform the duties of the 7 judicial office impartially and diligently, requires judges to
8 disqualify themselves in any proceeding in which their
9 impartiality might be reasonably questioned?

10:44 10 A. I agree with that.

11 Q. Do you agree with Canon 3C of the code of conduct, that it
12 addresses the general issue of disqualification and states that 13 judges must disqualify themselves from all cases in which their 14 impartiality might be reasonably questioned?

10:44 15 A. I agree.

16 Q. And, Judge Porteous, do you agree that all new judges
17 should be mindful that they continue to be the subject of 18 public attention in their activities after their appointment to 19 the bench, thus, they should consider carefully whether

10:44 20 participation in outside activities impinges upon their 21 performance of their judicial responsibilities; as noted in
22 commentary to Canon 2A of the Code of Conduct for US Judges,
23 that judges must accept freely and willingly restrictions on 24 their personal conduct and activities that might be viewed as

10:44 25 burdensome by the ordinary citizen?

10:44 1 A. I agree.
2 Q. Sir, I'm going to show you what's Exhibit 18, which has
3 been offered and accepted, the Code of Conduct for United
4 States Judges, which I believe you said you're familiar with,
10:45 5 correct?
6 A. Yes.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Speak up.
8 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry. Did I do it again?
9 BY MR. FINDER:
10:46 10 Q. The question was you are familiar with Exhibit 18, which is 11 the Code of Conduct for US Judges. Correct?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. And this code applies to district judges, correct?
14 A. Right.
10:46 15 Q. And the judicial conference has authorized the Committee on 16 the code of conduct to render advisory opinions concerning the 17 application and interpretation of the code when requested by a
18 judge to whom the code applies.
19 Have you ever asked that Committee for an
10:46 20 advisory opinion?
21 A. No.
22 Q. Are you familiar with Canon 1, your Honor, that a judge
23 should uphold the integrity and independence of the judiciary?
24 A. Yes.
10:46 25 Q. And that an independent and honorable judiciary is 10:46 1 indispensable to justice in our society?

2 A. Yes.
3 Q. There's a commentary here, your Honor, "Deference to the
4 judges and rulings of courts depends upon public confidence and
10:46 5 the integrity and independence of judges."
6 Skipping a line, "Although judges should be
7 independent, they should comply with the law, as well as the
8 provisions of this code."
9 Do you have any dispute with that statement --
10:47 10 those statements?
11 A. No, sir.
12 Q. Canon 2, "A judge should avoid the appearance of 13 impropriety."
14 MR. FINDER: Can you try and make this -- can you all
10:47 15 see?
16 BY MR. FINDER:
17 Q. "A judge should respect and comply with the law and should 18 act at all times in a manner that promotes public confidence in 19 the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary." Do you agree
10:47 20 with that statement, sir?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. Canon 2A, which you can read, was fairly summarized in the 23 book we just talked about. Do you agree with that, about
24 accepting -- that judges must accept certain restrictions in
10:47 25 their personal lives once they take the bench?

10:48 1 A. It seems to say that, yes.
2 JUDGE LAKE: Sir, I didn't hear your answer.
3 THE WITNESS: It seems to say that.
4 I'm sorry, Judge Lake.
10:48 5 JUDGE LAKE: Thank you.
6 BY MR. FINDER:
7 Q. And, then, in Canon 2A, a commentary, "Actual improprieties
8 under this standard include violations of law, court rules, or 9 other specific provisions of this code."Do you agree with that?
10:48 10 A. Yes, sir.
11 Q. Canon 3 says, "A judge should perform the duties of the 12 office impartially and diligently."
13 Can you follow along with me to read this?
14 "The judicial duties of a judge takes precedence
10:48 15 over all other activities. In performing the duties prescribed
16 by law, the judge should adhere to the following standards."
17 And, then, let's move over to Section C, under 18 Disqualification. "A judge shall -- shall disqualify himself
19 or herself in a proceeding in which the judge's impartiality
10:49 20 might reasonably be questioned."
21 A. Right.
22 Q. Okay. And then D, Remittal of Disqualification, "A judge
23 disqualified by the terms of 3C(1) may, instead of withdrawing
24 from the proceeding, disclose on the record the basis of 10:49 25 disqualification. If the parties and their lawyers, after such re: 49 1 disclosure and an opportunity to confer outside of the presence

2 of the judge, all agree, in writing or on the record, that the
3 judge should not be disqualified and the judge then is willing
4 to participate, the judge may participate in the proceeding.
10:49 5 This agreement shall be incorporated in the record of the 6 proceeding."

7 Did I read that accurately?

8 A. Yes.

9 Q. Were you familiar with this prior to the reading of this?

10:49 10 A. Yes.

11 Q. Okay. Canon 5, "A judge should regulate extra-judicial 12 activities to minimize the risk of conflict with judicial 13 duties."

14 Section C, A judge should -- under Financial
10:50 15 Activities, "A judge should refrain from financial and business
16 dealings that tend to reflect adversely on the judge's
17 impartiality, interfere with the proper performance of judicial 18 duties, exploit the judicial position, or involve the judge in 19 frequent transactions with lawyers or other persons likely to 10:50 20 come before the court on which the judge serves."

21 Were you aware of this provision before reading
22 it today?

23 A. Yes, sir.

24 Q. Is that a "yes," sir?

10:50 25 A. Yes, sir. I'm sorry.

10:50 1 Q. Okay. "A judge should not solicit or accept anything of
2 value from anyone seeking official action from or doing
3 business with the court or other entity served by the judge or
4 from anyone whose interests may be substantially affected by 10:51 5 the performance or nonperformance of official duties."Did I
6 read that accurately?

7 A. You did.

8 Q. "Except that a judge may accept a gift as permitted by the 9 Judicial Conference gift regulations. A judge should endeavor
10:51 10 to prevent a member of the judge's family residing in the 11 household from soliciting or accepting a gift except to the 12 extent that a judge would be permitted to do so by the Judicial 13 Conference gift regulations."

14 Did I read that accurately?

10:51 15 A. You did.

16 Q. And were you aware of this provision before reading it in
17 court today?

18 A. In general, yes.

19 Q. And for purposes -- under (5), "For purposes of this
10:51 20 section, 'members of the judge's family residing in the judge's
21 household' means any relative of a judge by blood or marriage
22 or person treated by a judge as a member of the judge's family,
23 who resides in the judge's household."

24 Did I read that correctly?

10:52 25 A. Yes, sir.

10:52 1 Q. And Number 6, "A judge should report" --
2 A. I can't see that.
3 Q. Oh, I'm sorry. Can you read that?
4 A. Yes.
10:52 5 Q. "A judge should report the value of any gift, bequest,
6 favor, or loan as required by the statutes or by the Judicial
7 Conference of the United States."
8 Did I read that correctly?
9 A. You absolutely did.
10:52 10 Q. And were you aware of that provision before?
11 A. Yes, sir.
12 Q. Under commentary to Rule 5, Canon -- it says, "Canon 5C.
13 Canon 3 requires a judge to disqualify in any proceeding in
14 which the judge has a financial interest, however small;
10:52 15 Canon 5 requires a judge to refrain from engaging in business
16 and from financial activities that might interfere with the
17 impartial performance of the judge's judicial duties; Canon 6
18 requires a judge to report all compensation received for 19 activities outside the judicial office."
10:52 20 Did I read that accurately?
21 A. You did.
22 Q. And were you aware of that prior to today?
23 A. I'm sure I was. I'm sure I was. I'm sorry.
24 Q. Canon 6, "A judge should regularly file reports of 10:53 25 compensation received for law-related and extra-judicial

10:53 1 activities."

2 Section C, "Public Reports, A judge should make

3 required financial disclosures in compliance with applicable

4 statutes and Judicial Conference regulations and directives."

10:53 5 Did I read that accurately, sir?

6 A. You did.

7 Q. And you were aware of that prior to today, correct?

8 A. Yes, sir.

9 Q. And, in fact, you have filed reports with the 10:53 10 Administrative Office of the United States courts, haven't you?

11 A. I have.

12 Q. Now, these canons of ethics for judges, that I read to you,

13 that you said you are familiar with, were not unlike the canons

14 of ethics that you were bound by as a state district judge in

10:54 15 Louisiana, correct?

16 A. I believe that's correct.

17 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Counsel, can I interrupt you just

18 for a little while --

19 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

10:54 20 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- and question Judge Porteous?

21 It struck me that we discussed immunity, and it

22 struck me that Judge Porteous was advised that he would be

23 granted immunity. And it struck me that this is going on, I

24 think, in the belief that, but for that, he would not be

10:54 25 testifying. But we have not, in the record, actually presented

10:54 1 his testimony with the understanding -- with the explicit
2 understanding that immunity has been extended. And I don't
3 want to get down the road where we don't have that in the
4 record. But out of fairness, it would seem that is the reason
10:54 5 that Judge Porteous is testifying.

6 So, for the record, you are proceeding with the 7 request and asking for immunity for Judge Porteous?

8 MR. FINDER: You're absolutely correct, your Honor. I
9 do have the actual original application for compulsion as well
10:55 10 as the order of compulsion. Judge Porteous has a true and 11 accurate copy, but I'm happy to give him the originals.

12 THE WITNESS: I've seen it, if it's the same one you
13 gave me a copy of.

14 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I just want to get that straight
10:55 15 because there is some formality usually associated with taking
16 the Fifth Amendment.

17 MR. FINDER: Right. Right.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But we've been going a long time on 19 that basis, and I didn't want to have any misunderstanding.

10:55 20 MR. FINDER: As long as you bring it up, your Honor, I
21 do need, without -- hopefully, without sounding didactic, I do
22 need to make certain that the witness knows that, while this is
23 a grant of use immunity coextensive with his Fifth Amendment
24 rights, it would not prevent him any kind of immunity from 10:55 25 false statement or perjury, just as in any case under 6001 and

10:55 1 6002 of the United States Code.
2 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: And you're aware of that, Judge
4 Porteous?
10:56 5 THE WITNESS: Yes, ma'am.
6 MR. FINDER: May I proceed, your Honors?
7 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
8 MR. FINDER: What exhibit number is the Louisiana Code
9 of Judicial Conduct? 86?
10:56 10 THE WITNESS: Can I just get a cup of water real
11 quick?
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sure.
13 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Yes, Judge, you can bring the
14 pitcher with you.
10:56 15 THE WITNESS: Oh, thank you. I don't want to knock
16 something over.
17 MR. FINDER: I may have misspoke. It's Exhibit 85.
18 Forgive me.
19 THE WITNESS: The list, other than this morning, that
10:57 20 I was provided, only went to Exhibit 84 as of Friday.
21 MR. WOODS: Right, and I gave you the updated list
22 this morning.
23 THE WITNESS: Well, it's in the box somewhere.
24 MR. WOODS: No. It's on top of the box.
10:57 25 THE WITNESS: Maybe it is.

ru:57 1 Okay. All right.

2 BY MR. FINDER:

3 Q. Mr. Porteous, I'm calling your attention to the Louisiana
4 Code of Judicial Conduct, Canon 1. I believe you testified
10:57 5 you're familiar with these.

6 It states, "The Judge shall uphold the integrity
7 and independence of the judiciary. An independent and
8 honorable judiciary is indispensable to justice in our
9 society."

10:57 10 And without taking up all the Court's time, I
11 believe you -- will you agree with me that this language is 12 almost verbatim of the language we just read from the canons of 13 federal judicial --

14 A. It seems to be. Certainly similar.

10:58 15 Q. Very similar.

16 Secondly, Canon 2, "A judge shall avoid
17 impropriety and the appearance of impropriety in all
18 activities."

19 And I believe that language is also very similar
10:58 20 to what we just read, correct?

21 A. Yes.

22 Q. Canon 3, "A judge shall perform the duties of office
23 impartially and diligently."

24 And, then, moving on to page -- to Section C of
10:58 25 that rule, which in the Louisiana version is titled

10:58 1 "Recusation, To Recuse."

2 It states, "A judge shall disqualify himself or
3 herself in a proceeding to which the judge's impartiality might
4 reasonably be questioned and shall disqualify himself or
10:58 5 herself in a proceeding in which disqualification is required
6 by law or applicable Supreme Court rule."

7 Did I read that accurately?

8 A. You did.

9 Q. And you are -- and these were the rules that you were bound
10:58 10 by as a judge in Louisiana, correct?

11 A. I believe that's correct.

12 Q. Canon 5, titled Extra-Judicial Activities, Section C, "A
13 judge shall refrain from financial and business dealings that
14 tend to reflect adversely on the judge's impartiality, interfere
10:59 15 with the proper performance of judicial duties, exploit the 16 judge's judicial position, or involve the judge in frequent
17 transactions with lawyers or persons likely to come before the 18 court on which he or she serves."

19 Did I read that accurately?

10:59 20 A. You did.

21 Q. That's also similar to the canons of federal ethics, isn't
22 it?

23 A. It is.

24 Q. Canon 6, "A judge shall not accept compensation or gifts
11:00 25 for quasi-judicial and extra-judicial activities, only under

1T:00 1 restricted circumstances."
2 Section C, "Gifts. A judge, a judge's spouse, or
3 member of the judge's immediate family residing in the judge's
4 household shall not accept any gifts or favors which might 11:00 5 reasonably appear as designed to affect the judgment of the 6 judge or influence the judge's official conduct."
7 Did I read that accurately?
8 A. You did.
9 Q. And then there's also the Louisiana version of annual 11:00 10 financial reporting, correct?
11 A. Yes.
12 Q. Okay. And I believe the amount was raised effective 2006.
13 But even when you were a judge, it was a lower amount, correct?
14 A. I believe that's correct.
11:00 15 Q. The point is, Judge Porteous, in the more than two decades
16 that you have been a judge, whether state or federal, you have
17 been bound by very, very similar terms of judicial ethics
18 canons, correct?
19 A. Yes, somewhat, of course.
11:01 20 Q. Judge Porteous, you were married to Camella Porteous, who 21 passed away December 22nd, 2005, correct?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. How long were you married, approximately?
24 A. Got married in '69. Thirty-six years.
11:01 25 Q. Isn't it true, Judge Porteous, that on March 28th, 2001,

...01 1 you and your wife filed a voluntary Chapter 13 bankruptcy
2 petition in this district, the Eastern District of Louisiana,
3 in Docket Number 01-12363?
4 A. I know we filed, and I'm assuming that is the date number
11:01 5 and the record number.
6 Q. I'll show you the actual petition.
7 A. That's okay. I mean --
8 Q. And is it also true that the trustee assigned to the file
9 was SJ Beaulieu -- spelled B-E-A-U-L-I-E-U -- Jr.?
11:02 10 A. Correct.
11 Q. And your lawyer at the time was Claude C. Lightfoot --
12 spelled L-I-G-H-T-F-O-O-T -- Jr. Is that correct?
13 A. Correct.
14 Q. And you filed -- I'll show you what's part of Exhibit 1,
11:02 15 Bates Number SC122.
16 A. What's the Bates number? I'm sorry.
17 Q. SC12 -- 00122. One of these days I'll get the hang of 18 this.
19 A. That's fine.
11:02 20 Q. This is a voluntary petition that you filed. Isn't that 21 correct, Judge?
22 And please look it over.
23 A. It appears to be.
24 Q. Okay. Under "Name of Debtor," it says "Ortous" -- spelled
11:03 25 O-R-T-O-U-S -- comma, G, period, T, period, correct?

1T:03 1 A. It does.
2 Q. And under "Name of Joint Debtor, Spouse," it's "Ortous" --
3 O-R-T-O-U-S -- comma, capital C, period, capital A, period,
4 correct?
11:03 5 A. That's correct.
6 Q. It has as the street address of the debtor PO Box 1723 in
7 Harvey, Louisiana, ZIP Code 70059-1723, correct?
8 A. Yes, sir.
9 Q. And the case number, the docket number, 01-12363, which I
11:03 10 believe I mentioned a few moments ago, correct?
11 A. I believe you did.
12 Q. Let me show you, Judge Porteous -- I'll come back to that.
13 Do you recognize this as an application for a
14 PO box, Judge Porteous?
11:04 15 It's SC exhibit -- Special Committee Exhibit 23,
16 Bates Number SC00599.
17 Do you recognize that, sir?
18 A. Yeah. If you tell me that's what it is, I agree. I
19 mean --
11:04 20 Q. Well, but I can't testify; so, I have to ask you those 21 questions.
22 A. I'm assuming it is an application for a post office box. I
23 can't read the print, but I have no reason to doubt what you
24 represent. I'm not trying to take issue. I agree.
11:04 25 Q. I know. I'm trying to be fair.

11:04 1 There's a signature here. Do you recognize that
2 signature?
3 A. That's mine.
4 Q. That is your signature.
11:04 5 And it's dated March 20th, 2001, correct?
6 A. It is.
7 Q. Now, March 20th, 2001, was -- and we'll get to this in a
8 moment -- just about a week before you filed your Chapter 13,
9 correct?
11:05 10 A. What was the date?
11 Yeah. I agree. I mean --
12 Q. All right. And on your PO box request, you have an address
13 here, 4801 --
14 A. "Neyrey."
11:05 15 Q. -- Neyrey -- N-E-Y-R-E-Y -- Drive in Metairie, Louisiana.
16 That's your residence, correct?
17 A. That's correct.
18 Q. So, going back to Exhibit 1, the voluntary petition -- oh,
19 wrong one -- the PO box that you have on here, you put in lieu
11:05 20 of your home address, correct?
21 A. That's correct.
22 Q. Now, this voluntary petition --
23 MR. WOODS: Larry, it's off.
24 MR. FINDER: Oh, thank you.
11:06 25 Can your Honors read that?

1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. "Signature of debtor, individual" -- tell me if I'm reading
3 this accurately -- "I declare under penalty of perjury that the
4 information provided in this petition is true and correct."
11:06 5 And there are two signatures with the date 3-28-01, correct?
6 A. That's correct.
7 Q. And 3-28-01 was about eight days after the PO box was taken
8 out, correct?
9 A. That's correct.
11:06 10 Q. Your name is not Ortous, is it?
11 A. No, sir.
12 Q. Your wife's name is not Ortous?
13 A. No, sir.
14 Q. So, those statements that were signed -- so, this petition
11:06 15 that was signed under penalty of perjury had false information,
16 correct?
17 A. Yes, sir, it appears to.
18 Q. I'll show you something else on this petition, Judge
19 Porteous. There's a list of unsecured creditors, and I'm 11:07 20 referring now to Bates Number Page SC00126.
21 A. All right.
22 Q. Regions Bank?
23 A. Yes, sir.
24 Q. That's a bank you've done business with?
11:07 25 A. Yeah, I did some business with them.

11:07 1 Q. Right. And Regions Bank is on this voluntary petition,
2 correct?
3 A. I assume that's the petition, yes, sir. I mean --
4 Q. Well, we'll go back to the first page.
11:07 5 A. Okay.
6 Q. Voluntary petition?
7 A. All right. Yeah, it's on there.
8 Q. But if Regions Bank or any other unsecured creditor such as
9 these were to get word that a GT Ortous had filed bankruptcy,
11:08 10 they wouldn't necessarily know it was you, would they, unless
11 they ran the Social Security number?
12 A. If they had have got notice, you're correct.
13 Q. Now, let's jump ahead a little bit. Still in Exhibit 1 --
14 A. All right.
11:08 15 Q. -- and I'm going to refer you and the Court to Bates
16 Number SC120. This is an amended voluntary petition, is it
17 not?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. This time the name of the debtor is Gabriel T. Porteous,
11:08 20 Jr. That's you, correct?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. And Carmella A. Porteous, the joint debtor, your wife,
23 correct, sir?
24 A. Yes, sir.
11:08 25 Q. This time the address is 4801 Neyrey Drive, Metairie,

1 Louisiana, correct?

2 A. Yes, sir.

3 Q. This petition -- blow this up a little bit; that's about as
4 clear as I can make it -- was signed by you and your wife on
5 April 9th. Those are your signatures, correct?

6 A. Yes, sir.

7 Q. And the date is April 9th, correct?

8 A. Yes, sir.

9 Q. And your attorney's name, Claude Lightfoot, is on there,
10 also?

11 A. Right.

12 Q. So, between -- strike that.

13 After your voluntary -- your amended petition was
14 filed, there was an order of recusal entered in your bankruptcy
15 case, in the matter of Gabriel T. Porteous, Jr. and Carmella A.
16 Porteous, an order of recusal -- I'm going to have to -- and
17 the order, which was dated June 1st, 2001, says it is ordered
18 that the three judges of the US Bankruptcy Court for the 19 Eastern District of Louisiana, naming the three judges, are 20 hereby recused from the case, correct?

21 A. Yes, sir.

22 Q. And then procedurally, your case was temporarily assigned
23 to Judge William R. Greendyke on assignment to the Eastern
24 District of Louisiana, correct?

25 A. Right.

11:10 1 Q. And that's the same cause number?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. Signed by then Chief Judge Carolyn Dineen King of the Fifth
4 Circuit, correct?
11:10 5 A. Right.
6 Q. I don't believe I stated the date. Judge Greendyke was
7 assigned to this -- at least the order of Judge King assigns
8 Judge Greendyke June 4th, 2001. Is that accurate?
9 A. Yes, sir.
11:11 10 Q. Judge Porteous, we've already talked about Claude Lightfoot
11 being your attorney.
12 Jacob J. Amato, do you know Jacob Amato, Jake
13 Amato?
14 A. Absolutely.
11:11 15 Q. He is a lawyer, correct?
16 A. Yes, sir.
17 Q. And he is a friend of yours. Isn't that correct?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. Warren A. Forstall, Jr., also known as Chip?
11:11 20 A. Yes, sir.
21 Q. He is a lawyer?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. And he is your friend, correct?
24 A. Yes, sir.
11:11 25 Q. Robert G. Creely, again, a lawyer and a friend of yours?

17:11 1 A. Yes, sir.
2 Q. Don C. Gardner, a lawyer and a friend of yours?
3 A. Yes, sir.
4 Q. Leonard L. -- also known as Lenny -- Levenson, your friend
11:11 5 and an attorney, right?
6 A. Yes, sir.
7 Q. Joseph Mole, an attorney?
8 A. Yes, sir.
9 Q. Not one of your close friends?
11:12 10 A. We've never gone anywhere together. That would be a
11 correct statement.
12 Q. And Rhonda Danos has been your -- D-A-N-O-S -- has been 13 your secretary and assistant for more than 20 years now,
14 correct?
11:12 15 A. Since I was on the state bench. Twenty-three years.
16 Q. Twenty-three years.
17 Okay. Judge Porteous, before you filed your
18 voluntary petition for bankruptcy in March of 2001, let's go
19 back to the year -- calendar year 2000.
11:13 20 A. All right.
21 Q. You had engaged Mr. Lightfoot as your counsel in the latter
22 part of 2000, correct?
23 A. I knew it was in 2000. I don't remember the exact date;
24 but if that's what you say, I'm sure it is.
11:13 25 Q. Well, I will refresh your recollection.

11:13 1 But would you agree with me that at least by
2 November, December of 2000 he was your lawyer?
3 A. I believe that's correct, yeah.
4 Q. Now, after bankruptcy, you had a meeting with the trustee,
11:13 5 SJ Beaulieu, correct?
6 A. After what?
7 Q. After bankruptcy was filed.
8 A. After it was filed, that's correct.
9 Q. And you recall that Mr. Beaulieu handed you a pamphlet
11:13 10 called "Your Rights and Responsibilities in Chapter 13," which
11 we have marked as the Committee's Exhibit 11?
12 A. I believe that's -- yeah, right.
13 Q. And it bears the name of Mr. Beaulieu and has his local 14 New Orleans phone number?
11:14 15 A. Yes, sir.
16 Q. That is on Bates Page 399.
17 I'm sorry. I have my back to you.
18 A. All right.
19 Q. Calling your attention to this exhibit, there are 11:14 20 enumerated paragraphs. Paragraph 6, follow me while I read.
21 "Credit While in Chapter 13. You may not borrow money or buy
22 anything on credit while in Chapter 13 without permission from 23 the bankruptcy court. This includes the use of credit cards or 24 charge accounts of any kind."
11:14 25 Did I read that accurately, sir?

1T:14 1 A. You did.
2 Q. And do you recall reading that and discussing that with
3 Mr. Beaulieu?
4 A. I don't specifically recall it, but I'm not saying it
11:14 5 didn't happen.
6 Q. All right. Do you recall, on or about May 9th, 2001,
7 having a -- what's called a 341 bankruptcy hearing, where
8 Mr. Beaulieu as trustee was present; your attorney,
9 Mr. Lightfoot, was present; and you were present?
11:15 10 A. Yes, sir, I remember meeting with Mr. Beaulieu.
11 Q. And that meeting was recorded, if you -- do you recall
12 that?
13 A. I believe that's correct, yeah, tape recorded.
14 Q. Right.
11:15 15 Do you recall Mr. Beaulieu stating the following?
16 "Any charge cards that you may -- you have you cannot use any
17 longer. So, basically, you're on a cash basis now.
18 "I have no further questions except have you made
19 your first payments."
11:15 20 Did I read that accurately?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. So, you were told by Mr. Beaulieu that you couldn't incur
23 any more credit there, on credit cards, correct?
24 A. I'm not sure it was there, but I'm sure it was part of the 11:16 25 explanation at some point.

11:16 1 Q. Well, going back to --
2 A. When you ask -- I only meant in reference to the statement.
3 Yes, it's --
4 Q. Right.
11:16 5 A. -- contained in there, and I knew that.
6 Q. And it was your understanding -- and that's what I'm trying
7 to find out, sir -- that you couldn't incur more credit while
8 in bankruptcy, correct?
9 A. That's correct.
11:16 10 Q. Okay. Now, on June 2nd, are you familiar with the order
11 signed by Bankruptcy Judge Greendyke?
12 And this is from Exhibit 1, Bates Number SC50,
13 Exhibit 1 being the certified copy of the bankruptcy file.
14 "It is ordered that," going down to Number 4,
11:16 15 "the debtors shall not incur additional debt during the term of 16 this plan except upon written approval of the trustee."
17 Did I read that correctly?
18 A. You did.
19 Q. Was that your understanding at the time?
11:17 20 A. In the order, it was.
21 JUDGE LAKE: What's the date of that document?
22 MR. FINDER: July 2nd, 2001, was the docket date. It
23 was signed by Judge Greendyke June 28th, 2001.
24 JUDGE LAKE: Thank you.
11:17 25 BY MR. FINDER:

11:18 1 Q. Judge Porteous, we talked a little bit about the Ethics in
2 Government Act earlier, the Ethics in Government Act of 1978,
3 which has to do with your judicial filings. Under Title 5,
4 United States Code Appendix Section 101, et seq., "Judicial
11:18 5 officers" -- and tell me if you agree with this -- "Judicial
6 officers shall include a full and complete statement with
7 respect to the source, type, and amount or value of income from
8 any source, other than the current employment by the United
9 States, received during the preceding calendar year aggregating
11:18 10 $200 or more in value."

11 Is that your understanding, sir?

12 A. Right.

13 Q. And the law goes on to state that it must be reported --
14 "the identity of the source, a brief description, and the value
11:18 15 of all gifts aggregating more than $250, received from any 16 source other than a relative of the reporting individual during 17 the preceding calendar year."

18 A. Yes, sir.

19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: For what year is that?

11:19 20 MR. FINDER: This is just from the statute, your
21 Honor.

22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. I think those gift
23 amounts vary from year to year.

24 MR. FINDER: Actually, they were lower; and these are 11:19 25 the current amounts.

1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. So, what -- the amounts I just read to you apply to today.
3 When you first took the bench, presumably they were slightly
4 lower?
5 A. Presumably, yes.
6 Q. Okay. And these have to do with income and gifts?
7 A. Right.
8 Q. As I just read?
9 A. Yes, sir.
10 Q. Judge Porteous, you're familiar with the term "marker,"
11 aren't you?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. Would it be fair to state that, "A marker is a form of 14 credit extended by a gambling establishment, such as a casino,
15 that enables the customer to borrow money from the casino. The 16 marker acts as the customer's check or draft to be drawn upon
17 the customer's account at a financial institution. Should the 18 customer not repay his or her debt to the casino, the marker
19 authorizes the casino to present it to the financial 20 institution or bank for negotiation and draw upon the 21 customer's bank account any unpaid balance after a fixed period
22 of time." Is that accurate?
23 A. I believe that's correct and probably was contained in the 24 complaint or -- or the second complaint. There's a definition
25 contained.

11:20 1 Q. And you have no quarrel with the definition?
2 A. No, sir.
3 Q. Okay. Judge Porteous, if markers are a form of borrowing
4 or an extension of credit, by definition, would you agree that 11:21 5 from approximately August 20th to 21st, a two day period in
6 2001, you borrowed approximately $8,000 from Treasure Chest
7 Casino in Kenner, Louisiana, by taking out approximately eight
8 1,000-dollar markers over a two day period?
9 A. Well, did I sign $8,000 worth of markers? You have records
11:21 10 that suggest I did that. I agree with you.
11 Q. Okay.
12 A. The issue is that we haven't -- I have an issue with 13 whether that's credit. The statement itself says it acts like
14 a check against your account. Now, I did not have an 11:21 15 $8,000-dollar line of credit at -- where was that? Treasure
16 Chest?
17 Q. Treasure Chest. I didn't ask you about a line of credit,
18 though.
19 A. I understand, but I'm explaining to you why that's 11:21 20 misrepresentative.
21 Q. Okay. Well --
22 A. Those are just repetitive 1,000 -- had I written a check
23 for a thousand, I do not believe I would have been in violation
24 of any court order.
11:22 25 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But you're saying that you didn't

11:22 1 not -- for instance, you could not sign a marker for $8,000
2 because that was above your limit but that would not have
3 precluded you from making out eight different markers for
4 $1,000 during a two day period?

11:22 5 THE WITNESS: Only if that line -- only if I had the
6 funds for the line of credit. In other words, I may have
7 signed a thousand dollar marker, played a little while, won,
8 paid it back. That's what it sounds like to me.

9 I have no specific recollection of that, Judge.
11:22 10 But that's what I'm saying, yes, sir.

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, you're not disputing that there
12 may have been eight markers for $1,000. What you're saying is 13 that at any one time you dispute that you owed $8,000.

14 THE WITNESS: That's correct, your Honor. I couldn't
11:22 15 get it. I mean --

16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I understand what you mean.

17 BY MR. FINDER:

18 Q. Judge Porteous, I'm going to show you what's from 19 Exhibit 54, Bates Number SC1436. These are records from the 11:23 20 Treasure Chest Casino in Kenner, Louisiana. And we'll have
21 more testimony about this later through Agent Horner.

22 But just by way of illustration, you see where it
23 has "MRK," "marker"?

24 A. Right.

11:23 25 Q. And it shows various 1,000-dollar markers?

11:23 1 A. Uh-huh.
2 Q. And remember, these were taken out August 20 and 21, the
3 dates --
4 A. Well, that's not those dates.
11:23 5 Q. That's the wrong page. Here we go.
6 JUDGE LAKE: What exhibit is that?
7 MR. FINDER: It's SC1438. I had the wrong page.
8 MR. WOODS: Exhibit 54.
9 MR. FINDER: Exhibit 54.
11:23 10 BY MR. FINDER:
11 Q. August 21st, '01, you were in Chapter 13 bankruptcy,
12 correct?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. Let's look at this entry. "MK" for "marker"?
11:23 15 A. Uh-huh.
16 Q. Taken out August 21 in the amount of a thousand dollars?
17 A. Uh-huh.
18 Q. Paid back September 9th, correct?
19 A. If that's what it says, yeah.
11:24 20 Q. That's what it says.
21 Next entry highlighted, marker, 8-21-01,
22 apparently paid back right way?
23 A. Right.
24 Q. Next marker, also -- also for a thousand dollars, not paid
11:24 25 back till September 9th?

11:24 1 A. All right.
2 Q. Next marker, August 21, a thousand dollars, not paid back
3 till September 15, correct?
4 A. It looks like that, yeah. Yeah.
11:24 5 Q. This is --
6 A. Yes. I got it.
7 Q. I don't think it's going to --
8 JUDGE LAKE: So, the net effect of this was that
9 $3,000 of the 8,000 was paid back at a later date. Is that 11:24 10 what the document shows?
11 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.
12 JUDGE LAKE: Approximately within a month of that?
13 MR. FINDER: That's correct. It wasn't just taking
14 out a marker and paying it back within hours or the same day.
11:25 15 JUDGE LAKE: So, 5,000 was paid back; 3,000 was
16 some -- some form of extension of credit?
17 MR. FINDER: That's correct, that's what this record
18 tends to show.
19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, let's say on March 21st at the 11:25 20 end of the day there would have been outstanding balance on the 21 markers --
22 MR. FINDER: That's correct.
23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- for a debt exceeding the $1,000?
24 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.
11:25 25 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And you could actually figure this

11:25 1 out on a daily basis?

2 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir. And we'll get into greater

3 detail on that later but this is an introduction to it and that

4 is correct.

11:25 5 BY MR. FINDER:

6 Q. We could do the same exercise for all of them for -- that

7 are listed in the charge. For example, on October 13th, 2001,

8 you borrowed approximately a thousand dollars Treasure Chest in

9 the form of two 500-dollar markers.

11:26 10 Yeah, here it is.

11 MR. FINDER: That's the best I can do. I hope you can

12 read it.

13 BY MR. FINDER:

14 Q. And those apparently were paid back the same day, correct?

11:26 15 A. Yes, sir.

16 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: What page number is that?

17 MR. FINDER: This is Page 1437.

18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Okay.

19 BY MR. FINDER:

11:27 20 Q. But, then, on October 17th and 18th -- and I'm talking

21 about the same exhibit, Pages 1436 and '37 -- there were -- can

22 you read this, Judge Porteous?

23 A. If you'll stop moving it, I might be able to.

24 Q. I don't mean to get you dizzy.

11:27 25 A. Yeah. Two 500. Well, five --

17:27 1 Q. Okay. On October 17th and 18th, you borrowed in excess of
2 $5900 from Treasure Chest, taking out approximately ten markers
3 of various denominations over the two days, 4400 of which was
4 paid back on November 9th. Do you recall that?

11:27 5 A. I don't recall it. I'm sorry.

6 That's what year?

7 Q. If that's what the records show, though, you don't dispute
8 it?

9 A. If that's what the record says, the record says it.

11:28 10 Q. Okay. We'll go into that with Agent Horner.

11 JUDGE LAKE: Do you have a summary exhibit which shows
12 what the -- the dates the items were paid? In other words,
13 there's a portion of this 5900 apparently was repaid the same
14 day and the balance was paid the next month?

11:28 15 MR. FINDER: We believe our FBI witnesses will be able
16 to summarize that. This was just an introduction to it.

17 MR. WOODS: To answer your question, we do not have a
18 specific chart summarizing that but we do have charts
19 summarizing gambling debt.

11:28 20 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But the records themselves reflect
21 the date of payment?

22 MR. WOODS: Yes, sir.

23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, whether we have a summary person
24 or not, we could figure those things out?

11:28 25 MR. FINDER: They're all --

11:28 1 MR. WOODS: The agent will tell us.
2 JUDGE LAKE: You might ask the agent to be attuned to
3 do that.
4 MR. FINDER: I think he's been so instructed.
11:29 5 BY MR. FINDER:
6 Q. We've talked about the filing of your bankruptcy, your
7 Honor, and not incurring new debt. That was in the pamphlet,
8 that was in the court order, and that was in the recorded
9 hearing. Do you remember those?
11:29 10 A. Yes, sir.
11 Q. Okay. Judge Porteous, on March 28th --
12 A. What year?
13 Q. 2001.
14 A. Okay.
11:29 15 Q. Following the filing of your Chapter 13 bankruptcy
16 petition, you and Mrs. Porteous did, in fact, incur additional 17 credit card debt on your Fleet Credit Card. Do you recall
18 that?
19 A. I do not recall that. I believe the exhibit says it's my 11:29 20 wife's card, but I don't remember that.
21 Q. Your wife was your co-debtor on the bankruptcy petition,
22 was she not?
23 A. She was.
24 Q. And the bankruptcy -- we'll get into this later; but the 11:29 25 bankruptcy schedule required all credit cards, everything, to 11:30 1 be scheduled, to be listed, correct?

2 A. Right.
3 And what date was that? March 28th, you said?
4 I'm sorry.
11:30 5 Q. March 28th, 2001 --
6 A. Yes.
7 Q. -- following the bankruptcy, the original petition,
8 correct?
9 A. Yes.
11:30 10 Q. All right. Now, as of March 5th -- and I'm referring to 11 Exhibit 21 -- okay. Showing you what's Exhibit 21, a statement
12 from Fleet Credit Card, Judge.
13 A. Right.
14 Q. You'll notice that it's Account Number [REDACTED],
11:30 15 correct?
16 A. Yes, sir.
17 Q. And from Fleet Credit Card Service for the account of 18 Carmella Porteous, right?
19 A. Right.
11:30 20 Q. Now, if you look at these dates under the account
21 transactions, you'll see from March 5th through March 19th,
22 correct?
23 A. I can't see it, but I'm satisfied it says that. I just 24 can't see --
11:30 25 Q. Well --

11:31 1 A. I'm not disputing it says that, counsel.
2 Q. All right. This is -- March 5th is right before the
3 bankruptcy, right?
4 A. Yes, sir.
11:31 5 Q. March 19th we're in the bankruptcy -- we're into the
6 bankruptcy period, correct?
7 A. Well, before the bankruptcy was filed; but you're right.
8 Q. March 28th. If you'll look at March 8th, you'll see that
9 this credit card in the amount of $157.99 was used at Harrah's
11:31 10 Casino in New Orleans.
11 Well, maybe you can't see it; but I'll be happy
12 to show you.
13 A. No. I'm satisfied you're not misrepresenting it.
14 MR. WOODS: Your Honor, you have documents in the 11:32 15 boxes, that he's using, if you want to refer to them.
16 THE WITNESS: Well, I don't want to -- I have to stay
17 up here. I don't want to necessarily -- I mean, I'm not --
18 MR. WOODS: I could move them there if you want me to.
19 THE WITNESS: I don't dispute he's reading this 11:32 20 correctly. I jut -- he asked me could I see it, and I just 21 can't see it.
22 BY MR. FINDER:
23 Q. Now, again, bankruptcy was March 28th, the amended petition
24 was April 9th, correct?
11:32 25 A. Right.

17:32 1 Q. I'm going to show you now, Judge Porteous, from Exhibit 1
2 the Chapter 13 schedules and plan.
3 A. All right.
4 Q. This will be a little bigger and easier to read, hopefully.
11:32 5 This is in your case, with your docket number,
6 submitted by Claude Lightfoot, your attorney, correct?
7 A. Yes, sir.
8 Q. And I wish you did have it in front of you, and I'll show
9 you mine.
11:33 10 A. I'll pull it out if it's --
11 Q. But I would like you to tell me where Fleet Credit Card is 12 listed in here on the schedule of your credit cards.
13 A. Well, if it's not listed, it's not listed.
14 Q. So, you'll take my word it's not listed?
11:33 15 A. Yeah.
16 Q. Okay.
17 A. I don't know whether it was in existence, whether it was 18 paid off or not. I don't know anything about that. I mean, as 19 I'm sitting here, I don't recall.
11:33 20 Q. Well, whether it was paid off or not -- let's look at the 21 schedule -- I believe it's at Schedule F -- which lists
22 numerous credit cards --
23 A. All right.
24 Q. -- such as American Express at Surety Bank, Bank of
11:34 25 Louisiana MasterCard, Chase Platinum MasterCard, Citibank

11:34 1 Advantage, Citibank Advantage. The list goes on.
2 A. Right.
3 Q. This is in alphabetical order. Fleet does not appear,
4 correct?
11:34 5 A. Does not appear.
6 Q. And is it your testimony that if it was paid off it
7 wouldn't have to be on this list? If you had a zero balance on
8 the date this was filed, it wouldn't have to be on the list?
9 A. Well, it was not a -- if there was no debt, they weren't a
11:34 10 credit, to my understanding. It says "creditors' names." The 11 ones you -- as I understood, the instruction was that you owed
12 money to.
13 Q. Well, when you use a credit card, it's an extension of 14 credit, correct?
11:34 15 A. Correct.
16 Q. So, you pay it?
17 A. Right.
18 Q. So, if it's not on this list because it has a zero balance
19 and then you use it to go to JC Penney or the casino and you
11:34 20 rack up credit on it, that's incurring credit, incurring debt?
21 A. That's incurring additional credit, correct.
22 Q. Okay.
23 JUDGE LAKE: Was credit extended on that account after
24 the date of the bankruptcy filing?
11:35 25 MR. FINDER: I think the evidence -- they were

11:35 1 showing, Judge, that the card was not listed but was used as a
2 credit card after the date of the bankruptcy and the amended
3 petition of bankruptcy.

4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, it wasn't included in the list
11:35 5 of creditors while the card had been used before and -- before
6 the petition was filed and prior to the payment that was made
7 for the charge upon the card?

8 MR. FINDER: That's correct.

9 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, you're contending there was a
11:35 10 transaction existing --

11 MR. FINDER: That's my next exhibit.

12 JUDGE LAKE: It was used -- I guess to follow up, and 13 it was used after the bankruptcy filing? Is that what you
14 said?

11:35 15 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir. That's my next exhibit.

16 JUDGE LAKE: All right. Sorry.

17 BY MR. FINDER:

18 Q. From Exhibit 21, also --

19 A. All right.

11:35 20 Q. -- Bates Page 592, again, same account number, Fleet Credit
21 Card, your wife's name?

22 A. Right.

23 Q. Now, it shows here purchases and cash advances, $734.31,
24 correct?

11:36 25 A. Yes, sir.

11:36 1 Q. Do you see that?
2 Okay. And this credit card was used throughout
3 the month of May and June, correct?
4 You can see the entries on the left-hand side,
11:36 5 highlighted in the yellow, one of whom -- one entry which is in 6 red for the Treasure Chest, which is a casino, is it not?
7 A. Yes, sir.
8 Q. And that's $174.99, correct?
9 A. That's what it says.
11:36 10 Q. So, if it's on this statement, that means there was an 11 extension of credit, correct?
12 A. That appears to be correct.
13 Q. Okay. Moving on to the next month's statement, also from 14 Exhibit 21, Bates Page 593, would you agree, Judge Porteous,
11:36 15 this is the same account, same account number?
16 A. (Nodding head.)
17 Q. Is that a "yes"?
18 A. Yeah.
19 Q. Okay. And from June 15th to July 18th -- and this is the 11:37 20 best copy we have. So, I know it's a little hard to read.
21 This card was used, including for Harrah's in New Orleans, for 22 $91.99 and Treasure Chest for $68.99. I'll be happy to show
23 you this.
24 A. No. I'm satisfied that's what you're reading.
11:37 25 Q. All right. Judge Porteous, are you aware that -- strike

11:38 1 that.

2 Let's go back to the Chapter 13 schedules and
3 plans, which, again, is from Exhibit 1, starting with Bates
4 Number 91.

11:38 5 Judge Porteous, would you agree that you did
6 conceal assets and income from the bankruptcy estate and from
7 your attorney by filing false and misleading schedules with the
8 bankruptcy court and signing them under penalty of perjury?
9 A. I would not agree with that.

11:39 10 Q. All right.

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Counsel, I hesitate to interrupt
12 you. And perhaps you will get into this at a later time; but
13 before we leave Fleet, your record evidence suggests that a
14 number of charges on Mrs. Porteous' card prior to and during 11:39 15 the time that the bankruptcy petition or case was on file --

16 MR. FINDER: Yes.

17 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- with the bankruptcy judge. Do
18 you intend at a later time or not to present evidence with 19 respect to payments made with -- during that period of time and 11:39 20 when the payments were made and how the -- and who made those 21 payments?

22 MR. FINDER: We do intend to show evidence that the 23 card was paid off in full through a check by Rhonda Danos. But
24 I'm just not there yet, but I will get there.

11:40 25 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. So, you'll get to that

11:40 1 and who -- who authorized payments and things like that?
2 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.
3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: The judge had mentioned something
4 about it was his wife's account, and I wanted to --
11:40 5 MR. FINDER: That's correct.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
7 BY MR. FINDER:
8 Q. All right. Judge Porteous, again, from the Exhibit 1,
9 starting with Bates Number 91 --
11:40 10 A. All right.
11 Q. -- the Chapter 13 schedule and plan, we've already talked
12 about?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. Okay. Let's go through this for a moment.
11:40 15 Under Schedule B, "Personal Property."
16 A. All right.
17 Q. "Type of property, checking, savings, or other financial 18 accounts, certificates of deposit, shares in banks, savings and 19 loan, thrift, building and loan, homestead association, or 11:41 20 credit unions, brokerage houses, or cooperatives." Did I read
21 that accurately?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. And you listed Bank One Checking Account [REDACTED]. Is 24 that correct?
11:41 25 A. That's correct.

1 Q. And the current value of that interest is $100, correct?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. And that's on Page 95?
4 A. Bates Page 95.
11:41 5 Q. Bates Page 95. Bates Page 96, Schedule B, Question 17,
6 "Other liquidated debts -- other liquidated debts owing debtor,
7 including tax refunds, give particulars." And in the next box,
8 it's checked off "none," correct?
9 A. Yes, sir.
11:42 10 Q. Attached to this exhibit, starting on Bates Page 112, the 11 statement of financial affairs, are you familiar with that,
12 sir?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. And on the last page of that statement of financial
11:42 15 affairs, with Bates Number SC116?
16 A. Right.
17 Q. "I declare under penalty of perjury that I have read the 18 answers contained in the foregoing statement of financial 19 affairs and any attachments thereto and they are true and 11:42 20 correct," dated April 9th, '01, the date of the amended
21 petition, signed by you and your wife, correct?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. So, you would agree with me, Judge Porteous, this is a
24 document that had a jurat that required that it be signed --
11:43 25 well, that it be signed under penalty of perjury, correct?

43 1 A. Yes, sir. You just read that.

2 Q. Right. There was another one. This -- that had to do with
3 statement of financial affairs.

4 On Page 111, "Declaration concerning debtors'
11:43 5 schedules," just about the schedules. Now, "Declaration under
6 penalty of perjury by individual debtor," it states, "I declare
7 under penalty of perjury that I have read the foregoing summary
8 and schedules consisting of 16 sheets plus the line summary
9 page and that they are true and correct to the best of my 11:43 10 knowledge, information, and belief," dated April 9th, '01,
11 signed by you and your wife, correct?

12 A. Right.

13 Q. Isn't it true, Judge Porteous, that although you replied
14 "none" to "tax returns," that you and your wife filed for a
11:44 15 federal tax refund on March 23rd, 2001, in the amount of 16 $4,143.72, which was just five days before your original
17 Chapter 13 petition was filed? Do you recall that?

18 A. I know we filed for a tax refund.

19 Q. All right. Let me show it to you.

11:44 20 Exhibit 24, do you recognize this as being your 21 1040 return?

22 A. Yes, sir.

23 Q. For tax year -- for 2000 --

24 A. 2000.

11:44 25 Q. -- correct?

11:44 1 And this is Bates Page 600?

2 A. Right.

3 Q. This is going to be tough to read, but feel free to look at

4 your copy.

11:45 5 Under the section "Refund," which is sort of cut

6 off on my copy, Line 67a, "Amount of Line 66 you want refunded

7 to you, $4,143.72" --

8 A. Yes, sir.

9 Q. -- correct?

11:45 10 It's signed, again under penalty of perjury, by

11 you and your wife on March 23rd, 2001, correct?

12 A. Yes, sir.

13 Q. And has your occupation as judge and your wife -- your

14 wife's occupation as housewife?

11:45 15 A. Right.

16 Q. And this is on Page 601, correct, Bates page?

17 A. Yes, sir.

18 Q. March 23rd, 2001, less than a week before you filed

19 Chapter 13, correct?

11:45 20 A. Yes, sir.

21 Q. And on your schedule, you put that you had no refund?

22 A. When that was listed, you're right.

23 Q. Okay. From your Exhibit 25, from your Bank One bank

24 account, Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., Account [REDACTED]

11:46 25 actually, that number is a little bit different than the one

11:46 1 that was on the schedule. Maybe there was a typo.
2 If you look on Schedule B that we've read before,
3 this account starts with [REDACTED] but the actual statement
4 has a different few numbers that start. Probably just a typo,
11:46 5 don't you think?
6 A. I know there's bottom numbers on those checks. I always
7 called that account, I think, 00.
8 Q. All right. Now, going back to this Exhibit 25 --
9 A. Uh-huh.
11:47 10 Q. And I regret that I can't get this clearer; but it shows on 11 April 13th, a deposit of an IRS tax refund of $4,143.72,
12 correct?
13 A. Yes, sir.
14 Q. And that deposit was April 13th?
11:47 15 A. Yes, sir.
16 Q. Just four days after your amended return was filed,
17 correct?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. Your amended return was April 9th?
11:47 20 A. Yes, April 9th.
21 Q. But nothing was mentioned on that return?
22 A. No. I know I called my -- I called Claude when I got it.
23 And by Claude, I meant Mr. Lightfoot. I'm sorry.
24 Q. You discussed that with Mr. Lightfoot?
11:47 25 A. I did.

1T:48 1 Q. Did he tell you not to put it on the return?
2 A. No, no. I discussed that I received the refund, what
3 should I do with it.
4 Q. What did Mr. Lightfoot tell you?
11:48 5 A. Said, "If the trustee didn't put a lien on it, put it in
6 your account; but they may -- they may ask for it back."
7 Q. But, Judge Porteous, that schedule was signed under penalty
8 of perjury.
9 A. It was omitted. I don't know how it got omitted. There
11:48 10 was no intentional act to try and defraud somebody. It just 11 got omitted. I don't know why.
12 We had been fighting this, trying not to go into
13 bankruptcy for a long time. And I don't know. It just didn't 14 appear on the schedule.
11:48 15 Q. Okay.
16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How many days before the schedule
17 was made that omitted that was the request for refund made of 18 the filing?
19 MR. FINDER: About five days, five days from the 11:49 20 original petition, your Honor. The schedule was on the amended
21 petition and --
22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Well, I'm trying to get the
23 difference in date between the date he signs the statement
24 saying he has no refund coming --
11:49 25 MR. FINDER: Right.

11:49 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- and the date that he asked for a
2 refund from -- on his tax return.

3 MR. FINDER: Right. The original petition was
4 filed -- it was about five days before the original petition.

11:49 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.

6 MR. FINDER: Right. And the schedule was April 9th,
7 but -- and it was listed -- it was not listed on it. It was
8 listed as "none."

9 BY MR. FINDER:

11:49 10 Q. Okay. Judge Porteous, let's go back to Schedule B,
11 Question 2 --

12 A. All right.

13 Q. -- where it says, "checking, savings or other financial 14 accounts."

11:50 15 A. Right.

16 Q. And you listed a hundred dollars?

17 A. Right.

18 Q. Can you see -- okay. And again, this was in April, right?

19 A. Yeah.

11:50 20 Q. Okay. April 9th?

21 A. Yes, sir.

22 Q. And we have -- do you recall, Judge Porteous, owning a
23 Fidelity money market account, Account Number [REDACTED]

24 A. Right.

11:50 25 Q. Okay. Let me show you, Judge Porteous, Exhibit 28.

11:51 1 A. All right.
2 Q. Which is your Fidelity money market account, correct?
3 A. Yes, sir.
4 Q. And this is for you and your wife, correct?
11:51 5 A. Right.
6 Q. The account number I just read, correct?
7 A. Right.
8 Q. Statement period March 21, 2000, through April 20th,
9 2000 -- I'm sorry, 2001 through April 20th, 2001, correct?
11:51 10 A. Right.
11 Q. And you see on March 28th, Check Number 581 for $283.42,
12 your balance, right? That was your balance in that account?
13 A. That's what it says, that's correct.
14 Q. Okay. Yet, on your bankruptcy schedule, you put that the 11:51 15 account -- this was the day before bankruptcy; and on your 16 bankruptcy schedule you put you only had a hundred dollars in 17 the account, correct?
18 A. It appears this is the Fidelity account.
19 Q. Right.
11:51 20 A. And since it's not listed, for some reason it didn't
21 appear, apparently, on my bankruptcy, because only Bank One
22 appeared, it looks like.
23 Q. Okay.
24 A. Although, I thought I told Claude about all the -- I only
11:52 25 had two.

11:52 1 Q. Well, your attorney told you to get all your records --
2 A. Right.
3 Q. -- and make --
4 A. I could have sworn --
11:52 5 Q. Correct.
6 A. I honestly believed we told Claude about Fidelity. There
7 was really no reason not to tell him about Fidelity. The
8 account at any given time which would have had the most money
9 would have been the Bank One account because my checks were
11:52 10 deposited in there.
11 JUDGE LAKE: Mr. Finder, I'm not clear. Are we
12 talking about the difference in the Bank One disclosure and --
13 MR. FINDER: No. It wasn't listed, Judge, and was an 14 account -- there was more money than was listed on the 11:52 15 schedule.
16 JUDGE LAKE: You're saying the account was not
17 disclosed at all?
18 MR. FINDER: I don't believe it was.
19 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Fidelity or Bank One?
11:52 20 MR. FINDER: Bank One was -- Bank One was disclosed.
21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: For too small an amount?
22 MR. FINDER: Right.
23 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Fidelity was not disclosed?
24 MR. FINDER: Correct.
11:53 25 JUDGE LAKE: And where in the charge is Fidelity

1T:53 1 referred to? That's the question.
2 MR. FINDER: I believe it was in -- on Page 12. It's
3 not -- the name of the institution isn't in there, but
4 that's --
11:53 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How much was in Fidelity at the time
6 of the filing?
7 MR. FINDER: The balance on the day before bankruptcy
8 was $283.42.
9 JUDGE LAKE: So, that's the last bullet point on Page
11:53 10 12, is the Fidelity account?
11 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.
12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And, then, the one that was
13 listed --
14 MR. FINDER: The Bank One for a hundred, I believe
11:53 15 we'll have more evidence later on that.
16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay. That's not here yet.
17 THE COURT REPORTER: I'm sorry, Judge?
18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: That's not presently before us. I
19 think Mr. Finder is saying he's getting to that later.
11:53 20 MR. FINDER: Actually, in the charge, we had a balance
21 of 280 and the actual amount was $283.42; so, there was a $3.42
22 variance.
23 BY MR. FINDER:
24 Q. Now, Judge Porteous, we already discussed, from Exhibit 1,
11:54 25 Bates Page 112, the statement of financial affairs and the

17:54 1 jurat that had to be -- it was being signed under penalty of
2 perjury. Do you remember that?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. Okay. And on this page it says, "Payments to creditors.
11:54 5 List all payments on loans, installment purchases of goods or
6 services, and other debts aggregating more than $600 to any
7 creditor made within 90 days immediately preceding the
8 commencement of this case."
9 And then in parenthesis, "Married debtors filing
11:55 10 under Chapter 12 or Chapter 13 must include payments by 11 either/or both spouses whether or not a joint petition is 12 filed, unless the spouses are separated and a joint petition is 13 not filed."
14 Did I read that accurately?
11:55 15 A. You did.
16 Q. And where it requests the name and address of the 17 creditors, it just says "Normal Installments," correct?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. Let's go back to our Fleet Credit Card, Exhibit 29.
11:55 20 And, again, here is a -- sorry. I had the wrong
21 page. Give me a moment. Here it is.
22 This is the account number we discussed before,
23 correct, from the Fleet Credit Card for Mrs. Porteous?
24 A. Yes, sir.
11:56 25 Q. The balance of $1,088.41, correct?

11:56 1 A. That's what it says, yes, sir.

2 Q. That's what it says.

3 And the date of this statement -- under the
4 account number, it has payment due date April 15th, 2001, with 11:56 5 a new balance of 1088.41, correct?

6 A. Yes, sir.

7 Q. Now, the next statement, for the end of March and April,
8 shows past due amount zero because of the previous balance a
9 thousand -- there was a previous balance of 1,088.41. Do you
11:57 10 see that?

11 A. All right. Yes, sir.

12 Q. And then there was a payment recorded by the credit card
13 company on March 29th, 2001?

14 A. All right.

11:57 15 Q. Of 1,088.41?

16 A. Right.

17 MR. FINDER: Your Honor, this is what you were getting 18 at a little earlier.

19 BY MR. FINDER:

11:57 20 Q. Plus charges -- new charges for GameCash. Is that a
21 casino?

22 A. Is what? I'm sorry.

23 Q. GameCash?

24 A. I'm sure it is.

11:57 25 Q. Biloxi, Mississippi?

11:57 1 A. Sounds like it.
2 Q. And Beau Rivage Hotel in Biloxi, that's a casino, isn't it?
3 A. It is.
4 Q. For $215.99 and $231, respectively, correct?
11:57 5 A. Yes, sir, that's what it reflects.
6 Q. So, that was not listed on your schedule, was it, that
7 payment?
8 A. No, sir.
9 JUDGE LAKE: Which payment?
11:58 10 MR. FINDER: The Fleet.
11 JUDGE LAKE: Where --
12 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry?
13 JUDGE LAKE: Where are you referring when you say,
14 "That payment was not listed on your schedule"?
11:58 15 MR. FINDER: On page --
16 JUDGE LAKE: Are you referring to the 1,088 payment?
17 MR. FINDER: That's correct.
18 JUDGE LAKE: What about the subsequent payments?
19 MR. FINDER: Well, the 1,088, which was paid right
11:58 20 before the bankruptcy was filed -- at the time of the 21 bankruptcy filing, was not listed even though the schedule
22 called for all such payments prior to the filing of bankruptcy.
23 And this is the payment that --
24 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Well, then new charges were
11:58 25 incurred at the casino?

IT:58 1 MR. FINDER: Among other places.
2 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: After -- yes, after.
3 Mr. Finder, we're going to take a break around
4 noon; so, you have about five minutes.
11:58 5 MR. FINDER: Okay. Thank you.
6 BY MR. FINDER:
7 Q. Judge Porteous, do you recall obtaining two 1,000-dollar
8 markers -- we may have -- we touched on this earlier --
9 2,000 -- two 1,000-dollar markers from Grand Casino Gulfport on 11:59 10 or about February 27th, 2001, which were deposited against your 11 bank account on April 4th, one week after the filing of your
12 Chapter 13 petition?
13 Do you have an independent recollection of that?
14 A. No, I do not have an independent recollection.
11:59 15 Q. Or five days before the amended voluntary petition?
16 A. I do not have an independent recollection of that.
17 Q. All right.
18 MR. FINDER: Judges, this may be a good place to stop
19 before I go on to the next area, as long as we're going to 11:59 20 break for lunch.
21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Okay. We'll take about an hour.
22 THE WITNESS: 1:00 o'clock, your Honor?
23 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, sir.
24 THE WITNESS: Judge, just for my own information, what
12:00 25 time will we be going till today? I'm not --

12:00 1 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: We think until around 5:00.
2 THE WITNESS: Okay. I just was asking. That's all.
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
4 THE WITNESS: Thank you.
12:00 5 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right. Thank you.
6 We'll be in recess.
7 (Recess taken from 12:00 p.m. to 1:05 p.m.)
8 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Be seated, please. We're ready to 9 resume.
01:04 10 MR. FINDER: Your Honors, I would like to clarify a
11 couple questions you had asked me at the bench.
12 BY MR. FINDER:
13 Q. Judge Porteous, let me call your attention again to
14 Schedule B.
01:05 15 JUDGE LAKE: I can't hear you.
16 MR. FINDER: Oh, I'm sorry.
17 JUDGE LAKE: Just pretend there is a whole platoon out
18 here awaiting your instructions.
19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You may proceed. She has indicated
01:05 20 she'll be right back.
21 MR. FINDER: Oh, okay. Okay. Your Honors had asked
22 me a question regarding one of the matters about the Bank One
23 bank account, the hundred dollars. I don't recall which one of 24 you asked me, but it was in regard to Number 22 in the charge
01:05 25 on Page 12; and I wanted to clarify that.

04:05 1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. Judge Porteous, let me call your attention again, please,
3 to Schedule B --
4 A. Okay.

01:05 5 Q. -- Number 2, the check where you were asked to list your
6 checking accounts.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I'm sorry, counsel. I can't hear
8 you.
9 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry, Judge.

11:59 10 BY MR. FINDER:
11 Q. Call your attention to Schedule B, where you're asked --
12 Number 2, where you're asked to list your checking accounts and 13 I believe you put Bank One and a checking account number for 14 $100. I believe we established that the account number had a
01:06 15 typographical error and was close but not exact.
16 Do you recall that?
17 A. All I think that meant was that the -- at the bottom of the 18 check, the banks use additional numbers. I think it was 690
19 would have been left out is all.

01:06 20 Q. That's fine. You're correct.
21 I'm going to show you now from Exhibit 27, which 22 we've already referenced but I -- there's a line on here I had 23 not referenced. This is from your Bank One statement. You can 24 see your name on there with the actual account number; and the
01:06 25 date of the statement is March 23rd to April 23rd, 2001.

01:06 1 It says, "Summary of Account Balance." The
2 balance as of April 23rd, which is the last day of the
3 statement period, was $5,493.91. April 23rd being five days
4 before the amended petition was filed, correct?

01:07 5 A. Correct.
6 Q. Moving up a little bit, I believe it says --
7 A. Wait. I'm sorry. You said April 23rd being five days
8 before the amended petition was filed?
9 Q. I'm sorry. I'm wrong. It was after the amended petition
01:07 10 was filed. Forgive me.
11 Beginning balance, five fifty-nine oh seven;
12 ending balance $493.91, correct?
13 A. Yes, sir.

01:07 14 MR. FINDER: Your Honors asked me to -- a question
15 about Number 23 in the charge, appearing on Pages 13 and 14,
16 having to do with who paid the Fleet Credit Card.
17 BY MR. FINDER:
18 Q. Judge Porteous, I'm going to show you Exhibit 29. And,
19 again, to refresh your recollection, this is the account number
01:08 20 to your Fleet Credit Card with a balance of $1,088.41 on a
21 statement that is for the month of March.
22 You can see the account transactions, March 5th
23 through March 19th, correct?
24 A. Yes, sir.

01:08 25 Q. And the end -- and the new balance as of the -- this

01:08 1 statement is $1,088.41. Did I --
2 A. Yes.
3 Q. -- state that correctly?
4 Okay. That's Page 618.
01:08 5 A. All right.
6 Q. Page 620, another Fleet Credit Card statement for the same
7 account shows the payment of $1088.41, which Fleet recorded on
8 March 29th, correct?
9 A. Yes, sir.
01:09 10 Q. And that's one day after you filed the voluntary petition,
11 the first -- the original petition, correct?
12 A. The date they recorded it, yes.
13 Q. All right. Now showing you from Bates Number 619 --
14 MR. FINDER: What's the exhibit number for this?
01:09 15 MR. WOODS: Twenty-nine, I believe.
16 MR. FINDER: Exhibit --
17 MR. WOODS: Twenty-nine.
18 MR. FINDER: -- 29. Right, 29.
19 BY MR. FINDER:
01:09 20 Q. Check Number 1660 on the account of Rhonda F. Danos, dated
21 3-23-01, right -- five days before bankruptcy?
22 A. All right.
23 Q. Payable to Fleet in the same amount, $1088.41, correct?
24 A. Yes, sir.
01:10 25 Q. And here in the highlighted portion for the memo, where it

01:10 1 says "For," "Carmella Porteous." And it has the Fleet bank
2 account number, correct?
3 A. Yes.
4 Q. So, it appears that Ms. Danos paid off Fleet, correct?
01:10 5 A. Well, her check did, yes.
6 Q. Her check did.
7 Which would have preferred Fleet 'as -- which was
8 paid off right before bankruptcy, as opposed to the other --
9 other creditors, correct?
01:10 10 A. I presuppose [sic] so. I'm not --
11 Q. Now, why was it, sir, that Rhonda Danos happened to pay off
12 your wife's credit card days before you filed bankruptcy?
13 A. I have no idea. I'm sorry.
14 MR. FINDER: Did your Honors have any more questions
01:10 15 about --
16 A. What date was that? I'm sorry, counselor.
17 BY MR. FINDER:
18 Q. The date of --
19 A. I have no idea.
01:11 20 Q. Judge Porteous, was Rhonda Danos in the habit of paying off
21 your wife's bills?
22 A. No, not that I'm aware of. I mean, she's paid some bills
23 for me, though.
24 Q. But you're not aware of her paying your wife's bills?
01:11 25 A. No. She didn't pay my wife's bill. A check paid it.

01:11 1 Q. Well, the check is made payable to your wife's creditor,
2 Fleet.
3 A. Right, a check paid it.
4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Can I see that check again?
01:11 5 MR. FINDER: Yes, your Honor.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
7 MR. FINDER: Can you see?
8 BY MR. FINDER:
9 Q. Judge Porteous, did you ask Rhonda Danos to write that
01:11 10 check for payment of the Fleet account?
11 A. I have no recollection of asking her to do that.
12 Q. All right. Judge Porteous, on April 9th, 2001, when you
13 signed the statement of financial affairs in your bankruptcy
14 under penalty of perjury, which was on Exhibit 1, Bates
01:12 15 Number 116, Item 8 talks about losses.
16 Do you -- do you recall that independently, sir,
17 or do you have it in front of you?
18 A. I do not have that in front of me.
19 Q. All right. Can you read that?
01:12 20 A. Yes, sir.
21 Q. Okay. It asks you to list all losses for fire, theft,
22 other casualty, gambling within one year immediately preceding
23 the commencement of this case -- meaning your case -- or since
24 the commencement of this case. And I believe we read this 01:13 25 before, about married debtors filing under Chapter 12 and

01:13 1 Chapter 13.
2 And you list "none," correct?
3 A. That's what's listed, correct.
4 Q. Judge Porteous, do you recall that in the -- that your
01:13 5 gambling losses exceeded $12,700 during the preceding year?
6 A. I was not aware of it at the time, but now I see your
7 documentation and that -- and that's what it reflects.
8 Q. So, you -- you don't dispute that?
9 A. I don't dispute that.
01:13 10 Q. Therefore, the answer "no" was incorrect, correct?
11 A. Apparently, yes.
12 Q. Even though this was signed under oath, under penalty of 13 perjury, correct?
14 A. Right.
01:13 15 The casino, you don't get a gratuitous statement
16 every year from them. I mean, you would have to get it from 17 them.
18 Q. You would have to ask for it?
19 A. Yes.
01:13 20 JUDGE LAKE: I couldn't hear. What you did you say?
21 THE WITNESS: You have to ask -- they don't send a
22 statement or anything, Judge. If you want to know your status,
23 you can go ask them; but they don't routinely send -- in fact,
24 they never send it out.
01:14 25 JUDGE LAKE: Okay. But they -- if you call them, they

01:14 1 will tell you?

2 THE WITNESS: What's that? I'm sorry.

3 JUDGE LAKE: If you call them, then they will tell

4 you?

01:14 5 THE WITNESS: Yes, sir. I assume they would.

6 JUDGE LAKE: Okay. Thank you.

7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How much was owing?

8 MR. FINDER: Sir? I'm sorry.

9 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Gambling losses.

01:14 10 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How much was the amount owing?

11 JUDGE LAKE: He said 12,700 the previous year.

12 MR. FINDER: Twelve thousand seven hundred.

13 And we'll -- through our summary witness, we'll

14 get into more detail about gross versus net; but for the

01:14 15 present purpose, that's -- that's the information.

16 BY MR. FINDER:

17 Q. Judge Porteous, we've talked about your bankruptcy lawyer,

18 Claude Lightfoot, right?

19 A. Yes, sir.

01:15 20 Q. And we also mentioned earlier in our examination the fact

21 that Regions Bank, where you had done some business, was listed

22 as an unsecured creditor in the original voluntary petition,

23 correct?

24 A. Right.

01:15 25 Q. Is it a fact, sir, that Circuit Judge W. Eugene Davis made

01:15 1 a finding of crime fraud as to attorney-client privilege as to
2 discussions between you -- discussions and documents between
3 you and Mr. Lightfoot regarding the Regions Bank?
4 A. That's my understanding, correct.

01:15 5 Q. Let me show you what's been marked as Exhibit 12, an order,
6 which at the time it was under seal, the order of crime fraud.
7 Have you seen this order before?
8 A. I believe so.

9 Q. Okay. And the actual order for crime fraud was signed by 01:16 10 Judge Davis on October 19th, 2004. Is that correct?
11 A. That -- if that's what it says, of course.
12 Q. October 19th, 2004?
13 A. That's what it says.

14 Q. Okay. Therefore -- I wanted to establish that before I ask
01:16 15 you questions --
16 A. I understand.
17 Q. -- about this transaction.

18 You and Mr. Lightfoot agreed, at least by
19 December 21st, 2000 --

01:16 20 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry. Can you hear me?
21 BY MR. FINDER:
22 Q. -- by December 21st, 2000, to send out workout letters to
23 your various unsecured creditors, correct?
24 A. We talked about that, that's correct.

01:16 25 Q. And the decision was made between you and Mr. Lightfoot to

01:17 1 exclude Regions Bank, which was an unsecured creditor in the
2 amount of $5,000 plus finance charges, from the list of
3 unsecured creditors that received the workout letter, correct?
4 A. That's correct.

01:17 5 Q. Showing you, sir, what's been marked as Exhibit 5, on the 6 stationery of Claude Lightfoot to you and Mrs. Porteous, dated
7 December 21st, 2000, "Regarding workout proposal."

8 "Dear Judge and Mrs. Porteous, I enclose a copy
9 of the letters and one copy of the attachments. I included
01:17 10 with each that have sent -- that I have sent to all the 11 unsecured creditors with the exception of Regions Bank, which 12 we wanted to exclude."

13 Did I read that accurately?

14 A. You did.

01:17 15 Q. Signed by Mr. Lightfoot, correct?

16 A. Right.

17 Q. On -- on a copy. This is Bates Number 296.

18 297, Bates Number 297, is a sample letter that 19 went to Bank of Louisiana MasterCard. Are you familiar with
01:18 20 that?

21 A. I've seen -- I don't know if I'm familiar with that
22 exactly, but I think they all said the same thing.

23 Q. Now, we've talked about the Fleet Credit Card, also; and 24 here are the lists of credit -- unsecured creditors that were
01:18 25 listed in Mr. Lightfoot's letter.

01:18 1 Fleet is not on here, is it?

2 A. It is not.

3 Q. Okay. But of those that are listed, the 13, Mr. Lightfoot

4 totals them up to a sum of $182,330.23 in credit card debt,

01:18 5 correct?

6 A. Right.

7 Q. Mr. Lightfoot goes on in his letter to tell these unsecured

8 creditors they should accept the workout proposal and there

9 would be a -- the universe of cash available to pay them out is

01:19 10 $39,398.90, which represents about 21 percent of the balances,

11 correct?

12 A. That's what it says, correct.

13 Q. Right.

14 Also, it says Regions Bank was being excluded.

01:19 15 And, in fact, Regions Bank is not listed anywhere in the 16 letter, is it?

17 A. That's right.

18 Q. The loan with Regions Bank -- and I'll show you Exhibit 4.

19 A. All right.

01:19 20 Q. The loan with Regions Bank, the original loan --

21 A. Yes, sir.

22 Q. -- was for $5,000 plus a finance charge of $30; and it was

23 taken out on January 27, 2000, correct?

24 Boy, it's hard to read.

01:20 25 A. You're right.

01:20 1 Oh, yeah, that's better.
2 Yes, sir, it says --
3 MR. FINDER: Can you all see?
4 BY MR. FINDER:
01:20 5 Q. And this Account [REDACTED] represents the account for 6 that loan, right?
7 A. Yes, sir.
8 Q. And you are the borrower?
9 A. That's correct.
01:20 10 Q. You are the borrower, and the lender is Regions Bank. Have 11 I read that correctly?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. All right. And this is on Bates Number 272.
14 A. All right.
01:20 15 Q. In fact, sir, you signed the note, correct?
16 A. Yes, sir.
17 Q. That's your signature, right?
18 A. Yes, sir.
19 Q. And that's on Page 273.
01:20 20 On the workup papers for this loan, it says
21 the -- again, same account number, same principal, loan date,
22 etcetera, which matures July 24th, 2000.
23 A. All right.
24 Q. Primary purpose of the loan is a personal loan, correct?
01:21 25 A. Uh-huh.

01:21 1 Q. Stated purpose, "Tuition for son," correct?
2 A. Uh-huh.
3 Q. Now, who was the son for whom you were asking for tuition?
4 A. Timmy or Tommy, I would think.
01:21 5 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
6 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Timothy or Tommy.
7 BY MR. FINDER:
8 Q. But you're not sure sitting here today?
9 A. Sitting here today, I don't know.
01:21 10 Q. Okay. There was a statement in the middle of the workout
11 paper -- I'm sorry -- the loan application paper, "Financial 12 Condition."
13 I'll read it. "By signing this authorization, I
14 represent and warrant to lender that the information provided
01:21 15 above is true and correct and that there has been no federal
16 material adverse change in my financial condition as disclosed
17 in my most recent financial statement to lender."
18 This authorization is dated June -- January 27,
19 2000, signed by you, correct?
01:22 20 A. Yes, sir.
21 Q. And that's on Page 274 --
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. -- right?
24 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Is that 2000 or 2001?
01:22 25 MR. FINDER: 2000.

01:22 1 THE WITNESS: 2000.
2 MR. FINDER: I'm building up to it.
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: I see.
4 BY MR. FINDER:
01:22 5 Q. On this other loan -- page to the loan application, dated
6 January 24th, it says -- and this is a little hard to read, but
7 follow with me -- "In the last ten years, have you been 8 bankrupt or are you in the process of filing bankruptcy?" And
9 it's checked off, "No."
01:22 10 A. Right.
11 Q. And that's accurate, correct?
12 A. I believe so.
13 Q. That was Page 276.
14 A. Yes, sir.
01:22 15 Q. Now, this loan got extended a couple of times, right?
16 A. I don't recall, but was that a 60 -- a six --
17 Q. Six months.
18 A. Six months. Had to have gotten renewed at least once.
19 Q. Okay. Well, let's talk about the renewal.
01:23 20 Here's the loan date, 7-24. It's the same amount
21 plus another $30 for the loan fee?
22 A. Right.
23 Q. So, it's the same loan because -- I believe it's the same
24 account number.
01:23 25 A. It is.

UT:23 1 Q. All right. To you from Regions Bank. Everything else is 2 pretty much the same on this page, correct?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. And that page being 279?
01:23 5 A. Yes, sir.
6 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry, Judges. It's 279.
7 BY MR. FINDER:
8 Q. This loan is also signed by you, correct?
9 A. Yes, sir.
01:23 10 Q. And on the loan request it says, "Renewal of existing,"
11 right?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. And the loan officer -- or the branch -- who happens to be
14 the branch manager, I believe, Loretta Young, correct?
01:23 15 A. Yes, sir.
16 Q. As part of this loan package, you filled out the 17 information page, for, again, personal loan?
18 A. Right.
19 Q. "Specific Purpose," now it says, "Refinance existing." So
01:24 20 that's still for your son's tuition, correct?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. And the financial condition, you have still signed it?
23 A. Yes, sir.
24 Q. And this is July 24th, 2000?
01:24 25 A. Right.

01:24 1 Q. Let's jump ahead.
2 That was the first extension?
3 A. Yes, sir.
4 Q. Showing you now Bates 288, the second extension.
01:24 5 A. Yes.
6 Q. This loan is dated January 17th, 2001, correct?
7 A. Yes, sir.
8 Q. Matures July 17th, 2001?
9 A. Yes, sir.
01:25 10 Q. Now, January 17th, 2001, was a couple months before
11 bankruptcy, correct?
12 A. Ultimately, yes.
13 Q. Yes.
14 And, again, the rest of the terms are very
01:25 15 similar to the original and first extension, right?
16 A. Yes, sir, it appears to be.
17 Q. Okay. However, on January 17th, you had already engaged
18 Mr. Lightfoot to be your bankruptcy attorney, correct, because 19 we just saw the letters that went out for December?
01:25 20 A. I retained him to try and work out my debt and, if it
21 couldn't be worked out, to maybe consider bankruptcy.
22 Q. Right.
23 A. Correct.
24 Q. And on this loan, the second extension, you signed it?
01:25 25 A. Yes.

01:25 1 Q. And on the workup sheet to process the loan, again, by
2 Loretta Young?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. Your name?
01:26 5 A. Right.
6 Q. Same account number but here it says, "In the last -- In
7 the last ten years, have you been bankrupt or are you in the 8 process of filing bankruptcy?" And now it's checked "No"?
9 A. Right.
01:26 10 Q. In fact, by this time you had already -- as you just 11 stated, you had already talked to Mr. Lightfoot about trying to 12 work it out or going bankrupt, correct?
13 A. That's correct.
14 Q. So, that's a false statement, is it not?
01:26 15 A. I didn't mean it to be false, because I wasn't in the 16 process of declaring -- I was doing everything I could not to 17 file a bankruptcy. That's why I attempted for so long to do a
18 workout.
19 Q. But this is dated in January?
01:26 20 A. Right. We had not filed the bankruptcy.
21 Q. You hadn't filed yet.
22 A. I think the letters may have just gone out previous to
23 that.
24 Q. Okay. Let's look at the next page, Page 291 -- sorry.
01:26 25 The page we just referenced was Page 290?

01:26 1 A. Right.

2 Q. Let's move to the next page.

3 "Financial condition, by signing this
4 authorization, I represent and warrant to lender that the 01:27 5 information provided above is true and correct and there has
6 been no material adverse change in my financial condition."

7 Now, there had been a material adverse change in
8 your financial condition, hadn't there, since the last time you
9 received the loan from the bank?

01:27 10 A. I probably stood at the same amount of debt that I had when
11 I got the loan, but was I now in the process of trying to work
12 out a settle -- a payoff, yes.

13 Q. I'm sorry, sir. Maybe it's the way I asked the question.
14 Let me try it again.

01:27 15 Since your last -- since the last time you took 16 an extension on this loan, your financial condition had stayed
17 the same or deteriorated; it hadn't gotten any better, had it?

18 A. Hadn't gotten any better, that's correct.

19 Q. So, if you were in the banker's shoes, you would have no
01:27 20 reason to know that you were contemplating bankruptcy or 21 contacting bankruptcy counsel, because you have checked off on
22 this sheet that there's been no material change, correct?

23 A. I would have to object to that question. You're asking me
24 to presuppose my --

01:28 25 Q. You're right and -- you're correct, and I withdraw the

01:28 1 question.
2 A. Thank you.
3 Q. That is Page 291.
4 A. Right.
01:28 5 Q. Well, we know that Regions Bank eventually was given notice
6 of the bankruptcy, as were all --
7 A. They were.
8 Q. -- the other unsecured creditors, correct?
9 A. They were.
01:28 10 Q. But by then, Regions Bank had already given you a loan and 11 two extensions, correct?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. And when your bankruptcy --
14 MR. FINDER: I'm referring to Exhibit 1, Bates
01:28 15 Number 27.
16 BY MR. FINDER:
17 Q. When the trustee filed its final report in your bankruptcy,
18 where it says this case is completed, final meeting of 19 creditors, et cetera, it lists Regions Bank, does it not,
01:29 20 Number 23?
21 A. Yes, sir.
22 Q. And Regions Bank is getting a percentage of its outstanding
23 debt as an unsecured creditor at 34.55 percent, correct?
24 A. Right.
01:29 25 Q. Which means Regions Bank only got $1,782.43 in this

01:29 1 bankruptcy, correct?

2 A. That's -- that's exactly what those documents show.

3 Q. But, again, when you applied for the last extension,

4 Regions Bank had no idea that you were -- that you were

01:29 5 discussing your financial condition with bankruptcy counsel,

6 correct?

7 A. They did not.

8 Q. Regions Bank didn't ask you for any kind of collateral to

9 collateralize the loan or move itself up from an unsecured

01:29 10 creditor to a higher level, did it?

11 A. No. Mr. Butler was a friend. No, they didn't.

12 Q. Mr. Butler, for the record, is Ed Buddy Butler, correct?

13 A. Yes.

14 Q. And you didn't tell him Mr. -- even though he was a friend,

01:29 15 you didn't tell him that you were having financial problems,

16 did you?

17 A. No, I did not.

18 Q. In fact, you and Mr. Butler even go to the same church,

19 right?

01:30 20 A. I can't say we haven't been to a church together. I don't 21 know that we go to the same church. It's possible.

22 Q. Okay.

23 A. I may have seen Buddy.

24 Q. Moving on, back to the workout letters that Mr. Lightfoot

01:30 25 sent out -- and, again, we're talking about Exhibit 5.

01:30 1 A. Uh-huh.
2 Q. With the exception of Regions Bank?
3 A. Right.
4 JUDGE LAKE: What exhibit are you looking at now?
01:30 5 MR. FINDER: Exhibit 5.
6 JUDGE LAKE: Okay.
7 MR. FINDER: I am going to work backwards. We just
8 talked about 5, and we're on it again.
9 JUDGE LAKE: All right.
01:31 10 A. Is that Exhibit 5, counselor?
11 BY MR. FINDER:
12 Q. Yes, sir.
13 A. Or your Bates Number 5?
14 Q. No. Exhibit 5, Bates Number 296.
01:31 15 A. Okay. I just -- I saw an "SC" up at the top.
16 Q. And I think we may have discussed this briefly; but
17 Mr. Lightfoot listed approximately a hundred eighty -- a little 18 over $182,000 in unsecured credit card --
19 A. Right. Right.
01:31 20 Q. Right?
21 When bankruptcy was filed and then your amended
22 bankruptcy, you have Schedule F --
23 A. Right.
24 Q. -- from Exhibit 1, Bates Number 102; and here Mr. Lightfoot
01:31 25 actually lists every single credit card that you've told him

01:31 1 about, right?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. Because he can't list credit cards that he doesn't know
4 about, he relies on you and/or Mrs. Porteous to give him the 01:32 5 financial picture so he can make a true and correct listing on
6 here?
7 A. That's correct.
8 Q. Of course, Fleet, as we determined earlier, is not on it?
9 A. It's not on it.
01:32 10 Q. Okay. I believe -- and just by manual counting, there are 11 now 15 credit cards. And I -- you can take my word for it or 12 I'll hand you the exhibit and you can count them up.
13 A. I have no reason to doubt your representation.
14 Q. And now -- and now Regions Bank --
01:32 15 A. Right.
16 Q. -- is also listed, for $5,000, correct?
17 A. Yes, sir.
18 Q. More importantly, the amount of unsecured debt has gone up
19 to 196,000, correct?
01:32 20 A. Yes, sir, that's what it says.
21 Q. That's from the workout letter, where it was less?
22 A. Whatever it was, yeah.
23 Q. You were a federal judge at this time, of course?
24 A. Right.
01:32 25 Q. And you filed a financial disclosure report for calendar

07:32 1 year 2000 and -- on May 10th, '01, correct?
2 A. Right.
3 Q. I'm referring to Exhibit 3, Bates Number 20 -- I'm sorry,
4 2 --
01:33 5 A. 00239.
6 Q. 239.
7 And this is your disclosure, is it not, sir?
8 A. Appears to be, of course.
9 Q. Well --
01:33 10 A. It is. I mean, it says it's me.
11 Q. Let's look at the last page, Bates Number 242.
12 A. That's me.
13 Q. That's your signature, right?
14 A. (Nodding head).
01:33 15 Q. Okay. Now, here, under Section VI -- Roman Numeral VI, I
16 believe, "Liabilities" --
17 A. Yes, sir.
18 Q. -- you list but two credit cards: MBNA credit card, Value
19 Code J; and Citibank credit card, Value Code J?
01:33 20 A. Right.
21 Q. And the legend on the bottom that has "Value Code" says,
22 "J, $15,000 or less," correct?
23 A. Right.
24 Q. So, according to your financial disclosure, your
01:34 25 liabilities did not exceed $30,000, correct?

01:34 1 A. According to the disclosure.
2 Q. Okay. Now, according to the disclosure, you have to
3 certify these. Isn't that right, Judge?
4 A. Right. Right.
01:34 5 Q. And I believe it says, "I certify that all information
6 given above, including information pertaining to my spouse and
7 minor dependent children, if any, is accurate, true, and 8 complete to the best of my knowledge and belief, and that any
9 information not reported was withheld because it met applicable
01:34 10 statutory provisions permitting nondisclosure," with your 11 signature and signed on the 10th of May, 2001, correct?
12 A. Yes, sir.
13 Q. It also says that, "Any individual who knowingly and
14 willfully falsifies or fails to file this report may be subject
01:35 15 to civil and criminal sanctions," citing -- citing 5 United
16 States Code Appendix, Section 104, which I believe we covered
17 earlier this morning, correct?
18 A. I believe we did.
19 Q. All right. Well, Judge Porteous, you listed, as I said,
01:35 20 two credit cards, which you have admitted to, MBNA and Citi?
21 A. Right.
22 Q. In fact, if we go back to Schedule F of Exhibit 1, starting
23 on Bates Number 102, you have not just a Citibank account; but
24 you have -- one, two -- three Citibank accounts, right?
01:35 25 A. There are three accounts. I don't know if they were in my

01:35 1 name or my wife's; but, yeah, there were three Citi. That's
2 what listed.
3 Q. Right. But, again, you filed jointly?
4 A. Yeah. But I'm just saying I -- there are three accounts
01:35 5 listed. You're correct.
6 Q. The first one under Number 4 -- the next one under 4, is
7 $23,987 and change, correct?
8 A. I can't see it because your arm is there.
9 Q. I'm sorry.
01:36 10 A. But, again, whatever is reflected is reflected.
11 Q. The second one to Citi is $20,719.58?
12 A. Right.
13 Q. The third one is -- the third Citi account --
14 A. Right.
01:36 15 Q. -- 17,711.35.
16 These are both on Pages 102 and 103 of the
17 exhibit, that being Exhibit 1.
18 Similarly, going back, you say -- you list an 19 MBNA credit card, again, just like Citi, $15,000 or less debt.
01:36 20 Now, the debts for all of the three Citi accounts
21 exceeded 15,000, didn't they?
22 A. Yes, sir.
23 Q. MBNA does have one less than 15,000. It has one for
24 $3,212.80, right?
01:37 25 A. Yes.

01:37 1 Q. But it also has a second one at $30,931.02, correct?
2 A. Yes, sir.
3 Q. Therefore, Judge Porteous, your certification of the -- of
4 your liabilities that you signed on April 10th --
01:37 5 A. May 10th.
6 Q. I'm sorry. May 10th. Forgive me.
7 -- was false, correct?
8 A. It was not correct. It was not accurate, correct.
9 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Which of the financial reports --
01:38 10 which year are you --
11 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Year 2000.
12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: 2000 -- of course, if it was filed
13 in 2001, it would refer to the calendar year ending 2000.
14 MR. FINDER: Correct.
01:38 15 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
16 MR. FINDER: For calendar year 2000, that is on
17 Page 239. That is correct, your Honor.
18 BY MR. FINDER:
19 Q. Judge Porteous, over the years, how much cash have you
01:38 20 received from Jake Amato and Bob Creely or their law firm?
21 A. I have no earthly idea.
22 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
23 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry. Jake Amato, A-M-A-T-O. Jacob
24 Amato, Robert Creely, C-R-E-E-L-Y, or their law firm.
01:39 25 BY MR. FINDER:

01:39 1 Q. Amato & Creely, I believe they are called.
2 A. Right.
3 Q. Is that correct?
4 A. Yeah.
01:39 5 Q. You do not know how much you've received from them?
6 A. I do not.
7 Q. Those men or their -- and/or their firm, correct?
8 A. That's correct.
9 Q. It could have been $10,000 or more. Isn't that right?
01:39 10 A. Again, you're asking me to speculate. I have no idea is 11 all I can tell you.
12 Q. When did you first start getting cash from Messrs. Amato,
13 Creely, or their law firm?
14 A. Probably when I was on state bench.
01:39 15 Q. And that practice continued into 1994, when you became a
16 federal judge, did it not?
17 A. I believe that's correct.
18 Q. Now, when Messrs. Amato and Creely -- and I'm only talking
19 about them right now --
01:39 20 A. I understand.
21 Q. -- and their law firm, not -- we'll talk about others
22 later. But when those men gave you money, did you consider it
23 a gift or a loan or income?
24 A. I never considered it income. It was either a gift or a
01:40 25 loan.

01:40 1 Q. Okay. If it was a loan, did you ever pay it back?
2 A. No, I didn't.
3 Q. Then, it became income, correct?
4 A. I don't know.
01:40 5 Q. Well, again, your Honor, I don't want to argue with you;
6 but --
7 A. I'm not arguing with you.
8 Q. -- if I loan you a hundred dollars and you don't pay it
9 back, that becomes income, correct?
01:40 10 A. It still may be a gift.
11 Q. If it was a loan and it's not forgiven as a gift, then it's
12 income, correct?
13 A. Right.
14 Q. But none of that ever appeared in your federal tax
01:40 15 return --
16 A. No --
17 Q. -- as income, correct?
18 A. -- it did not.
19 Q. Now, if it was a gift, it would have been on your financial
01:40 20 disclosure reports for 1994, which starts at Bates 215; 1995,
21 which starts at Bates 219; 1996, which starts at Bates 223;
22 1997, which starts at Bates 227; 1998, Bates 231; through 1999,
23 Bates 235, which we already reviewed.
24 I could show you these, Judge Porteous; but I'll 01:41 25 just ask you the question. Did you ever list any gifts from

01:41 1 Amato or Creely, cash gifts, in any of these financial
2 disclosures?
3 A. No.
4 Q. But you certified every one as being true and correct?
01:41 5 A. Correct.
6 Q. And there was an omission, then, correct?
7 A. Not that I'm aware of.
8 Q. Well, if someone gave you money during those years and it
9 was more than $250, wouldn't that be reportable?
01:41 10 A. I do not recall receiving any cash from them during that -- 11 Q. Do you recall in 1999, in the summer, May, June, receiving
12 $2,000 for them?
13 A. I've read Mr. Amato's grand jury testimony. It says we 14 were fishing and I made some representation that I was having 01:42 15 difficulties and that they loaned me some money or gave me some 16 money.
17 Q. You don't -- you're not denying it; you just don't remember
18 it?
19 A. I just don't have any recollection of it, but that would 01:42 20 have fallen in the category of a loan from a friend. That's 21 all.
22 Q. Has the loan ever been paid back --
23 A. No.
24 Q. -- if you got it?
01:42 25 A. No.

01:42 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Were any loans reported on the
2 disclosure statements?
3 MR. FINDER: No, sir.
4 THE WITNESS: I believe -- I'm not sure, but I don't
01:42 5 know the reported amount on the loans.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: But whether a loan or a gift, it
7 wasn't -- it wasn't --
8 THE WITNESS: It wasn't reported.
9 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- to the extent that they might
01:42 10 exist, they weren't reported, either as a loan or a gift?
11 THE WITNESS: That's correct, Judge.
12 MR. FINDER: Right.
13 BY MR. FINDER:
14 Q. The exhibits that I just talked about, the years 1994
01:42 15 through '99, all have sections on liabilities and those are not 16 reported?
17 A. That's right.
18 Q. If I misstate, please correct me.
19 A. No. You're correct.
01:43 20 Q. Other than gifts of cash, did you ever fail to report --
21 from lawyers or others, not just Creely and Amato or their law
22 firm, but anybody else, not including your personal family
23 members -- cash gifts for entertainment or family needs,
24 including but not limited to hunting trips, fishing trips,
01:43 25 airfare, lodging, dining, trips out of the country or out of

01:43 1 state, such as Washington, D.C. or Las Vegas, parties for your
2 children, stipends for your children, tuition for your
3 children, car notes, mortgage payments, or gambling expenses
4 for you or your wife?

01:43 5 A. I'm sure I didn't include anything on that.

6 Q. And I have the reports here if you want to refresh your 7 recollection.

8 A. I understand.

9 Q. Did you ever report gifts that your court staff may have 01:43 10 received along with you, such as dining, travel, or 11 entertainment?

12 A. I'm sure I didn't.

13 Q. And I could go through that for every one of these 14 reporting years, but would that be -- your answer be the same
01:44 15 for years 1994, 19 -- through 1999 inclusive?

16 A. I absolutely agree that that's what those documents show
17 and certify.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You're referring to the same
19 questions as to reporting on those other years?

01:44 20 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

21 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. Counsel, with respect to
22 that last question, was -- was there an exception -- I thought
23 there was a report of a couple of fishing -- hunting trips or
24 fishing trips.

01:45 25 MR. FINDER: I believe those were Bar -- related to

01:45 1 Bar associations, but let me look quickly so I don't make a
2 mistake.
3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I thought there were a couple of
4 trips that he reported, at least in the exhibits that I saw.
01:45 5 MR. WOODS: Two hunting trips.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Two hunting trips.
7 MR. WOODS: Rowan and the other --
8 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
9 MR. WOODS: I'm sorry.
01:45 10 THE WITNESS: There were two included in the original
11 complaint filed by Justice, but not included in the ultimate
12 charge from the Court.
13 BY MR. FINDER:
14 Q. In the documents that I referred to, I didn't see hunting
01:46 15 trips. I've seen reimbursements from Bar associations, but not 16 hunting trips; and if I missed it, please correct me.
17 A. We had --
18 MR. WOODS: Judge Porteous is correct. There are two
19 instances on his financial disclosure forms where he reports a
01:46 20 Rowan -- Rowan Drilling Company trip.
21 THE WITNESS: "Rowan." Yeah.
22 MR. WOODS: And one other, Diamond.
23 THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?
24 THE WITNESS: Diamond.
01:46 25 MR. WOODS: Diamond Drilling Company.

01:46 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, with those exceptions, there was
2 no reports --

3 MR. WOODS: Yes.

4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- of loans or gifts or anything
01:46 5 with respect to hunting trips or any of these other things,
6 with the exceptions of those ones?

7 MR. WOODS: That's correct. There are none except
8 those two.

9 MR. FINDER: And I'm still looking, and I haven't seen
01:47 10 them. So, I'm not sure if it's for these years or not; but I
11 think --

12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I don't know. It may be a
13 different reporting period.

14 (Sotto voce discussion between counsel)

11:59 15 BY MR. FINDER:

16 Q. Judge Porteous, I'm going to show you from Exhibit 20 --

17 MR. FINDER: Bates Number 585, your Honors. Let me
18 make this smaller.

19 BY MR. FINDER:

01:48 20 Q. Do you recognize this, sir, a casino credit application for 21 Harrah's casino?

22 A. Yes, sir, that's what it says.

23 Q. Okay. And the purpose of this is what?

24 A. To be able to sign markers.

01:48 25 Q. Correct.

01:48 1 And it is dated April 30th, 2001, correct?

2 A. Right.

3 Q. And that is just two days -- three days -- March has 31

4 days -- three days after bankruptcy, correct?

01:48 5 A. Yes, sir.

6 No. Wait.

7 MR. WOODS: April.

8 BY MR. FINDER:

9 Q. April. I'm sorry.

01:48 10 After your -- forgive me. After your amended

11 petition, it was a couple -- two and half, three weeks after

12 your amended petition?

13 A. Yes, sir.

14 Q. You list under "Financial Information" income of over a

01:48 15 hundred thousand --

16 A. Right.

17 Q. -- in salary.

18 Over $250,000 in a home?

19 A. Right.

01:48 20 Q. Indebtedness, zero, correct?

21 A. That's not my handwriting. I don't -- I don't know who

22 filled that out.

23 Q. Is this your handwriting?

24 A. That is.

01:49 25 Q. So, you don't know --

01:49 1 A. That is not my handwriting.
2 Q. Well, when you signed this, was there anything on there?
3 Did somebody put it on there after you signed it?
4 A. I have -- cannot tell you that. I don't know that. But 01:49 5 that is not my handwriting.
6 Q. And --
7 A. If I look at the rest of it, I can tell you if it is.
8 Q. Well -- (Indicating).
9 A. The rest of it -- now, don't -- okay. You get towards the 01:49 10 top, that's --
11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: There's a certification above your
12 handwriting. "I certify that I reviewed all the information
13 provided above and it is true and accurate."
14 THE WITNESS: I don't -- yeah, Judge. I'm just saying
01:49 15 it's not my handwriting is all.
16 BY MR. FINDER:
17 Q. So, even though it's certified as being true and correct,
18 you don't take responsibility for the indebtedness --
19 A. I don't know that that was on there when I signed it. I
01:49 20 just don't have any recollection.
21 Q. We talked about Messrs. Creely and Amato and their law
22 firm, the law firm of Creely & Amato.
23 A. Right.
24 Q. Mr. Creely is what kind of a lawyer? What kind of a
01:50 25 practice would you say he has?

01:50 1 A. Over the years, I think it's changed. Now he -- he was
2 in -- for awhile into multidistrict litigation, complex
3 litigation, class action type litigation.
4 Q. Mr. Amato started off pretty much as a personal injury
01:50 5 lawyer, didn't he?
6 A. Yeah.
7 Q. And throughout most of his career considered himself --
8 A. I think he was a personal injury lawyer. I never knew Jake
9 to take a divorce case or anything like that.
01:50 10 Q. And nor did he practice that often in federal court,
11 correct? As far as you know?
12 A. As far as I know.
13 Q. Other than Messrs. Creely and Amato and their law firm, we
14 talked about other lawyers in this case, such as Mr. Levenson.
01:51 15 Have you received any cash from Mr. Levenson?
16 A. No, not that I -- to the best of my knowledge, I have never
17 received any cash from Mr. Levenson.
18 Q. But Mr. Levenson, along with Messrs. Creely and Amato, it
19 would not be uncommon for them to take you out to lunch?
01:51 20 A. That's correct.
21 Q. And -- or dinners?
22 A. Yeah. On an occasion, I would think, yeah.
23 Q. Well, Mr. Levenson took you out to some places for lunch
24 or -- and/or dinner, such as Ruth's Chris or, before Hurricane 01:51 25 Katrina, Smith & Wollensky's. Isn't that correct?

... 51 1 A. I'm sure that's correct.
2 Q. And some -- and you were never -- you never paid, did you?
3 A. No.
4 Q. Now, other than Messrs. Amato and Creely, who else had --
01:52 5 what other lawyers -- lawyer friends of yours have given you
6 money over the years?
7 A. Given me money?
8 Q. Money, cash.
9 A. Gardner may have. Probably did.
01:52 10 Q. Let's talk about --
11 A. But I don't recall any others.
12 Q. Let's talk about Mr. Gardner.
13 A. All right.
14 Q. He's also a -- he was a divorce lawyer, wasn't he?
01:52 15 A. Mr. Gardner tries to do everything.
16 Q. So, if he said that he's a family lawyer, he -- that would 17 be --
18 A. I think that's what his practice is now.
19 Q. But not -- as far as you know, his practice is not
01:52 20 primarily in federal court?
21 A. No, not that I'm aware of.
22 Q. And when is the last time Mr. Gardner gave you money?
23 A. Before I took the federal bench, I'm sure.
24 Q. Okay. And do you recall how much?
01:52 25 A. Absolutely not.

01:52 1 Q. Now, when you were a state judge, did you ever report any
2 of these cash gifts on your Louisiana disclosure forms?
3 A. No. I don't think we actually received forms, but I don't
4 remember that.

01:53 5 Q. Okay.
6 A. Whether you received a form like the federal government,
7 where you have to fill it out, I don't believe they had
8 reporting forms at the time. I know what the statute says, but
9 I don't think it's like it is in federal court.

01:53 10 Q. Before you became a federal judge, you used -- as a state
11 judge, you used to send something called "curatorships" over to 12 the Creely-Amato firm, did you not?
13 A. And Gardner and all those, yeah.

01:53 14 Q. Just talking about Creely and Amato and their law firm
15 right now. You would occasionally, after sending them
16 curatorships -- and for the record, what is a -- how would you
17 describe a curatorship?
18 A. It's for an absent defendant. It could be in a variety of 19 situations. The most common two are executory process and then
01:53 20 interdiction.
21 Q. And after receiving curatorships, Mr. -- Messrs. Creely
22 and/or Amato and/or their law firm would give you money,
23 correct?
24 A. Occasionally.

01:54 25 Q. You mentioned before that you read the grand jury

01:54 1 transcript of Mr. Amato and were familiar with his allegations
2 about a fishing trip?

3 A. Right.

4 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Are you leaving the curatorship?

01:54 5 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You had an open-ended question about
7 whether he received money from these people after they were
8 appointed a curatorship.

9 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

01:54 10 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Do you intend to establish any
11 relationship between the receipt of money and the curatorship?

12 MR. FINDER: Not through this witness.

13 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay.

14 MR. FINDER: But if the Court has questions --

01:54 15 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I just didn't know whether to -- I
16 don't want to interrupt you --

17 MR. FINDER: That's all right.

18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- or your train of thought about it
19 but --

01:54 20 MR. FINDER: Okay. Well, let -- well, we'll -- so I
21 won't have it open-ended, let me ask the question.

22 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Go ahead.

23 BY MR. FINDER:

24 Q. During the time you were giving Creely and Amato and the 01:55 25 law firm curatorships and you were getting cash back, was that

01:55 1 cash that you received a kickback for the curatorship, in your
2 mind?
3 A. No, sir.
4 Q. Not in your mind?
01:55 5 A. Not in my mind.
6 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Let me ask a question. According --
7 and it's -- you have been afforded the grand jury testimony, we
8 have seen the grand jury testimony, everybody has seen the 9 grand jury testimony. But it would seem that there is 01:55 10 testimony before the grand jury that there was a return in the 11 exact same amount, minus expenses, of the curatorship that was 12 returned to you, according to one of the witnesses.
13 THE WITNESS: That's apparently what it says. I
14 agree.
01:55 15 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Is that true or not?
16 THE WITNESS: Not -- to the best of my knowledge, that
17 is not correct.
18 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You would not know whether you would
19 receive the same money after appointing someone a curator that
01:55 20 he would get, minus his expenses?
21 THE WITNESS: I don't recall that occurring.
22 You're ask -- again, we're back to 1994 and before. I know I
23 sent them curators --
24 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You know, you have immunity --
01:56 25 THE WITNESS: I know.

01:56 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- from all criminal prosecution --
2 THE WITNESS: I understand.
3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- except perjury.
4 THE WITNESS: I understand that.
01:56 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And your -- and, so, that would
6 be -- if it matched the expense -- the amount each time --
7 THE WITNESS: I don't --
8 JUDGE BENAVIDES: -- except for expenses, that would
9 be a coincidence?
01:56 10 THE WITNESS: I don't know if it matched each time.
11 That's all I can tell you, Judge. I don't know.
12 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I understand.
13 BY MR. FINDER:
14 Q. Didn't you start sending -- Judge Porteous, didn't you
01:56 15 start sending curatorships over to Mr. Creely when he demurred
16 to get -- give you more money?
17 A. I've read his testimony. I know that's what he says. I
18 just -- he "demurred."
19 Q. Maybe I'll use a different word instead of "demurred."
01:57 20 A. "Refused."
21 Q. Objected to or refused to give you more money, isn't that
22 when the curatorships started?
23 A. I don't know the date the curatorships started; so, I can't 24 tell you that.
01:57 25 Q. Do you recall --

01:57 1 A. I don't remember when I first started sending them.
2 Q. Do you recall calling Mr. Creely's secretary and saying,
3 "How much have you received in curatorships" before asking for
4 money?
01:57 5 A. I don't recall calling her. I'm not saying I've never
6 spoken with his secretary.
7 Q. Do you recall Mr. Creely refusing to pay you money before
8 the curatorships started?
9 A. He may have said I needed to get my finances under control,
01:57 10 yeah.
11 Q. And the curatorships, therefore, would be a source of 12 income for Mr. Creely -- to pass through Mr. Creely and his 13 firm to you, correct?
14 A. That's a speculation or opinion. I don't -- I don't know
01:57 15 what you want to call it.
16 Q. What is your recollection in May or June of 1999 of going
17 on a fishing trip with Mr. Amato? Do you recall going on a
18 fishing trip?
19 A. I know I went with Jake on a trip with Mitch Mullin.
01:58 20 Q. Actually, you went on a lot of fishing trips with Amato and
21 Creely, mainly Creely.
22 Have you heard of a place called Delacroix?
23 A. Oh, yeah, "Delacroix."
24 Q. "Delacroix." Excuse me for my mispronunciation.
01:58 25 That's property that he either owned or had a

58 1 lease on, correct?
2 A. Correct.
3 Q. And fishing would often take place there, correct?
4 A. Oh, yeah.
01:58 5 Q. And not just you but other elected officials would be
6 invited?
7 A. The judges, yes.
8 Q. And you went fishing there numerous times?
9 A. Over the years?
01:58 10 Q. Yes.
11 A. Yeah.
12 Q. You never were charged for any mode of --
13 A. No, sir.
14 Q. -- transportation, any refreshments, things of that nature?
01:58 15 A. No, sir.
16 Q. All right. So, getting back to the fishing trip with 17 Mr. Amato in May or June of 1999, which you -- which you
18 referenced, you brought up, Mr. Amato -- do you recall telling
19 Mr. Amato in a very emotional way that you had a wedding coming
01:59 20 up and you needed cash?
21 A. I did have a wedding coming up. You're asking me if I -- I
22 don't recall a conversation with Jake.
23 Q. Who was getting married?
24 A. Timmy.
01:59 25 In '99?

01:59 1 Q. Yes.
2 A. Timmy.
3 Q. Your son Timmy?
4 A. Right.
01:59 5 Q. And that's the bachelor party you also went to in
6 Las Vegas. We'll get --
7 A. That's correct.
8 Q. -- to in a moment. Correct?
9 A. Correct.
01:59 10 Q. Well, whether or not you recall asking Mr. Amato for money
11 during this fishing trip, do you recall getting an envelope
12 with $2,000 shortly thereafter?
13 A. Yeah. Something seems to suggest that there may have been
14 an envelope. I don't remember the size of an envelope, how I
01:59 15 got the envelope, or anything about it.
16 Q. Do you recall sending Rhonda Danos over to get the 17 envelope?
18 A. Rhonda has gone to Jake and Bob's office on numerous
19 occasions. I don't even know if she went in '99.
02:00 20 Q. Judge, I know 1999 was almost a decade ago; but if you
21 received an envelope from lawyers -- a sealed envelope that had 22 a couple thousand dollars cash in it, do you think you would 23 remember that?
24 A. That's what I'm saying. I don't know if it was a sealed
02:00 25 envelope, a bank envelope, or what.

01:00 1 Q. Okay. Let me --
2 JUDGE LAKE: Wait a second. Is it the nature of the
3 envelope you're disputing?
4 THE WITNESS: No. Money was received in envelope.
02:00 5 JUDGE LAKE: And had cash in it?
6 THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.
7 JUDGE LAKE: And it was from Creely and/or --
8 THE WITNESS: Amato.
9 JUDGE LAKE: -- Amato?
02:00 10 THE WITNESS: Yes.
11 JUDGE LAKE: And it was used to pay for your son's
12 wedding?
13 THE WITNESS: To help defray the cost, yeah.
14 JUDGE LAKE: And was used --
02:00 15 THE WITNESS: They loaned -- my impression was it was 16 a loan.
17 JUDGE LAKE: And would you dispute that the amount was 18 $2,000?
19 THE WITNESS: I don't have any basis to dispute it.
01:05 20 JUDGE LAKE: All right. Thank you.
21 BY MR. FINDER:
22 Q. Your impression was that it was a loan was what you just 23 said, correct?
24 A. Yes.
02:00 25 Q. Did you ever pay back the loan?

00:00 1 A. No, I didn't. I declared bankruptcy in 2001; and, of
2 course, I didn't list it.
3 Q. But it wasn't listed as paid --
4 A. No, it wasn't listed.
02:01 5 Q. So, did you ever pay back the loan --
6 A. No.
7 Q. -- was my question.
8 A. No.
9 Q. Then, it was income. Is that right?
02:01 10 A. You're saying it's income. If that's what the rules
11 provide --
12 Q. Sir, I don't say anything. I'm asking you a question.
13 If it's a loan and it's not paid back, you're a
14 federal judge, you know some law --
02:01 15 A. It's income.
16 Q. -- it's income, right?
17 A. All right.
18 Q. But it was never reported on your tax returns, was it?
19 A. No, it was not.
02:01 20 Q. It was never reported on the judicial disclosure form under 21 "Other Income," was it?
22 A. No.
23 Q. Let's talk about the bachelor party.
24 A. All right.
02:01 25 Q. In approximately May of 1999, your son Timmy was going to

01:01 1 get married that summer, correct?
2 A. Right.
3 Q. And Rhonda, I believe, even helped with the arrangements
4 for a party, for you, some of your lawyer and non-lawyer
02:01 5 friends, and Timmy to go to Las Vegas, correct?
6 I believe you stayed at New York-New York?
7 A. No. I believe we stayed at Caesars.
8 Q. Was it Caesars? Maybe it was just the ride at New York-New 9 York. There was a picture taken. Do you remember that?
02:02 10 A. Yeah, there was a -- some kind of amusement there.
11 Q. Now, lawyers paid for you to go, did they not? They gave 12 you money to go on that trip, did they not?
13 A. I believe the allegations are that there was a ticket that
14 Forstall had purchased at some point, that I used.
02:02 15 Q. Mr. Forstall is Chip Forstall, right?
16 A. Right.
17 Q. He gave you a ticket; and then he ended up not going,
18 correct?
19 A. Not for this trip. This was another trip.
02:02 20 Q. Okay. The other trip was to San Francisco, I believe; and 21 he didn't go?
22 A. None of us went.
23 Q. Okay. But you had the ticket?
24 A. Right.
02:02 25 Q. And you used that ticket, you're saying, to go to

02:02 1 Las Vegas?

2 A. I may have.

3 Q. Well, once you get to Las Vegas, you have to stay in a

4 room, right?

02:02 5 A. Right.

6 Q. You didn't pay for the room, did you?

7 A. It appears I did not.

8 Q. And do you know who paid for it?

9 A. It appears Mr. Creely paid for it.

02:02 10 Q. Mr. Creely, that's right.

11 Now, that was over a period of approximately four

12 days, as I recall, from the records?

13 A. Three or four.

14 Q. Three or four.

02:03 15 That exceeded $250 total for the room, correct?

16 A. Yeah.

17 Q. Did that ever appear on your judicial --

18 A. No, it did not.

19 Q. -- your form that you file with the administrative office?

02:03 20 A. No, it did not.

21 Q. It did not.

22 Although you considered that a gift, correct?

23 A. Yeah, it was a gift. I mean, Creely got there before we

24 all did. I know he checked me in.

02:03 25 Q. And it wasn't just for you. It was also for Timmy?

02:03 1 A. What?
2 Q. Timmy stayed for free?
3 A. Not because of Mr. Creely.
4 Q. Well, somebody paid for Timmy, right?
02:03 5 A. I went down and asked the casino to comp their room, and I
6 think they did.
7 Q. So, if -- so, it's your testimony here today it was not
8 Mr. Creely or one of your other friends that picked up the tab
9 for his room?
02:03 10 A. Not that I -- for Timmy's room?
11 Q. For Timmy.
12 A. No, sir, not that I'm aware of.
13 I'm trying to remember who was in that room.
14 Probably all my sons were in that room.
02:04 15 Q. And when you were in Las Vegas, you had to eat?
16 A. Yes.
17 Q. And you didn't just eat in the hotel you were staying at;
18 you ate in other places, too, correct?
19 A. We had one outside meal that I can recall.
02:04 20 Q. But you didn't pay for that meal, did you?
21 A. No, I did not.
22 Q. Who paid for it?
23 A. A variety -- I think Creely did and maybe some other people
24 picked up various portions.
02:04 25 Q. But the bottom line is that wasn't comped?

02:04 1 A. That was not comped.
2 Q. And when I say "comped," I'm talking about complimentary --
3 A. No.
4 Q. -- where a hotel --
02:04 5 A. No.
6 Q. -- would pick up the fee, correct?
7 A. No.
8 Q. And nothing from that trip to Las Vegas, for you and your 9 sons -- who was your other son, by the way, that went?
02:04 10 A. Michael.
11 Q. Michael.
12 Nothing that went to you or your two children, in 13 your immediate family, was ever reported under a judicial 14 disclosure form, correct?
02:05 15 A. No, sir.
16 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How old were the children at that
17 time?
18 MR. FINDER: I'm sorry?
19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: How old were the boys at that time?
02:05 20 THE WITNESS: Give me a second, Judge. '99?
21 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Oh, let me ask --
22 THE WITNESS: 28, 26, and 23.
23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Okay. They weren't dependents
24 living at home?
02:05 25 THE WITNESS: Oh, no, sir.

02:05 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right.
2 JUDGE LAKE: Did Mr. Creely or Mr. Amato or the other
3 attorneys reimburse the casino for any gambling losses you had,
4 Judge?
02:05 5 THE WITNESS: Absolutely not.
6 BY MR. FINDER:
7 Q. Let me jump ahead, then, in light of that question. On
8 Exhibit 48 -- I believe it's 48 -- yeah, Bates Number 997, 998,
9 the records from Caesar -- I believe that is from Caesars
02:06 10 Palace.
11 A. All right.
12 Q. May 20th, 1999, that's when you were in Las Vegas for the 13 bachelor party, correct?
14 A. I believe so.
02:06 15 Q. Okay. Well --
16 A. May -- I know we went '99. It's before the wedding.
17 That's the right date.
18 Q. I mean --
19 A. It's before the wedding.
02:06 20 Q. For the record, that's your name, correct?
21 A. Right.
22 Q. And that's the city where you live, correct?
23 A. Right.
24 Q. And were you also there in October of '99?
02:06 25 A. Certainly appears that I was.

07:06 1 Q. Okay. Well, let's talk about May.
2 A. All right.
3 Q. May 20th, 1999, looks like gambling losses of $1200,
4 correct?
02:06 5 MR. FINDER: And we're going to follow up with a
6 summary witness on this, but I wanted to jump ahead.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: I don't know if you got a response
8 to that last question.
9 MR. FINDER: I'm going to clarify it with the next
02:07 10 page.
11 BY MR. FINDER:
12 Q. In all fairness, since -- I should have asked you this 13 question, Judge. Forgive me.
14 A. All right.
02:07 15 Q. Have you ever seen this record before?
16 A. If it's one of the exhibits, I know you sent it to me.
17 Q. Yes. It's from Exhibit 48.
18 A. Okay. But I don't recall -- I didn't look at it. If you
19 sent it to me, I've got it.
02:07 20 Q. Okay. The very next page, Bates Number 998 --
21 A. All right.
22 Q. -- the same exhibit, 48 --
23 A. Fine.
24 Q. -- it shows from the period May 20 to May 22. And on the 02:07 25 prior page, we were talking about May 20. So, that's

02:07 1 consistent, correct?
2 A. All right. All right.
3 Q. "Win/loss," and it shows negative -- or 1,200 with a minus
4 sign, correct?
02:08 5 A. Yeah.
6 Q. Would that suggest to you that's a loss of $1200?
7 A. It appears to be.
8 Q. Okay.
9 A. Okay. Wait. Let me just see something.
02:08 10 Okay. All right.
11 Q. For the record, that's the number, "998"?
12 A. Yeah.
13 Q. Now, as you said, you were only in Las Vegas for about
14 three or four days, right?
02:08 15 A. Yeah.
16 Q. Okay. Let's look at your Fidelity Bank statement for 17 May 25th. Shows a deposit of $5,000?
18 A. Correct.
19 Q. Was that -- were those winnings?
02:08 20 A. They were.
21 Q. So, you won at some casino, even though it wasn't the one
22 we just looked at?
23 A. I was able to bring that much money home, but it was still 24 owed on credit cards. So, I -- when you say it was a winning,
02:08 25 I basically broke even when you added it all up.

UT:08 1 Q. So, let's get this straight. You've -- your amended
2 petition was filed -- or your bankruptcy, was filed in 2000.
3 About six months -- or nine months, perhaps, before that, you
4 were in Las Vegas, gambling, and you came back with $5,000
02:09 5 after you lost about 1200 at a different casino, correct?
6 A. I don't know if it's a different casino.
7 Q. It could have been the same one?
8 A. Could have been the same one.
9 Q. Well, but the records don't show winnings, do they?
02:09 10 A. You know -- well, when you're playing at a table and 11 winning, casinos do not traditionally keep track of that.
12 That trip, if you have those records, I think
13 would probably establish that the markers I signed on the very 14 first night there were paid off that very same day; but they 02:09 15 don't show the -- how the money was given out. They just don't 16 do it that way. That's between the casinos and how they
17 transact business. You're not given a 1099.
18 So, all I can tell you is I did win.
19 Q. So, it's your testimony that that money, the 5,000, was
02:10 20 from gaming; it wasn't from lawyers or friends?
21 A. Came from no one.
22 Q. Okay.
23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What was the difference? 3800,
24 roughly?
02:10 25 MR. FINDER: Yes, sir.

02:10 1 BY MR. FINDER:
2 Q. Judge, do you remember a case called "Liljeberg"?
3 A. I do.
4 Q. Very complex litigation, wasn't it?
02:10 5 A. I would say.
6 Q. As a matter of fact, before you got it, I think it went
7 through several district judges.
8 A. Oh, it went through a bunch of different judges.
9 Q. And, then, one day it ended up in your court; and you were
02:10 10 ultimately the trial judge, correct?
11 A. Right.
12 Q. That lawsuit, sir, was filed -- well, let's not guess.
13 Let me show you what's been marked as Exhibit 82.
14 Do you recognize this as the docket sheet for Liljeberg?
02:11 15 A. Exhibit 82.
16 Q. That's what I have up on the screen.
17 A. Yeah, that would be the docket sheet, which seems to 18 indicate it was filed in '93.
19 Q. What did I say?
02:11 20 A. May --
21 Q. I'm sorry. June 1, 1993. What did I say?
22 A. I don't know.
23 Q. I thought you --
24 A. No, no.
02:11 25 Q. -- said I misspoke.

02:11 1 Okay. Does this appear to be the docket sheet?
2 I'm happy to show it to you.
3 A. Yeah, it appears to be the docket sheet.
4 Q. All right. Let's look at the some of the lawyers on there.
02:11 5 We already talked about this gentleman, Joe -- Joseph Mole --
6 A. Right.
7 Q. -- correct?
8 A. Right.
9 Q. And Don Gardner?
02:11 10 A. Right.
11 Q. Now, Don Gardner, as you said, as far as you know, isn't a
12 federal court practitioner?
13 A. No, as far as I know.
14 Q. And this is a complex case?
02:11 15 A. Very complex.
16 Q. But he's your buddy and he's appearing for the plaintiff,
17 correct?
18 A. Correct.
19 Q. Let's look at some of the defense lawyers.
02:11 20 MR. WOODS: Appearing for the defense.
21 MR. FINDER: "Plaintiff, Lifemark."
22 MR. WOODS: Okay.
23 BY MR. FINDER:
24 Q. For the defendant in Liljeberg -- on -- this docket sheet
02:12 25 says "Defendant Liljeberg," correct?

02:12 1 A. Right.
2 Q. Jacob Amato?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. Who was -- unlike his partner Mr. Creely, who did MDL
02:12 5 cases, Mr. Amato typically didn't do this kind of case, did he?
6 A. I would think that's correct.
7 Q. You don't think I'm correct?
8 A. No. I would think that was correct.
9 Q. Oh, forgive me.
02:12 10 Lenny Levenson?
11 A. Correct.
12 Q. Also not typically trying these type of cases in federal
13 court, correct?
14 A. He -- maybe not federal court, but he did some fairly
02:12 15 complex litigation.
16 Q. Both of whom are your friends, correct?
17 A. Absolutely.
18 Q. And I believe, according to the docket sheet, the case was 19 originally filed June 1, 1993. That's what it says, right?
02:12 20 A. That's what it says.
21 Q. June 1, 1993.
22 A. All right.
23 Q. Now, let's jump ahead to September 19th, 1996. The case
24 has been around for two years, right?
02:13 25 A. Right.

02:13 1 Q. Motion by Party Liljeberg to bring in, among the following
2 attorneys, Jacob Amato and Lenny Levenson, correct?

3 A. Right.

4 Q. You're the judge at this point, right?

02:13 5 A. Right.

6 Q. And you allow them in?

7 A. Yeah.

8 Q. Okay. I skipped one.

9 Let's go back to April 4th, 1996. Lifemark

02:13 10 brings in Joe Mole --

11 A. All right.

12 Q. -- to be one of their lawyers, right?

13 A. Yeah, right.

14 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What was the name? Was that Mole?

02:13 15 MR. FINDER: M-O-L-E, Joe Mole, Joseph Mole.

16 BY MR. FINDER:

17 Q. Then, on September 12th -- and I think we covered this on

18 September 19th, but on September 12th it looks like St. Jude

19 Hospital brings in Lenny Levenson, correct?

02:14 20 A. Right.

21 Q. But St. Jude was affiliated with Liljeberg, right?

22 A. I believe that's correct.

23 Q. And that's why a week later, on September 19th, Levenson is

24 joined by Jake Amato, right?

02:14 25 A. Yeah.

02:14 1 Q. Okay. Both of whom I believe you said typically wouldn't
2 be in this kind of case.
3 A. I'm not saying Levenson wouldn't, but Amato typically would
4 not be in this kind of case. Not that he didn't have the 02:14 5 capacity, he just typically wouldn't be in this kind of case.
6 Q. Okay. Then October 2nd, 1996 --
7 A. All right.
8 Q. -- Plaintiff Lifemark files a motion to recuse you,
9 correct?
02:15 10 A. Right.
11 Q. And that is scheduled for a hearing, if I'm reading this 12 docket order right, on October 16th, 1996, correct?
13 A. Correct.
14 Q. All right. Frankly, I can't figure out what day you heard
02:15 15 the motion to recuse. Maybe it was by submission. But it
16 looks like on October 17th -- on -- I'm sorry. October 17th
17 the hearing was held.
18 You deny Lifemark's motion to recuse, correct?
19 A. Right.
02:15 20 Q. I'm sorry?
21 A. Yes.
22 Q. All right. After Lifemark loses -- well after -- on 23 March 11th, 1997, they bring in your other friend, Don Gardner,
24 right?
02:15 25 A. Correct.

02:15 1 Q. Who also, as I believe you testified before, typically
2 wouldn't be in this kind of case?
3 A. Absolutely.
4 Q. He's a divorce lawyer, right?
02:16 5 A. Right.
6 Q. Or family lawyer. I don't mean to disparage any area --
7 kind of practice.
8 A. Call him a divorce lawyer.
9 Q. Okay. I'm only saying what he calls himself.
02:16 10 A. I understand.
11 Q. And did you think it was unusual for lawyers that don't
12 typically practice in this kind of complex litigation to, all
13 of a sudden, appear before you?
14 A. Yeah, sure do.
02:16 15 Q. Did that concern you or trouble you?
16 A. No, only to the extent that somebody thought they needed to 17 bring somebody else in.
18 Q. Well, did you ever bring it to the attention of any party
19 that, "Hey, guys, here's -- here's Amato and Creely. They've 02:16 20 given me money in the past. I want you to know about that 21 because under the canons of ethics I'm supposed to avoid the 22 appearance of impropriety and tell you about these kind of 23 things and recuse myself if the parties have an objection"?
24 A. I didn't do that.
02:16 25 Q. So, looks like Mr. Mole, on behalf of Lifemark, brings in

17 1 Don Gardner to kind of even the playing field, so to speak,
2 correct?
3 A. That's --
4 Q. For whatever reason he had, he brought in Mr. Gardner,
02:17 5 right?
6 A. Correct.
7 Q. Because he's already lost the recusal motion, right?
8 A. I don't know if that's why, but he -- he brought him in.
9 Q. Well, it followed the recusal?
02:17 10 A. It followed the recusal.
11 Q. Now, we have a non-jury trial, a bench trial, correct?
12 A. Yeah.
13 Q. And that starts June 16th, 1997?
14 A. Right.
02:17 15 Q. And that's some years after this lawsuit has been filed,
16 correct?
17 A. Yeah.
18 Q. Moving ahead to April 26th -- tried June 16th, and it looks
19 like the trial went, according to -- if I'm reading this right,
02:17 20 Smoothman --
21 A. It ran on for a period of time.
22 Q. At least until July 23rd, 1997, correct, because it says,
23 "matter taken under submission" --
24 A. Yes. Yes.
02:18 25 Q. -- 1997. And judgment was not rendered until April 26,

01:18 1 2000, if I'm reading this right --
2 A. You're reading correctly.
3 Q. -- when you had your findings of fact, conclusions of law?
4 A. Right.
02:18 5 Q. Not to beat a dead horse, Judge Porteous, but you've told
6 this panel that Amato and Creely have given you money, although
7 you can't remember specifics, and you think that Gardner has
8 given you money, but that was not disclosed to any of the other
9 lawyers in this case, correct?
02:18 10 A. That was not.
11 Q. Lenny Levenson -- I'm sorry.
12 Don Gardner was -- you stood up at his wedding,
13 correct?
14 A. I went to his wedding. I don't know if I was in it; but,
02:19 15 yeah, I went to his wedding.
16 Q. And you're the godfather of his daughter -- one of his
17 daughters, right?
18 A. Uh-huh.
19 Q. And, Judge Porteous, as we just looked on the docket sheet,
02:19 20 Liljeberg was pending in 19 -- in May, June, 1999 --
21 A. It was.
22 Q. -- when you went to Vegas courtesy of Creely and others and
23 when you got an envelope, whether it's a banker's envelope or 24 manila, some kind of envelope from the Creely-Amato law firm,
02:19 25 right?

01:19 1 A. Yes, sir, it was pending.
2 Q. That was during the pendency of that lawsuit?
3 A. Right.
4 Q. You didn't tell anybody about that, did you?
02:20 5 A. I did not.
6 MR. FINDER: May I have a moment to confer with my
7 co-counsel?
8 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sure.
9 (Sotto voce discussion between counsel)
02:20 10 MR. FINDER: Judge, may we -- Judges -- excuse me --
11 may we have a ten minute break?
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
13 MR. FINDER: Thank you.
14 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Sure. Ten minutes?
02:20 15 THE WITNESS: I -- at 2:30? I mean --
16 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes, till 2:30.
17 THE WITNESS: Okay.
18 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Thank you.
19 (Recess taken from 2:20 p.m. to 2:35 p.m.)
02:35 20 MR. WOODS: We're excusing Claude Lightfoot from our 21 witness list, but Judge Porteous may want to call him; so, he's 22 going to be on call for --
23 MR. WINSBERG: We'll be available if there's any need.
24 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right.
02:36 25 MR. WOODS: And we are also excusing Don Gardner.

02:36 1 JUDGE LAKE: I want to ask -- may I ask Judge Porteous
2 a question about Mr. Gardner?

3 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor. I think Mr. Finder was
4 going to finish up; and then we were going to allow him to 02:36 5 either testify or for you-all to ask questions, however -- what
6 procedure do you want to follow?

7 JUDGE LAKE: Let me just ask him a question.

8 Judge Porteous, during the Liljeberg case, while
9 you were assigned to the case, did Mr. Gardner give you any 02:36 10 money or give you any consideration of any type, in the form of 11 expenses for trips or anything of that nature?

12 THE WITNESS: No, Judge, not to my recollection, he
13 did not. Now, the bachelor party, of course, being at the same
14 time, I'm not saying that when we were in Vegas he didn't buy a
02:36 15 round of drinks or something; but to the best of my knowledge,
16 no.

17 JUDGE LAKE: Okay. So, other than the bachelor party,
18 you don't recall Gardner giving you anything of value during
19 the pendency of the Liljeberg case?

02:37 20 THE WITNESS: No, I do not, Judge.

21 JUDGE LAKE: Thank you.

22 THE WITNESS: He and I have been friends for a long --

23 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And you're fixing to let Gardner
24 leave?

02:37 25 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor.

... 37 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: What do we have with respect to
2 Gardner's role, if any, in the bachelor party and the time
3 period for that?
4 MR. WOODS: Merely the fact that he attended,
02:37 5 your Honor. We have no testimony from Gardner that he gave him
6 money during that period of time.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: During the time that he was
8 associated with the Liljeberg case?
9 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor. Yes, your Honor.
02:37 10 MR. FINDER: All right. May I finish up now?
11 JUDGE LAKE: Yes.
12 BY MR. FINDER:
13 Q. Judge Porteous, I showed you Exhibit 80 when we started off
14 this morning --
02:38 15 A. You did.
16 Q. -- your oath. Do you feel you have given true faith and 17 allegiance to the United States since you've been a United
18 States District Judge?
19 A. Yes, because I've been fair and impartial in every
02:38 20 proceeding that comes before me.
21 MR. FINDER: No further questions of the witness.
22 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Are you going to ask some more
23 questions about the casino markers?
24 MR. FINDER: About what, your Honor?
02:38 25 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Are you going to ask more

01:38 1 questions about the casino markers?

2 MR. WOODS: We're going to have a witness testify
3 about those.

4 MR. FINDER: Not of this witness, but we are going to 02:38 5 ask more questions of other witnesses.

6 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Okay.
7 Judge Porteous, if you had all this to do over
8 again, would you have filed different financial disclosure
9 statements?

02:39 10 THE WITNESS: Likely, Judge. I mean, maybe now in 11 hindsight some of it was -- should have been included. The 12 debt was -- the failure to list the correct debt, that was 13 right after the bankruptcy. It was like the end of the world.
14 I mean, my wife was nervous, a wreck, upset. My finances were
02:39 15 all over the paper. Everybody in America knew my finances. It
16 was just inadvertence, not any intent to hide my finances.

17 Hell, they were part of the bankruptcy record.
18 They were all over the newspaper.

19 JUDGE BENAVIDES: All right. The letter from
02:39 20 Lightfoot to the creditors made specific reference to the 21 exclusion of the -- to exclude this bank with the $5,000 loan.
22 Why was there a specific reference to exclude them from those
23 unsecured creditors that you and Lightfoot were seeking a
24 workout agreement with?

02:40 25 THE WITNESS: Buddy Butler, as I said before, was --

02:40 1 is and was a friend of mine. To the extent possible, I wanted
2 to try and pay Buddy back all of his money.

3 JUDGE BENAVIDES: So, you don't, then, disagree
4 that -- that this bank was not put -- or reported in your
02:40 5 bankruptcy proceeding as an unsecured creditor, that that was
6 purposefully done?

7 It was done because you wanted to take care of
8 what you thought was an obligation to a good friend; but there
9 was a specific, conscious decision to exclude it from --
02:41 10 exclude them as -- from your list of unsecured creditors?

11 THE WITNESS: No, no, not from my ultimate list of 12 unsecured creditors. They were listed as -- when I filed the 13 bankruptcy. But in the potential attempt to avoid bankruptcy,
14 Claude Lightfoot attempted to work out payoffs with all of 02:41 15 these creditors where I would pay them X percentage, but I was 16 omitting Regions from that.

17 JUDGE BENAVIDES: You conscious -- it seems like there
18 was a conscious desire in the workout agreements not to include
19 the bank with the $5,000 loan to it.

02:41 20 THE WITNESS: That's correct.

21 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And then -- and, then, there was a
22 provision, with respect to payments made prior to the 23 bankruptcy filing, which would have been -- which would have 24 shown that -- well, it's kind of like they weren't there but 02:42 25 they -- did you actually pay them off?

1 Actually, they wound up not protected, right,
2 with the rest of the unsecured creditors?
3 THE WITNESS: Who is that, Judge?
4 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: The Regions Bank.
02:42 5 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Regions Bank.
6 THE WITNESS: They were always an unsecured creditor.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: And you're saying that every
8 application that you've had, everything that you had in the --
9 in the bankruptcy court listed the bank?
02:42 10 THE WITNESS: Oh, in the bankruptcy court?
11 Absolutely.
12 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: I guess what rings a bit hollow --
13 and maybe you can comment on this, because it's not quite a
14 question. But you say you thought -- were thinking you wanted
02:42 15 to treat your friend fairly. Well, you didn't write down the 16 Fleet Credit Card, and that got paid off so you could maintain
17 that while the bankruptcy was going on. And, then, you also 18 continued to pay off some of the gambling debts. But you could 19 have -- you could have excluded Fleet and paid that one on the 02:42 20 side, too, even though that wouldn't be standard bankruptcy.
21 THE WITNESS: Judge, I've read Mr. Lightfoot's grand
22 jury testimony; and I see that Fleet was paid off. I see that.
23 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: By your secretary.
24 THE WITNESS: Yeah, it appears it was paid by my
02:43 25 secretary. It was. That is a card -- it was my wife's card.

02:43 1 My understanding --

2 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Did you --

3 THE WITNESS: My understanding was all the cards were
4 torn up. I did not know she had kept that card active until 02:43 5 well after the fact. And that is something she should not have 6 done, but she did. And I've got no defense for her, but she
7 did.

8 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Who is that that shouldn't have done
9 that?

02:43 10 THE WITNESS: My wife.

11 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Not the secretary? It wasn't the
12 secretary that shouldn't have paid it?

13 THE WITNESS: No, I'm not talking about the payment.
14 I'm talking about the use of the card thereafter, Judge.

02:43 15 That is just something I regret her doing. As 16 you can tell, it had some casino charges on it, probably
17 several. I don't know when that card was ultimately ended.
18 But I thought she had torn up and cut up all the cards, but
19 that apparently did not happen.

02:44 20 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: So, she paid that with her
21 separate income?

22 THE WITNESS: I don't know how it got paid, Judge. It
23 probably came out of my checking -- most of the times checks
24 written on my checking account -- I know you-all find this
02:44 25 incredible but -- I may have some checks there that I signed,

02:44 1 but the -- my wife dealt with paying the bills. So, I just --
2 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: That's not what Rhonda Danos said.
3 THE WITNESS: My home bills, my wife -- all you had --
4 I'm sure they have the checks. You'll find that her name
02:44 5 appears on 90 percent of them. So, I don't know what Rhonda
6 Danos may say about that.
7 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Well, how would -- how would
8 Ms. Danos -- I'm just trying to understand. If your wife
9 normally took care of those type of bills, how would have Danos
02:44 10 been authorized or why she would -- why would she have paid
11 that bill?
12 THE WITNESS: I don't -- I didn't know that -- till I
13 just saw it, I didn't realize it happened. I don't know,
14 Judge. I can't give you an answer. I'm just being
02:45 15 straightforward with you. I can't tell you why. I don't know.
16 What I would like to do is make a statement in 17 response to that, but I'd rather wait till they complete their
18 case before I do that.
19 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: That's fine.
02:45 20 THE WITNESS: Okay?
21 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
22 MR. WOODS: Our next witness is Joseph Mole, and
23 Robert Creely and Amato are on their way. They were ten
24 minutes away, and they were called five minutes ago. So,
02:45 25 they -- those are our next three witness.

02:45 1 JUDGE BENAVIDES: Mole will be a short witness?
2 MR. WOODS: Joseph Mole will be a very short witness,
3 your Honor.
4 And I have offered -- based on Judge Porteous'
02:45 5 testimony, I have offered whether or not he wants to stipulate
6 to the grand jury testimony of Creely and Amato -- and I think
7 he wanted to consider that -- in lieu of -- in lieu of their
8 testimony.
9 JUDGE LAKE: Why don't you call Mr. Mole, then?
02:46 10 MR. WOODS: Yes, sir. He's just right here in the 11 hall. It will just take a moment.
12 Will you ask Mr. Mole in Room 204 to come in?
13 (Witness being summoned to the stand)
14 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Is Ms. Danos coming on as a
02:46 15 witness?
16 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor.
17 Mr. Mole, if you would, come up here, sir.
18 The witness is going to be seated here.
19 And that's his counsel, Pat Fanning, that is with
02:47 20 him, your Honor. He's seated back there.
21 JUDGE LAKE: Raise your right hand.
22 Do you solemnly swear that the testimony that you
23 shall give in this proceeding will be the truth, the whole
24 truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?
02:47 25 THE WITNESS: I so swear.

10:09 1 we'll take a ten-minute break. Then you can ask questions.
2 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Thank you.
3 JUDGE LAKE: Are you through -- are you through with 4 the witness, Judge Porteous? I thought you were.
10:09 5 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Well, I thought that's what -- I'm 6 finished with the witness.
7 JUDGE LAKE: Okay.
8 JUDGE PORTEOUS: May I ask a question?
9 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: Yes.
10:09 10 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I intended to call -- well, first, do
11 you want to get into the stipulations?
12 MR. WOODS: Sure.
13 Judge Porteous has agreed to stipulate to the 14 grand jury testimony of Leonard Levenson and Chip Forstall
10:10 15 rather than we calling them as witnesses. And I believe he's 16 agreed also to stipulate to the 302, or the FBI memorandum of 17 interview, of SJ Beaulieu.
18 JUDGE PORTEOUS: With attached correspondence.
19 MR. WOODS: And with attached correspondence. Rather 10:10 20 than us calling Beaulieu, the trustee.
21 JUDGE PORTEOUS: I was just trying to make inquiry --
22 I do have a couple of witnesses I would like to call, but I
23 don't know when to possibly tell these folks to be available.
24 MR. WOODS: Our plan is to put on Jerry Fink next to 10:10 25 get into similar records; and we hope to do that within, you

OT:32 1 And Judge Porteous has some objections he wants
2 to raise as to the grand jury testimony.
3 CHIEF JUDGE JONES: All right.
4 JUDGE LAKE: So, 1 through 96, you're offering?
01:33 5 MR. WOODS: Yes, your Honor.
6 JUDGE PORTEOUS: Only two objections in general. One
7 is to the admissibility of those grand jury transcripts.
8 People have come in and testified. Now, the ones that are 9 stipulated to, obviously they'll go in, Mr. Levenson --
01:33 10 MR. WOODS: Forstall.
11 JUDGE PORTEOUS: -- Forstall, and Mr. Beaulieu, which 12 is a 302. But the others, I would object to. They clearly are 13 hearsay, and they were not subject to cross-examination.
14 And on 91 through 96, which are the summaries, I
01:33 15 would like the underlying documentation, the forms and stuff,
16 made part of the record.
17 MR. WOODS: We have no objection to that. He's 18 speaking of the exhibits against the wall, which are on a 19 separate exhibit list that's been provided, called "Underlying 01:33 20 Documents." We have no objection to those being admitted into 21 evidence.
22 JUDGE LAKE: Where do you intend to keep -- to lodge
23 the universe of admitted documents for purposes of the record?
24 MR. WOODS: I presume it's going to have to be here,
01:33 25 in the Fifth Circuit somewhere, your Honor.

In The Senate of The United States
Sitting as a Court of Impeachment

In re:)
Impeachment of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.,)
United States District Judge for the) Eastern District of Louisiana)

JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S OBJECTION TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES' NOTICE OF INTENT TO INTRODUCE AT TRIAL HIS TESTIMONY BEFORE THE FIFTH CIRCUIT SPECIAL COMMITTEE

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, by and through counsel, and files this Objection to the House of Representatives' Notice of Intent to Introduce at Trial Judge Porteous's Testimony Before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee (the "Notice of Intent").

INTRODUCTION

This is the first time in United States history that an official has been impeached after testifying under a grant of immunity. Judge Porteous testified under a grant of statutory immunity before the Judicial Conference of the Fifth Circuit about matters related to this impeachment proceeding. In that very Fifth Circuit proceeding, Judge Porteous was assured by Judge Benavides, a member of the Special Committee hearing panel, that none of his testimony could be used against him in satisfaction of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution. See Exhibit 1 to Judge Porteous's Motion to Exclude Immunized Testimony (filed July 21, 2010) (hereinafter "Ex. 1") (Transcript of Judge Porteous's testimony before the Fifth Circuit). He also received confirmation of this guarantee from the Judicial Council's appointed special counsel, Larry Finder. See id. at 47. Despite these guarantees, the House now proposes to Judge

Porteous's own testimony, provided under immunity, against him as a basis for his removal from office. The House's proposed use of this immunized testimony is contrary to all basic concepts of due process, degrades the constitutional process and tarnishes the image of the United States Senate. It premises a constitutional process of removal on the violation of fundamental constitutional rights.

BACKGROUND

After eight years of investigations in which various judges and lawyers were investigated (including Judge Porteous), the Department of Justice ("DOJ") determined that it did not have evidence that would warrant bringing criminal charges against Judge Porteous. Instead, the DOJ filed a complaint with the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit. The Fifth Circuit Judicial Council (the "Fifth Circuit") convened a Special Investigatory Committee to review the DOJ's allegations against Judge Porteous. The Fifth Circuit subsequently appointed a three-judge panel to hold a hearing on Monday, October 29, 2007, chaired by Chief Judge Edith Jones. The hearing was held over the strenuous objections of Judge Porteous (representing himself at the time) who was deprived of the very rights that he and every other judge grant to all criminal defendants in a Federal court.

Judge Porteous was justifiably concerned about the manner in which the Fifth Circuit compelled his testimony with a grant of immunity under 18 U.S.C. §§ 6002 and 6003. See Ex. 1 at 32-34. Remarkably, Chief Judge Jones required Judge Porteous to testify before he had received the actual order granting him immunity and before he could even review the extent of the immunity granted. At the hearing, Ron Woods, appointed as co-counsel for the Fifth Circuit, admitted to Judge Jones that Judge Porteous did not receive the order before the hearing—despite the fact that the order had been signed three weeks before the hearing. Id. at 33; see also Exhibit 2 to Judge Porteous's Motion to Exclude Immunized Testimony (filed July 21, 2010) (hereinafter "Ex. 2") (October 5, 2007 Order granting Judge Porteous statutory immunity). Judge Porteous asked for a continuance so that he could review the order, correctly noting that witnesses are generally allowed to see immunity orders before testifying. See Ex. 1 at 34. Judge Jones, however, responded that "immunity is better than non immunity, sir. Continuance is denied. You may take the stand." Id. Indeed, this manner of compelling testimony was so unclear and unusual that another member of the panel, Judge Benavides, felt the need to clarify that Judge Porteous was granted immunity and would not be testifying but for that grant of immunity. See id. at 46. In response, Larry Finder, co-counsel for the Judicial Council, agreed and made clear that the grant of statutory immunity is co-extensive with Judge Porteous's Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. Id. at 47.

ARGUMENT

Judge Porteous testified in the Fifth Circuit proceeding only because he had received immunity to the full extent of his Fifth Amendment rights. Using his previously immunized testimony in this proceeding would violate Judge Porteous's fundamental rights under the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution, as well as the prior practices of the Senate. First, the Supreme Court has firmly established that the extent of statutory immunity is coextensive with the scope of the privilege against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment. Second, clear, unmistakable Supreme Court precedent establishes that the Fifth Amendment applies in civil proceedings such as this impeachment trial. Third, no written order by an appellate court judge can reduce the scope of Fifth Amendment protection below the floor set by the Constitution and the Supreme Court. Finally, the House of Representatives' reliance on the admission of statements by Judge Claiborne in a prior impeachment trial is unavailing; those admissions were not of immunized testimony.

I. Judge Porteous Only Testified Before the Fifth Circuit Because He Was Informed That His Immunity Extended to the Full Extent of the Fifth Amendment, Which Applies in Impeachment Proceedings.

The transcript of the Fifth Circuit proceedings clearly demonstrate that Judge Porteous was forced to testify after being informed of an immunity and compulsion order. He, Mr. Finder, and Judge Benavides all agreed that his testimony was compelled and entirely protected under the Fifth Amendment. See Ex. 1 at 46-47. This belief was premised upon the Supreme Court's declaration that it is only constitutional to compel testimony when the witness has been afforded all of the protections of the Fifth Amendment. As the Supreme Court held in Kastigar v. United States, 406 U.S. 441 (1972), statutory immunity "from use and derivative use is coextensive with the scope of the privilege against self-incrimination." Id. at 453.

The Senate has always structured impeachment proceedings on federal standards and constitutional protections apply to such proceedings. Indeed, federal courts and Chairman McCaskill agree that impeached officials enjoy the protections of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment in impeachment trials. As one federal court has stated, impeachment trials "must be conducted in keeping with the basic principles of due process that have been enunciated by the courts and ironically, by the Congress itself," and "[f]airness and due process must be the watchword whenever a branch of the United States government conducts a trial, whether it be in a criminal case, a civil case or a case of impeachment." Hastings v. United States, 802 F. Supp. 490, 492, 504 (D.D.C. 1992), vacated, 988 F.2d 1280 (1993). Senator McCaskill acknowledged that that principle governs this case, stating that the "guiding force of this matter has to be due process." See Rules and Administration Meeting of the Impeachment Trial Committee Against Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., April 13, 2010.¹ In the same hearing, Senator Hatch agreed that “we must proceed with the utmost seriousness and dedication to fairness.” See id. In order to maintain that dedication to fairness, the Senate must respect Judge Porteous’s fundamental constitutional rights, including his Fifth Amendment rights.

The Supreme Court has consistently held that respect for Fifth Amendment rights is appropriate and necessary not only in criminal cases but also in certain types of civil proceedings that share elements of criminal proceedings, such as proceedings that would deprive a person of things of value – such as his judicial office – because of acts he has allegedly taken. The Supreme Court has labeled such proceedings “criminal in nature” and has identified them as cases where the defendant stands to lose a property interest based on alleged misconduct. Thus, in Lees v. United States, 150 U.S. 476 (1893), the defendants faced $1,000 in civil penalties for violating an act of Congress that prohibited “importation and migration of foreigners and aliens” as contract laborers. Id. at 478. The Supreme Court stated that “[t]his, though an action civil in form, is unquestionably criminal in its nature, and in such a case a defendant cannot be compelled to be a witness against himself.” Id. at 480.

The Court in Lees noted that it had previously decided this principle in Boyd v. United States, 116 U.S. 616 (1886), overruled on other grounds, 387 U.S. 294 (1967). See Lees, 150 U.S. at 480-81. In Boyd, the Court held that “proceedings instituted for the purpose of declaring the forfeiture of a man’s property by reason of offenses committed by him, though they may be civil in form, are in their nature criminal.” Boyd, 116 U.S. at 634. The Boyd Court also held that since the proceeding was of a criminal nature, the proceeding implicated the defendants’ rights under both the Fourth and Fifth Amendments. Id. at 633.

http://www.senate.gov/general/impeachment_hearing_porteous_041310.htm

Almost a century after first holding that the Fifth Amendment applies in some civil proceedings, the Supreme Court reaffirmed this principle, quoting Boyd and holding that “the Fifth Amendment applies with equal force” in cases where “money liability is predicated upon a finding of the owner’s wrongful conduct[.]” United States v. United States Coin & Currency, 401 U.S. 715, 718 (1971). Finally, in 1980, the Supreme Court once again recognized that the Fifth Amendment is implicated in those types of civil cases where monetary penalties are involved. See United States v. Ward, 448 U.S. 242 (1980). In Ward, the Supreme Court expressly recognized that not just the Fifth Amendment, but the Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination itself, applies in some types of civil proceedings. See id. at 253-54 (stating that “[t]he question before us, then, is whether the penalty imposed in this case . . . is nevertheless so far criminal in its nature as to trigger the Self-Incrimination Clause of the Fifth Amendment”) (internal quotation omitted).

Just as impeachment trials have been analogized to criminal proceedings, these trials are clearly as substantial as the civil proceedings in which the Supreme Court has held that the Fifth Amendment applies. Judge Porteous is accused of misconduct, and if the Senate convicts, he will lose his most important property interests: his life tenured judgeship, salary, and pension.² If convicted, he will also face the stigma of history as one of a handful of federal judges impeached by the House and convicted by the Senate. This is a clear case in which “proceedings instituted for the purpose of declaring the forfeiture of a man’s property by reason of offenses committed by him, though they may be civil in form, are in their nature criminal.” Boyd, 116 U.S. at 634.

² The Supreme Court has previously held that a tenured professorship can constitute a property interest when determining whether a state college violated a professor’s procedural due process right by depriving him of his position without a hearing. See Perry v. Sindermann, 408 U.S. 593, 603 (1972).

The text of the Constitution itself makes many explicit and implicit references to the criminal nature of an impeachment proceeding. Most obviously, the exclusive grounds for impeachment are either crimes or framed in criminal terminology: “Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.” U.S. CONST. art. II, § 4. Similarly, Article III expressly excepts “cases of impeachment” from the requirement that the “Trial of all crimes . . . shall be by Jury,” an exception which would be unnecessary surplusage³ if impeachments were not otherwise within the scope of “Trial[s] of all Crimes.” U.S. CONST. art. III, § 2, cl. 3. Finally, the Senate impeachment clause of Article I, Section 3 frames impeachments as trials to occur before the Senate, which can result in a “conviction.” Indeed, the House’s own expert witness, Professor Akhil Amar, stated that “[i]mpeachment is a quasi-criminal affair, in which the Senate, sitting as a court, is asked to convict the defendant of high criminality or gross misbehavior[.]” Akhil R. Amar, A Symposium on the Impeachment of William Jefferson Clinton: Reflections on the Process, the Results, and the Future, 28 HOFSTRA L. REV. 291, 307 (1999).

Under Kastigar, the question is not whether impeachment proceedings are criminal cases. Rather, the question is whether impeachments are included in that class of proceedings sufficiently “criminal in nature” that the Fifth Amendment’s protections apply. In light of the relevant Supreme Court precedent, the constitutional text, and the scholarship of the House’s own expert witness, the answer to that question is an obvious yes.

Despite this clear authority demonstrating that the Fifth Amendment applies in Senate impeachment trials, the House has stated that there is no credible basis to argue that “the Senate should not consider Judge Porteous’s . . . immunized Fifth Circuit testimony.” See 111 Cong.

³ Supreme Court precedent establishes that no term in the Constitution should “be treated as mere surplusage, for ‘[i]t cannot be presumed that any clause in the Constitution is intended to be without effect.’” District of Columbia v. Heller, 128 S. Ct. 2783, 2826 (2008) (quoting Marbury v. Madison, 5 U.S. 137 (1803)).

Rec. S2358 (Apr. 15, 2010); see also Exhibit 3 to Judge Porteous's Motion to Exclude Immunized Testimony (filed July 21, 2010) (hereinafter "Ex. 3") (April 21, 2010 Letter from Alan Baron correcting the Senate Record). In making that argument, the House disregards Supreme Court case law, relevant constitutional text, and the scholarly analysis by its own expert, Professor Amar.⁴

II. Chief Judge Jones's Order Granting Immunity Cannot Reduce the Scope of Statutory Immunity Under Kastigar and other Supreme Court Case Law.

In the House's Notice of Intent, it emphasizes that Judge Porteous's grant of immunity was limited to protection against use in purely criminal proceedings. This logic is inherently flawed for two reasons. First, it assumes that Judge Jones had the authority to reduce the extent of statutory immunity below the level set by the Supreme Court. Taken together, the Supreme Court's decisions in Kastigar and the Boyd and Lees line of cases stand for the proposition that statutory immunity provides a right coextensive with the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination which applies in some types of civil proceedings. With due respect to Chief Judge Jones, she simply lacks the authority to compel a witness to testify against himself without granting the same degree of protection required by the Constitution and the Supreme Court.

Second, Judge Porteous was never given the opportunity to review the immunity order before he was compelled to testify. He testified under the assumption – articulated by Judge Benavides and Mr. Finder – that his grant of statutory immunity was coextensive with the privilege against self-incrimination, as mandated by Supreme Court precedent. This assumption was only rational, since he had no opportunity to review the immunity order. Under these circumstances, where Judge Porteous had no opportunity to appeal or otherwise challenge the order granting immunity and compelling his testimony, it would be fundamentally unfair to reduce the extent of his immunity to a level lower than the full constitutional standard espoused by the Supreme Court.

⁴ Incredibly, the House argues that the concern about self-incrimination should not apply to Judge Porteous, and his testimony may be used against him, because he is a "highly educated Federal judge." Id. This argument suggests that a person's education, intellect, achievement, and long service should be held against him and somehow diminish his Fifth Amendment rights. This appalling suggestion that class or education should determine the extent of a citizen's rights under the United States Constitution should shock the conscience of the Senate, as it should shock all Americans.

III. The Admission of Judge Claiborne's Prior Admissions in His Impeachment Trial is Irrelevant and Misleading.

In its Notice of Intent, the House relies heavily on a single prior case: the impeachment of Judge Claiborne. The House cites the admission of Judge Claiborne's prior statements in his impeachment trial as precedent supporting the admission of Judge Porteous's immunized testimony. However, Judge Claiborne's prior admission was not immunized testimony. There was no Fifth Amendment question regarding the admissibility of Judge Claiborne's prior testimony. In fact, Judge Claiborne voluntarily waived his right to avail himself of the protections of the right against self-incrimination when he testified at his own criminal trial. Judge Porteous has made no such waiver. Most tellingly, Judge Claiborne did not even oppose the admission of his prior testimony in the impeachment trial. Finally, Judge Claiborne had not one but two criminal trials where testimony was subject to all of the federal rules on discovery and admissibility – and adversarial examination. In this case, prosecutors determined that there was insufficient evidence to bring any criminal charges. Judge Porteous was then forced to testify before the Fifth Circuit under a grant of immunity; and the House now seeks to have that immunized testimony used against him in an impeachment trial.

The House's Notice of Intent compounds the false analogy between Judge Porteous's immunized testimony and Judge Claiborne's non-immunized statements by belaboring the utterly irrelevant point that a party's prior testimony can be admissible in a federal trial as a party opponent admission under Federal Rule of Evidence 801(d)(2). Anyone who argues that an exception to the hearsay rule in the Federal Rules of Evidence can somehow nullify the Bill of Rights has a bizarre view of the United States Constitution. Such arguments deserve no respect and require no further attention.

The admission of the immunized testimony of Judge Porteous would undermine the credibility of the impeachment process and create new precedent that would allow prosecutors to strip away constitutional protections in the future. Under the House's approach, judges who have never been charged with a crime could be forced to give evidence under a grant of immunity in an administrative setting and then face those statements as the basis for their removal before Congress. In the history of this country, no House manager has seen the need to demand such use of compelled testimony and the Senate should preserve this history by denying the instant motion.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate exclude from evidence all of Judge Porteous's immunized testimony before the Fifth Circuit Judicial Conference Special Investigatory Committee and exclude any testimony, documents, or other evidence derived from that immunized testimony.

JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE PRIOR TESTIMONY AND LIMIT THE PRESENTATION OF TESTIMONIAL EVIDENCE TO LIVE WITNESSES

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes Respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and respectfully requests that the Senate enter an order excluding all prior testimony (except for use solely to impeach the credibility of a testifying witness) and limiting the presentation of testimonial evidence during the evidentiary hearing to that provided by live witnesses. In support, Judge Porteous states as follows.

Introduction and Summary

As Judge Porteous has noted in other motions filed today, this case comes to the Senate without the benefit of a prior trial and adjudicated record – a common denominator among all other modern judicial impeachments. This case is further marred by the fact that the process leading to impeachment was rife with procedural and substantive denials of Judge Porteous's right to challenge witnesses and present a meaningful defense. Rather than fully filtering and testing allegations and witnesses through the adversarial process, Judge Porteous was repeatedly denied full and fair opportunities to meaningfully cross-examine the witnesses called to testify against him.

The right to confront and cross-examine one's accusers is fundamental to the American legal system. Indeed, highlighting "the value of cross-examination in exposing falsehood and bringing out the truth," the U.S. Supreme Court has stated that "[t]here are few subjects, perhaps, upon which this Court and other courts have been more nearly unanimous than in their ... belief that the right of confrontation and cross-examination is an essential and fundamental requirement for the kind of fair trial which is this country's constitutional goal." Pointer v. Texas, 380 U.S. 400, 404-05 (1965). To satisfy this constitutional goal, cross-examination must be "full, substantial and meaningful in view of the realities of the situation." United States v. Franklin, 235 F. Supp. 338, 341 (D.D.C. 1964).

Nevertheless, the House has obtained literally reams of witness testimony elicited in prior proceedings in which Judge Porteous did not have a full and fair opportunity for cross-examination. Those prior proceedings include:

- (1) the federal grand jury convened in Louisiana;
- (2) the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee hearings;
- (3) the House Impeachment Task Force depositions; and
- (4) the House Impeachment Task Force hearings.

Judge Porteous was completely excluded from both the federal grand jury proceedings and the House Task Force depositions – and thus afforded no opportunity to confront and cross-examine any of the witnesses called to testify. Though allowed to attend the Fifth Circuit and House hearings, his ability in those proceedings to examine witnesses was significantly limited.

In any judicial court, the testimony from each of these prior proceedings would be strictly barred. To provide due process, the Senate should strive to meet the same basic requirements of fairness and avoid having its adjudicatory process tainted with such evidence. The Senate should, therefore, exclude all prior witness testimony (with the exception of prior testimony used solely to impeach the credibility of a testifying witness) and limit the presentation of testimonial evidence to those live witnesses who appear before the Committee. Such a limitation – which is supported by prior precedent – serves the interests of justice and fairness by limiting the prejudice created by the prior proceedings’ defects, as well as enabling the Senate to judge for itself the veracity and credibility of the witnesses to be called against Judge Porteous.

Factual Background

Resolution of this Motion requires an understanding of the procedural history of this case – as well as the prejudice that Judge Porteous was subjected to along the way. That history can be summarized as follows.

For nearly nine years, the U.S. Department of Justice (the “Justice Department”), through the Public Integrity Section of its Criminal Division, conducted a criminal investigation of Judge Porteous. That investigation included extensive FBI witness interviews, grand jury subpoenas, and grand jury testimony. The Justice Department ultimately concluded its investigation by declining to pursue any criminal charges against Judge Porteous. While the “Wrinkled Robe” investigation produced a number of convictions, including of two Jefferson Parish judges, prosecutors concluded that the evidence did not support any charges against Judge Porteous. Despite this decision to not bring any charges, on May 18, 2007, the Department submitted a complaint to Edith H. Jones, Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit (“Chief Judge Jones”).

Chief Judge Jones appointed a Special Investigatory Committee (the “Special Committee”) to investigate the Justice Department’s allegations of misconduct. The Special Committee was comprised of Chief Judge Jones, Fifth Circuit Judge Fortunato Benavides, and District Judge Sim Lake. The Special Committee retained Ronald Woods, a former United States Attorney for the Southern District of Texas, as its investigator.

On May 24, 2007, the Special Committee notified Judge Porteous of the Justice Department's complaint and the appointment of the Special Committee. On June 11, 2007, Judge Porteous's lawyer, Mr. Kyle Schonekas, sent a letter to Chief Judge Jones requesting that she recuse herself from the Special Committee given her prior involvement in denying Judge Porteous's earlier disability motion. Chief Judge Jones refused to recuse. On July 2, 2007, Mr. Schonekas informed the Special Committee that he no longer represented Judge Porteous. Eight days later, the Special Committee, in response to Judge Porteous's request for additional time to obtain new counsel, sent Judge Porteous a letter stating that "the Committee recognizes you have the right to obtain substitute counsel," but agreed to give him only approximately one additional month to prepare for the hearing. Judge Porteous thereafter retained new counsel, Mr. Michael Ellis, who requested additional time to respond to the Justice Department's complaint. The Special Committee denied this request.

Later, due to factors unrelated to Judge Porteous, the Special Committee moved its hearing to late October. On October 16, 2007, Mr. Ellis notified the Special Committee that he was withdrawing as counsel for Judge Porteous. Due to this sudden lack of representation, Judge Porteous requested a continuance of the Special Committee hearing, which was set to begin on October 29, 2007. The Special Committee denied Judge Porteous's request and ordered him to appear in this adversarial proceeding – without counsel – on October 29, 2007. During the hearing, counsel for the Special Committee called a number of witnesses to testify, including Judge Porteous. He refused to testify voluntarily and the Special Committee obtained an order granting him statutory immunity and compelling him to testify. Complying with that order,

Judge Porteous testified before the Special Committee – again without the assistance of any counsel.¹

Following its hearing, the Special Committee issued a report to the Judicial Council of the Fifth Circuit. The Judicial Council reviewed the report and forwarded it to the Judicial Conference of the United States. The Judicial Conference thereafter transmitted a certificate to the Speaker of the House of Representatives stating that consideration of impeachment of Judge Porteous may be warranted.

On September 17, 2008, the House of Representatives passed a resolution (H.R. Res. 1448, which was subsequently renewed in 2009) directing the House Judiciary Committee to inquire into whether the House should impeach Judge Porteous. The House Judiciary Committee appointed a House Impeachment Task Force, consisting of 12 Committee Members, and engaged Alan I. Baron as Special Counsel to lead the House’s inquiry. The House Impeachment Task Force requested and received numerous records from the Justice Department and the Fifth Circuit, including grand jury testimony and documents, the Special Committee Report, and the transcript of Judge Porteous’s immunized testimony before the Special Committee. As part of their investigation, the House Impeachment Task Force staff also “interviewed over 70 individuals and took over 25 depositions.” (See H.R. Rpt. No. 111-427, at 7 (2010), Report of the House Judiciary Committee concerning the Impeachment of Judge Porteous (the “House Report”).) Judge Porteous was not afforded an opportunity to attend or participate in any of these interviews or depositions.²

¹ The impropriety of the House’s attempt to use Judge Porteous’s prior immunized testimony in this proceeding is the subject of a separate motion filed concurrently herewith.

² Indeed, Judge Porteous has not even received the names of everyone that the House Impeachment Task Force staff interviewed and/or deposed.

On November 6, 2009, the House Impeachment Task Force sent a letter to Judge Porteous's counsel advising of its intent to hold a set of hearings concerning the allegations against Judge Porteous. (See Letter from A. Schiff and B. Goodlatte to R. Westling dated November 6, 2009.) In that letter, the Task Force noted that these hearings "do not constitute a trial" and "the procedural rules that would govern a federal trial ... are entirely inapplicable to our hearings." (Id. at 2.) The Task Force further stated that, while Judge Porteous would be allowed to examine the witnesses that it decided to call, he would be allowed only "ten minutes of examination." (Id.)

In November and December 2009, the House Impeachment Task Force held a series of four hearings regarding Judge Porteous's alleged misconduct. Across all four hearings, only seven factual witnesses (as well as a bankruptcy judge and three law professors)³ were called to testify. Judge Porteous was given only a limited right to participate in these hearings. Indeed, during opening statements at the first hearing, Representative Adam Schiff, Chairman of the House Impeachment Task Force, stated that "counsel for Judge Porteous will be permitted to question any of the witnesses [called by the House to testify] that he so chooses for 10 minutes each." (Task Force Hearing Transcript, Ser. No. 111-43, at 5 (Nov. 17, 2009).) Representative Schiff characterized this limited grant of time as an "extraordinary prerogative," given the House's belief that its impeachment inquiry "is not a trial, but is more in the nature of a grand jury proceeding." (Id.) Finally, Representative Schiff admonished "Judge Porteous and his counsel that no objections or other interruptions in the testimony will be permitted.” (Id.) These hearing were conducted without regard to the rules of evidence, or of civil or criminal procedure.

³ The House Impeachment Task Force called to testify only experts who agreed with the basis for the proposed articles of impeachment. No expert witnesses were called who disagreed with the use of pre-federal conduct or the use of subjective questions of "embarrassment" as the basis for impeachment. Given the issues laid out in Judge Porteous's Motions to dismiss each of the four Articles (also filed concurrently herewith), it is astonishing that the House did not invite a single expert to advance these arguments for a balanced record before the vote of the House of Representatives.

Following these hearings, the House voted on, and approved, four articles of impeachment against Judge Porteous. (See H.R. Res. 1301.) The House appointed five of its members to serve as House Managers, who presented the articles to the Senate and are now serving as prosecutors in the Senate impeachment trial.

In connection with the trial, the House Managers have preliminarily designated either eighteen or nineteen witnesses to testify before the Senate. (See House Preliminary Witness Designation, filed June 8, 2010, and House Supplemental Filing thereto, filed June 30, 2010.) The House Managers have also indicated that they intend to introduce significant portions of the prior testimony elicited from these (and other) individuals.

Argument

The right of an accused to confront and cross-examine witnesses called against him is a core constitutional right. Indeed, the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution specifically guarantees that, “[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right ... to be confronted with the witnesses against him....” U.S. CONST. amend. VI. While the parties may debate whether impeachment proceedings constitute “criminal prosecutions,” the House has always crafted impeachment cases with reference to the criminal code and the Senate has always strived to afford the basic rights found in federal courts. For an accused judge, an impeachment proceeding is a prosecution by a professional staff who seek to strip him of a constitutional office guaranteed by Article III of the Constitution to him for life. In such circumstances, the constitutional rights of confrontation and cross-examination must attach, and must be observed.⁴ Moreover, the adversarial process is critical in effectively testing evidence and allegations, and in producing a reliable record for the adjudication of claims.

Construing these rights, the Supreme Court has held that the “main and essential purpose of confrontation is to secure ... the opportunity of cross-examination.” Davis v. Alaska, 415 U.S. 308, 315 (1974) (citations omitted). Cross-examination is critically important to the search for truth, as “[c]ross-examination is the principal means by which the believability of a witness and the truth of his testimony are tested.” Id. at 316. Indeed, cross-examination is necessary to test witnesses’ perceptions and memory, reveal biases, prejudices, and motives, and, discredit and/or inquire into witnesses’ character for truthfulness. Id. None of this is likely to occur if the only party to examine a witness is the party who elected to call that witness to testify. Thus, the Sixth Amendment limits the admissibility of prior testimonial statements to only those where (1) the witness is unavailable at the time of the later proceeding and (2) the individual against whom that testimony will be used had a full and fair opportunity to cross-examine the witness under oath when the earlier testimony was elicited. Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 51-52, 59 (2004) (extending the Confrontation Clause to include out-of-court testimonial statements, such as prior testimony at a preliminary hearing, before a grand jury, and at an earlier trial, as well as during police interrogations). Absent both of these criteria, prior testimony must be excluded.

The House Managers have indicated that they intend to attempt to introduce into evidence in the Senate impeachment trial wide swathes of testimony obtained in prior proceedings. (See, e.g., Letter from A. Baron to R. Westling dated March 23, 2010, attaching a list of more than 400 anticipated trial exhibits, including transcripts of grand jury testimony, Fifth Circuit testimony, and House Impeachment Task Force deposition testimony.) Indeed, in response to a question from Senate Legal Counsel, on April 13, 2010, the House Managers sent a letter to the Committee Chairman and Vice Chairman (Senators McCaskill and Hatch, respectively), stating that it “[i]s the position of the House that all the testimonial or documentary evidence that was admitted into evidence in the Fifth Circuit proceeding is admissible in the Senate trial.” The House Managers further stated that they may file a pre-trial motion seeking to “admit as substantive evidence specific prior sworn testimony at the Fifth Circuit Special Investigative Committee Hearing ... and at the House Impeachment Task Force Hearings....” (Id.) Importantly, and in apparent recognition of the constitutional confrontation problem that it would trigger, the House Managers also stated that, “[a]t this point in time the House does not anticipate seeking to admit testimony or witness statements that have not been subject to cross-examination.” (Id.)

The Senate addressed this issue during its most recent impeachment trial, that of Judge Walter Nixon. (See generally S. Hrg. 101-247, pt. 1 (1989).) In that proceeding, Nixon (who had previously been tried and criminally convicted of making false statements to a federal grand jury) moved to exclude all prior testimony, including from his criminal trial and from the House’s impeachment proceedings. (Id. at 323.) The House cross-moved to accept into evidence all prior testimony and exhibits in their entirety. (Id.) The then-presiding Senate Impeachment Trial Committee addressed this issue in its first pretrial order and ruled that “all testimony and exhibits in Judge Nixon’s criminal proceeding ... will be admitted, as well as all testimony and exhibits admitted in the House impeachment proceeding.” (Id.) Critically, the Committee expressly premised this ruling on its conclusion that “[t]he prior testimony has been the subject of adverse cross-examination, and its use will not prejudice any party.”⁵ (Id.) As explained in greater detail below, these two safeguards – which formed the foundation for the Committee’s ruling in the Nixon impeachment – simply are not present in this case.

None of the prior testimony relevant to this case (whether before the grand jury, the Fifth Circuit, or the House Impeachment Task Force) was subject to sufficiently full and fair cross-examination to permit its introduction as substantive evidence in this proceeding. Thus, the Senate should exclude all prior testimony from each of the following four proceedings.

1. Grand Jury Testimony

As with all such proceedings, the grand jury tasked with investigating the allegations of Judge Porteous’s criminal misconduct operated in secret. Though that grand jury was quite active, and heard the testimony of numerous witnesses, Judge Porteous had no opportunity to participate in that proceeding. He was not present for the examination of any witnesses and he had no opportunity to either confront or cross-examine the individuals called to testify. Accordingly, the Senate should refuse to admit into substantive evidence in this case all witness testimony given in front of the grand jury investigating Judge Porteous. This would specifically

⁵ This ruling accords with an earlier decision of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee in connection with the impeachment trial of Judge Alcee Hastings, which stated that:

[T]he Committee does not believe it appropriate to admit prior testimony into evidence on key points where credibility, context or interpretation are in dispute – particularly where the opposing party has not had an opportunity for cross-examination.

(S. Hrg. 101-194, pt. 2A, at 61-62 (1989); emphasis added.)

include the more than 10 transcripts of grand jury testimony⁶ that the House included on its exhibit list. Such evidence is routinely barred in federal and state courts. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(c), 802, and 804(b)(1); 5 Christopher B. Mueller & Laird C. Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence § 8:120 (3d ed. 2010) (noting that the government cannot invoke the former testimony hearsay exception “to offer prior grand jury testimony against defendants, because defendants have no right to attend grand jury proceedings or question witnesses”); United States v. Darwich, 337 F.3d 645, 658 (6th Cir. 2003) (excluding grand jury testimony because the defendant had no opportunity to examine the witness).

Excluding this testimony will not prejudice the House. Indeed, the House has had access to the testimony for quite some time, and has used it to build its case against Judge Porteous. The only consequence of excluding the prior grand jury testimony is that the House will be required to present its case, through live witnesses, to the Senate. Those witnesses will then be subject to true adversarial questioning, a standard requirement for admissibility under the federal rules.

2. Fifth Circuit Testimony

As discussed above, Judge Porteous was forced to proceed without counsel before the Fifth Circuit. This severely prejudiced his ability to present his case and irreparably impaired his opportunity to conduct full and fair cross-examination of the witnesses called to testify against him. Absent a meaningful opportunity for cross-examination, the testimony before the Fifth Circuit lacks key indicia of reliability and trustworthiness, and so should be excluded from this proceeding.

⁶ Such testimony includes that of Robert Creely, Jacob Amato, Leonard Levenson, Don Gardner, Warren Forstall, Rhonda Danos, Joseph Mole, Ronald Bodenheimer, and Claude Lightfoot, all of whom (with the exception of Forstall) have been preliminarily designated as witnesses to be called by the House.

The House Managers have previously argued that, because Judge Porteous was able to call witnesses on his own behalf and cross-examine the government's witnesses before the Fifth Circuit, he suffered no prejudice as a result of representing himself. Judge Porteous, however, was specifically denied the ability to examine the Justice Department lawyers (Messrs. Ainsworth and Petalas) who oversaw the government's investigation of him, as those lawyers, as well as Chief Judge Jones, were intermittently labeled as the "complainants" – thereby cutting off Judge Porteous's ability to challenge the method or veracity of these key witnesses. (See Fifth Circuit hearing transcript at 16-19.) Moreover, the House's bare assertion that Judge Porteous was not prejudiced is not sufficient to address this constitutional defect. Indeed, according to the Supreme Court, denying an accused his right to effective cross-examination is "constitutional error of the first magnitude and no amount of showing of want of prejudice" can cure it. Davis, 415 U.S. at 318 (quoting Brookhart v. Janis, 384 U.S. 1, 3 (1966)). The opportunity for cross-examination that Judge Porteous was afforded in the Fifth Circuit was merely an "empty formality," and a far cry from a "full, substantial and meaningful [cross examination] in view of the realities of [his] situation." See Franklin, 235 F. Supp. at 341.

Here again, excluding the testimony previously elicited before the Fifth Circuit will not prejudice the House. In fact, of the nine individuals who testified before the Fifth Circuit and for whom the House has included Fifth Circuit transcripts on its exhibit list, eight are currently listed on the House's preliminary witness list. If the House truly believes that these individuals' testimony before the Fifth Circuit is relevant to the Senate impeachment trial, then it should call them to testify, inquire as to the relevant points, and permit them to be fully cross-examined.

3. House Impeachment Task Force Deposition Testimony

During its investigation, which proceeded in the nature of a grand jury investigation, the House Impeachment Task Force “interviewed over 70 individuals and took over 25 depositions.” (House Report at 7.) These interviews and depositions were scheduled unilaterally – and attended exclusively – by House Impeachment Task Force staff and counsel. Neither Judge Porteous nor his counsel were permitted to attend any of these interviews or depositions. Accordingly, none of the resulting testimonial statements was subjected to any cross-examination. This materially reduced the quality of the testimony, which was clearly affected by the House Impeachment Task Force staff’s efforts to steer witnesses away from testimony that conflicted with their assertions of unlawful conduct and often consisted of asking witnesses simply to acknowledge factual assertions needed to prop up the impeachment allegations. If opposing counsel had been present, witnesses would have been allowed to finish their thoughts and explain, for example, why they rejected the notion that Judge Porteous accepted anything of value as a bribe or kickback.

Notwithstanding all of this, the House has included 28 transcripts from House Impeachment Task Force depositions on its exhibit list. All of this testimony (like the prior grand jury testimony, to which it is very much akin) should be excluded.

4. House Impeachment Task Force Hearing Testimony

Finally, the House has indicated that it may seek to introduce into evidence in the Senate the testimony that it elicited at the four House Impeachment Task Force hearings. As with the above testimony, these statements should be excluded because the witnesses were not subject to complete, substantial, and meaningful cross-examination. Indeed, the House Members and their staff and counsel were afforded significantly more time to question these witnesses than was

Judge Porteous, who was limited to only 10 minutes of cross-examination. Moreover, due to a conflict of interest with prior counsel, Judge Porteous was left without the assistance of his lead trial counsel during the testimony of the Marcottes, who are central to the allegations in Article II.⁷

Chairman Schiff was correct when he stated that the House was acting as a grand jury. (See Task Force Hearing Transcript, Ser. No. 111-43, at 5 (Nov. 17, 2009) (Rep. Schiff) (stressing that the House proceeding did not require full cross-examination because those proceedings were “not a trial, but ... [instead] more in the nature of a grand jury proceeding.”); see also Jonathan Turley, Congress As Grand Jury: The Role of the House of Representatives in the Impeachment of an American President, 67 GEO. WASH. L. REV. 735 (1999).) This is precisely why such testimony, as with grand jury testimony, should not be introduced at trial when the actual witnesses are available to be called before the Senate. The House should not seek to shelter its witnesses from appropriate cross-examination by attempting to bootstrap into this proceeding testimony that it elicited within the confines of the House, under tightly controlled opportunities for cross-examination.

⁷ Former lead counsel Richard Westling represented the Marcottes in related proceedings in Louisiana and continues to represent the Marcottes today. When the conflict was raised before the House, Mr. Westling wrote to Louis and Lori Marcotte explaining the possible conflict issues and seeking a waiver of any possible conflict. They declined to consent to such a waiver. Mr. Westling sought to have another lawyer, Rémy Voisin Starns, appear in the House proceedings when Louis Marcotte was called as a witness. When Mr. Starns was not able to be present, Mr. Westling elected to avoid any immediate conflict by leaving the proceedings. Judge Porteous continued without his lead trial attorney during that testimony. Soon after, Professor Jonathan Turley was brought into the case as co-lead counsel, who was later joined by co-lead counsel Mr. Daniel Schwartz and the law firm of Bryan Cave LLP. Following an additional ethical review, it was confirmed that Mr. Westling had a conflict of interest and would have to withdraw from the case in full or in part. The Senate ultimately disqualified Mr. Westling from further participation in these proceedings.

Conclusion

WHEREFORE, for the all these reasons, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate issue an order excluding the use of all prior testimony (except for use solely to impeach the credibility of a testifying witness) and limiting the presentation of testimonial evidence during the evidentiary hearing to live witness testimony.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES' OPPOSITION TO JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE PRIOR TESTIMONY AND LIMIT THE PRESENTATION OF TESTIMONIAL EVIDENCE TO LIVE WITNESSES

The House of Representatives (the "House"), through its Managers and counsel, respectfully opposes Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony and Limit the Presentation of Testimonial Evidence to Live Witnesses (the "Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony"). On July 21, 2010, the House filed a Motion to Admit Transcripts and Records from Prior Judicial and Congressional Proceedings (the "Motion to Admit"), which argues many of the points that the House would otherwise raise in opposition to the instant Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony. In an effort to avoid duplication of argument, the House therefore incorporates by reference its Motion to Admit as part of its Opposition to this Motion. In further support of its Opposition, the House respectfully submits:

OVERVIEW

Judge Porteous contends that any and all prior sworn testimony of witnesses – no matter the context in which the testimony was given and regardless of whether that testimony was subject to cross examination – should be excluded as evidence at trial before the Senate. His arguments turn nearly entirely on contentions surrounding his opportunity to cross-examine the various witnesses in the proceedings.

ARGUMENT

The House submits that the testimony which the House seeks to admit was subject to cross examination. Moreover, the Senate's need for access to all of the relevant facts should be the dominant consideration. To the extent that any Senator has concern about the reliability of such evidence, each Senator is capable of evaluating the weight to be assigned to the testimony.

The House seeks to admit the complete record evidence of the Fifth Circuit proceedings. This was a proceeding where Judge Porteous represented himself after having parted ways with two prior counsel. Judge Porteous cross-examined witnesses, presented his defense, consented to the admission of evidence, including Grand Jury Testimony of certain individuals, and introduced evidence on his own behalf. There is no valid reason to exclude the sworn testimony developed in those proceedings.

The same is also true of the proceedings in the House. The testimony was given under oath, Judge Porteous's counsel was afforded the opportunity to cross examine the witnesses and he availed himself of the opportunity. When additional time was requested by counsel, it was granted without any qualification.

The House submits that the approach taken in the Claiborne and Walter Nixon impeachments should serve as a model for the current proceedings. In connection with those Impeachments, the complete records of the prior proceedings were made part of the Impeachment records. These included, in Nixon, the records of the House proceedings.

It is important to recall that these are published records, which Senators should have available for their consideration. The proper weight to be afforded to the evidence is well within the province of the Senators. A Senate fully apprised of the relevant facts in making its ultimate judgment should be the paramount consideration.

WHEREFORE, for all of the foregoing reasons, as well as the reasons incorporated by reference from the House Motion to Admit Prior Records, the Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony filed by Judge Porteous should be denied.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES' MOTION TO ADMIT TRANSCRIPTS AND RECORDS FROM PRIOR JUDICIAL AND CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS

Pursuant to the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee's June 21, 2010 Scheduling Order, the House of Representatives (the "House"), through its Managers and counsel, respectfully moves that the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee admit into evidence transcripts and records from (i) the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council Special Committee hearing (the "Fifth Circuit Hearing"), held on October 29-30, 2007, and (ii) the House of Representatives Impeachment Task Force hearings (the "Task Force Hearings") held on November 17-18 (Creely, Amato and Mole), December 8 (Lightfoot and Horner), and December 10, 2009 (Louis Marcotte and Lori Marcotte), which related to the possible impeachment of Judge Porteous. In both sets of proceedings, Judge Porteous, personally and through counsel, was permitted the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses, and both sets of proceedings presented the same factual issues that are the bases for the Articles of Impeachment. Admission of these materials – including materials that are in the public record – will provide the Senate a complete record of all sworn testimony, and will permit the focusing of issues at trial. In support of this motion, the House respectfully submits:

I. THE FIFTH CIRCUIT SPECIAL COMMITTEE HEARING AND THE PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE HOUSE IMPEACHMENT TASK FORCE

A. FIFTH CIRCUIT HEARING OF OCTOBER 29-30, 2007

On October 29-30, 2007, the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee held a disciplinary hearing pursuant to a complaint and notice to Judge Porteous. The complaint set forth allegations that substantially overlap the allegations in Impeachment Articles I and III involving, respectively, (i) Judge Porteous's relationship with attorneys Creely and Amato and his handling of the Liljeberg case, and (ii) his handling of his 2001 bankruptcy. Judge Porteous attended that hearing, heard the witnesses, had the same motive to cross-examine them and elucidate facts as he has in the present proceeding, in fact cross-examined the witnesses, and called his own witnesses.¹ In addition, Judge Porteous agreed to the admission of numerous documentary exhibits – including evidence that has been marked as exhibits by the House for the Impeachment trial – and agreed to stipulate to the admission of grand jury testimony of certain individuals who were not called as witnesses. For example, Judge Porteous participated in the following colloquy concerning the admissibility of certain witness transcripts:

Judge Porteous: I intended to call - well, first, do you want to get into the stipulations?

Mr. Woods: Sure.

Judge Porteous has agreed to stipulate to the grand jury testimony of Leonard Levenson and Chip Forstall rather than we calling them as witnesses. And I believe he's agreed also to stipulate to the 302, or the FBI memorandum of interview, of SJ Beaulieu.

Judge Porteous: With attached correspondence.

Mr. Woods: And with attached correspondence. Rather than us calling Beaulieu, the trustee.²

Similarly, the following discussion occurred relative to the admission of exhibits 1 through 96:

Mr. Woods: ... And just for purposes of the record, we would like everything on the exhibit list to be offered and admitted into evidence.

And Judge Porteous has some objections he wants to raise as to the grand jury testimony.

Chief Judge Jones: All right.

Judge Lake: So, 1 through 96, you're offering?

Mr. Woods: Yes, your Honor.

Judge Porteous: Only two objections in general. One is to the admissibility of those grand jury transcripts. People have come in and testified. Now, the ones that are stipulated to, obviously they'll go in, Mr. Levenson -

Mr. Woods: Forstall.

Judge Porteous: - Forstall, and Mr. Beaulieu, which is a 302. But the others, I would object to.³

After a further colloquy that established that Judge Porteous had been provided the grand jury testimony that was included on the exhibit list in advance of the Hearing (including the testimony of Mr. Creely, Mr. Amato and Ms. Danos), Judge Jones admitted that grand jury testimony, though she indicated, in substance, that the Special Committee would not be relying on it.⁴ With that understanding, all the exhibits were admitted.

B. THE HOUSE IMPEACHMENT TASK FORCE HEARINGS
OF NOVEMBER AND DECEMBER 2009

The House Committee on the Judiciary Impeachment Task Force, chaired by House Manager Schiff, held four hearings in November and December of 2009. At the first hearing, on November 17-18, Mr. Amato, Mr. Creely and Mr. Mole testified and were subject to cross-examination by Judge Porteous's counsel. In advance of that hearing, copies of Mr. Creely's and Mr. Amato's Task Force deposition testimony were provided to counsel.⁵ On December 8, Judge Porteous's bankruptcy attorney, Mr. Lightfoot, testified (along with other witnesses, including FBI Special Agent Horner), and the Task Force provided counsel Mr. Lightfoot's deposition. Judge Porteous had previously called Mr. Lightfoot as his own witness before the Fifth Circuit, and Judge Porteous's attorney was present for that hearing and had the opportunity to cross-examine Mr. Lightfoot, but declined to ask questions. Finally, on December 10, 2010, Louis Marcotte and Lori Marcotte testified. Judge Porteous was present, and his attorney was notified in advance of that hearing that he would be given the opportunity to examine the witnesses, but no attorney for Judge Porteous appeared at that hearing. As Mr. Schiff stated on the record at the outset of that hearing: "Judge Porteous's counsel was again afforded the opportunity to question the witnesses but has opted not to question the ⁵Mr. Mole had not been deposed.

witnesses today. Judge Porteous is present with us this morning.”⁶ Throughout the Hearings, though the House operated on a “five minute rule” for Members, Mr. Westling was initially provided ten minutes to cross-examine the witnesses, and whenever he sought additional time (which he did on two occasions), such time was granted to him by Task Force Chairman Schiff without any time limitation.⁷

The House seeks the introduction of the transcripts and evidence from these two proceedings, so that the Senate will have a complete record of the witnesses’ testimony, especially where some of the trial testimony will occur nearly 3 years after the Fifth Circuit testimony, and, in some instances, where that testimony relates to conduct that occurred in the early 1990s. As noted, Judge Porteous has had a chance to cross-examine all the witnesses, and indeed personally cross-examined some of them (as did his counsel in the House Impeachment Task Force Hearings). Further, there are circumstantial guarantees of trustworthiness of much of the testimony – Judge Porteous has admitted much, if not nearly all, the conduct at issue, but has simply taken issue with proof of intent or the significance of his conduct on the issue of whether he should be impeached.⁸

⁸Judge Porteous’s own testimony at the Fifth Circuit Hearing provides additional assurance as to the reliability of the witness testimony at issue in this Motion. As noted

The House recognizes some of the testimony may, at the end of the day, be duplicative of some of the live testimony. It is not possible to identify such testimony line by line at this time, nor is it necessary to do so. If the witness testifies consistently with prior testimony, that fact may itself be relevant to the evaluation of the witness's credibility, and by admitting the prior testimony the Senate will have a complete record of what these witnesses have stated under oath at all prior proceedings. Decisions as to the weight of the evidence are ultimately left to the individual Senators, who are certainly capable of understanding the distinction between prior and live testimony, or testimony subject to cross-examination then and now. Moreover, by having the prior evidentiary record available and admissible, the House is confident that the trial will be expedited and focused on the most critical issues.

II. RULES OF EVIDENCE IN IMPEACHMENT TRIALS

The “Procedure and Guidelines for Impeachment Trial in the United States Senate” (the “Senate Impeachment Procedures”)⁹ provide, at Rule VII, that “the Presiding Officer [of the impeachment trial] may rule on all questions of evidence including, but not limited to, questions of relevancy, materiality, and redundancy of evidence and incidental questions.” Under Rule XI (which provides for the establishment of a Committee to hear the evidence in an impeachment case), the Chairman of the Rule XI Committee shall “exercise all the powers and functions conferred upon the Senate and the Presiding Officer of the Senate, respectively, under the rules of procedure and in the companion motion filed in this Impeachment proceeding, Judge Porteous made numerous statements in which he confirmed the substance of the testimony of various of the witnesses at that hearing. practice in the Senate when sitting on impeachment trials.” The Senate Impeachment Procedures do not limit the Presiding Officer to any set of evidentiary rules, and, as a practical matter, provide the Presiding Officer substantial discretion in the admission of evidence.

Moreover, it is well established that the Federal Rules of Evidence or other strict rules of evidence have no place in impeachment proceedings. In 1989, the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration issued a Report that addressed various impeachment issues arising in the Hastings Impeachment proceedings, including a section that explained why the Federal Rules of Evidence did not pertain to impeachment trials.¹⁰ In rejecting adoption of the Federal Rules of Evidence, the Report stressed that “[a] Senate vote is the ultimate authority for determining the admissibility of evidence” and cited a legal scholar for the proposition that if the Rules of Evidence were adopted “[i]t is not hard to imagine a trial governed by a detailed body of rules becoming bogged down in technical disputes, with the ascertainment of facts the victim.”¹¹ The Report cited Yale Professor Charles Black in support of the proposition that “technical rules of evidence designed for juries have no place in the impeachment process”¹² and concluded:

¹⁰Procedure for the Impeachment Trial of U.S. District Judge Alcee I. Hastings in the United States Senate, Report of the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration to Accompany S. Res. 38 and S. Res. 39, Rpt. 101-1, 101st Cong., 1st Sess. (1989) at 111-12. That portion of the Report is attached as “Attachment 2.”

¹²The Report quoted the following from Professor Black’s treatise on Impeachment:

Both the House and the Senate ought to hear and consider all evidence which seems relevant, without regard to technical rules. Senators are in any case continually exposed to “hearsay” evidence; they cannot be sequestered and kept away from newspapers like a jury. If they cannot be

“The Senate must retain its freedom to review evidence issues as they present themselves. The Senate should not restrict itself unnecessarily by making its decisions in a vacuum, before the trial has even begun.”¹³

These evidentiary principles were reiterated by the Hastings Trial Committee, which likewise explicitly rejected formal rules of evidence. In disposing of various legal motions, that Committee stated:

Sixth, the parties have expressed an interest in the evidentiary principles that will govern these proceedings. The committee’s task is to receive and report evidence to the Senate. The Senate reserves the power to determine the competency, relevancy, and materiality of the evidence received by the committee. The committee is not bound by the Federal Rules of Evidence, although those rules may provide some guidance to the committee. Members of the Senate sit both as judges of law and fact. Precise rules of evidence are not needed in an impeachment trial to protect jurors, lay triers of fact, from doubtful evidence. In the end, the task of members of the Senate will be to weigh the relevance and quality of the evidence.¹⁴

In short, the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee has discretion to admit the records of prior proceedings related to Judge Porteous, and, “[i]n the end, the task of members of the Senate will be to weigh the relevance and quality of the evidence.”¹⁵ trusted to weigh evidence, appropriately discounting for all the factors of unreliability that have led to our keeping some evidence away from juries, then they are not in any way up to the job, and “rules of evidence” will not help.

III. IMPEACHMENT PRECEDENT ESTABLISHES THAT RECORD EVIDENCE FROM PRIOR PROCEEDINGS IS ADMISSIBLE IN IMPEACHMENT TRIALS

In the Claiborne, Nixon, and Hastings Impeachment proceedings, the respective Senate Trial Committees accepted record evidence from prior evidentiary proceedings into evidence.

The Judge Claiborne Impeachment Proceedings. In the Claiborne Impeachment proceeding, the House sought by motion to introduce select transcripts from Judge Claiborne's second trial.¹⁶ In granting the House's motion, Trial Committee Chairman Mathias stated that "Judge Claiborne may offer an objection to any particular item of evidence from his second trial if there is a basis for objection other than the fact that prior testimony or exhibits are being used to establish the truth of the matters asserted."¹⁷ In other words, Judge Claiborne was permitted to raise objections to the transcripts other than the fact that the transcripts were hearsay, i.e., that they were to be used for "the truth of the matters asserted." Chairman Mathias went on to note the significance of the fact that the testimony at issue had been subject to cross-examination: "We will only be using for our own fact-finding purposes sworn testimony taken in the presence of Judge Claiborne and subject to his counsel's examination or cross-examination."¹⁸

¹⁶See [The House of Representatives'] Motion to Accept as Substantive Evidence Certain Testimony and Documents, In re: Impeachment of Judge Harry E. Claiborne, reprinted in Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, Hearings before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee, United States Senate, S. Hrg. 99-812, 99th Cong., 2d Sess. (1986) at 297 [hereinafter Judge Claiborne Senate Impeachment Report].

¹⁸*Id.* Although Chairman Mathias further noted that the facts contained in the testimony appear not to have been the "subject of controversy," id. at 110-11, that observation was clearly secondary to the Committee's focus on procedural fairness and the fact that the prior testimony was subject to the opportunity for cross-examination.

The Judge Nixon Impeachment Proceedings. Similarly, in the Judge Nixon Impeachment proceeding, the House requested that the Nixon Senate Committee receive into evidence the complete trial record, representing that “key witnesses” would be called in any event.¹⁹ As the House explained in its motion:

With this evidence before it, the Senate Committee will be able to examine, as necessary, the complete prior testimony of key witnesses whose credibility may be at issue; the testimony of minor witnesses whose credibility is not in issue and who need not be summoned to testify in person; and all exhibits heretofore admitted into evidence, however minor. With the permission of the Committee, the House and Respondent will then be able to reserve valuable trial time for the most important evidence, and may refer to the prior record to supplement their presentation at trial and during post-trial briefing.²⁰

At oral argument on this motion, House Manager Edwards stated, first, that records of the prior criminal proceedings are “public records” which “should be available to each Senator” in order to “ensure that all relevant facts are before the Senate;” second, the admission of the prior testimony “will also help to streamline the trial;” and finally, Judge Nixon would not be prejudiced for two reasons: “First, he is free to subpoena any witness he chooses for live testimony; and second, much of the trial and subcommittee record consists of Judge Nixon’s cross-examination of witnesses. How can it be

Nixon, Jr., at 1, reprinted in Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee on the Articles Against Judge Walter L. prejudicial to admit into evidence the prior testimony of witnesses when the judge has fully exercised his right of cross-examination?”²¹

The Nixon Senate Committee accepted the House’s argument and ruled in favor of admission of both the prior Nixon criminal trial record (testimony and exhibits) as well as the House Impeachment Hearing record:

The House has moved to accept into evidence the record of all prior testimony and exhibits in its entirety. The Committee believes that introduction of the record of prior testimony and exhibits will be useful to enable the Committee to focus the live testimony that it hears on the most critical witnesses. The prior testimony has been the subject of adverse cross-examination, and its use will not prejudice any party. In accordance with the House motion and in the interest of a thorough and fair proceeding, all testimony and exhibits in Judge Nixon’s criminal proceeding, including the post-trial proceeding (as requested by Judge Nixon), will be admitted, as well as all testimony and exhibits admitted in the House impeachment proceeding.²²

The Judge Hastings Impeachment Proceedings. In the Hastings Impeachment, the issues were slightly different. The House in the Hastings Impeachment sought to introduce select testimony from Judge Hastings’s criminal trial – not the full transcripts.²³

²¹Proceedings of the Judge Nixon Impeachment Trial Committee, July 13, 1989 (statement of Rep. Edwards), printed in Judge Nixon Senate Impeachment Report at 305.

²²[Judge Nixon] Impeachment Trial Committee Disposition of Pretrial Motions, First Order, July 25, 1989 at 5, reprinted in Judge Nixon Senate Impeachment Report at 319, 323.

²³Judge Hastings sought to introduce the entirety of the criminal trial for the purpose of having the Senators be aware that some of the factual allegations in the Impeachment trial were the same as those that had been tried in the criminal trial at which Judge Hastings had been acquitted, and not “for truth.” In response to a question from Chairman Bingaman as to why he sought the full transcript to be introduced, Judge Hastings’s counsel explained he wanted the entire record to be introduced “to establish the fact that the accusations made, the first 15 articles of impeachment were in fact tried to a jury more than five years ago, and were in fact fairly tried, and there is no new evidence or no material new evidence in support of that.” Proceedings of the Hastings Trial Committee, June 22, 1989, printed in Hastings Senate Impeachment Report at 836 (statement of Terence Anderson, Esq.). House Manager Bryant objected to the testimony being

By way of an Order issued July 10, 1989, the Senate Trial Committee admitted some testimony sought by the House, and denied the House's requests as to other testimony. In its Order, the Committee stated certain overarching principles:

The Committee recognizes the general objection on the grounds of hearsay made by Judge Hastings to the receipt of any prior testimony as substantive evidence..., but as noted in the Committee's disposition of pretrial issues on April 14, 1989, neither it nor the Senate is bound in these proceedings to strict judicial rules of evidence. ... On the other hand, the Committee does not believe it appropriate to admit prior testimony into evidence on key points where credibility, context or interpretation are in dispute – particularly where the opposing party has not had an opportunity for cross-examination.²⁴

Accordingly, the Committee permitted the House to introduce numerous transcripts “for truth” – those where opposing counsel had the opportunity for cross-examination and only in circumstances where the prior testimony was offered in place of a party's calling that witness in its own case.²⁵

Thus, in all three proceedings the respective Senate Committees rejected application of the Federal Rules of Evidence in deciding the issue as to the admissibility of transcripts from prior proceedings and recognized the relevance of prior sworn introduced for this purpose, characterizing it as “in effect, a revisitation of the issue of double jeopardy, which was disposed of by a vote of 93-to-1 in the Senate, the first time the Senate took this matter up. It is an issue that has no relevance whatsoever.” Id. at 837. The Hastings Senate Committee denied Judge Hastings's Motion to admit the entirety of the criminal trial record. However, because of the nature of Judge Hastings's request, the decision by the Hastings Senate Committee is not pertinent to the consideration of the House's Motion in this case.

²⁴[Hastings] Impeachment Trial Committee Eighth Order, July 10, 1989 at 1-2, reprinted in Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee on the Articles Against Judge Alcee L. Hastings, S. Hrg. 101-194, Pt. 2A at 61-2 (1989) [Judge Hastings Senate Impeachment Report Pt. 2A]. That Order is attached as “Attachment 4.”

²⁵The fact that Judge Porteous will have the opportunity to cross-examine some of the witnesses on their prior testimony at the depositions further supports the admissibility of the prior testimony.

testimony to the fact-finding responsibilities of the Senate. Further, in each of the three proceedings, the respective Senate Committees, in deciding to admit prior testimony (in whole or in part) took into consideration that the opposing party had the opportunity to cross-examine the witness.

We recognize that the Hastings Senate Committee took a narrower approach than the respective Senate Committees in Nixon and Claiborne as to the admission of the records of prior proceedings involving the respective judges. However, the decision by the Nixon Senate Committee in accepting into evidence all the relevant transcripts and exhibits – from both the criminal trial and the House proceedings – is the most recent of those three and thus implicitly rejected the narrower decision in Hastings. Further, the materials associated with Judge Hastings’s criminal trial were truly voluminous in contrast with the far smaller set of materials in the prior Claiborne and subsequent Nixon proceedings (and, an even smaller collection in the Fifth Circuit and House proceedings involving Judge Porteous). To the extent that the Senate Committee in this case refers to the prior Impeachment proceedings as guidance, we thus urge the Committee to follow the more expansive approach to accepting prior record evidence that was employed both with the Judge Claiborne and Judge Nixon Impeachments, especially insofar as that evidence is in the public record (i.e., such as the House Impeachment proceedings, some of which are available on-line), and would be available to Senators in any event.

Under these principles, therefore, the House requests that the Senate Committee rule that the Fifth Circuit Hearing testimony and exhibits relating to Judge Porteous, as well as the House Impeachment Task Force testimony and exhibits relating to Judge Porteous, all of which are in the public domain, be admissible “for truth,” and that the weight of such evidence be left to the Senators as they consider that evidence. The admission of the Fifth Circuit Hearing testimony fits squarely within the Claiborne, Nixon and Hastings precedents. Judge Porteous either cross-examined or called witnesses at that hearing, and it would be nothing more than gamesmanship for Judge Porteous, having, for example, agreed to the admission of certain documents and transcripts at that hearing, to object to their admission before the Senate.

IV. CONCLUSION

For all the reasons discussed above, the House requests that Impeachment Trial Committee rule that the evidentiary records from the Fifth Circuit Special Committee Hearing and the Impeachment Task Force Hearings may be admitted at trial.²⁶ At present, the testimony of certain witnesses as well as certain documentary materials which were introduced in prior proceedings have been separately designated as discrete exhibits, and, at the appropriate time, the House would formally designate these materials by exhibit number and move their introduction.²⁷

²⁶Only a very small portion of the Fifth Circuit proceedings are not squarely relevant to this Impeachment proceeding. For example, the Fifth Circuit proceeding addressed whether Judge Porteous committed a fraud in a bank loan application, and one witness was called (a banker named Edward Butler) who testified on this topic. The testimony from the Fifth Circuit hearing associated with this issue has not been marked as a House Exhibit, and the House does not propose to seek its admission. With this exception, it is the House's view that all the other testimonial materials from the Fifth Circuit would be relevant.

²⁷Many of these exhibits introduced before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee Exhibit List are also marked as potential trial exhibits on the House's exhibit list. In many instances, the House has selected a few pages from a broader document collection, such as specific casino records, so as to narrow the volume of records that will be admitted. The House proposes to introduce only the pages from document collections that are relevant. Indeed, most of these Fifth Circuit exhibits are business records and would be admissible regardless of their status as Fifth Circuit exhibits.

WHEREFORE, the House requests that the complete evidentiary records of the Fifth Circuit Proceeding and the Task Force Impeachment Hearings be admissible; that, in advance of the trial, the Senate Committee designate a date certain for both parties to designate transcripts and exhibits for admission; and that either party may object to the other party's designation on grounds other than the fact that the materials are being offered "for truth."

mittee. The charge to such a committee would, then, be limited to hear testimony and receive evidence regarding those articles of impeachment that were not dismissed. The second original resolution reported herein provides for the filing and argument of motions by Judge Hastings to dismiss articles of impeachment.⁴⁷

G. RULES OF EVIDENCE

Respondent has requested that the Senate state whether the Federal Rules of Evidence or common law rules of evidence will apply in the Senate proceedings. The Committee finds that no such declaration should be made by it. Any such determination should be made by the body that hears the evidence in the case.

"The Rules of Impeachment" by Stanley Futterman, 24 Kan. L. Rev. 105 (1975) contains a discussion of the evidentiary rules used by the Senate in impeachment proceedings. Futterman states, "... the Senate has understood itself to be making evidentiary determinations under the rules of evidence applicable in courts of law and equity."⁴⁸

In the past, the Senate has determined the admissibility of evidence by looking to Senate precedents rather than court decisions. A Senate vote is the ultimate authority for determining the admissibility of evidence.⁴⁹

In the Claiborne impeachment proceedings, the House managers argued that the Senate is not bound by the Federal rules of Evidence, but they suggested that those rules should be looked to for guidance. The managers were careful to cite to the analogous federal rule when arguing motions.⁵⁰

Professor Burbank concludes that the Claiborne proceedings confirmed the Senate's wisdom in refusing to adopt detailed rules of evidence for impeachment trials and cautions against wholesale borrowing from the Federal Rules of Evidence.⁵¹ Burbank stated, "It is not hard to imagine a trial governed by a detailed body of rules becoming bogged down in technical disputes, with the ascertainment of facts the victim."⁵²

Although the Senate applies generally accepted rules of evidence, it would serve no useful purpose to declare any particular system to be supreme. Impeachment A Handbook, (1974) by Professor Charles Black of Yale University, discusses the entire impeachment process. Professor Black suggests that technical rules of evidence designed for juries have no place in the impeachment process.

Both the House and the Senate ought to hear and consider all evidence which seems relevant, without regard to technical rules. Senators are in any case continually exposed to 'hearsay' evidence, they cannot be sequestered and kept away from newspapers like a jury. If they cannot be trusted to weigh evidence, appropriately discounting for all the factors of unreliability that have led to our keeping some evidence away from juries, then they are not in any way up to the job, and 'rules of evidence' will not help.⁵³

Simpson in "Federal Impeachments", supra, discussed rules of evidence in impeachment proceedings. Simpson noted:

the Senate has invariably received all the evidence which it deemed relevant, from any witness who had personal knowledge of the facts, no matter by whom it was to be proved, and left its weight to be determined upon final consideration.⁵⁴

The Senate must retain its freedom to review evidence issues as they present themselves. The Senate should not restrict itself unnecessarily by making its decision in a vacuum, before the trial has even begun.

H. OTHER FAIR TRIAL ISSUES

The House Managers have recommended that the impeachment committee's proceedings should be videotaped to provide an additional means to examine the credibility of witnesses and to overcome other objections to impeachment proceedings before a committee instead of before the full Senate. The Claiborne proceedings were televised to all Senate offices and videotapes were available to Senators.

For the reasons set forth fully in its discussion of the use of an impeachment committee, the Committee believes that the proceedings of the impeachment committee should be televised to all Senate offices and videotaped, and that such videotapes should be made available to Members so that they may examine the proceedings as their schedules permit, without disruption of the other legislative responsibilities of the Senate during this trial.

The Committee finds that the Senate can also assure that Senators have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the case by delaying floor consideration of the articles of impeachment for a period of time after the parties have concluded their cases before the committee.

During the Claiborne trial, concern was expressed about the lack of time Senators had to review the record before full Senate consideration of the case. Respondent intimates that he will not receive a fair trial if a committee is used to receive evidence because the Senators will not take time to examine transcripts or videotapes prior to full Senate action.

Allowing a period for weighing the evidence will remove even the suggestion that the Senate does not wish to devote the necessary time to the case. By the same token, providing a period for reviewing the evidence will allow the nation's business to go forward. Such a procedure is common practice in the Senate. Hearings are routinely held months before legislation is marked up and voted upon in committee. Frequently, the full Senate vote is taken months after the legislation is reported. IMPEACHMENT TRIAL COMMITTEEDISPOSITION OF PRETRIAL ISSUES

Upon consideration of the written submissions of the parties on pretrial issues and the oral argument on April 12, 1989, the committee has authorized the chair to issue the following rulings on behalf of the committee:

Preliminary Witness Lists

First, on three occasions, beginning on August 10, 1988, the Committee on Rules and Administration asked the parties for preliminary lists of witnesses with a description of the general nature of the testimony that is expected from each witness. The Rules Committee expressly stated that neither side would be precluded, by the submission of this preliminary information, from requesting subpoenas for other witnesses. On September 6, 1988, the House submitted a list of twenty-three witnesses that it anticipates calling. The House briefly described the nature of each witness's proposed testimony. On January 17, 1989, the House supplemented that list with six additional witnesses. Judge Hastings did not provide to the Rules Committee a list of his proposed witnesses in these Senate proceedings. Neither has Judge Hastings provided to this committee a preliminary list of the witnesses that he intends to call before us, other than to refer to material which he had provided last year to a subcommittee of the House Committee on the Judiciary.

(281)

It is imperative that Judge Hastings now provide his preliminary witness list without any further delay. The committee requires the list in order to complete its consideration of pretrial issues, including the fixing of an appropriate date to begin evidentiary hearings. Accordingly, Judge Hastings is directed to provide to the committee by noon on April 19, 1989, a preliminary witness list that identifies in good faith the witnesses that he intends to call before this committee. The witness list should also briefly state, in detail comparable to that already provided by the House for its anticipated witnesses, the nature of the testimony that Judge Hastings expects each listed witness would provide. This is to be a preliminary list. Judge Hastings may add, by showing good cause for not including them on the preliminary list, additional names when he submits his final witness list. In the absence of a showing of good cause, the committee may exclude the testimony of any witness who is not listed and described in the preliminary witness list.

The House has indicated that it may have additional witnesses. To the extent that those additional witnesses are now known to the House, the House should supplement its preliminary list by noon on April 19, 1989.

Motion In Limine

Second, the House has moved in limine to exclude five categories of evidence as irrelevant.

The first category concerns the motivations of persons who investigated Judge Hastings in 1961 and then who prosecuted him in United States v. Hastings, Cr. No. 81-596-Cr-ETG. The third category concerns the motivations of persons who investigated the matters addressed by Grand Jury No. 86-3 (Miami) concerning the alleged disclosure by Judge Hastings of confidential wiretap information.

Judge Hastings correctly notes that the House has placed on its witness list several assistant United States attorneys and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who would testify in connection with either the bribery and perjury allegations or the wiretap matter. Judge Hastings asserts that the House motion is premature. He also asserts that he should be able to inquire into the motivation and bias of the witnesses against him. As Judge Hastings has asserted a tenable basis for some degree of latitude in cross-examining the witnesses that the House will call, the committee denies at this time this portion of the House's motion. To the extent that Judge Hastings proposes to inquire into the motivations of persons who investigated and prosecuted him for a purpose other than impeaching witnesses that the House will call, the House motion is premature in the absence of a firm indication from Judge Hastings, through the filing of a witness list, that he intends to call any such witnesses. We wish to make clear nonetheless that our denial at this time of this portion of the House motion should not be understood to invite an open-ended inquiry into the motivations of federal prosecutors and investigators. Rather, any such inquiry must be limited to evidence that the investigations were conducted in a manner intended to mislead a court or trier of fact as to Judge Hastings' guilt or innocence.

Categories two and four concern the motivations of persons who initiated, investigated, and considered the complaints that were filed against Judge Hastings in March, 1983, and September, 1985, with the Eleventh Circuit under the Judicial Conduct and Disability Act of 1980. Judge Hastings contends that this aspect of the House motion also is premature.

The issues that are presented by the articles concern Judge Hastings' conduct, not the conduct of members of the judicial branch or persons employed by it. Judge Hastings has made no showing that evidence in categories two and four would be relevant to the articles of impeachment. Moreover, a grant of the House motion with respect to categories two and four should help to focus the parties' preparation for trial on issues that will be germane to the Senate's consideration of the articles. The motion to exclude evidence of the matters described in categories two and four is granted.

The fifth category in the House motion in limine is cumulative evidence on Judge Hastings' general character and reputation. We agree with Judge Hastings that this portion of the House motion in limine is premature. We expect that Judge Hastings will be mindful of the limitations that the committee placed on the number of character witnesses, and the total length of character testimony, in the Claiborne proceedings, and that, in composing his witness list, Judge Hastings will recognize the need to avoid cumulative evidence. We can address at a later date any question which arises about the need to impose limits on that testimony.

Documentary Discovery

Third, Judge Hastings has moved for extensive pretrial discovery. He advocates that discovery be based on contemporary ideas about discovery in federal civil judicial proceedings. The House has proposed a scope of discovery that is modeled to a greater extent on federal criminal judicial proceedings. The House proposes to provide to Judge Hastings any exculpatory evidence that it possesses. The House also proposes that each party provide to the other party the documents that it proposes to offer in evidence, prior sworn, adopted, or approved statements of witnesses that each proposes to call, and substantially verbatim and contemporaneously recorded statements of witnesses that each intends to call. The discovery proposed by the House should be completed as promptly as possible. We reject, however, the divergent theoretical limits -- expansive in Judge Hastings' view and constricted in the House's view -- that each side has advocated.

The House has expressed a concern about one House of Congress directing another House to produce records. We need not address at this time whether the Senate has that power in an impeachment proceeding, because we think that it should be sufficient to state principles and a schedule to guide these proceedings:

(a) To the extent that the parties have had a disagreement about photocopying, we recommend to the House that the issue be resolved in Judge Hastings' favor and that the House provide to Judge Hastings copies of all documents that the House has no objection to providing on the basis of their content. To facilitate Judge Hastings' response to the House's proposed stipulations, a matter that will be discussed below, the House should provide those copies by April 21, 1989, a week from today's order.

(b) The House -- which has proposed to provide exculpatory materials, certain prior statements of witnesses, and documents and other tangible evidence that it intends to introduce in evidence -- has indicated that it has provided most but not all of that material to Judge Hastings. The House would like to defer further production until it receives equivalent material from Judge Hastings. We will be requiring comparable disclosure by Judge Hastings, but the production to Judge Hastings should not be delayed while that occurs. Again, because we will be requiring responses to the House's proposed stipulations, the House should provide this material to Judge Hastings by April 21.

(c) Concerning other documents, the sharing of information should be guided by a broader principle than that advanced by the House in its offer to provide exculpatory evidence and the prior sworn, adopted, approved, or substantially verbatim and contemporaneously recorded statements of witnesses. In addition to the interests of the House in its role as advocate for the articles of impeachment and the interests of Judge Hastings in defending against those articles, the Senate has an interest in the development of a record that fully illuminates the matters that it must consider in rendering a judgment that under the Constitution only the Senate may make. We therefore ask the House -- for documents that it has obtained from elsewhere in the government that are responsive to a particularized request from Judge Hastings -- to determine whether there are specific objections, such as the need to honor promised confidences to people who may be at risk, to production to Judge Hastings. In the absence of specific objections by the House or by the governmental entity that provided the material to the House, which should be articulated in writing so that the parties and the committee may be apprised of them, the special constitutional process that we are now engaged in will be served best by the fullest disclosure possible. It may be that for some documents an appropriate course of action would be to provide them to the committee for an evaluation of their sensitive nature, if any, and a determination by the committee whether any restrictions should be placed on the terms of access to them. Again, because of the schedule that will be set forth below for responses to stipulations, the House should respond by May 3.

(d) Judge Hastings also has a burden that he has not yet met. It will be necessary for him to do more than simply demand everything that other people have. In order to facilitate the process that we are asking the House and the other branches to undertake, Judge Hastings should identify, with far greater particularity than he has to date, the records that are germane to issues in these proceedings. Also, if it would be of assistance to the holders of documents in determining their responses, he should articulate to them the basis for his requests. To enable the House to respond by May 3, Judge Hastings should submit his particularized requests by April 26.

(e) Neither the Department of Justice nor the counsel or the members of the Investigating Committee of the Judicial Council of the Eleventh Circuit are before us. If Judge Hastings has requests for documents from either the Department, including the Federal Bureau of Investigations, or the Judicial Council, he should promptly make particularized requests to them by April 26. With knowledge of the committee's interest in the fullest disclosure possible, we would appreciate knowing of the Department's and the Council's responses at the earliest possible time.

(f) Judge Hastings should provide his reciprocal discovery to the House by May 10, including all documents, tapes, and other tangible evidence he intends to offer in evidence, and sworn, adopted, approved, or substantially verbatim statements of witnesses that Judge Hastings intends to call.

Depositions

Fourth, Judge Hastings has asked that the Senate utilize its subpoena power to enable him to take depositions in advance of the committee's hearings. He has attached to his most recent request a list, which he has denominated a provisional list, of twenty-four Department of Justice attorneys and Federal Bureau of Investigation officials and agents. The list is taken from a list of provisional witnesses that Judge Hastings had submitted last year to a subcommittee of the House Committee on the Judiciary.

The committee knows of no precedent for the pretrial examination of witnesses in connection with a Senate impeachment trial. Nevertheless, the committee will give further consideration to Judge Hastings' request for depositions after receiving from him a statement that includes the following information: a list of proposed deponents; a proffer of the testimony he expects to elicit from each proposed deponent and the relevance of that testimony; whether the proposed deponent has testified or provided statements in prior proceedings and whether Judge Hastings has received or has had access to any transcripts or recorded statements; whether Judge Hastings has asked the proposed deponent to provide information voluntarily and, if he has, the response of the proposed deponent; and, if the committee provides for depositions but limits their number, what priorities Judge Hastings places among the depositions that he is requesting.

If Judge Hastings wishes to pursue his request for depositions, he should submit this statement by April 28, 1989.

It is the committee's hope and expectation that if either the House or Judge Hastings seeks an opportunity to obtain information from the Department of Justice, including the Federal Bureau of Information, that the Department and the Bureau will cooperate voluntarily to provide relevant information.

Stipulations

Fifth, the House, on December 15, 1988, served an original and, on March 31, 1989, served a revised proposed stipulation of facts. The revised proposal reorganizes the original proposed stipulation of facts into fifteen categories. The House also served on December 15, 1988, a proposed stipulation of documents which asked that the parties stipulate that each of the listed documents is genuine. The proposed documentary stipulation also proposed other stipulations for designated categories of documents. The December 15, 1988 submission by the House on documentary stipulations stated the proposed stipulations did not preclude pertinent objections to the admissibility of the documents listed by the House based on matters not addressed in the stipulations.

On January 17, 1989, the House proposed that the Senate adopt a rule that any proposed stipulation of fact will be accepted as true unless the opposing party files a written objection, including a proffer as to why the proposed stipulation should not be taken as true. The House asked for a parallel rule on the authenticity of documents.

An early resolution of factual questions and questions about the authenticity and admissibility of documents that are not in dispute will enable the parties and the committee to focus their time and energies on matters that are truly in disagreement. Also, the committee has been directed by the Senate to report to it on facts that are uncontested.

Accordingly, the committee accepts the House proposals. We direct Judge Hastings to respond to the House's proposed revised stipulations of fact, filed on March 31, 1989, by admitting their truth or serving and filing a specific objection that includes a proffer as to why the proposed stipulation should not be taken as true. With respect to documents, we direct Judge Hastings to respond to the House's proposed documentary stipulations, filed December 15, 1988, by admitting the matters set forth in that submission and by admitting the admissibility of the documents listed by the House, or by serving and filing a specific objection that includes a proffer as to why the proposed stipulation concerning each document should not be taken as true and the particular document admitted into evidence.

Judge Hastings has had nearly four months to evaluate the House's proposed stipulations. We direct that Judge Hastings' response be submitted no later than May 10, 1989. This should be a reciprocal process. Although Judge Hastings' has not proposed stipulations of his own, he may do so by May 10. If Judge Hastings does submit proposed stipulations by that day, the House should respond to them by May 24. The parties should engage in this process with an eye towards resolving problems. Consequently, if a disagreement about a proposed stipulation can be resolved by redrafting the stipulation to be more accurate, or can be resolved by providing access to a specific document, then we would expect the parties to work together to settle differences between them.

Evidentiary Principles

Sixth, the parties have expressed an interest in the evidentiary principles that will govern these proceedings. The committee's task is to receive and report evidence to the Senate. The Senate reserves the power to determine the competency, relevancy, and materiality of the evidence received by the committee. The committee is not bound by the Federal Rules of Evidence, although those rules may provide some guidance to the committee. Members of the Senate sit both as judges of law and fact. Precise rules of evidence are not needed in an impeachment trial to protect jurors, lay triers of fact, from doubtful evidence. In the end, the task of members of the Senate will be to weigh the relevance and quality of the evidence.

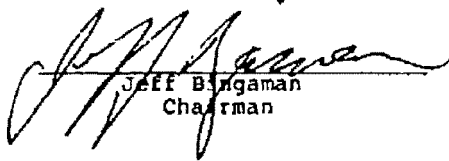

Final Pretrial Statements

Lastly, the parties should file final pretrial statements by a date that the committee will designate when it issues an order setting a date for the commencement of testimony. These statements should include a final list of witnesses with a brief statement of the nature of each witness's proposed testimony. The parties should also submit marked exhibits that each proposes to offer. Further, each party should set forth to the committee the legal principles that each believes is applicable to each article of impeachment, or, if appropriately grouped, set of articles. Although the committee will not reach conclusions of law, it is important for the committee, in determining the relevancy of evidence, to know from the parties the legal theories upon which each is proceeding. We will provide more detailed instructions to the parties about the contents of these pretrial statements.

Deferred Matters

The committee is continuing to consider Judge Hastings' application for defense funds. The committee is also continuing to consider a schedule for its evidentiary hearings. The committee expects to issue an order or orders on these matters within a week.

IMPEACHMENT TRIAL COMMITTEE (ON THE ARTICLES AGAINST JUDGE ALCEE L. HASTINGS)
HART SENATE OFFICE BUILDING, ROOM SH-9020
WASHINGTON, DC 20510

IMPEACHMENT TRIAL COMMITTEE EIGHTH ORDER

A. Prior Testimony

In its Fourth Order, dated May 24, 1989, the Committee noted the desirability, in circumstances consonant with fairness to the parties, of permitting the prior recorded testimony of some witnesses to be introduced into the record in place of live examinations. It is the Committee's belief that the use of this procedure, especially where the testimony related to facts not in substantial dispute or came from witnesses whose credibility is not questioned, will further the creation of a coherent record for use by the Senate.

The parties were directed to, and did, identify for the Committee the prior testimony they desired to offer into evidence. The Committee has reviewed all written submissions of the parties on this topic, and has considered their oral arguments as well. The Committee recognizes the general objection on the grounds of hearsay made by Judge Hastings to the receipt of any prior testimony as substantive evidence (somewhat modified in his most recent submission), but as noted in the Committee's disposition of pretrial issues on April 14, 1989, neither it nor the Senate is bound in these proceedings to strict judicial rules of evidence. (The Committee notes that even under the Federal Rules of Evidence, hearsay may be received if the court is satisfied that the interests of justice are served by its admission.)^{1/} On the other hand, the Committee does not believe it appropriate to admit prior testimony into evidence on key points where credibility, context or interpretation are in dispute -- particularly where the opposing party has not had an opportunity for cross-examination.

The Committee also does not believe it appropriate to address at this time objections, such as relevance, competence, prejudice, privilege or hearsay, to the content of any proffered prior testimony, and expressly reserves all such decisions until the commencement of the evidentiary proceedings on July 10.

Subject to the foregoing, the Committee has decided that it will receive certain prior testimony as substantive evidence, but will do so only where the prior testimony is offered in place of -- and not in addition to -- a party's calling that witness in its own case. The Committee's decision to receive prior testimony from certain witnesses does not preclude those witnesses being called by the opposing party, with appropriate opportunity then for cross-examination. Accordingly, the Committee rules that:

^{1/} Rule 803(24), F.R.Ev.; see also, Rule 804(b)(5), F.R.Ev.

1. The entire testimony of Richard Lowe, Willie James Washington, and Laverne Boone before the Investigating Committee of the Eleventh Circuit ("IC") will be received into evidence. Judge Hastings has waived any specific objection to the testimony of these airline employee witnesses, whose testimony is limited solely to the meaning of certain airline records. The Committee believes that their testimony is not subject to substantial dispute, and notes that if there are further matters that Judge Hastings wishes to elicit from these witnesses, the Senate will at his request issue subpoenas so that he may do so in the presentation of his own evidence.

2. Neither the prior grand jury nor the IC testimony of Daniel Simons will be received into evidence. Judge Hastings has never cross-examined Mr. Simons,^{2/} and Simons' testimony, which directly describes Judge Hastings' actions in issuing a forfeiture order that the House alleges was central to the bribery scheme, is more than peripheral. The

^{2/} The Committee notes the House's position that Judge Hastings had, but declined, the opportunity to cross-examine Mr. Simons before the IC, but is more guided by its reluctance to have the record here contain significant substantive evidence against Judge Hastings from this witness who was not subject to cross-examination on behalf of Judge Hastings. Notwithstanding this ruling, however, the Committee remains of a general view that a party's failure to exercise an opportunity to cross-examine may appropriately be considered a waiver of that opportunity.

House is invited to consider whether other means which would allow Judge Hastings an opportunity of cross-examination, such as a telephonic deposition, might be employed to provide the testimony of Mr. Simons.

3. The complete trial testimony of Madeline Petty in United States v. Hastings and pp. 220, ll. 5-6; 222, ll. 3-7; and 224, ll. 7-11 from her IC testimony will be received into evidence, subject to Judge Hastings' right to call her as his own witness. The Committee is substantially influenced by the facts that Judge Hastings did have an opportunity to cross-examine Ms. Petty at his trial; that the testimony regarding Ms. Petty's travel to Las Vegas with Mr. Borders is not disputed; and that the details in her IC testimony regarding her phone number and non-acquaintance with Dredge are not disputed.

4. The IC testimony of Neal Sonnett and Joel Hirschhorn will not be received into evidence. The Committee has reviewed the proffered testimony with care. In both instances, the Committee feels, the testimony involves matters where the context and interpretation of particular events may be significant, and where the Committee is reluctant to permit its record to be based on ex parte examinations. Particularly with respect to Mr. Hirschhorn, the Committee notes the repeated attorney-client privilege issues which his testimony raised, and feels that in these proceedings it would be better to have such testimony as the House might desire from this witness offered directly by the witness in Judge Hastings' presence.

5. The IC testimony of Carolyn McIver, Andrew Chisolm, and Eleanor Golar-Williams which relates to whether Hemphill Pride could be reached at their telephones will be received into evidence, if these witnesses are not called to testify. The Committee notes that Judge Hastings has, in his Answer to Impeachment Articles X through XIII, admitted the substantial accuracy of this testimony, and sees no reason why these three witnesses should be required to appear as live witnesses on this issue unless Judge Hastings wishes to call them as a part of his case. To the extent that any other issue is sought to be proven from these witnesses, however, the Committee will not receive their IC testimony for that purpose.

6. The IC testimony of Louima Romano will not be received into evidence. Judge Hastings has never cross-examined this witness, and the Committee notes that much of her proffered testimony was vague, and became precise only in response to leading questions.

7. The trial testimony of Paul Rico, Benjamin Daniel Brown, Charles T. Duncan, Mildred Hastings, Shirley Pride,

Simon Stephen Selig III, and Dudley Williams in United States v. Hastings and United States v. Borders will not be received into evidence. These are witnesses whom the opposing party has expressed a desire to examine, and if evidence from them is to be a part of the case here, the opposing party should have an opportunity to cross-examine. To the extent that any of these witnesses are unavailable, the Committee is willing to reconsider its ruling under standards similar to those in Federal Rule of Evidence 804.

8. The entire trial testimony of I.J. Cunningham, Willie E. Gary, Lisa Goldstein, Barbara Katzen, Carolyn Lewis, Alvoyd Merritt, the Honorable James C. Paine, Herman C. Perry, Mildred Pride, Herbert O. Reid, Frank Romano, Shirley Ross, Paul Snead, Ralph Stevenson, Delano Stewart, and Barbara Whiting-Wright in United States v. Hastings and United States v. Borders will be received into evidence. This testimony has been proffered by Judge Hastings, and the House has not objected.

9. Judge Hastings' application to include in the record as substantive evidence the entire trial records of both United States v. Hastings, No. 81-596-CR-ETG (S.D. Fla. 1983) and United States v. Borders, No. 82-75-A (N.D. Ga. 1982) is denied. The Committee sees no reason to further expand the record here with volumes of transcripts and hundreds of exhibits from two separate proceedings. The Committee has been, and continues to be, willing to accept specific proffered items of testimony and documentary evidence, but believes that acceptance of the full record of two other trials as substantive evidence would be more confusing than informative.

The Committee defers ruling on Judge Hastings' alternative proffer of the entire Hastings trial record not as substantive evidence, but rather to show that the 1981 bribery allegations and the false statement issues arising out of his defense of them were presented fully and fairly to the jury which acquitted him. Judge Hastings argues that this should be a key, if not dispositive, fact in the Senate trial; the House managers assert, to the contrary, that this evidence has no relevance whatever, and Judge Hastings should be convicted or acquitted based solely on the evidence adduced here.

The Committee does not believe it appropriate to decide an important issue of weight and relevancy for the Senate in the context of ruling on whether certain prior testimony may be received as substantive evidence. It may be that Judge Hastings' argument can properly be put to the full Senate for such weight as any Senator chooses to give it. At this time the Committee notes that a decision to include the entire Hastings trial record in its "report of evidence" to the Senate may have the effect of commingling the evidence admissible generally with a very similar body of evidence admitted only for limited purposes. The Committee invites Judge Hastings to make an alternative suggestion of a mechanism for presenting his argument regarding the effect, if any, of his 1983 acquittal to the full Senate -- for example, through creation of a summary of witnesses and exhibits in the 1983 trial for entry into the record here -- without the potential for confusion that may be inherent in duplicating the entire prior trial record.

B. Documents

In its Fifth Order, dated June 8, 1989, the Committee directed the parties to exchange lists and copies of their intended exhibits and, by not later than June 27, 1989, to serve notice of any objection to the opposing party's exhibits on the basis of authenticity, genuineness or status as a business record. The Committee's order provided that, in the absence of a "reasoned and specific objection" from the opposing party, the offering party would not be required to prove authenticity, genuineness or status as a business record for any document so identified.

The House has complied with the Committee's order by providing a list and copies of exhibits in a timely fashion. Judge Hastings has not. Accordingly, the Committee rules that the House shall retain the right to object on any basis to documentary evidence offered by Judge Hastings, including objections based on a position that Judge Hastings' failure to supply his exhibit list in a timely fashion has caused unfair surprise.

Judge Hastings has, however, made specific objections to some of the proffered House exhibits: Nos. 1, 4, 10, 15, 23, 38b, 43b, 44b, 45b, 46b, 47b, 48b, 49b, 50b, 51b, 52b, 53b, 54b, 55b, 56b, 57b, 58b, 59b, 60b, 61b, 62b, 64b, 65b, 66, 67, 120, 123, 124, 128, 129, 139, 141, 145, 147, 175b, 185b, 186b, 187b, 190, 192, 193b, 194b, 201, 202, 203, 206, 207, 208 and 209. Accordingly, all other proffered House exhibits will be received as genuine, authentic, and where appropriate, as regularly recorded business entries.

With regard to Judge Hastings' specific objections to proffered House exhibits, the Committee rules as follows:

Exhibits 1, 15, 66, 67, 120, 123, 124, 128, 129, 139, 141, 145, 147, 192, 201, 202, 203, 206, 207, 208, and 209:
Ruling reserved, subject to argument before the Committee.

Exhibits 4, 175b, 190: Exhibits will be accepted as genuine, authentic, and, where appropriate, as regularly recorded business entries.

Exhibits 10, 23: Exhibits accepted if legible.

Exhibits 38b, 43b, 44b, 45b, 46b, 47b, 48b, 49b, 50b, 51b, 52b, 53b, 54b, 55b, 56b, 57b, 58b, 59b, 60b, 61b, 62b, 64b, 65b, 185b, 186b, 187b, 193b, and 194b: Respondent objects to the admission of these transcripts of tape recorded conversations on the grounds that the transcripts are "inaccurate and incomplete" as well as on "other [unspecified] grounds." The Committee recognizes that the tapes themselves are the best evidence of the contents of recorded conversations, but believes that the transcripts tendered by the House are appropriately received as additional evidence.^{3/} Accordingly, these documents will be received. Leave is hereby given to Judge Hastings to submit any corrections he may wish made to the transcripts tendered by the House, and those corrections will be received as separate Hastings exhibits.

^{3/} Although not binding on the Committee or the Senate, this procedure is commonly followed in the courts. See e.g., Govt. of Virgin Islands v. Martinez, 847 F.2d 125, 128 (3d Cir. 1988); United States v. Rengifo, 789 F.2d 975, 980-83 (1st Cir. 1986), and cases cited therein.

C. Hearing Procedures

In order to provide for orderly proceedings, the parties are requested to alert the Committee to any legal issues or evidentiary matters that they anticipate may require ruling by the Committee and to submit short memoranda in support of their position. The parties should attempt to so advise the Committee at least three days in advance of when the need for a ruling is anticipated.

Judge Hastings is directed promptly to advise the House and the Committee of the order in which he anticipates that his witnesses will be called.

In re: Impeachment of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Louisiana)))))))
--	---------------------------------

JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S OPPOSITION TO THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES' MOTION TO ADMIT TRANSCRIPTS AND RECORDS FROM PRIOR JUDICIAL AND CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes Respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and opposes the House's Motion (filed on July 21, 2010, the "Motion") to admit as evidence in this proceeding the prior testimony and records from (1) the Fifth Circuit Judicial Council Special Committee hearing (the "Fifth Circuit Hearing") and (2) the House Impeachment Task Force hearings (the "House Task Force Hearings"). In support, Judge Porteous states as follows.

Introduction and Summary

Unlike all other modern judicial impeachments, this case comes to the Senate without a prior criminal trial record. Indeed, the Justice Department, after years of investigation and an extensive grand jury inquiry, expressly declined to bring any criminal charges against Judge Porteous. The prior proceedings in this case therefore consist solely of the Fifth Circuit Hearing and the House Task Force Hearings. Neither of these proceedings, however, was subject to the due process protections and requirements of a trial, including – critically – the constitutional right to confront and conduct full and fair cross-examination of adverse witnesses. Judge Porteous was forced to represent and defend himself without the benefit of counsel at both the Fifth Circuit Hearing and part of the House Task Force Hearings. The one-sided testimony elicited at those proceedings falls well short of any due process standard and should be excluded from the Senate trial. Judge Porteous has never had an adequate opportunity, guaranteed by the Constitution, to confront fully the witnesses who testified against him in the Fifth Circuit and House Hearings, which resembled grand jury proceedings aimed at securing an indictment. Those proceedings had little in common with the kind of adversarial examination of evidence necessary for a fair trial. The exclusion of testimony and records from such limited past proceedings, which is supported by prior precedent, serves the interests of justice and fairness.

The Senate is being asked here to approve an abbreviated trial where the accused has been given less than half the average period for an impeachment trial, has been denied discovery given to prior impeached federal judges, and is being prosecuted on the basis of testimony elicited in insufficiently adversarial prior proceedings. Unlike in previous modern impeachments, the Senate cannot draw reliable testimony from any prior trial record. The Senate's evidentiary hearing will be Judge Porteous's first and only chance at anything resembling a fair trial. In opposing the House's Motion, he seeks only to preserve the fairness of that trial, just as any member of this body would do if faced with similar charges, or consequences. The Senate has historically protected the rights of the accused by barring shortcuts and circumventions attempted by the House Managers,¹ and should continue to do so here.

Factual Background

The factual background relevant to the House's Motion and this Opposition is set out in detail in Judge Porteous's Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony and Limit the Presentation of ¹ No disrespect toward the House is intended by this statement. The Constitution charges the House with the prosecutor's role in impeachments. U.S. CONST. art. I, § 2, cl. 5 & § 3, cl. 6; see also Jonathan Turley, Congress As Grand Jury: The Role of the House of Representatives in the Impeachment of an American President, 67 GEO. WASH. L. REV. 735 (1999).

Testimonial Evidence to Live Witnesses (filed on July 21, 2010), which Judge Porteous incorporates herein by reference. The key facts can be summarized as follows:

- The U.S. Department of Justice declined to pursue any criminal charges against Judge Porteous following a nearly decade-long criminal investigation, which included extensive FBI witness interviews, numerous grand jury subpoenas, and voluminous grand jury testimony.
- Nevertheless, the Justice Department submitted a complaint to Fifth Circuit Chief Judge Edith Jones, who appointed a Special Investigatory Committee (the “Special Committee”), composed of herself, Fifth Circuit Judge Fortunato Benavides, and District Judge Sim Lake, to investigate the Justice Department’s complaint.
- Despite her involvement in denying Judge Porteous’s earlier disability motion, and her appointment of herself as a “complainant” in the Special Committee proceedings, Chief Judge Jones refused Judge Porteous’s request that she recuse herself.
- Less than two weeks before the scheduled start of the Fifth Circuit Hearing, Judge Porteous’s counsel withdrew.
- Though Judge Porteous repeatedly asked for time to retain new counsel, the Special Committee denied his requests and forced him to go forward at the Fifth Circuit Hearing without counsel, despite a clear requirement that he be permitted to have counsel in such a proceeding.
- At the Fifth Circuit Hearing, the Special Committee, through its investigator Ronald Woods, a former U.S. Attorney, called a number of witnesses to testify, including Judge

Porteous – who, after refusing to testify voluntarily, was issued statutory immunity at the last minute and compelled to testify.²

- The Special Committee thereafter issued a report, which, following review by the Judicial Council and Judicial Conference, led to an impeachment referral to the House.
- The House directed its Judiciary Committee to investigate, which it did through a specially-appointed House Impeachment Task Force.
- In addition to requesting and receiving numerous records from (among others) the Justice Department and the Fifth Circuit (including grand jury testimony and a transcript of Judge Porteous’s immunized Fifth Circuit Hearing testimony), the House Impeachment Task Force staff “interviewed over 70 individuals and took over 25 depositions” – none of which Judge Porteous was permitted to attend. (See H.R. Rpt. No. 111-427, at 7 (2010).)
- In November and December 2009, the House Impeachment Task Force held four hearings concerning Judge Porteous. As the House Impeachment Task Force made clear, these hearings “[i]d] not constitute a trial in any sense,” were not subject to “the procedural rules that would govern a federal trial,” and afforded Judge Porteous only a limited right of participation, including only “ten minutes of examination” for the witnesses that the House decided to call. (See Letter from A. Schiff and B. Goodlatte to R. Westling dated November 6, 2009; House Task Force Hearing Transcript, Ser. No. 111-43, at 5 (Nov. 17, 2009).)

² The impropriety of the House’s attempt to use Judge Porteous’s prior immunized testimony in this proceeding is the subject of a separate motion (filed on July 21, 2010) and opposition (being filed concurrently herewith). As detailed in those filings, it is entirely inappropriate for the House to attempt to rely upon Judge Porteous’s immunized testimony before the Fifth Circuit as support for its request to introduce other prior testimony in this proceeding. (See House Motion at 6.)

- During the first House Task Force Hearing, Representative Schiff admonished “Judge Porteous and his counsel that no objections or other interruptions in the testimony will be permitted,” and explained that the House’s impeachment inquiry “is not a trial, but is more in the nature of a grand jury proceeding.” (House Task Force Hearing Transcript, Ser. No. 111-43, at 5 (Nov. 17, 2009).)
- The House subsequently approved four articles of impeachment against Judge Porteous (see H.R. Res. 1301), which it presented to the Senate, and which led to this proceeding.
- The House has preliminarily designated either eighteen or nineteen witnesses to testify before the Senate³ and now seeks to admit (among other things) prior testimony elicited from these (and other) individuals during the Fifth Circuit Hearing and the House Task Force Hearings.

Argument

Contrary to the House’s assertion, admitting all of the prior testimony and materials from the Fifth Circuit Hearing and the House Task Force Hearings will not provide the Senate with a complete record of the witnesses’ testimony.” (House Motion at 5-6.) Indeed, that material was created outside of the adversarial judicial process that is specifically designed to guarantee accurate and reliable evidence. Rather than establish the alleged facts in an adversarial process, the House seeks to substitute decidedly one-sided prior testimony and other material for the record of the Senate, which would otherwise be developed in an equitable process subject to rigorous cross-examination.

It is particularly notable that the House is not seeking to admit all of the grand jury testimony (which led to the Justice Department’s decision not to pursue any charges against ³ See House Preliminary Witness Designation, filed June 8, 2010, and House Supplemental Filing thereto, filed June 30, 2010.

Judge Porteous) or any of the testimony from depositions and interviews that the House Impeachment Task Force unilaterally set and exclusively attended. By excluding this testimony from its request, the House recognized that testimony was inherently untrustworthy, incomplete, and defective. (See Letter from the House Managers to the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee Chairman and Vice Chairman dated April 13, 2010, stating that “[a]t this point in time the House does not anticipate seeking to admit testimony or witness statements that have not been subject to cross-examination.”) Yet the House now seeks to admit similarly tainted prior testimony, which was elicited in earlier proceedings where Judge Porteous and his attorneys had no opportunity to conduct even minimally adequate cross-examination.⁴ Such untested testimony, based on selective questioning by Judge Porteous’s adversaries, has no place in a fair Senate trial.

I. Testimony from the Fifth Circuit Hearing Should Be Excluded

The Sixth Amendment to the Constitution guarantees a fundamental American right – namely that, “[i]n all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right ... to be confronted with the witnesses against him....”⁵ U.S. CONST. amend. VI. The “main and essential purpose of confrontation is to secure ... the opportunity of cross-examination.” Davis v. Alaska, 415 U.S.

⁴ Indeed, the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee specifically highlighted the “limited opportunities for examination that [Judge Porteous] had” in the Fifth Circuit and House Task Force Hearings as a basis for allowing him to take four depositions in advance of the evidentiary hearing. (See Disposition of Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.’s Motions to Compel and for Depositions, dated July 19, 2010, at 2.)

⁵ Though the parties may debate the ultimate scope of the phrase “criminal prosecutions,” this Senate impeachment proceeding is sufficiently similar to a criminal prosecution that the Sixth Amendment rights to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses should attach. Indeed, the House (in keeping with its past precedent) framed the Articles of Impeachment against Judge Porteous with reference to the criminal code, and the Senate (in keeping with its past precedent) has endeavored to provide a fair and equitable proceeding, which ensures both procedural and substantive due process. Moreover, the Senate is pursuing this proceeding in order to decide whether it will “convict” Judge Porteous and strip him of the constitutional office that he is otherwise entitled to hold for life.

308, 315-16 (1974) (citations omitted). Cross-examination is critically important because it is “the principal means by which the believability of a witness and the truth of his testimony are tested.” Id. at 316. Indeed, according to the Supreme Court, “the right of confrontation and cross-examination is an essential and fundamental requirement for the kind of fair trial which is this country’s constitutional goal.” Pointer v. Texas, 380 U.S. 400, 404-05 (1965). Without rigorous cross-examination, a witness’s perceptions, memory, biases, prejudices, motives, and character for truthfulness will not be sufficiently tested and exposed. Therefore, the U.S. Supreme Court has held that prior testimonial statements can be admitted in a later proceeding only where (1) the witness is unavailable to testify at that later proceeding and (2) the individual against whom the prior testimony will be used had a full and fair opportunity to cross-examine the witness under oath when the earlier testimony was elicited. Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 51-52, 59 (2004). The House cannot demonstrate either of these requirements.

First, the House has neither asserted nor demonstrated that any of the witnesses who testified during the Fifth Circuit Hearing are unavailable to testify before the Senate. As in past impeachment cases, the House should be required to call the witnesses upon whose testimony it intends to rely, examine them under oath before the Senate, and allow them to be subjected to full and fair cross-examination.⁶ Only then will Judge Porteous finally have the opportunity, guaranteed by the Constitution, to confront the witnesses against him in his first and only trial.

Second, Judge Porteous did not have a full or fair opportunity to examine the witnesses who testified at the Fifth Circuit Hearing. As noted above, he was forced to appear and defend himself at that hearing without the assistance of counsel because the Fifth Circuit's Special Committee refused to allow him any time to obtain new counsel after his former counsel withdrew. This refusal was both grossly unfair and in direct contradiction of the rules governing the Fifth Circuit Hearing, which provided that Judge Porteous had the right to be "represented by counsel at all stages" of the proceedings. (Former Fifth Circuit Rule 11 (now Rule 14).)⁷ The Fifth Circuit's denial of Judge Porteous's right to the assistance of counsel irreparably impaired his ability to conduct full and fair cross-examination. Judge Porteous's brief "opportunity" to cross-examine witnesses before the Fifth Circuit – hastily, alone, and without the assistance of counsel – was window dressing, an "empty formality" that did not satisfy the requirement of "full, substantial and meaningful [cross-examination] in view of the realities of the situation." United States v. Franklin, 235 F. Supp. 338, 341 (D.D.C. 1964). Moreover, although Judge Porteous was able to call and/or examine certain witnesses,⁸ he was prevented from calling and examining the Justice Department lawyers (Messrs. Ainsworth and Petalas) who oversaw the government's investigation of him.

⁶ Consistent with his July 21, 2010 Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony, Judge Porteous does not oppose the use of prior testimony to impeach the credibility of live testifying witnesses. Accordingly, excluding prior testimony will not prejudice the House, as it will remain able to call the witnesses that it previously examined, question them before the Senate, and impeach them if their answers deviate from their prior testimony.

The testimony elicited during the Fifth Circuit Hearing was incomplete and constitutionally defective, and should be excluded from this proceeding.⁹

⁷ See Rules Governing Complaints of Judicial Misconduct or Disability, a current copy of which is available on the Fifth Circuit's website at:

<http://www.ca5.uscourts.gov/clerk/localJudicialMisconductRules.pdf>.

⁸ The House argues that Judge Porteous was not prejudiced by his lack of counsel at the Fifth Circuit Hearing because he "attended that hearing, heard the witnesses, ... cross-examined the witnesses, and called his own witnesses." (House Motion at 2.) This argument must fail. The Supreme Court has specifically held that the denial of an accused's right to full and fair cross-examination is "constitutional error of the first magnitude and no amount of showing of want of prejudice" can cure it. Davis, 415 U.S. at 318 (quoting Brookhart v. Janis, 384 U.S. 1, 3 (1966)).

⁹ To do otherwise would perpetuate the prejudice visited upon Judge Porteous in the Fifth Circuit, as well as violate the requirement that impeachment trials "be conducted in keeping with the basic principles of due process that have been enunciated by the courts and ironically, by the

II. Testimony from the House Task Force Hearings Should Be Excluded

The testimony from the House Task Force Hearings should be excluded for the following four reasons. First, as with the prior Fifth Circuit testimony, the House has failed to assert – much less demonstrate – that any of the witnesses who testified at the House Task Force Hearings are unavailable to testify before the Senate. The absence of this critical fact erects a constitutional bar to the admission of prior testimony. Crawford, 541 U.S. at 51-52, 59.

Second, the House Managers made clear that the Task Force Hearings did “not constitute a trial in any sense” and were not subject to “the procedural rules that would govern a federal trial.” (See Letter from A. Schiff and B. Goodlatte to R. Westling dated November 6, 2009, at 1-2.) Representative Schiff further explained that the House Task Force Hearings were “more in the nature of a grand jury proceeding,” where “no objections or other interruptions in the testimony will be permitted.” (House Task Force Hearing Transcript, Ser. No. 111-43, at 5 (Nov. 17, 2009); see also Jonathan Turley, Congress As Grand Jury: The Role of the House of Representatives in the Impeachment of an American President, 67 GEO. WASH. L. REV. 735 (1999).) Just as grand jury testimony is regularly excluded from trial proceedings,¹⁰ so too should the testimony elicited during the grand-jury-like House Task Force Hearings be excluded from Judge Porteous’s trial before the Senate.

Congress itself.” Hastings v. United States, 802 F. Supp. 490, 492, 504 (D.D.C. 1992), vacated, 988 F.2d 1280 (1993) (explaining that “[f]airness and due process must be the watchword whenever a branch of the United States government conducts a trial, whether it be in a criminal case, a civil case or a case of impeachment.”).

¹⁰ See Fed. R. Evid. 801(c), 802, and 804(b)(1); 5 Christopher B. Mueller & Laird C. Kirkpatrick, Federal Evidence § 8:120 (3d ed. 2010) (noting that the government cannot invoke the former testimony hearsay exception “to offer prior grand jury testimony against defendants, because defendants have no right to attend grand jury proceedings or question witnesses”); United States v. Darwich, 337 F.3d 645, 658 (6th Cir. 2003) (excluding grand jury testimony because the defendant had no opportunity to examine the witness).

Third, Judge Porteous was afforded only a token opportunity to examine the witnesses called by the House to testify at the House Task Force Hearings. As discussed in the House Managers' November 2009 letter, Judge Porteous was restricted to only "ten minutes of examination" for those witnesses that the House decided to call to testify against him. (See Letter from A. Schiff and B. Goodlatte to R. Westling dated November 6, 2009.) While the House argues that Judge Porteous's counsel was afforded more time to conduct cross-examination when he specifically requested it (House Motion at 5), that minor courtesy does not change the fact that the House Hearings were designed and conducted (like a grand jury) in order to provide support for the House's forthcoming Articles of Impeachment – not to provide Judge Porteous a full and fair opportunity for cross-examination or to determine the ultimate truth of the allegations in the Articles of Impeachment. Given the limitations placed on Judge Porteous's ability to cross-examine witnesses, the House Task Force Hearing testimony was not tested and filtered by a true adversarial process. That testimony should therefore be excluded.

Fourth, Judge Porteous was unrepresented during critical portions of the House Task Force Hearings. Due to a conflict of interest on the part of his prior counsel, Judge Porteous's lead counsel was not present for the testimony of Louis and Lori Marcotte – two individuals central to the allegations contained in Article II.¹¹ As the House acknowledges, "no attorney for Judge Porteous appeared at that hearing." (House Motion at 4.) This deprivation of counsel, ¹¹ Former legal counsel Richard Westling represented the Marcottes in related proceedings in Louisiana and continues to represent them today. When the conflict was raised before the House, Mr. Westling wrote to Louis and Lori Marcotte explaining the possible conflict issues and seeking a waiver of any possible conflict. They declined to consent to such a waiver. Mr. Westling sought to have another lawyer, Remy Voisin Starns, appear in the House proceedings when Louis Marcotte was called as a witness. When Mr. Starns was unable to be present, Mr. Westling elected to avoid any immediate conflict by leaving the proceedings. This left Judge Porteous to continue at the House Task Force Hearing without his then-lead trial attorney.

reminiscent of the Fifth Circuit proceeding, severely impaired Judge Porteous’s ability to conduct even a token ten minute cross-examination of the Marcottes.

The Senate should deny the House’s Motion and exclude all testimony from the House Task Force Hearings.

III. Past Precedent Does Not Support Admission of Prior Testimony from Either the Fifth Circuit Hearing or the House Task Force Hearings

The House’s reliance on prior Senate Impeachment Trial Committee rulings in the Claiborne, Hastings, and Nixon impeachment proceedings is misplaced. None of those decisions countenanced the introduction of prior testimony where the proffered testimony was not subject to full and fair cross-examination. In fact, each of those cases was preceded by at least one full federal criminal trial, governed by the Federal Rules of Evidence, the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and the panoply of rights guaranteed by the Constitution – including the Sixth Amendment right to confront and fully and fairly cross-examine adverse witnesses.

In Claiborne, the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee granted the House’s request to introduce “select transcripts from Judge Claiborne’s second trial.” (House Motion at 9.) Drawn from his second criminal trial, the prior testimony that the Committee allowed the House to introduce had already been tested and refined by all of the procedural and substantive safeguards applicable to federal criminal trials – including full and fair cross-examination. Indeed, as the House itself notes, Committee Chairman Mathias highlighted the significance of the fact that the testimony at issue had been subject to cross-examination in a federal criminal trial. (Id.) While the House may wish to argue that any token opportunity for cross-examination will suffice, the decision of the Claiborne Committee does not support such an overreaching position.

In Hastings, the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee again dealt with a request by the House to introduce certain prior testimony from Judge Hastings’s earlier criminal trial. (House Motion at 11-12.) In ruling on the House's request (granting it in part and denying it in part), the Committee set out general principles governing the introduction of prior testimony. Specifically, the Committee held that it is not "appropriate to admit prior testimony into evidence on key points where credibility, context or interpretation are in dispute – particularly where the opposing party has not had an opportunity for cross-examination." (S. Hrg. 101-194, pt. 2A, at 61-62 (1989), Eighth Order (dated July 10, 1989).)

The House incorrectly claims that the testimony it seeks to introduce "fits squarely within" this precedent. (House Motion at 14.) In fact, each aspect of this governing principle weighs against admitting prior testimony in this case. The prior testimony that the House is attempting to introduce bears on key points of witness credibility, factual context, and value judgments and interpretations that go to the heart of this case. To introduce such evidence would deny Judge Porteous, again, the opportunity to test such specific representations in a fair and open process. Thus, the Hastings precedent weighs against granting the House's request.

Finally, in Nixon, the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee yet again addressed a request by the House to admit materials from a prior criminal trial. (House Motion at 11.) In deciding to admit "all testimony and exhibits in Judge Nixon's criminal proceeding," the Committee specifically based its ruling on the fact that the "prior testimony has been the subject of adverse cross-examination, and its use will not prejudice any party." (S. Hrg. 101-247, at 199 (1989), First Order (dated July 25, 1989).) In this case, however, the prior testimony sought to be admitted by the House has not been the subject of full and fair adverse cross-examination. As a result, its use will significantly prejudice Judge Porteous. Thus, under the Nixon precedent, the House's Motion should be denied and the prior testimony excluded.

In the end, the House appears to have taken the position that, while cross-examination of prior testimony is required for admission before the Senate, any token opportunity for cross-examination – regardless of how limited – will do. This cannot be the standard. Indeed, the Claiborne, Hastings, and Nixon Committee decisions uniformly held that prior testimony is admissible in a subsequent impeachment trial where that testimony was elicited in a federal criminal trial, subject to all of the rights, procedures, and safeguards required therein. That simply is not the case here. The testimony that the House is seeking to admit in this proceeding was obtained in proceedings that afforded few or none of the procedural and substantive safeguards and rights inherent in a trial. Accordingly, that prior testimony should be excluded.

IV. The Senate Should Limit Non-Testimonial Exhibits and Other Record Materials from the Fifth Circuit Hearing and House Task Force Hearings

The House’s Motion broadly “requests that the complete evidentiary records of the Fifth Circuit Proceeding and the Task Force Impeachment Hearings be admissible.” (House Motion at 15.) This expansive request extends well beyond prior testimony, which should be excluded for the reasons discussed above, and includes exhibits and other materials accepted into the record in the prior Fifth Circuit and House Hearings. There is no need for such an indiscriminate dump of the “complete evidentiary record[]” from either the Fifth Circuit or the House Task Force Hearings. Granting such a request would unnecessarily burden the Senate with irrelevant and/or duplicative materials. Instead of saddling the Senate with the burden of organizing a sprawling set of materials, the House should specifically identify those documents and other materials that it believes are relevant to the Articles of Impeachment and seek the admission of only those materials. Such a process serves the interests of efficiency, clarity, and fairness.

In addition to objecting generally to the House’s attempted document-dump of Fifth Circuit and House Task Force Hearings materials into the Senate record, Judge Porteous also objects to the following two categories of material. First, Judge Porteous objects to the inclusion of material in the Senate record that is not specifically relevant to the House's Articles of Impeachment. To the extent that there are issues that either the Fifth Circuit or the House investigated, but which the House decided not to include within its Articles of Impeachment, it would be prejudicial to include such irrelevant material in the Senate record.

Second, Judge Porteous strongly objects to the inclusion of grand jury testimony transcripts in the Senate record. As noted in the House's Motion (at 3-4), Chief Judge Jones admitted into the Fifth Circuit record certain grand jury testimony. Nevertheless, Chief Judge Jones indicated that the Special Committee itself would not rely on that testimony, which – like all grand jury testimony – was elicited without any participation or opportunity for cross-examination by Judge Porteous. (Id. at 4; see also Fifth Circuit Hearing transcript, at 430.) To the extent that the House is attempting to bootstrap grand jury testimony into the Senate record by requesting that the Senate admit the “complete evidentiary records of the Fifth Circuit Proceedings,” that attempt is improper and should be rejected. The House should make specific requests for admission of prior record evidence in the context of its case in chief, as it would in a federal judicial proceeding, rather than seek to import globally any and all such evidence.

Conclusion

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate deny the House's Motion and not admit into evidence in this proceeding the prior, constitutionally-defective testimony and records from either the Fifth Circuit Hearing or the House Task Force Hearings.

JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S MOTION FOR AN EXTENDED EVIDENTIARY HEARING

NOW BEFORE THE SENATE, comes respondent, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., a Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana, and files this Motion for an Extended Evidentiary Hearing, which would allow the evidentiary hearings in this matter to continue past the currently scheduled five (5) days of hearings. Through this Motion, Judge Porteous is not requesting a delay in the start of the evidentiary hearings, but is requesting that the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee (the "Committee") add an additional three (3) days to the schedule so that the defense can fully present its case.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The evidentiary hearings in this matter are scheduled to take place between September 13, 2010 and September 17, 2010. (See Disposition of Judge G. Thomas Porteous Jr.'s Motion for a Continuance, dated June 21, 2010, at 7.) This amounts to only five days of hearings. Although daily times have not yet been set for the commencement and conclusion of the hearings, counsel for the Committee have indicated that they are prepared to hold the hearings before and after regular work hours on the scheduled dates to ensure that the hearings are, in fact, complete by September 17, 2010. The Committee's Order further advised that "no further continuances [delays] based on this issue shall be granted.” (Id.) Judge Porteous is not hereby requesting a continuance, but rather additional time within which to present his defense.

The House of Representatives has designated eighteen individuals as witnesses that it may call during the evidentiary hearings. (See Supplemental Filing by the House of Representatives in Support of its Preliminary Requests for Subpoenas and Immunity, filed on June 30, 2010.) The House specifically sought an immunity order for Judge Porteous, indicating that, if allowed, they intend to call Judge Porteous as a witness in their case-in-chief.¹ (Id. at 2.) Judge Porteous has not yet submitted his final Witness Subpoena Requests or Witness Immunity Requests, which are due on August 2, 2010. At the present time, Judge Porteous expects to call a similar number of witnesses as that proposed by the House of Representatives. The five days currently scheduled, even including time beyond normal work hours, cannot possibly accommodate a full trial addressing all of the issues raised in the Articles of Impeachment and all of the witnesses and testimony expected to occur.

ARGUMENT

Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Committee extend the currently scheduled evidentiary hearings to add three additional days of hearings beyond the currently scheduled five days.

The five-day hearing scheduled in this case is a fraction of the time afforded to the vast majority of previously accused judges. For the first time in over seven decades, the Senate will sit as a court of impeachment and conduct evidentiary hearings regarding a sitting federal judge in a case where the accused was never charged criminally for the same conduct, and no trial has been held in which the allegations and facts underlying the Articles of Impeachment could be tested, fully explored, and subjected to rigorous cross-examination.² In the absence of any prior trial in this case, this hearing will be the first full opportunity to examine key witnesses, on direct and in cross-examination. Further, this will be the first time testimony has been given in this matter by many of these witnesses.

The defense appreciates the willingness of the Committee to grant depositions of four of the key witnesses against Judge Porteous, but the need for more time at trial has been made greater by limiting depositions to only those four witnesses, and limiting the depositions to three hours each, all on a single day. (See Disposition of Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s Motions to Compel and For Depositions, dated July 19, 2010.) As a result, many of the persons whom Judge Porteous otherwise might have deposed will have to be examined for the first time at trial.

The result of the current schedule is to allow Judge Porteous roughly two days to present his defense to four Articles of Impeachment, each containing a number of different alleged acts of misconduct, and dozens of witnesses. The task is not only wearing and difficult on everyone; it raises a real potential for depriving Judge Porteous of a realistic opportunity to defend himself.

While the defense respects that modern Senators have exceptionally busy schedules, prior Senates have afforded far greater time for a federal judge to oppose the extraordinary step of removal. It would be contrary to the Framers' expectation that such a trial allow for a full and fair examination of the claims and evidence charged by the impeachment. The abbreviated trial in this case undermines the traditions of this institution in carrying out its duties under Article I of the United States Constitution.

Judge Porteous is seeking only a modest increase in the trial period and far less than the time afforded to prior – including relatively recently – accused judges. More importantly, past trials show how critical witnesses often take almost a full day of examination by both sides in an impeachment matter. For example, in the Alcee Hastings Impeachment proceedings, on the first day of evidentiary hearings – Monday, July 10, 1989 – after opening statements by the parties and the resolution of procedural issues, the Committee was only able to complete the testimony of one witness. (See Contents of Hastings Evidentiary Hearings, attached as Exhibit 1.) On the second day, Tuesday, July 11, a single witness exhausted almost the entire day, allowing the Senate merely to begin the testimony of a second witness. (Id.) On the third day, Wednesday, July 12, the prior day's witness resumed and the Committee was able to get through one additional witness and begin the testimony of another, William Murphy. (Id.) On Thursday, July 13, the fourth day of hearings, the Committee resumed Murphy's testimony but was unable to complete his testimony that same day. (Id.) Finally, on Friday, July 14, Murphy's testimony concluded and the Committee received the live testimony of six other witnesses (one of which had to be continued on Monday, July 17, the next hearing day). (Id.) In sum, the Hastings Committee received the live testimony of only eleven witnesses during the first five days of their hearings, which did not include the testimony of the accused (which lasted three days on its own later in the hearings). (Id.) The Hastings trial is not unique.

In the Walter L. Nixon impeachment proceedings, the Committee only heard the testimony of ten witnesses over the course of the four day trial. (See Contents of Nixon Evidentiary Hearings, attached as Exhibit 2.) In the Harry E. Claiborne impeachment proceedings, the parties and the Committee moved particularly quickly, but were still only able to complete nineteen witnesses (only one more than proposed by the house in the instant matter) in the first five days of hearings. (See Contents of Claiborne Evidentiary Hearings, attached as Exhibit 3.) Of course, in each of the above mentioned matters (Hastings, Nixon, and Claiborne), the parties and the Senate had the benefit of a fully developed record from already completed criminal trials, including transcripts of sworn testimony and previously admitted exhibits, not to mention the developed record that the Senate could lean on in its review of the facts.

Beyond the number of witnesses the Committee is likely to get through in any given day, previous individuals who have been impeached have been afforded far more time for evidentiary hearings. For example:

- In 1804, in the impeachment trial of John Pickering, the Senate considered four articles of impeachment over the course of approximately six days. See ELEANORE BUSHNELL, CRIMES, FOLLIES, AND MISFORTUNES: THE FEDERAL IMPEACHMENT TRIALS 45-52 (Univ. of Illinois Press 1992); see generally 13 Annals of Cong. 315-68 (1852).
- In 1805, the Senate impeachment trial of Samuel Chase lasted approximately twenty days, during which the Senate considered eight articles of impeachment. See BUSHNELL, supra, at 63-84; see also, SAMUEL H. SMITH AND THOMAS LLOYD, TRIAL OF SAMUEL SMITH, Vol. 1, 23-387 (Washington City: Printed for Samuel H. Smith 1805).
- In 1831, James Peck's Senate impeachment trial lasted approximately twenty-seven days, during which the Senate considered only one article of impeachment based on a single contested act. See Hinds' Precedents, Vol. III, Ch. 73; see also, ARTHUR J. STANSBURY, REPORT OF THE TRIAL OF JAMES H. PECK (Hillard, Gray and Co. 1833). The trial included lengthy summations, including a three day concluding speech by Judge Peck's counsel. See BUSHNELL, supra, at 107.
- In 1862, West Hughes Humphreys was convicted following a one day Senate impeachment trial on seven articles of impeachment. See id. at 122. The brevity of the trial, however, was largely due to the fact that Judge Humphreys did not attend the trial and no case was presented in his defense, likely in large part to his desertion of his position and acceptance of an appointment under the Confederate States prior to the impeachment trial. See id. at 117-18, 124.

- In 1905, the Senate impeachment trial of Charles Swayne lasted approximately thirteen days. See Hinds' Precedents, Vol. III, Ch. 78; see also, 58 Cong. Rec. S56-725 (1905). During the course of that trial, the Senate heard from approximately forty witnesses and considered twelve articles of impeachment. See BUSHNELL, supra, at 200-05. Judge Swayne was acquitted on all counts. See Hinds' Precedents, Vol. III, Ch. 78, at § 2485.
- In 1912 and 1913, the Senate considered thirteen articles of impeachment against Robert Archbald in an impeachment trial lasting approximately twenty-two days. See 62 Cong. Rec. S95-1678 (1913). Mr. Archbald was convicted on all counts. See id.
- In 1933, the Senate considered five articles of impeachment against Harold Louderback in a trial lasting approximately eight days. See BUSHNELL, supra, at 252-63. The Senate heard testimony from approximately fifty witnesses. See id. The defense called thirty witnesses, including Judge Louderback, who spoke on his own behalf as to all the charges against him. See id. at 257-58.
- In 1936, the Senate impeachment trial of Halsted Ritter lasted approximately eleven days. See 74 Cong. Rec. S77-684 (1936). The Senate considered seven articles of impeachment, and Judge Ritter was convicted on the single omnibus article of impeachment after being acquitted on each of the six specific articles. See id. at 638.
- On September 15, 1986, the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee began hearing seven days of witness testimony in the Harry Claiborne impeachment trial. See Exhibit 3; Hearings Before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee United States Senate, S. Hrg. 99-812, Pt. 1 (1986) (hereinafter "S. Hrg. 99-812"); see also United States Senate, The Impeachment Trial of Harry E. Claiborne (1986), available at http://www.senate.gov/artandhistory/history/common/briefing/Impeachment_Claiborne.htm (hereinafter "Claiborne Trial"). Nineteen witnesses were called and the Senate considered four Articles of Impeachment. See Exhibit 3; S. Hrg. 99-812; see also Claiborne Trial, supra.
- In 1989, in the impeachment proceedings of Alcee Hastings, the Senate heard testimony from more than fifty witnesses and considered seventeen articles of impeachment over the course of eighteen days. Hastings' own testimony itself took three days. See Exhibit 1; Hearings Before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee United States Senate, S. Hrg. 101-194, Pts. 2A and 2B (1989).
- In September 1989, the evidentiary hearings in the Senate impeachment trial of Walter Nixon lasted four days, during which the Senate heard testimony from a mere ten witnesses on three articles of impeachment. See Exhibit 2; Hearings Before the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee United States Senate, S. Hrg. 101-247, Pt. 2 (1989). Nixon was convicted. The trial followed Nixon's criminal conviction of making false statements to a grand jury, which was also the basis for Articles I and II of the Articles of Impeachment. Id. at 4.

Beyond Humphreys' impeachment proceedings, which was necessarily short because he failed to show up and present a defense, only one Senate impeachment trial of a federal judge was completed in less than five days. (See Nixon impeachment, taking only four days but also only requiring ten witnesses.) The average Senate impeachment trial of a federal judge lasted 12 days – more than double that which is currently allotted for the instant matter.³ Judge Porteous is seeking roughly half of that average period despite the fact that, unlike some of these judges, he has never had the benefit of an actual trial.

In comparing the upcoming proceeding with previous impeachment proceedings, it must be remembered that although there are four Articles of Impeachment filed against Judge Porteous, each Article contains numerous factual allegations, each one of which would have been a separate Article in many past Articles of Impeachment.⁴ Thus, in reality, there are approximately 22 Articles of Impeachment against Judge Porteous that must be tried in what is now a five-day period.⁵

If the defense is truly only to be allotted a little over two days (taking into account opening statements and procedural matters), which necessarily includes its cross-examination of House witnesses, Judge Porteous will be denied the opportunity to call witnesses he believes are essential to his defense. In such a reduced time frame, only certain witnesses will be able to be called and prepared, only certain questions and lines of inquiry planned, and the overall strategy

³ This figure was calculated based on the following figures: Pickering (6 days); Chase (20 days); Peck (27 days); Humphreys (1 day); Swayne (13 days); Archbald (22 days); Louderback (8 days); Ritter (11 days); Claiborne (7 days); Hastings (18 days); and Nixon (4 days).

⁵ It should also be noted that the granting of any of Judge Porteous' Motions to Dismiss would have the effect of shortening the time necessary for a fair and complete trial.

of the defense will necessarily be altered. The abbreviated period for trial in this case magnifies the problem before both the House of Representatives and the Fifth Circuit. Before the House, Judge Porteous was allowed only ten minutes to examine witnesses. (See Transcript of House of Representatives Judiciary Committee Hearing before the Task Force on Judicial Impeachment, Serial No. 111-43, (Nov. 17, 2009) at 5, stating “counsel for Judge Porteous will be permitted to question any of the witnesses that he so chooses for 10 minutes each.”) Now, after being given less time to prepare than Hastings and less discovery, he is being given just over two days to present his entire defense to these charges for the first time. Notably, the House has also previously suggested that they will need more time than currently allotted. (See April 13, 2010 Letter from Alan Baron to Committee, stating “[t]he House believes it can put on its case-in-chief in 30 hours of direct testimony”; see also May 11, 2010 Letter from Alan Baron to Committee, stating “[b]ased on the parties' estimates of the time necessary for trial, we fear there is a reasonable possibility the trial could not be completed in this time frame.”)

It is obviously necessary to resolve this matter in advance of the trial to allow counsel to determine what witnesses can be practically called in defense of Judge Porteous.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, Judge Porteous respectfully requests that the Senate extend the number of day for the evidentiary hearings to allow for the hearings to continue past the currently scheduled time frame.

In The Senate of the United States

Sitting as a Court of Impeachment

In re:)
Impeachment of G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.,)
United States District Judge for the) Eastern District of Louisiana)

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES' OPPOSITION TO JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.'S MOTION FOR AN EXTENDED EVIDENTIARY HEARING

The House of Representatives (the "House"), through its Managers and counsel, respectfully opposes Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s "Motion for an Extended Evidentiary Hearing." In support of its Opposition, the House respectfully submits:

The House believes this case can be tried and completed in the week of September 13–17, 2010 if each side is allotted 20 hours of trial time. This may well require occasionally setting longer than an 8 hour day, but it is achievable. This estimate assumes a good faith effort to stipulate to uncontested facts, including authenticity of documents. The House has presented 308 proposed stipulations of fact and designated numerous documents whose authenticity should not be in dispute. Judge Porteous has not responded to date to these proposed stipulations, nor has he proposed any stipulations of fact or authenticity.

The House anticipates listing a total of 20 potential witnesses. Several of them are listed on a contingent basis and may not be called to testify. Judge Porteous has not produced a meaningful witness list to date, but there is an indication that he intends to list 18 witnesses.

The virtue of a specific number of hours for each side to try its case is that it forces all parties to use the time allotment economically and not waste time on peripheral matters. Accordingly, the House reiterates its view that each side should be allocated 20 hours to try its case and that the trial should be completed during the week of September 13, 2010, as presently scheduled.

WHEREFORE, the House opposes Judge Porteous's Motion for an Extended Evidentiary Hearing and believes that Motion should be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

THE UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

ORDER ON PRETRIAL HEARING

The Committee will hear oral arguments in the Pretrial Hearing scheduled for Wednesday, August 4, 2010 on the following motions:

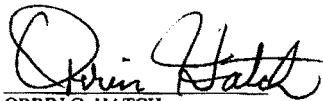

- 1) Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s Motion to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment as Unconstitutionally Aggregated;
- 2) The House of Representative's and Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s motions regarding the use of immunized testimony; and
- 3) The House of Representative's and Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s motions regarding the use of prior testimony.

The Committee will withhold hearing argument on Judge Porteous's four motions to dismiss individual Articles of Impeachment as the motions rely on evidence that the Committee has not yet received. Additionally, Judge Porteous's Motion for an Extended Evidentiary Hearing is premature given that final witness lists and stipulations have not yet been submitted to the Committee. Accordingly, these motions are held for future consideration.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Good afternoon. I will now call this meeting of Senate Impeachment Trial Committee on the articles against Judge G. Thomas Porteous. The purpose of this meeting is to hear oral arguments on some of the pretrial motions filed by the parties -- excuse me.

As the parties are aware, the committee reserves hearing some of the motions filed because in our judgment the committee could not properly consider the motions without hearing the facts that will be presented at the evidentiary hearing in September.

So we will not make any rulings on those motions until we have had factual presentations that are necessary in order to make decisions on those motions. The parties have been informed that this motion's hearing will not follow the normal congressional hearing format. It will be more akin to oral argument before an appellate court.

Each party will have up to 20 minutes to present their case on each of the three issues listed -- issue areas listed on the agenda. During those 20 minutes, members of the committee may interrupt the parties to ask questions. We hope this will provide for a free-flowing and full discussion of the issues that have been raised by the parties today.

Judge Porteous is the moving party for the first motion we will consider, and the House of Representatives is the movant on the final two motions. The moving party may reserve some of their 20 minutes of argument for rebuttal.

Counsel, please inform us, if you wish to do so, on how much time you wish to reserve before you begin your argument.

As a preliminary matter, the committee received a motion from two former members of Judge Porteous' defense team, Rennie Sterns and Samuel Dalton. They moved that the committee allow them to withdraw from the case for the same conflict of interest reasons for which Judge Porteous' former lead counsel was disqualified. We hereby grant their motion to withdraw.

With that, unless one of my colleagues wishes to add anything before we begin, we will now hear arguments on the first motion.

Mr. Turley, would you like to reserve any time for rebuttal?

MR. TURLEY: Yes, we would, indeed, like to reserve five minutes on rebuttal.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF JONATHAN TURLEY
ON BEHALF OF JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.

Good afternoon, Chairman McCaskill, Vice-Chair Senator Hatch, members of the Impeachment Trial Committee. My name is Jonathan Turley. I am the Shapiro Professor of Public Interest Law at George Washington University, and I am counsel for Judge Porteous, a judge on the United States District Court, for the Eastern District of Louisiana.

The motions today address the unique role that the Senate has in the constitutional impeachment process. This is a process that has only been used 14 times in the history of this Republic, but only seven removals of judges. It is a process that has a very long history that goes back to the beginning of the Republic.

In that process the United States Senate has a unique role, not just in determining whether a judge will be removed, but the conditions under which a judge will be removed. In essence, the Senate is the gatekeeper in terms of the procedures and the protections afforded to not just the constitutional process, but the accused.

Today, in this first motion, we are dealing with a tactic called aggregation. For those of us who write in this field, this is well known; for those who are not in the field, it may be less so, but aggregation has always been controversial. It is sometimes called omnibus articles. And what happens is that you will occasionally see, in the history of impeachments, the House produced very specific articles -- the way, quite frankly, it should be done -- allowing the Senate to vote on whether an act occurred and whether that act should be the basis for removal.

On a few occasions, we have seen an omnibus article added to that list. That's an article that makes reference to multiple acts. Now those have been very controversial. The Ritter case, particularly, was controversial.

What is different in this impeachment is that the House has aggregated all of the articles. That is while, if you look at impeachments, like that of former Judge Hastings, you had 17 articles with very specific acts, and so the Senate was able to look at this after that, and determine if that occurred and whether it could be grounds for removal.

Indeed, of those 17 articles with

Hastings, 14 were specific false statements, often on the same subject, but they were separated out correctly, mind you, by the House, so that the Senate could determine if 2/3 of the members agreed with that article, so there was a clear record that the Constitution demands.

The Constitution demands that the record show not simply that you find that this is removable conduct that did in fact occur, but that 2/3 of you find such an act occurred.

What we have here are four articles with multiple allegations, and we have suggested that they are constitutionally defective, but we also understand that this body does not control the House, and that, historically, the Senate has felt an obligation to hear these articles.

So we have suggested an alternative, and that alternative is to say, when faced with an aggregated article, the Senate will do preliminary votes on those allegations, leading to the final vote of the article. I don't think anyone disagrees that you have that authority; but the point of this is that the Senate could do, frankly, a great deal of good, in terms of our constitutional process, by telling the House, if you are going to aggregate articles, you must understand we are going to do our duty, we are going to vote on each of those allegations.

After all, if members of this committee were facing these type of allegations they would demand nothing less. They would demand the right to be able to get a vote on what people said that they have done and whether those acts constitute a removable offense.

This issue has a long record of Senators objecting to aggregated articles. The well-known Senator George Sutherland from Utah was very vocal about this --

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: Madam Chair? May I ask a question?

SENATOR McCASKILL: The Senators are free to interrupt and ask questions at any moment during the presentation.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: In the case of Judge Walter Nixon, didn't the committee find, in that case, that the House has substantial discretion in determining how to aggregate acts of misconduct in framing the articles of impeachment, and that the committees, while these types of proceedings are rare, that the committees have historically chosen to aggregate multiple factual allegations in one single impeachment article?

MR. TURLEY: Senator, you are absolutely correct, that the Senate has previously said, the Senate doesn't control the house, the House has the authority to write the articles any way they want. This has been controversial with Senators who have objected in the past, but they accepted the articles as what they are. What is different here, Senator, is we now have an aggregation of all the articles.

That is, we have finally reached a sort of nightmare scenario where instead of having one omnibus article at the end we have every article with multiple claims. The reason, Senator, this is particularly bad in this case is that Judge Porteous, unlike most modern impeachment candidates, has never had a criminal trial. And so this would be the first time he will have a full adversarial process to challenge the allegations.

But more importantly, our first access to these witnesses occurred this week. On Monday, we were given four depositions of only three hours each. Of those, we got about two and a half hours to question the witnesses. In that very short time, the witnesses directly contradicted a number of the acts claimed in the articles. It was the first time they were actively examined, and not surprisingly, they openly contradicted statements including acts that were attributed to their own testimony.

That makes the aggregation all the more difficult because what we will be presenting to you in the Senate is we are going to present the House's --

SENATOR MCCASKILL: Excuse me, let me interrupt you for a second. When you said Monday was the first action that you had to those witnesses, isn't it true that Judge Porteous had an opportunity to cross examine all those witnesses, both in the Fifth Circuit and in and the House proceedings?

MR. TURLEY: Senator, it was true that he was given ten minutes in the House proceedings in order to cross-examine the witnesses.

SENATOR MCCASKILL: And didn't they also have an opportunity in the Fifth Circuit?

MR. TURLEY: In the Fifth Circuit, he was representing himself. The Fifth Circuit would not delay the proceeding when his attorney quit, and what we've point out is that also in the Fifth Circuit, it's very limited opportunity to cross-examine, and the Marcottes, one of the key players with the allegations, were not even part that proceeding. So one of the things that we are saying is that this is the first full adversarial opportunity, and if you look at transcripts from Monday, you will see the result.

It's a testament to the adversarial process that when we specifically asked these witnesses, "this is what the House Report said you said," and they disagreed.

We asked people like Creely. We said, you know, the House Report says that you directly linked your loans or payments to the judge when you loaned him money to curatorships. He said that is absolutely not true. He said there was no relationship at all to curatorships.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Let's not get off on arguing the facts of the case here. I just want to establish what kind of opportunity your client has had for confrontation, cross-examination and the ability to discover what the witnesses will say. And it's my understanding that your client asked to extend time for examination in the House and was granted that extension.

MR. TURLEY: Yes, you are right, Madam

Chair, but if you look at amount of time he was given it was very, very limited. We are talking about the House that has interviewed dozens and dozens of witnesses. The judge was given very limited, roughly around 10 minutes a witness, with slight extensions for witness. I don't think any attorney would argue that that is a full adversarial opportunity.

But more importantly, if you look at depositions we did Monday, you will see what an adversarial deposition looks like and you will see the result. They contradict. And I am not actually arguing the facts here. The reason this is linked is because it is to try to convey to the Senate that aggregation itself has long been controversial, but in this particular case, it creates a very dangerous thing, because we are going to be showing you how critical facts that are alleged in the articles did not occur.

We have already laid out how one of the acts that they suggested --

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Counsel, let me interrupt for just a second.

This is not a judicial trial, we are agreed on that. If this were a judicial trial, and the counts at issue were framed in such a way that multiple instances of conduct were included in a single count, and an appellate judge was looking at that and could say well, you know what, I can't tell whether the jury actually agreed on any particular charge, because they were combined in a single count, that would be grounds for potentially overturning the jury's determination or the trial judge's determination if it were before a trial judge.

Is that doctrine pertinent here, and are we, do you believe, under the same strictures as a judicial officer? Or does the impeachment process that we are involved in allow us to make an aggregated determination, simply because it's different from a judicial process?

SENATOR HATCH: If Senator would yield, if I may could just add to that, rule 23 of our impeachment committee rules states that, an article, quote, "shall not be divisible for the purpose of voting thereon at any time during the trial." That does seem pretty clear to me.

But that is, it seems to me, what you are asking us to do. Maybe I've got that wrong. But you know, on what basis are you asking us to ignore our own rules? And let me just add this: is it your position that an article of impeachment may never allege more than a single individual act?

MR. TURLEY: I will take the questions in the order they were given, sir.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Appreciate that.

MR. TURLEY: First of all, Senator Whitehouse, I do believe that the rules that govern criminal trials are applicable. Both the Chair and Vice-Chair have stated previously, have alluded to the constitutional protections and rules that the Senate tries to follow; but more importantly, in the past, there has often been references to court proceedings and what is allowed and what is not allowed.

Is this a criminal proceeding? No, it's not, but the Senate has always crafted the rules to try to achieve the same fairness. After all, the United States Senate is holding a trial, and they historically have tried to guarantee the same fairness and rights accorded to the accused. And this is a very important one.

And your second question, Senator Whitehouse was, in a real court of law, would this be allowed? The answer is no.

I am a criminal defense attorney and I would move to quash this indictment. It is unintelligible. And I don't think many Federal judges would let it go to trial. They would quash the indictment and say you have to allege specific acts. This is basically somebody is saying, you know, he did bad things. I mean it's very hard to even for us to figure out what the House is specifically alleging.

Vice-Chair Hatch, in answer to your question, I do not believe it violates the rule. First of all, this committee has the authority to set up preliminary votes. It's not dividing the articles of impeachment, because the last vote is a unified vote.

All we are suggesting is for the members themselves to know whether there are 2/3 of this body that agree that some of these acts occurred. Under the aggregation system, what can happen is that you can have less than 2/3 on any given claim and remove a Federal judge.

And more importantly, the public, let alone the accused, would never know what it was that he was accused of doing. You have to remember that the judge here is accused not of kickbacks and not of bribery; he is accused of appearance of impropriety, of things like lunches. There are Federal judges that would probably like to know whether some of the things in these articles as viewed by the Senate is a removable offense, because some of them are pretty low standards.

I have gone over the time answering the questions and so I should sit down, I suppose, now and reserve the five minutes rebuttal. Thank you.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Thank you, Counselor. And we will hear from the House managers now.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF

ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Madam Chair, Senators, Adam Schiff appearing on behalf of the House. The motion in this case should be denied for one among many reasons. The first is the Senate has never dismissed an article returned by the House prior to the trial, for any reason. Let alone --

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Let me jump into my question --

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Yes.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Which I think it, at least from my perspective, seems to be the critical one here. If there are multiple factual allegations in each of the charges, how could anybody assess that we had actually agreed by a 2/3 majority that any one of them had been committed and merited impeachment?

What if I felt that this section of the complaint had been; Senator Udall felt a different section had been, and didn't believe that what I thought had happened I did; Senator Klobuchar took a different point; and none of us on any particular point amounted to the majority the Constitution required?

How would you defend against that? Why isn't the unified verdict issue germane here?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senator, for the reason that this is not like a civil case or even a criminal case, because you are both judge and jury in this case. You don't need to divide the question or instruct yourselves how you should deliberate.

When the trial is over and you go back to deliberate on the evidence, you can have that discussion internally. Do we all agree on what took place? Do we all agree on essential acts? Have they been proved in this article? Have the acts that have been proved, if not all have been proved, have the facts that have been proved, do they rise to the standard of impeachable conduct? Are we all in agreement on that?

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: So, in effect, you are saying we could cure it if we made clear in our verdict or in the statements surrounding it that we had drilled down to specific acts and had agreed that the relevant majority was commanded?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Absolutely. I mean, that is in the discretion of the Senate, both in terms of how you deliberate and in terms of what you say publicly after you've returned your decision. And in fact in many impeachment cases Senators have gone on record to explain why they made the decision that they did.

But to adopt artificially pretrial, and instruction to yourselves that you must break down an article into pieces, I think would be certainly a very new precedent and I think not a helpful precedent.

But I think it's important not to consider this argument in the abstract, and that is we are not really talking about omnibus articles here. The House did consider an omnibus article in this case. Omnibus articles in terms of the Senate precedent, and House precedent, are when you have several articles, each on separate allegations, and then you have the last article which is omnibus in the sense that it combines allegations from the prior articles. We don't do that here. We considered doing that; we decided not to bring an article -- an omnibus article.

So the cases where the Senate has in the past considered, is there too many allegations within an omnibus article, are very different facts than here.

If you look at Archibald, for example, you can argue, if you accept counsel's definition of omnibus, that every single article in Archibald was omnibus, because some of them were multiple paragraphs long alleging several acts. This gets to Senator Hatch's question. Does counsel's argument mean you can never charge a scheme, that you could never set out facts of a conspiracy?

This is not a criminal case, so unlike what counsel argues, we do not have to charge the elements of a crime. What we do have to lay out is conduct that rises to the level of impeachment, of high crime or misdemeanor, which we have done.

But let's look at the specific articles and what counsel is suggesting here. Just if you take the first article, which that sets out this scheme where the judge had this relationship with attorneys that were giving him cash for many years, and gave him cash while he was sitting on a case in Federal court, a case in which he failed to recuse himself; counsel would say, well, that's multiple allegations, that's omnibus. They think that ought to be four separate counts, is what they set out in the brief.

They think that, for example, it should be charged that, in one count that Porteous improperly denied a recusal motion in this case. That second when he decided the motion he failed to disclose his relationship with these attorneys. That in a third article it should say he made misleading statements during the hearing, and in a fourth article that he continued receiving cash from these same attorneys.

You would think on the basis of the pleading we were talking about four different cases, four different recusal motions, four different sets of attorneys. We are talking about the same attorneys, the same cash, the same relationship.

Now I have no question that had the House decided, with its constitutional responsibility, to try it as four different articles, counsel would be before you today suggesting we improperly disaggregated a single scheme to make it seem like the conduct engaged in was worse, because we charged it multiple different ways.

So we are going to get this argument either way, but all the precedent says that the House has the discretion how to charge, and it will be up to the Senate after the trial, when you confer, do you all agree on the essential conduct of each article, and does that essential conduct rise to the level of a high crime and misdemeanor?

And I think trying to get into the factual argument, I take strong issue, and I don't want it to go unmolested here. I take strong issue with the claim that the witnesses who were interviewed or deposed this week have contradicted their statements in the House. That's not our view of their testimony at all. But that's a factual matter that you will resolve during trial, and it bears little value in terms of whether this body ought to dismiss a count and break years of Senate precedent.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: All right, well -- go ahead.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: Representative Schiff,

I appreciate your answer. That's why I went immediately to precedent. I think you've got a bunch of former prosecutors up here and it's easy to go over to the criminal proceedings that we are used to, but this is impeachment proceedings and the precedent there is important.

I wondered if you wanted to take the opportunity to respond to Mr. Turley's argument that his client didn't have adequate opportunity to confront some of the witnesses.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Well, certainly the main witnesses that we are talking about, that will be the central witnesses during the trial, they not only had several hours of cross-examination during the depositions this week, they had the opportunity to cross-examine them during the House proceedings.

Members were given five minutes to ask questions. Judge Porteous' counsel was given ten minutes to ask questions. Each and every time Judge Porteous' counsel was asked for more time, he was granted more time to ask questions. Some of the witnesses, they didn't even ask questions of. So to the extent that some witnesses were not cross-examined, it was because Judge Porteous' own council decided there was no cross-examination necessary. Judge Porteous had the opportunity in the Fifth Circuit to cross-examine these witness.

It's very difficult to argue, and I think this is really the relevance here, it's very difficult to argue after the multiple years of the Fifth Circuit, of the House proceedings, that Judge Porteous is somehow unaware of what the allegations are here. He is intimately aware of the allegations.

And so the policy question here is, is the judge on adequate notice of what he is charged with? Is the rest of the bench, if you return verdicts of guilty, going to know conduct that you have decided is beyond the pale? And I think when you read the articles and given the long history of this case, it's clear the judge knows what he is charged with, and I think the articles make plain to the rest of the bench and the public the conduct which the House views is incompatible with the public trust.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: All right. Well, let's look at article 1 which suggests three sort of courses of conduct. The first is that while presiding as United States District judge he engaged in a cross game and details surrounding that. And second is that he also made intentionally misleading statements at the recusal hearing, which deprived the parties and public of the right to the honest services of his office; and third, you say he also engaged in corrupt conduct after the Lifemark v. Liljeberg bench trial.

Let's go back and say that Senator Udall believes that he did engage in a corrupt scheme while presiding, but neither Senator Klobuchar nor I do. I believe that he intentionally misled the court at the recusal hearing and deprived the parties of the right to honest services of office, but neither Senator Udall nor Senator Klobuchar do. And Senator Klobuchar believes that he engaged in corrupt conduct after the trial as alleged.

None of us agree on which wrongful conduct he committed, and yet we could all agree that he did something wrong. Is that not a problem? Is there not sort of a duplicative charge/unified verdict problem here? I still don't see how you prove that if you have the votes here if we haven't agreed on what the underlying conduct is.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senator, two points. The first is that part of the reason why the Senate has never dismissed a count before trial is because the trial will clarify the issues you are talking about. It is highly inconceivable, I think, on the facts of this case that you would decide -- some of you would decide that he improperly denied the recusal motion, but also find that he had no relationship with these attorneys where he got cash from them. The very reason why the recusal was improper denied is because he had received cash from these attorneys.

So when you look at the facts of the case, it is very unlikely that you are going to have -- you are going agree on one of those and not the other. Now Let's say you did.

SENATOR WICKER: If that's the case, how is your side of the argument harmed by that? The the judge and his counsel are asking that in the alternative each allegation be voted on individually. How are you harmed by that?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Well, Senator, if that is the decision that the Senate makes after hearing the evidence, the Senate has every opportunity to do that. The Senate can when it deliberates say, we want to have a separate vote internally on each of the facts that are alleged in article 1, or each of the facts that are alleged in article 2. You can make that decision, and if the vote internally is such that you don't agree, and you have a further discussion and say, well, unless we all agree on these pieces, we don't think the conduct rises, you can make that decision.

But to try to do that in advance, to try to do that without the benefit of hearing the evidence I think is a disservice to the Senate. You don't have to instruct yourselves prior to the trial about how you wish to deliberate in this case, but you will have every opportunity when the evidence is provided to you to vote on it in any way, shape or form that you so decide. Nothing that we do here will prejudice that.

SENATOR HATCH: Could I interrupt you for a second? Our impeachment precedents are very important to us. As I recall, in 1936, the impeachment of Judge Halsted Ritter, the Senate acquitted him on six individual articles of impeachment, but convicted him on an article that combined three allegations of all of the others. Now why is this not a solid precedent for the proposition that the Senate can convict on an article that includes multiple allegations?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senator, it is. And the very precise issue raised in that case has been raised in several other impeachment cases as well, where counsel has taken issue as here, that there are more than one facts alleged in a single article. In each and every time the Senate has had that argument, the Senate has rejected it.

SENATOR HATCH: Okay. Now, the most recent impeachment precedent involves Judge Walter Nixon. In 1989, he moved to dismiss one of the articles against him because it aggregated multiple allegations. Now that sounds like the argument that Judge Porteous is making today, to me. The Nixon impeachment committee denied the motion citing the House's discretion and claiming the articles of impeachment. Why is that not sufficient precedent for us today? Or is that sufficient precedent for us today?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senator, I think it is exactly on point. In the case of Judge Archibald, he was charged in an omnibus account that summarized several of the other articles, not just conduct within that article, but several other articles. He was convicted on that article. In the case of Judge Ritter he was also charged with an omnibus article, and in fact was acquitted on the non-omnibus articles, and convicted only on the omnibus article. In the Nixon case as you point out, similarly, omnibus article charged and motions to dismiss those articles denied.

So there is not a single time, not a single Senate precedent really supports the proposition that Judge Porteous makes here. If this committee decides to guide by its precedent, that precedent is very clear on this point.

SENATOR McCASKILL: So Counsel, the essence of your argument is that the purpose of the articles of impeachment is to adequately notify the judge of those matters that the Senate would be considering in trial deliberation and decision, and that these articles sufficiently lay out the conduct that we would be hearing factual evidence on and making decisions in regards to.

And that as to the individual articles, the Senate has the ability, and in fact, I would think it would be imperative, that the Senate look at the various charges of conduct contained in the articles, deliberate all of them, and make a decision that was very clear, that they agreed that there was at least one allegation of conduct that rose to the level that required a verdict or removal from the bench. Is that, essentially, the argument you are making today?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senator, that is exactly it. And the only additional point would be that every time this issue has come up in prior impeachments, that is exactly what the Senate has decided to do.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: And you also would say, then, to go one step further, when looking at these individual charges that are in each of these articles, we could decide on our own to individually vote on each one or vote on them as a group, and we would be allowed to do that; because this is not like a jury in a criminal case. The Senate has made decisions on its own in the past.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: That's exactly right, Senator. And getting back to the Senator's point and Senator Whitehouse's point, let's say on article 1, the Senate decides this judge took cash from a lawyer while a case involving that lawyer was under submission. I don't care about anything else this article says, he should be removed on the bench for that alone. Are we all in agreement on this? And as Senators, you would agree, not only was that proved, but that fact alone justifies his removal. That's it.

Do you need to go and decide whether each of the other points in the article has been shown? I don't think you do. You can decide that conduct alone.

It's similar to, if you will -- and I analogize it to criminal cases -- it's not necessary that each fact alleged in an indictment be proved by the prosecution. It's only necessary that the elements of the crime be proved. And the crime here is conduct that belies the public trust, that rises to the level of high crime or misdemeanor. If you find that to be true in one allegation of a count, that is all you need to find.

SENATOR WICKER: In that instance would we state it on the record and make it clear in our report to the full Senate?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senator, that will be your decision.

SENATOR WICKER: Should we?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: I think it's worthwhile, frankly to shed light on however you reach your conclusions in the interests of future cases. And counsel says you can do something positive here in terms of the historic record. I think whenever Senators express the reasons how they reached their decision, why they reached a decision, it is not only instructive for the public, it's instructive for the House in terms of future impeachment proceedings.

And we looked at the record of some of the prior impeachment proceedings on issues we will get into later about prior conduct, to what degree can you consider prior conduct. And in some of those cases, you have six Senators saying one thing and six Senators saying nothing or another thing, and the vast majority saying nothing.

Now that provides some indication; of course, it's more helpful when all the Senators speak with the same voice, but I think it would be advantageous to have Senators --

SENATOR McCASKILL: That would be highly unlikely.

(Laughter.)

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: I realize that, Madam Chair.

SENATOR HATCH: That also raises the problem that, if Senators agree that the same act is an impeachable act, but each applies a different standard of proof, is that okay?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Well, you know, I think it is, Senator, perfectly appropriate, for each Senator, if they choose to, to explain why they reached the verdict that they did. It's not that the standard of proof is different. Ultimately I think all Senators are going to agree that the standard is high crimes and misdemeanors. How they reach their determination, though, is an individual decision for each Senator and I don't think it poses a problem for Senators, if they choose, to describe how they reached that conclusion.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Okay. Any other questions?

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Are you conceding that it is required that the Senate make clear that the constitutionally required majority has indeed agreed on a particular allegation within the larger count?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: No, Senator, I think it is up to the Senate how it wishes to describe the verdict it has reached. It will be part of your deliberation. And if the Senate wishes to go on record and specify very particularly what it has found, the Senate can do that. If the Senate wishes to say that the conduct charged in article 1 and proven by the House is so undermining of the public trust, this person cannot continue to serve on the bench, and it doesn't wish to go beyond that in its public pronouncement on it, the Senate has every right to do that. So that will be a decision the Senate will have to make.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Anyone else? Thank you, Congressman Schiff.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Thank you.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Mr. Turley, you actually have two minutes remaining on the first portion of your argument, so you have seven minutes remaining that you can argue your motions.

REBUTTAL ARGUMENT OF JONATHAN TURLEY

ON BEHALF OF JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.

MR. TURLEY: Thank you very much. First of all, I want to say I have tremendous respect for Mr. Schiff, and I respect his statement that he does think it's good for the Senate to explain its reasons. My disagreement with him is on the edges of that statement, in fact what Senator Whitehouse raised.

It is not my view that the sole purpose of an article is to put an accused person on notice. I don't know where that comes from, but it definitely does not come from the history of impeachment. The purpose of an article is to inform the public of what a judge has been accused of. The way the Framers designed this was to have an exacting process with high standards, because they do not want there to be any doubt of other judges of what it would -- what it would take to get you removed from the bench; so they set an exacting requirement, a high standard.

Those articles are not to put a nominee on notice. They are to tell the public, what is the reason a judge might be removed from office, and to tell other judges. And part of the problem with this case, the reason this case is unprecedented, is you'll notice they can't cite any case where every single article was aggravated. And in fact if you look at the Archibald case, it was not aggravated -- aggregated counts.

If you look at those articles, they were long descriptions, but they involved one act each.

And more importantly, the reason this is a dangerous precedent and a new model for impeachment is that it is important for the public to know, not just for the Senators to know, as to what it is that led, if this occurs, to removal.

I would like to give you an example if I may. Mr. Schiff said, well, you know, it's not like these issues and these articles, these claims, these allegations are not related. They are not related. Take a look at article 1 he is citing. Article 1 alleges that the judge should have recused himself from Lifemark, but it also alleges that he had a corrupt relationship on curatorship.

We have separate sets of evidence to knock down both those claims, but unless the Senators establish for the public and more importantly for the rest of the judges on the bench, what was it that led us to convict on that article, they won't know, because that basically is an appearance of impropriety issue.

Another good example, if I may, is if you look at the bankruptcy claim, they have a variety of very specific claims that they say violate Federal law. One of them, they say that he used a PO box instead of his real address for bankruptcy. We have already said in filings we are going to have the trustee himself come and explain why that was not viewed as a violation, and in fact that is not uncommon. We are going to have bankruptcy experts come to say that the markers they refer to are not considered debts under Louisiana law at all. They are not supposed to be part of the bankruptcy process.

So assuming for a second and you are not here to decide the merits, but assuming for a second that we can carry that burden and show you that these things are not valid. We have already argued on 4 that they say that he should have revealed what an individual named Louis Marcotte told the FBI when he filled out his questionnaire and his SF-86 and spoke to the FBI. What the House members were not told is that conversation occurred after all those acts. So he couldn't have possibly informed them of an act that hadn't occurred yet.

So these are examples, and I'm not trying to get to a merits decision, but if I can convince you that those are true, then you have articles that have within them what we would consider to be entirely invalid claims, and for other judges on the bench it's important for them to know what it is that's involved here.

That is why Senator Sutherland's statement was very important when he said, in the Archibald case that was cited by the managers, he said there is an article here that's omnibus, and he warned his colleagues, I cannot consistently vote upon this article one way or the other because there is no way to know what I'm voting on.

But the difference here is that every article is that article in this case. And if it's allowed with no change, new precedent will be established.

SENATOR WICKER: Did Senator Archibald's position prevail or was he expressing a minority view?

MR. TURLEY: Well, I wouldn't call it necessarily a minority view because there were other Senators that spoke in the same way, but in fact he did not prevail in opposing that article. But there is a long history of Senators objecting to aggregation. The difference with this case; we have never said there hasn't be aggregated articles; the difference with this case is the entirety of the articles are aggregated. And if you allow that to happen without any change, I promise you every impeachment is going to be aggregated articles. Every single one, why shouldn't they do that.

And when Mr. Schiff -- and I have great respect for him, but when he says, look, if we disaggregate, they would be here complaining about disaggregation. Really? I wouldn't complain about individual counts, I would try to defeat them. I would have no basis to say how dare you specify with clarity counts against my client. I would want to face those in court.

I also wanted to respond --

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Let's say you were looking at an -- again analogizing to a criminal case. Let's say you were looking a case say involving a scheme and artifice to defraud, and a whole bunch of conduct is alleged in that particular scheme and artifice to defraud. The jury doesn't have to agree on every single piece of that having been done; they have to look at the evidence and conclude yep, based on what we see, we do see an scheme and artifice to defraud in this particular case and that doesn't get into the problem of a -- of a duplicative or duplicitous verdict.

Isn't that the case here, as well? Because these courses of conduct are integrated enough that they can fall within the general impeachment standard of high crime and misdemeanor?

MR. TURLEY: I would agree with the first half of your question, Senator. There is no question that when you have a RICO case or fraud case you are going to acts that lead to that. In fact you could have predicate acts that are contained within those. No one objects to that.

Where you would quash an indictment is on something like this. No prosecutor that I have known in my career would come up with an indictment that has totally disparate acts.

For example, Article 2, it says that you should have told the FBI about the fact that Louis Marcotte told you he gave you a "clean bill of health," even though that conversation hadn't occurred yet. But then it says, and by the way, you also are being removed -- we want to remove you because you had a bunch of corrupt bonds with Marcotte.

Those are vastly different allegations. One deals with how horrible it is for someone to walk up and say, I gave you a clean bill of health, and the other one is that you had -- you cut corrupt bonds, even though they don't cite a single bond that was corruptly given.

I guess what I would suggest, in fairness to the committee, is if you put yourself in the position of the defense counsel, in trying to knock down each of these articles, I'm going to be putting on vastly different cases.

For example, in Article 2, we have basically three cases we are putting on, they are unrelated. We are going to have separate witnesses, separate claims. That is how different they are. When you see a trial, we are going to have a whole different case because they are unrelated.

I would suggest looking at Archibald, those are cases that basically follow what Senator Whitehouse was saying, was that basically you look at those and they are a series of facts leading up to a single claim. I would have no objection to that.

My final point is when we look at the precedent -- I would suggest Senator Hatch, that the precedent does not support all articles having this degree of aggregation, honestly. But --

SENATOR HATCH: Well, if I can interrupt you on that. You said earlier that we can take "preliminary votes," on specific conduct, within, say, a specific article. Can you point out to me any impeachment trial where that has occurred?

MR. TURLEY: No Senator, I can't because we never have had an impeachment trial when it has been all aggregation. When you had an omni article before, which has come up in a few of the cases, Mr.

Schiff is correct, the defense has objected, and those have not been successful. Senators have objected, and they may have done something in their deliberations to deal with that.

We have never faced this, this degree of aggregation.

What I would suggest to you, Senator, is that when you look at the history and the purpose of this institution, I don't want to sound like late Senator Byrd, but this institution represents something special to people around the world, and it represents fairness. And when you have a judge who is accused, who is about to be removed, it's not just that he has a right to know; the public has a right to know; other judges have the right to know.

The problem I have with Mr. Schiff's argument --

SENATOR HATCH: The basic argument is one of fairness. I mean that's what it comes down to. That you feel like, under the circumstances, this would not be fair, even though you can't point to anything in the past that would indicate that they can't do what they're doing here.

MR. TURLEY: Well, that's right. I mean it's like saying how did you react the last time you had been hit by a bus. I never have been hit by a bus before. And that's what this is. This situation, the thing that alarms me the most is that this hasn't occurred before.

And when I thought that Mr. Schiff sat down too early was when he was asked, why not do this? I mean, isn't this better? Wouldn't this be better? In terms of the purposes of impeachment, in terms of the American people, why wouldn't we want to have this type of preliminary vote to be clear? And wouldn't it be better for ourselves, wouldn't we want to know whether 2/3 of our colleagues agree on this?

The answer to that I think is pretty clear. This would be a better system, particularly for Federal judges who have a need to know? I don't think the House managers disagree, this is the first time that we have a judge who is being -- they are trying to remove for appearance of impropriety, things like lunches. I got to tell you, there is a lot of judges around the country that are looking at their date planners right now and wondering, since when did a lunch, which doesn't violate the Louisiana ethics code --

SENATOR McCASKILL: Isn't it true

Mr. Turley, that we can cure the problems that you have eloquently set out, by the way in which we deliberate and the way in which we convey those deliberations and decisions to the public? That there is nothing that would prevent us from doing exactly what you were advocating within the Senate by the way we organize our deliberations, take our votes and report them?

MR. TURLEY: Yes, and I am in accord with Mr. Schiff on that. You could, in fact, do that. What I would encourage is that you make that public, you make it public on how you came on these individual issues, so that there is a public record. Because that goes to the purpose in my view of the article.

SENATOR McCASKILL: I find the part of your argument that our decisions and discussions be made public the most compelling time of your argument. So I appreciate it. And your time is up.

MR. TURLEY: I am happy to end on that note. Thank you.

SENATOR McCASKILL: We appreciate it. We will now take arguments on the second motion that is being pursued by the House managers, and that is the motion concerning prior testimony.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Madame Chair, would that be the prior testimony of Judge Porteous or the prior record including prior testimony?

SENATOR McCASKILL: Prior record.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF

ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Madam Chair, Senators, the House seeks to introduce the prior record in this case, consisting of the proceedings before the Fifth Circuit as well as the proceedings before the House of Representatives. What is also clear from the Senate precedent in many of the cases we cited already is that in each of the cases where this issue has been raised, the Senate has made it clear the Federal rules of evidence don't apply.

And I should say at the outset, I would like to reserve ten minutes for my response.

The Federal rules of evidence don't apply. The rules that apply in criminal cases are similarly inapplicable here. Prior testimony and records can come in; that has been true with each of the cases where it has been raised. And that the Senate is capable of giving prior testimony the weight it deserves, and I think this is the most fundamental point, which is you are the triers of fact and you are the judges, we don't have a separate jury here. And you are capable of giving prior testimony and the circumstances of that prior testimony whatever weight you believe it deserves.

If You believe it deserves great weight, you can give it great weight; if you believe it deserves no weight at all of course you are free to give it no weight at all. In the Nixon case, probably the case most clearly on point here, the Senate admitted all prior testimony and exhibits in their entirety. And the Senate trial committee emphasized that the introduction of prior testimony and exhibits will be useful to enable the committee to focus the live testimony that it hears on the most critical witnesses.

That is very much the case here. Admission of the prior record in this case will serve the same purpose as in Nixon; it will allow the live testimony to focus on the key witnesses. And not only the key witnesses, but also key portions of the testimony of the key witnesses. And this is very significant in the light of the time constraints on the case. We are going to try this, the Senate has asked us to try our case in 20 hours.

If we are to accomplish that within 20 hours, that means not only can we not call every witness we might call, but also even the witnesses we do call, we want to focus in on the most critical portions of their testimony. And in order to do that, it will be important for us to be able to rely on the record of their prior testimony.

So I think in order to give both our presentation as well as the presentation for Judge Porteous within the time constraints that the Senate has set out, it will be important for us to try to stipulate to as many facts as we can that are not in disagreement, that we allow prior testimony where there is no issue about the prior testimony, to be considered by the Senate.

Of course, the defense is more than capable of calling any witness who testified previously, taking issues with any prior testimony, but it will greatly facilitate focusing on the key issues to be able to have the whole record before the Senate.

It's also I think significant in terms of the Senate's own rules, Senate Resolution 458 empowers this committee to transmit the record of the proceedings during the trial as well as all evidence and whether it's contested or not contested to the full Senate.

So this would be part of the package that the committee would transmit to the full Senate.

With respect to the Fifth Circuit prior record in particular, that was a record that the Fifth Circuit itself decided should be provided to the House in its entirety. That was an issue that Judge Porteous took issue with the Fifth Circuit. The Fifth Circuit decided that all of the proceedings before the Fifth Circuit as well as the grand jury testimony could come into the Fifth Circuit proceedings; and they also made it clear, some they would give weight and some they wouldn't give weight, but they wanted the entire record.

Fifth Circuit also made it clear they wanted to transmit the entire record to the Congress for its consideration in a potential impeachment. That was a decision not only of the Fifth Circuit, that was the decision of the Judicial Conference of the United States, which is chaired by the Chief Justice of the United States.

So the Judicial Conference of the United States also said that all of these prior records should be considered by the House in terms of whether to impeach. And I think it would be an extraordinary result for the court itself in the Fifth Circuit, for the Judicial Conference chair by the Chief Justice to say all of these materials should be considered by the House for the purposes of impeachment, but they cannot be considered by the Senate.

I think the Senate would be depriving itself of the complete record if it decided not to allow the introduction of the prior testimony and exhibits.

SENATOR UDALL: Counsel, has there been any record in the past in any of these previous impeachments where the denial of a record has occurred or a proceeding has occurred? Has that happened at any point?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: I don't think there has been any case where the Senate has denied the entire request to introduce prior testimony or exhibits. There have been cases where the committee has decided, okay, we will accept this part of the record, we will accept this part of the record.

Nixon was the most expansive. We will take the entire criminal trial of Nixon, we will take all the House proceedings in Nixon. That was the most expansive. Others have parsed it differently.

The issue in the Hastings case was a different issue. In that case Judge Hastings wanted the record to come in, but wanted the record to come in for the purposes of making a kind of double jeopardy argument. You have all this before; you shouldn't impeach me for conduct that I was tried for and acquitted. So the court made a ruling that was more pertinent to the purposes for which that evidence was being offered.

There has been no case where the committee has said, no, we won't consider any of the prior record.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Am I correct -- I'm sorry. Go ahead.

SENATOR UDALL: In the general rule, it sounds like, has been to expand the record, to have the record as full as possible, and then the Senate would determine -- and the House for that matter, in their earlier articles of impeachment -- determine what weight they want to give those particular records, isn't that correct?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Yes, I think that's exactly right. The Senate has sort of erred on the side of being more inclusive, letting more evidence in, and giving it what weight it deserves. The Senate has you know, from time to time considered okay, were these witnesses the subject of cross-examination? And in many cases they were the subject of cross-examination, and I think that made it easier for the Senate to say okay, all that can come in.

Now most of the witnesses we are talking about here have similarly been the subject of cross-examination, either by Judge Porteous in the Fifth Circuit, or during the House proceedings or during the extended depositions we had earlier this week. Some of the testimony as in the grand jury testimony has not been the subject of direct cross-examination, in that counsel were not present during the grand jury proceedings, but those witnesses by and large have been the subject for cross-examination, both in the Fifth Circuit proceeding, in the House and in deposition.

So if counsel had any issue, for example, with the key witnesses -- with Creely or Amato or the Marcottes, and took issue with something they said at the grand jury, they had two and a half hours to cross-examine them during the deposition and say, well you said this during the grand jury, and what about this? So they had ample opportunity to cross them on the subject of those prior testimonies, even if they were not present to do cross during the prior testimony.

But it would be an extraordinary thing for the courts themselves to say you should consider this, and for the Senate to decide, we won't consider this. I think the better practice has been, in terms of the Senate precedent, is you accept the record, and with any particular piece of evidence in that record, you can decide, well, you know, this was subject to less cross-examination because in the House this witness was not cross-examined at all.

Now the witness wasn't -- we have a bankruptcy expert for example, who testified at the House about bankruptcy law and procedure. We may or may not want to call that witness depending on how much time we have during the trial. It may be that nothing that witness said is at all controversial. Now it would be advantageous, I'm sure, for the defense to say don't include his testimony, make the House use part of its time to call that witness. It gives them incentive not to stipulate to the facts of that witness.

What is the purpose to be advanced by that, though? That is more in the category of gamesmanship.

So why not have that bankruptcy witness? Now they didn't cross-examine that judge. So counsel can point and say prior committees have been very concerned about whether someone is subject to cross. The reason that bankruptcy witness was not crossed is because they declined to cross him.

So yes, we had an initial 10-minute requirement which we waived any time they were asked, but they didn't choose to cross that witness for 10 minutes, so why should that witness's testimony be excluded?

SENATOR MCCASKILL: Congressman, let me interrupt for a second. Am I correct in understanding that the House does not intend to use the grand jury testimony and the task force depositions as substantive evidence in the trial?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: I don't know that I can say categorically. Again, it will depend on I suppose how much time we have to offer each witness. It may be, for example, that we introduce -- we have obviously we are going to call, let's say Mr. Amato or Mr. Creely, and we elicit testimony from them on the stand about the kickback scheme, or the payment during the case, or what have you, and we don't go through all the other conduct, all of it. Every hunting trip, every fishing trip, et cetera, it's already in the record.

Rather than going over everything that is already in the record, it may be advantageous to offer that and be able to point to that in argument. For that reason I can't say we would exclude all of that, but of course, if the defense had any issue with that, and said, well, counsel is pointing to something that this witness said, we want to be able to call that witness; or conversely, we think you shouldn't consider that because they weren't the subject of sufficient cross-examination; or Judge Porteous was in between lawyers, owing to his own responsibility, not the Fifth Circuit's, you can make that decision, well, we're going to give it that less weight.

SENATOR McCASKILL: All right. Your first ten minutes are up.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Okay. I will reserve the balance of my time. Thank you.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Mr. Turley?

ORAL ARGUMENT OF JONATHAN TURLEY
ON BEHALF OF JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.

MR. TURLEY: Thank you. I would like to start out by responding to a couple of arguments Mr. Schiff made, but first I want to know. Mr. Schiff has said it decided that we would have 20 hours in this trial.

As you know, we have a pending motion, but there has been no decision as far as I know how many hours each side would be allotted. We have a motion pointing out that currently we would be getting less than half the average that has been given previous judges, so that is a matter that is being contested. But I know of no specific decision as to a specific number of hours.

I will also note that the House managers are opposing a longer trial, and then they're saying, but you know what, because the trial is so short, we really have to bring in all this evidence regardless of how it was gathered and what objections they may have, because we really need to do that.

That is a rather make-work argument. What we are saying, by the way, is not that you can't use evidence from these earlier proceedings. We recognize that you can use this evidence to rebut or impeach a witness, just the way you can in a usual court proceeding; but what we have stressed is really what the House managers have argued.

When we were looking at the depositions this week, we said we would three hours -- we would like the full three hours. We want three hours with these witnesses and the House said oh, no, no, you have to give us at least 30 minutes. And we said why? You have already deposed these witness; you've had plenty of time with these witnesses; this is our only opportunity. And they said because it would be grossly unfair. It would be one-sided, it wouldn't be -- you know -- reliable evidence.

And when I objected and said, well, you barred us from all those previous depositions, you wouldn't let us participate in them. And they said that was just investigatory, that's more like a grand jury. But now they're coming forward and saying, by the way, we want to turn that all into testimony; we want it imported in the case.

When the Chairs have asked -- and I think legitimately so -- and the Senators have asked, has there ever been a turndown of a request to bring in records of this kind? The answer -- I disagree with

Mr. Schiff; there has. There was a partial turndown. I believe it was Hastings was only partially granted, but there is a big difference here.

All of the impeachment cases cited by the House managers had criminal cases, in some cases multiple criminal trials. The information that was being imported had already been synthesized. It had already gone through the criminal, you know, trial process. A Federal judge had already determined what could be brought in.

And I would also cite the committee to the House's own statements in the House impeachment proceeding. When Judge Porteous was facing the committee, he was instructed by Mr. Schiff that this is not a trial, it's more in the nature of a grand jury proceeding. Right?

He was told that this does not constitute a trial, the procedural rules that govern a Federal trial do not apply. This was emphasized to him that he would should not be making a lot of objections and he would be limited on cross-examination for that purpose. I will remind the committee grand jury transcripts are not allowed into Federal court except for the limited purposes of things like impeachment, for a very good reason; because they are undeveloped, they are not challenged.

And I don't wish to get into a disagreement with Mr. Schiff about what happened on Monday. I would just simply encourage the Senators to look at what happened on Monday, to look at the transcript. It will tell you lot about this case. But you will see what happened once these witnesses are actually subject to cross-examination.

Now Mr. Schiff said, well, with one of these bankruptcy witnesses, they didn't cross-examine them. I'm not too sure the reason. That was done by the attorney that this committee replaced due to a conflict. Okay?

If I had been the attorney, you betcha, I would use the full 10 minutes. But in terms of Marcottes, half of what the House has said were the critical witnesses, because of that conflict, Judge Porteous was left without counsel, and so he did not examine Marcotte.

In the Fifth Circuit, the Marcottes didn't testify at all.

So what we are saying is simply to apply a simple rule of fairness. If this was a criminal trial, if we had gone through a criminal trial and a

Federal judge had allowed in some information, even grand jury information, on impeachment, I would not be standing here and saying, even though a Federal judge brought it in in a criminal trial, you shouldn't, because you would laugh at me, and so I would not say that and I do not believe that.

This is a different circumstance. This is -- to be honest, it is unfiltered evidence, and one of the things that we pointed out in the depositions is a lot of this garbage.

Now, one of the thing that Mr. Schiff has said is, well, you can just called all these people. Well, so can the House. The House doesn't explain why it would want to rely on testimony of a witness that didn't have a vigorous cross-examination. If they want to use that evidence, call the witness, and have the Senators see the witness on the stand, and more importantly, have Judge Porteous with the right to cross-examine.

When we cross-examined Creely, he expressly denied there was a relationship between loans he gave his lifetime friend and curatorship. He actually said he usually ruled against me. That didn't come out in those earlier proceedings because it's the type of information that the House didn't want to elicit. Now what I would suggest --

SENATOR UDALL: Counsel, but the Marcottes are going to testify. They have been listed as witnesses here. This is the example you've used, correct?

MR. TURLEY: Yes, sir.

SENATOR UDALL: So the Marcottes are going to testify. There is going to be a cross-examination of the Marcotte testimony, the direct and examination, however you choose to do that. So in admitting that the prior proceedings, we are -- we can give whatever weight we want to that, in addition to what we see occurring before us, can't we?

I mean, what is your objection to having the testimony from additional proceedings to supplement the record and expand the record, and we give it whatever weight we choose to give it?

MR. TURLEY: Well, I certainly agree with you, Senator, that it is less problematic when the witness is appearing. I would suggest following the standard rule that to the extent a witness disagrees with the testimony, Mr. Schiff can jump up and say, I want to bring in the record what he said from the Fifth Circuit, and I could hardly object to that.

That is a standard use of the that type of information.

SENATOR UDALL: Has there been a precedent for that, in these kinds of impeachment hearings before the Senate?

MR. TURLEY: There has but -- well, it was different for the Senate, because they -- because you had earlier criminal trials, many of these judges, some of these judges that were cited did not object to the evidence being brought in, because it had already been essentially filtered through a Federal judge. So it was not very controversial. No one seriously argue you should not look at the record of a criminal trial.

SENATOR UDALL: You seem to be making the argument that the proceedings that are being offered into the record are somehow less reliable than a criminal trial. Are you making that argument, and are you going to make it right here now, that why these are unreliable, why they shouldn't be in? Why -- were they run in such a way that they weren't fair? Were they kangaroo courts? What was going on?

MR. TURLEY: Well, they are demonstrably unreliable and what I would suggest is not to take my view for it. I would strongly suggest that the Senators take a deposition that the House did with one of the four, we only got four, one of the four people that we dealt with on Monday. Put that deposition for someone like Creely or Amato next to the deposition we did on Monday, and compare them.

And what you will see is that in the House deposition, they really tried to get these witnesses to say what they wanted to say. You can see Amato struggling, and they're saying, "Isn't it true?" "Isn't it true?" "Don't you want to say this?"

And as soon as he says this, his deposition is over. And then in our deposition we basically said, explain that. What did you -- is it true that, you know, you bought lunches only for Porteous?

And both of them said they know of no judge in Jefferson Parish, except for one, that on one occasion, a judge in that parish bought her own lunch.

SENATOR JOHANNIS: Counsel, if I could stop you there. I sat through the Creely deposition, and to suggest that this is about a purchased lunch is really, in my personal opinion, very misleading.

Now, we are going to judge the evidence at this point, and the difficulty I have with what you are saying is that you are trying to get us to almost a criminal case sort of standard. When, in fact, I believe we have a right to receive evidence, review the evidence, decide should give it be given any weight whatsoever, accept it or reject it, and so I must admit I don't see where you are going with this argument.

And again, I will emphasize, please don't try to convince my colleagues that the Creely deposition was just about a free lunch. It was not, and I can cite what I heard that day, but let's not go there. We are not trying to decide the evidence at this point, but I just -- I don't see how you get us to a point where we can't accept evidence for whatever value it has. And it may have no value in our minds. And I think that is where you are trying to take us with this argument. Do you agree with that?

MR. TURLEY: Well, let me explain if I can; I am not going to get into the lunches, except that those are part of the House report. Those are the allegations. It's not the sole allegation. I was just giving an example of why you shouldn't rely on an issue like that, what was said before.

But more importantly, I am not saying that you shouldn't see evidence. What I am saying it that it is grossly unfair to the defense to allow the House simply not to call witness, bring in testimony that the House itself said, that this is like grand jury testimony -- we are not going to give you the same protection -- and what you will have for the defense is that chaos.

I mean, the thing is, look, I have four children under 12. I am used to chaos, but I'm not used to having to get through the chaos in a matter of a week, with four separate effective counts. And what's going to happen is that the House managers are going to say, why should they call any of these people?

They have their one -- what they themselves defined as one-sided testimony. They were not going to call them, and they are going to have us eat our time. Instead of saying for either side, if we want to prove the case, then let's present witnesses. And let's have both sides ask those witnesses what the facts are, and with the reservation that you can bring in the record if any witness says does not say something that is truthful or that you want to contradict.

That is the standard to apply across every courtroom in the country.

SENATOR HATCH: Mr. Turley, this is not every courtroom, and frankly you had two and a half hours with each of four witnesses as I recall. I sat there through one of them. And you had an opportunity to cross-examine them, and I was in the room with Mr. Marcotte, and you did an excellent job. So did the -- so did Mr. Schiff, I was very impressed with both of you. But you are not saying you need more time now to discuss it with those witnesses? Or is that what you are telling us? Or what is your argument here today?

Because I think you've got enough information that you can make whatever case you want to make. I am impressed with your ability to argue; I mean, I have always been impressed with you as a law professor and as a lawyer. But what are you asking us for? You are asking for -- I mean, we are getting the impression that Judge Porteous just wants this delayed and delayed and delayed and delayed.

MR. TURLEY: No, we will be ready for trial. We're not going to try to --

SENATOR HATCH: Okay. But are you asking for something more from this tribunal here?

MR. TURLEY: Yes, Senator, and first of all --

SENATOR HATCH: Then tell us what you are asking for. Because you know, I understand the arguments, we don't want to be unfair to you and certainly not to Judge Porteous. And I above all don't want to be unfair to anybody here, but I'm not quite getting what you really want us to do here.

MR. TURLEY: Well, first of all, Senator, you were extremely fair during the deposition, I want to say that, I think all parties said that. And we have no disagreement with the deposition. What I'm suggest is the standard rule for cases. That --

SENATOR HATCH: Again, this is not a criminal trial. This is not a criminal court. And all those arguments would be good in a criminal court in my -- most all of them. I have to say I might have a couple I would disagree with. But you know, the key here is for us to get the facts and to get the information and to understand what the House has concluded here. And to allow you the privilege of showing them that they are wrong, if you can.

MR. TURLEY: Yes, I understand that,

Senator. I'm sorry.

SENATOR HATCH: Tell me, what do you want from us?

MR. TURLEY: Well, the four people that we were allowed to depose, my expectation is that some of this material will come in on both sides.

SENATOR HATCH: But can't we look at that material and read it?

MR. TURLEY: Since they are appearing I have less of a problem with that. Our problem is that the House interviewed 70 individuals, 70 individuals and did 25 depositions where we were completely barred from participation.

SENATOR HATCH: Are you making the argument you should be able to interview every one of those 70 witnesses? You have a right to do that.

MR. TURLEY: Well, I would certainly loved to, we have tried to interview the witnesses, and they refused; some of the House's witnesses have refused to speak to us. So we're stuck. It's going to be "gotcha" testimony. They're going to hit the stand and I'm going to have no idea what they're prepare to testify to. But what we're suggesting, I think, Senator, is that for those the four that were deposed, I have less of a problem with material coming in because it will be in the trial, and we will be able to test it.

My problem is that the House is going to be able -- unless this body says you cannot use prior records for witnesses that are not going to appear at trial, then they have every incentive in the world not to call people to trial and to use one-sided testimony.

We could not possibly call 70 individuals without eating our time. Basically under the current schedule, at most we have two and a half days to defend allegations where they are going back 25 years in pre-Federal conduct. 25 years when he was a State judge.

SENATOR HATCH: You have a right to do that, too. I mean, you may not have the same authority that the House of Representatives has, but you have the right to go in and get all those 70 people.

MR. TURLEY: But they can refuse. Very few people refuse the FBI and the House when they come knocking. When a law professor comes knocking, a click is heard on the other end of the phone.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Mr. Turley, it seems to me that your argument is that if you have not had an opportunity to cross-examine the witness, that any prior testimony of any witness that you have not had an opportunity to cross-examine or depose should not be allowed as evidence in the trial. Is that the argument that you are making?

MR. TURLEY: Yes.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Okay. So what you are basically saying is that the United States Senate should be looked at as like a jury, because a jury, there are certain rules in a criminal courtroom about what testimony -- what prior testimony can come in and under what circumstances. But this is not a jury.

In fact the Senate serves as both the judge and the jury and inherent in the impeachment authority is the notion that the Senate is going to deliberate with all of the information and give it appropriate weight.

And don't you believe that we are going to look at the testimony of these witnesses that have been -- I might add that the deposition I sat in on, Judge Porteous didn't even use the full time allotted to him. And this is against one of the key witnesses that says, yes, I am ashamed; I was part of the scheme to kick back money to the judge. But yet, the full amount of time was not even utilized. We adjourned 15 minutes early in that deposition.

So I am having a hard time in grasping the notion that the Senate should not be allowed to look at the same information that the House has looked at and allow us to give it appropriate weight based on whether or not there has been cross-examination, based on its inherent credibility, based on how relevant it is, based on how key it is to the accusations that have been made to Judge Porteous' conduct.

It seems to me you want to keep information out of the hands of the Senate, because you are viewing the Senate more like a jury in a criminal trial than the United States Senate in an impeachment proceeding.

MR. TURLEY: What I would respond, Senator, is that first of all, if this were a bench trial, and I've certainly been in bench trials, I'd would make the same motion. Judges all the time exclude evidence on the basis -- if this were a bench trial, and the House came to a judge and said, by the way, we may decide just not to call a bunch of witnesses because we would like to rely on the grand jury or unadversarial depositions --

SENATOR UDALL: Counselor, isn't the argument that you are making here arguments that you had should be making at the end after the evidence is presented? It seems to me from what Senator McCaskill's asking.

SENATOR McCASKILL: About weight.

SENATOR UDALL: Yes. We're --

SENATOR McCASKILL: It's an argument about weight.

SENATOR UDALL: This is -- after -- the arguments you are making, you are asking us to make a judgment in advance after not seeing the entire case, the presentation that the House counsel makes that you make. And after it's all been done, you can then make the argument to us that because the following happened, these particular pieces of evidence in other proceedings shouldn't be looked at, but I don't know what really the argument is here now at this point in the proceeding.

I'm still trying to understand, as I think or our Chair is trying to understand, what are you trying to get at? What are you trying to get us to do? And understanding that, we're sitting as the Senate in an impeachment as jury and judge in this case, and I think you are trying to limit that to a larger extent than there is any precedent for.

MR. TURLEY: Senator, the way I view this -- obviously there is a difference in perspective. I actually want the Senate to hear all these witnesses. I would love the Senate to hear all these witnesses. That's my point. If I was given time, if we had a trial where I was allowed to call all these witnesses, I would drop this objection like a stone. I mean, the problem is, I am not going to be able to do that.

If this rule stands, the way the House wants it, they can literally demolish our time by simply saying, we are not going to call a whole bunch of witnesses, we are going to use their testimony, so in a two and a half-day period, I would not only have to put on a case in chief, I would have to bring in as many as 70 witnesses to get them to admit that they said something untrue.

Now if I was given the time, if I was given like a normal trial, if I was told you are going to bring in any one of these relevant witnesses; any one they want to use, you can call; I have no problem. But the problem is logistics. You are not going to get the whole story, because there is no way on God's green earth that I will be able in that period of time to handle 70 witnesses who aren't appearing.

And that's our objection. All we were saying is, if you want to use the evidence, call the witness. If the witness is there, we have less trouble with using the evidence from the record.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Well, then perhaps the argument you need to be thinking about, Mr. Turley, is at the point in time that we are in the trial, as you indicated earlier, there is no decision made at this point how long the trial is going to be. And if you believe that evidence has come in that could be rebutted, if you have the opportunity, then I think that at that point in time that would be a point that you would come to this committee and say, you have received this evidence in this document; we have reason to believe that we can rebut that. We would like an opportunity to call that witness and rebut that.

And I think that -- and the other thing that is going on here is we want as much as possible in this record to encourage stipulations. There is a lot of stipulations that the two of you can do on facts that would streamline this considerably. And This is a very important matter and we all take it very seriously.

We all understand -- you know, we all understand the importance of an impeachment trial in the United States Senate. But it's also important that everyone around this table have the opportunity to do the other work that they are called here to do, and there is a lot of that important work, also.

So I think that one of the reasons a more expansive view may be argued for is that if all of it is going to come in, and we are allowed to give it appropriate weight, and we are going to listen to the arguments you make about opportunities you want to rebut it, it might encourage more stipulations to the facts that really aren't in controversy.

MR. TURLEY: May I respond, Madam Chair?

SENATOR MCCASKILL: Yes, your time's up, but you may respond to that.

SENATOR HATCH: Well, let me make a point. We have taken a lot of your last half of your time. So I would be for giving him a little more time if he needs it.

SENATOR MCCASKILL: Sure.

SENATOR HATCH: Okay.

MR. TURLEY: Thank you very much, Senator.

What I would respond is that it is true that you've held in abeyance the question of the time for the trial. The problem is that the -- we have already passed the date for the specification of witnesses.

The House gave us a preliminary list of roughly, like 17 witnesses. The problem with the argument of the House is they're saying, we are going to call these witnesses, potentially, but they are also saying, and by the way, we may be indirectly calling any witnesses behind this curtain. There is 70 witnesses behind this curtain, and when we get to trial we are going to pull back the curtain and we are going to say, now we are going to introduce all this evidence of this person who talked with us before.

There is no way for us to prepare for that under this rule. Mr. Schiff just said when he was asked, do you intend to bring in the grand jury or the Fifth Circuit? He says, I don't want to say absolutely one way or the other.

What that does for me is I have absolutely no ability to prepare. We just put in witness lists. I think we have a wonderful witness list to rebut their witness list, but now they are saying, except for the people behind the curtain.

And by the time they have those people come out indirectly through the transcript, will be the first time I know about it. And it will be "gotcha" testimony, which is something we have not seen in the Federal courts for decades. And that's my basis for my objections.

SENATOR McCASKILL: But you've read all these documents, you know what's in them.

MR. TURLEY: Well, we're still fighting over some discovery, but it's true, we have read those documents, but --

SENATOR McCASKILL: So this is not behind the curtain; it's part of your preparation. This is no different -- I mean, we keep going back and forth, but if all of us, our point of reference are trials we have participated in. I was required as a prosecutor to make sure the defense knew all of the potential evidence I might present, but that didn't mean I was going to present it all.

You have all the documents. It's not as if you don't have the information, and if there's the information in those documents you are concerned about, you had have an adequate opportunity to address that.

MR. TURLEY: Well, I would say, Senator, that when you were a prosecutor, you had to have a finite list of actual testimony. You would have never get been able to get this type of testimony coming out of the record.

The problem is yeah, I know what this record says. But what the rule would allow them to do is to go to the Senate and say you know, here's three dozen people that we are not going to call, and we're just going to read what they said in one-sided depositions.

I can't even call them at this point. I don't know who they are going to be citing that. I don't have the ability to call them, because they haven't told me, so we couldn't put them on the list. But even if I did, that would be a list of 70 people.

And so yes, we know what's in the record, we just don't know what direct testimony is going to be brought out of that record, and thrown into this trial and then it would be too late for us to do anything about it.

SENATOR McCASKILL: I think we understand your point.

MR. TURLEY: Thank you.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Congressman Schiff?

REBUTTAL ARGUMENT OF CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF

ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senators, I have a very few additional remarks and I am happy to entertain any questions you have. Just a couple of comments. And that is, I think a lot of this will be resolved I hope by our efforts to stipulate uncontested facts.

The problem with excluding all the prior record is there is no incentive for the opposing counsel to stipulate to anything. They'll simply say call them; call them all. Call the custodians of the records. Call the people necessary to lay the foundation for the curatorships. Call all these people. I don't think it's the interest of the Senate or called for by any considerations of fairness.

I think that the gravamen of what is at issue here, and many of you have alluded to this, was best summarized by Professor Black, Yale Professor Black, in the Nixon -- Judge Nixon impeachment case when an analogous issue came up. And the Senate committee cited this in their report in allowing in prior testimony. Quote, "both" -- this is Professor Black -- "both the House and Senate ought to hear and consider all evidence which seems relevant without regard to technical rules. Senators are in any case continually exposed to hearsay evidence. They cannot be sequestered and kept away from newspapers like a jury. If they cannot be trusted to weigh evidence, appropriately discounting for the other factors of unreliability that have led to our keeping some evidence away from juries, they are not in any way up to the job, and rules of evidence will not help."

We have every confidence that the Senate can weigh the evidence, give it what weight it deserves. If there is a witness we don't call, we don't call them at our peril. And you may decide we are not going to credit that. You had an opportunity to call them; you didn't do it and we will give that very little or no weight.

All of the central witnesses in this case are going to be called. I don't think there is any point in calling superfluous witnesses or witnesses that don't have contested testimony; and by admitting the prior record you give yourselves all the information to credit or discredit as you choose.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Mr. Schiff, would you agree that some of the Fifth Circuit and some of the House proceedings are in fact irrelevant to the articles that have been brought?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: There is a subset of issues that were brought before the Fifth Circuit that are not pertinent. I don't know whether there is anything in the House proceedings that is not pertinent. But there are -- and certainly we have no intention of relying on evidence or introducing facts that are wholly irrelevant to the articles; and if we were to try, the Senate could call us on it and say, you know, Counsel, why are you pursuing that line of questioning or trying to introduce testimony that has no bearing on the articles?

SENATOR McCASKILL: I guess I am getting at the fact that the precedent could be abused. The precedent is that everything comes in and the Senate weighs the evidence accordingly.

On the other hand, the same arguments I make about encouraging stipulations for the efficiency and effectiveness of this trial also go to the notion that we would be hopeful that you would only seek to admit that which is relevant, and that which matters and makes a difference in terms of the articles that have been brought.

If you try to admit the kitchen sink, I think it certainly gives more weight to the argument that Mr. Turley is making, that he maybe feels like he is boxing shadows because he is not sure what is coming in and what is coming out. So I would at least hope that you would apply the test of relevancy to those materials that you are trying to admit in front of the Senate.

And we obviously will consider this motion along with the other motions we are hearing today when we deliberate later. But I think that what we are really talking about here is not just fundamental fairness, but making sure that we are not -- the staff behind us and all of us, are not going through reams and reams of materials, because we have not been privy to all of it. And I think we would all feel obligated if we admitted everything to read everything, even if some of it turned out to be completely irrelevant.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Madam Chair, it is every bit our intention and expectation that we are only going seek to highlight evidence that is very pertinent to the articles. We don't want to waste your time; we don't want to waste our time. And ultimately you have the hammer. If we seek to introduce something you don't think is relevant, you are going to give it no weight whatsoever. And if counsel says we need more time because we want access to this witness or we are going to call this witness, you can make the judgment: You know, we are going to exclude that evidence, or you can make the judgment, we are going to give the defense more time.

You will ultimately have the hammer on all these determinations. We had that very much in mind and we don't seek to waste any of your time.

SENATOR UDALL: Mr. Schiff, how do you answer the argument that Mr. Turley made about the witnesses behind the curtain, and all of the things that he seemed to refer to there?

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Senator, as I think the Chair pointed out, there really are no witnesses behind the curtain. And when counsel talks about 70 witnesses, we are not talking about 70 depositions. There have been relatively few depositions. There may have been 70 witnesses interviewed in their entirety.

Counsel, of course, can call any of those people, based on the documents that it already has.

If we choose to call them they can cross-examine them. If we choose not to call them and they have an issue with a prior statement that we rely upon, they can call them, or they can urge than you not consider the evidence.

So as far as I can see. Not only is there no intention to sandbag counsel; there is no way to sandbag counsel because ultimately you will decide whether to grant them more time if they need it, or whether to credit or discredit any prior evidence. But they are well aware of the universe of both documents and witnesses here. There are no surprises except what the defense will ultimately offer in terms of its case.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: And, of course, it's clear to you as the prosecutor who will be presenting the case that trying to present to us core evidence that is not subject to cross-examination would be viewed with considerable disfavor and you will be making your decisions as the prosecutor around that obvious disfavor.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Absolutely, Senator, and that's why I say, if we make a decision to rely on the written record rather than call a witness, we do so at our peril. If you decide that is a witness that should have been called, you can say, we are not going to consider that evidence, or conversely, you can decide, we are going to allow the defense to call that witness and have extra time to do it, but absolutely, Senator, we will take full responsibility for those that we call and those that we don't, and being very judicious with your time.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Well, thank you, Congressman.

CONGRESSMAN SCHIFF: Thank you, Madam Chair.

SENATOR McCASKILL: We will now move to the third and final motion that we're going to hear today, and that is the motion concerning immunized testimony, and once again, the House managers will present.

How much time would you like to reserve for your rebuttal, Congressman?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Chairman McCaskill, I would like to have the clock set at 15 minutes and reserve the --

SENATOR McCASKILL: The final 5, okay.

ORAL ARGUMENT OF CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE

ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: And I am Bob Goodlatte, a Member of the House from Virginia, and a member of the impeachment managers. And Madam Chairman and Ranking Member Hatch and Senators of the committee, both parties filed motions on this issue. Judge Porteous filed a motion to exclude his own prior testimony from being admitted, and we filed a motion to admit his prior immunized testimony before the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee. It was determined that we would be the moving party.

It is particularly relevant that the articles of impeachment against him contain substantial issues related to his testimony before the Fifth Circuit, and should be admitted as evidence in this proceeding. In fact, that is, I think, the key argument that I would make to the committee, that his testimony is particularly relevant to the articles of impeachment related to his admitting receiving cash from Creely and Amato; his admitting that these transactions occasionally followed his assignments of curatorships to Creely, though he claims these transactions were not linked.

He further testified that he received an envelope containing approximately $2,000 in cash from Attorney Amato when the Liljeberg case was pending. All of this was testimony before the Fifth Circuit Special Counsel. And he admitted that a casino marker is a form of debt. That is particularly relevant to the bankruptcy charge.

The circumstances behind his testimony before the Fifth Circuit are particularly reliable, consisting of statements under oath, soberly given before Federal judges in a judicial forum taken down by a court reporter.

The exclusion of this evidence would undermine the ability of the Senate to render a true verdict in two ways. First, as noted, it would deprive the Senate of powerful, relevant evidence. In fact, it may prove to be the most relevant evidence in this case. And it is audacious for Judge Porteous to suggest that this Senate should deprive itself of the opportunity to consider evidence that came out of his own mouth.

And it would be particularly ironic, I would think, that considering that one of the articles of impeachment, article 4, passed by the House of Representatives unanimously alleges that Judge Porteous concealed relevant information from the Senate in connection with his confirmation to become a Federal judge.

And I don't believe that it would be at all appropriate for the Senate to now decline to consider relevant information in its decision whether Judge Porteous should remain a Federal judge. Just as the Senate would consider prior testimony of a nominee before the Senate Judiciary Committee in the confirmation process, the Senate should logically consider prior testimony of an incumbent in the impeachment process as well.

We would note that in our prior -- in our pleading, prior testimony of Judge Clayburn was introduced against him in his impeachment proceeding, and I would argue that this evidence is particularly relevant, particularly important, and should be considered by the Senate. You are a fact gathering body to determine exactly what took place, and whether those actions rise to the level of impeachable offenses. And you should avail yourself of all the evidence, but most particularly, evidence related to Judge Porteous's own sworn testimony.

Now, I'm not going to go into all of the arguments. In fact, I can't anticipate all the arguments that the judge's counsel will raise here, but I do want to dwell on two of those points in particular. And those are, first, that no basis exists for the Senate to decline to consider this evidence. There is, first of all, the analogy that they draw with a criminal case has already been well discussed here today.

In fact, you have already issued one order in this case signed by all 12 of you that indicates that this is not a criminal proceeding, and it is very clear in the Constitution that impeachment is separate from the criminal process. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to remove from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States, but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment according to law.

When Judge Porteous was given immunity for his testimony before the Fifth Circuit, that is the purpose for which it was given. That was a judicial disciplinary process. The judiciary has a limited number of actions that it can take in terms of disciplining a judge.

One is to suspend their ability to sit on the bench, which was done in this case. But another, of course, is to refer the case to the United States House of Representatives for consideration of impeachment. And that indeed was done in this case. It would, I think, be something that they certainly never intended to take away that opportunity to use the judge's own testimony before them in considering --

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: But Counsel, was it clear during -- when he was given the immunity, isn't there something on the record about it, that it was immunity from criminal prosecution --

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Yes.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: -- and that it was not stated that it was immunity from impeachment?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Well, I believe it was. First of all, the rules of the Ninth -- of the Judicial Council of the United States state very specifically, that in proceedings for judicial misbehavior, judges shall testify in those proceedings.

Secondly, he was notified of the fact that he was being called to testify four months in advance. So the idea that he was not afforded due process here, I think is very flawed, both in terms of the fact that he was given something in addition by the three-judge panel, immunity against criminal prosecution that is simply not something that they are required to do in order to compel him to testify. The rules compel him to testify, it was not in exchange for immunity that he was given the opportunity to testify.

Secondly, this argument was reviewed up through the process. The decision of the special panel was reviewed by the entire Fifth Circuit, and they then referred it to the Judicial Conference of the United States presided over by the Chief Justice. And in doing so, they then reviewed the issue of due process, and found that there was no violation of due process rights of Judge Porteous going through that process.

And if you think about that, these are all Federal judges at various levels who not only understand due process as well as anybody, but also are making a decision perhaps against their own interest, because they could some day be in a position like Judge Porteous is where this issue could come up.

And they did not find that his -- use of this testimony was in any way to be excluded from this process. In fact, when the case was sent to the House of Representatives, the immunized testimony of Judge Porteous before the Fifth Circuit was included in the documents that were delivered to Speaker Pelosi.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Counselor, would the immunized testimony of the judge be admissible in a civil proceeding under the order?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Well, I would argue that in this case, this is neither a criminal nor a civil proceeding.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: But answer my question about a civil proceeding.

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Well, I would argue that it would be admissible. In Mr. Turley's argument, he says, oh, it should be excluded because in certain -- in one case, these due process rights were afforded because it affected an individual's property. But I find that argument to be the least compelling of their arguments, because this is not Judge Porteous's property, this is an office of the nation, of the people of the United States. And the decision that you have does not relate to either anything in a criminal proceeding or in a civil proceeding that you could impose.

You can't incarcerate him, take away his liberty, you can't fine him, you can't impose community service or probation. Or in a civil proceeding, you can't enjoin him from any particular actions. You can't fine him with civil penalties. You cannot order restitution to anybody that he may have wronged in this process.

So this is not a civil proceeding or a criminal proceeding, this is a very unique proceeding under the Constitution, and you should avail yourselves of all of the evidence that is available to you, but most importantly, the evidence that comes right from the judge himself. The immunity that he was granted was clearly for criminal prosecution.

If you have the wording of that, you should be aware that it is a very brief statement. There is no doubt that a Federal district court judge could easily understand, and that it was limited to criminal prosecution.

SENATOR SHAHEEN: So, Congressman, let me just -- to be clear, in response to Senator Klobuchar's question, he was made to understand that he was immunized from criminal prosecution, but the issue of whether he would be given immunity from impeachment was never discussed, it was never specifically pointed out to him?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: It was made very clear that he was immunized from criminal prosecution. Whether there was --

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: And that the court couldn't give immunity from impeachment.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Obviously.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: But there wasn't any discussion about not using it in this proceeding.

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: I am not aware of any such discussion where he would be given any assurance that this was anything other than the normal use for immunity being granted, and that is against criminal prosecution.

SENATOR McCASKILL: And this was in a disciplinary proceeding within the judicial branch.

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: That's correct. And the rules of that proceeding require that he testify.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Right. And for the members of the committee, if you want to review the language of the immunity that was given to him, it is behind the green tab, for the immunized testimony provision. And it is behind tab number 8, and the language is set forth there on the first page behind tab 8, the language of the immunization that he was given. And it's very clear, against him in any criminal case except in a prosecution for perjury, making false statement, or failure to comply with this order.

SENATOR RISCH: Madam Chair, even if the -- that panel had attempted to, or purported to give that sort of immunity on behalf of this body, I don't see how -- I don't know what we are arguing about here. I mean, even if it said that, I don't think there is anybody here that would argue that the Constitution wouldn't allow anyone to give immunity that only this body could give.

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Senator Risch, I think that's a very good point. And think about this, if the Senate Judiciary Committee were hearing testimony regarding qualifications of somebody to be confirmed to a judicial appointment, and it came up that there had been prior immunized testimony about something he had been involved with, would the Senate forego the opportunity to consider that to determine whether he was fit to be placed on the bench?

I think that is probably the process and proceeding that is most analogous to what you are doing here. You're gathering information to make a determination whether he is fit to remain on the bench. And in doing so, you should have available to you, and assess the appropriate weight you think should be given to it, but have available to you all of the evidence that is relevant to the charges that he faces.

SENATOR HATCH: I just have to ask one question, because I'm a little confused here. Was the immunity granted, did that protect him in the state courts as well, or is it just immunity from Federal prosecution?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Here is the pertinent portion of the order related to the immunity.

"It's ordered in compliance with 18 U.S.C. Section 6002, 6003, and pursuant to 28 U.S.C. Section 353 that the witness, the Honorable G. Thomas Porteous, Jr., shall provide testimony and other information as to all matters about which he may be interrogated in a proceeding before or ancillary to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, and that no testimony or other information that he provides under this order, and no information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or other order shall be used against him in any criminal case, except in a prosecution for perjury, making a false statement, or failure to comply with this order."

SENATOR HATCH: So it appears to me that that covered Federal law, but it may not cover criminal case in state courts. But just one other question -- and I may be wrong in that, but that's the way I interpret it -- is the House making the blanket argument that the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination never applies in an impeachment proceeding?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: I would argue that the Senate, just as the rules -- this is an office of public trust. And the issue is not whether his liberty will be taken away from him or whether he will be given a fine. The issue here is whether he can continue to hold that office of public trust.

So both in the sense of prior testimony being admitted, and in the sense of compelling Judge Porteous to come before the Committee, just like the Senate Judiciary would compel a Justice nominee to come before the Committee to testify about their qualifications for the office, and answer for any question that might previously exist, I think the Senate has an absolute right to hear all of the facts and to compel Judge Porteous's testimony. And certainly his prior testimony.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Thank you, Congressman. We will reserve your five minutes for rebuttal. Mr. Turley?

ORAL ARGUMENT OF JONATHAN TURLEY

ON BEHALF OF JUDGE G. THOMAS PORTEOUS, JR.

MR. TURLEY: Thank you, Madam Chair. I would like to address a few things that the House has argued, and to correct what I believe is a fundamental misreading of both our argument and also the issue involved here.

Both sides of this case agree that at no time in the history of this Republic has the Senate ever allowed the introduction of immunized testimony against an accused judge. Never.

And when we talk about a new model of impeachment, we talk about the aggregation issue, and impeaching judges on pre-Federal conduct. This is one of those new issues. And I was concerned that this was being brushed over as, you know, somehow a triviality. I think the question that Senator Hatch asked was the most -- was right on point, when he said, are you saying that the Fifth Amendment will have no applicability in impeachment proceedings? And the House really didn't answer that question.

The answer is obvious. If you introduce immunized testimony in this case, of course it won't. Just as with aggregation, from this point on, the House will know it can do that. Well, how serious is that? It's quite serious. This is also the first case where the Senate is being asked to remove a Federal judge based on appearances of improprieties, he's not accused of kickbacks. The witnesses have said that didn't happen. He is not accused bribery. He is accused of -- SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: Before you get too far down this road, let's start with going back to Senator Risch's question, which is, I mean, you are presuming that the order of immunity actually purported to have any effect on a potential impeachment proceeding. It says by its terms, in any criminal case. Your client is not just a lawyer, he's a judge. He's capable of reading and understanding something as clear as "in any criminal case." Why do we look beyond that, on its face, it doesn't apply to an impeachment proceeding?

MR. TURLEY: Senator, what I would suggest is in three parts, if I may. One is when you said he can read it on its face. The way this actually happened is he appeared, and Judge Jones gave him an immunity order. He did not have counsel at that time. And while there's been criticism of my previous lead counsel, he stepped in pro bono to try to give him counsel, to his credit, and he tried very hard.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: But he is a Federal judge.

MR. TURLEY: Yes, but they gave him an immunity order, and did not give him time to even read it. They just simply said, this is the order. I would like to see any case that anyone has ever heard of where someone is given an immunity order minutes before they are told to get on the stand and start to testify.

When the House said he was given four months' notice. He didn't have four months' notice that he would be handed an immunity order right there, and said, you're going to testify now. He said -- at the time, he said, I want to have some time, so I can read this and talk to counsel, and the court said, basically, take the stand.

SENATOR JOHANNIS: With that said, isn't that a different argument than you are making?

Isn't that an argument that somehow this testimony was secured under duress or false pretenses or something. And you haven't -- that is not how you are attacking this; is that correct?

MR. TURLEY: Senator, that's a very good point. I was simply responding to the suggestion that he had a chance to read it, but I do believe that the issue that you are raising and also that Senator Whitehouse was raising is pertinent as well. First of all, the immunity grant in this case is identical to immunity grants that all of us deal with in criminal cases. There is nothing particularly unique about it. It's the language you have in immunity cases.

The Supreme Court has said that it is not limited to criminal proceedings. That it is supposed to be something that would extend to things that have a criminal nature. Now, the House said -- you know, I find this really remarkable, he is treating this as property. He is not treating this as property. He is treating this like his life.

The Supreme Court has said it applies to property. This is a lot more serious. We don't believe these things happened. We are going to be presenting evidence that these allegations are wrong, and the man is defending his life, his livelihood, his job, and his reputation. And what we said was not that this is property like a '69 Chevy. We are saying it's more important than property.

Now, the other problem that I have with the line of argument is, the question for the Senate is not simply whether it can require immunized testimony to be introduced, but whether it should.

And I would submit to you that this is a terrible mistake. I will deal with whatever this Committee decides, but I have to say that I know the Members of this Committee have a lot of members, all the members I believe care deeply about this institution.

I would submit to you that this is a terrible mistake and that it can cause great mischief, because what is going to happen, in my view, in the future, is that the House -- you combine this immunity issue with the fact that they are trying to remove a judge for basically appearances of impropriety.

That is, they are saying that he shouldn't have had relationships or accepted gifts from long time friends, okay? That is a standard that has never been applied to judges before. And there are judges very concerned about it. But under this standard, you can have a bait and switch; that is, you can have the judge pulled into a proceeding, forced to testify, give him immunity and told -- and if you read our filing, you will see the statements expressly told to him, saying, you know, this is going to protect you and your testimony. I know you don't like it, but you are going to have to testify.

If you allow that to happen, it's going to happen again, and you are going to have, in my view, a terrible convergence of new precedent.

SENATOR WICKER: Mr. Turley, the judge would have been guilty of contempt of court had he not taken the stand and answered questions; is that correct?

MR. TURLEY: Yes, he took the stand.

SENATOR WICKER: But he really had no choice in matter, did he?

MR. TURLEY: That's correct, Senator.

SENATOR WICKER: Now, let me get back to another point you made about the Supreme Court saying that the immunity affects other types of forums. Would this immunity prevent the information from being brought forth in a state court?

MR. TURLEY: I actually disagree, that I do believe it extends to state courts. I think that that's the general thrust of Federal cases.

SENATOR WICKER: So what other examples would there be, other than state court, where the immunity would apply?

MR. TURLEY: Well, what the Court said in cases like Lees is you look to see what is criminal in nature. And that's a fairly broad category, but it is not, I will admit, a well-defined category. They look at things that are criminal in the sense that they're confiscatory or that they're serious in terms of loss of property, loss of job.

It's the type of thing that you would lose if you were convicted of something. And what we've said here is that this is far greater than that. I mean, this is -- it's far greater not just for the accused, but also for this body. That is, if this body starts to say that effectively, we can strip you of your Fifth Amendment rights by just waiting for a previous proceeding.

And when the House refers, by the way, to these earlier cases like Clayburn, that was not immunized testimony. There has never been immunized testimony introduced.

That was testimony at the criminal trial, and there was not an objection in some of those cases. It came in as testimony that they had previously given. The House, I think, admits that this is the first time that they're saying we should introduce testimony, after an individual was told, you will testify, we are giving you immunity, so that it can't be used against you, and then use it against him for purposes of impeachment. Is it technically barred from an impeachment proceeding? We can debate that for a long time.

SENATOR McCASKILL: But there is no precedent to bar it.

MR. TURLEY: No --

SENATOR McCASKILL: And it is legally obtained evidence.

MR. TURLEY: No, I agree.

SENATOR McCASKILL: There is nothing illegal in the way that it was obtained.

MR. TURLEY: I agree.

SENATOR McCASKILL: There is two different issues as to whether or not we compel the testimony of Mr. Porteous at the hearing, and whether or not we admit his previous testimony that was obtained during a judicial proceeding within the judicial branch. And I would be interested for you to talk about the unique -- I know you are very aware of the unique nature of an impeachment, and what the Founders said about the unique nature of an impeachment, that it specifically was set out by the Founders as something that was not a criminal trial.

And, you know, I need you to help hone in on why a proceeding in another branch that we are trying to check obtained within that branch, legally, would not be admissible here. And then secondly, to hone in on compelling his testimony.

I assume you would have no problem if Judge Porteous took the stand, and we used his previous testimony -- it was used to impeach him. I assume you have no problem with that.

MR. TURLEY: Absolutely.

SENATOR McCASKILL: So the compelled testimony can be used to impeach his testimony if he takes the stand.

MR. TURLEY: I think impeachment rules are much, much broader. And I think we would have a much weaker argument in that sense. And I would like to address maybe two parts of your question.

First of all, your question alluded to the unique impeachment aspect. The thrust of our argument is that you shouldn't do this. Whether you could do it is really not as important as you shouldn't do it. And because it's going to create a terrible precedent. And what we are trying to point out is that this is the worst case for it, because you are looking at a case involving appearance of impropriety.

And so if you Look at the Framers. What James Madison said is he said that the impeachment clauses were meant to try to guarantee that judges do not feel that they are -- I'm paraphrasing -- serving at the pleasure of the Senate. That is, it was meant to give notice to the judges as a defendant to say, you know, you are protected, you have life tenure, and the Senate can't just strip courts.

What this case would do in combination with the immunity is saying, you can be removed on appearance of impropriety. We can even go back 25 years when you were a state judge, and remove you for things you did as a state judge. And on top of that, even though you didn't get a criminal trial, we could wait until you are pulled into a disciplinary proceeding, compelled to testify, and then use that testimony against you.

What I would suggest is that that is exactly what Madison didn't want to happen. Imagine if you are a Federal judge reading the result of your order, and you that the Senate is proceeding to not only deal with pre-Federal conduct going back decades, but appearance issues as the basis of removal. And on top of that, they have the ability to wait for you to be forced to testify in a disciplinary matter on something like an appearance, and then use your testimony against you.

What we have said in this case is we may put on Judge Porteous at the trial. We haven't decided. To be honest, one of the great limitations is time. I have to, and my colleagues have to convince you that these allegations are untrue. We actually believe we can do that. We have very good witnesses lined up.

If we put Judge Porteous on the stand, it will eat a whole day of our time, but we have to make that calculus. That is a calculus that is often made. What we don't want is for compelled testimony to be used both in principle and in practice.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: Do you see a difference between using the testimony, which I actually think is fine, and I know you don't agree, on then us compelling the judge to come before this panel. Do you see a difference, like do you think you have a stronger argument on the second one? And what is the difference?

MR. TURLEY: Well, Senator, I actually think they are both equally strong. I agree with you that there are differences. I can't imagine the Senate ordering an accused to appear and testify. I think that would shock the conscience of the bar, and it would shock the conscience of this institution. It has never been done before. But I also believe the use of immunized testimony in this way would equally shock the conscience.

If the House is ready to present their witnesses that our client did something that was removable, let them present the witnesses. What the House just said is, we want to present it from his own mouth. Why shouldn't you hear things from his own mouth? Well, that argument would gut the Fifth Amendment, why not argue that in all cases? Isn't it always better to hear evidence from somebody's own mouth? That's the point.

SENATOR RISCH: Mr. Turley, let me stop you just a second, so I can ask you a question. You know, maybe you could direct your argument to the fact that we have in front of us an immunity that is crystal clear, as Senator Whitehouse pointed out, and as he read it to us.

Assume for a moment that this panel is not going to buy into the argument that the English language in this particular immunity is so clear that a common burglar could have understood it, let alone a district judge. Assume for a moment that we find that it is crystal clear and it applied only to use in a criminal proceeding, not in this proceeding.

Is it your argument that if we find against you on that, that we still should not allow this testimony to come in, and if so, how do you reach to that conclusion?

MR. TURLEY: Thank you, Senator. That is, in fact, our argument, that even if you conclude that you can do this, you should not do it. And when you say that even a burglar can understand this, Judge Porteous understood it, and even their witnesses say that he was a brilliant judge. He understood it. The question is, what did he understand?

As a criminal defense attorney, I would understand a grant of immunity as defined by the Supreme Court in Lees that says it is not limited to criminal proceedings. It includes things that are criminal in nature. It includes things where your property is at stake. I would actually put this above any of those earlier cases like Lees. But putting aside that argument, the question still remains, what does this body do to that standard if it starts to force testimony -- immunized testimony to be used?

SENATOR RISCH: Well, if we find against you on that, and determine that this grant of immunity does not apply in this, it's gone, it's out the window, it's as if it did not exist. In which case, all we have is his testimony, forget about any immunization. Why shouldn't we be able to use that testimony, given those circumstances?

MR. TURLEY: Well, I would say, Senator, that even if you believe that the immunity agreement is not binding on the Senate, we talked today repeatedly about the question of fairness, that this body has always tried to be fair, and that that is reflected in the fact that of 14 judicial impeachments, you have declined to remove seven of those judges.

You have, in fact, repeatedly rejected the majority of articles presented by the House have been rejected. This body has created, in my view, an amazing record of fairness. I believe that this would be grossly unfair. The question is not whether --

SENATOR RISCH: Why is it unfair? If he got up and told the truth and laid out some facts, it seems to me it would be eminently fair to him and to us for us to consider his sworn testimony of the facts.

MR. TURLEY: Senator, what I would say is that one of the touchstones of our legal system, and the legal system that we inherited from England is that people should not be forced to give testimony against themselves. They should have that choice. They should have the choice of taking the stand and speaking as to their innocence or guilt. And it goes against that very core premise.

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: So if he testified in a civil case under no immunity whatsoever, you would be here making that argument, you'd be saying, no, he was giving testimony against himself, you can't use it?

MR. TURLEY: No, Senator, if he gave testimony in a formal proceeding, just like a trial

SENATOR WHITEHOUSE: And now we're back to the immunity. And we're back again to Senator Risch's question. You can't have it both ways.

MR. TURLEY: I would like to think I am not having it both ways, because what I view is one proceeding where he did not want to testify and was forced to testify, and one where he voluntarily went into a court of law, raised his hand, and gave testimony. I think there is a material difference, and there is a material difference in the law.

I mean, the Fifth Amendment is not just some type of defense trick or precious issue. It's a principle.

SENATOR McCASKILL: What about this, you've talked about the precedent and -- what about the message it sends to other judges? That all they have to do is get an immunity grant in front of a judicial proceeding, and then they can rest assured that nothing they say would ever be used to impeach them? What about that problem with public policy and the message that sends to other Federal judges?

MR. TURLEY: Madam Chair, what I would suggest is that it does not send a troubling message, in the sense that the judges would be aware that they could be forced to testify in front of a judicial proceeding. And they would have to testify truthfully. They could still be prosecuted for perjury. This is not a get out of jail free card. You could be prosecuted for perjury if you lie under oath. What I would suggest --

SENATOR McCASKILL: Aren't they going to run to the judicial proceedings, request immunity, and then know they've got a get out of jail free card in terms of being impeached by the United States Senate?

MR. TURLEY: I don't know of any judges that are going to run to a disciplinary proceeding as a whole, but I have to say --

SENATOR McCASKILL: If they've engaged in conduct that they thought could be impeachable, I would see that they would. Couldn't they turn themselves in, and say, I want to come in front of the disciplinary committee of this circuit, and I would like them to give me immunity, because I believe that there is something that needs to be discussed. And they get immunity and at that point in time, based on the precedent that we might set here, that that information could never be used by the United States Senate?

MR. TURLEY: I would submit that this case stands for the proposition that it doesn't protect you, in the sense, we are just debating about the use of the testimony. They went ahead and impeached him. He is still going to stand trial.

SENATOR McCASKILL: I understand, but it would be a way of keeping that -- his testimony out. If we don't compel him to testify, and we say that his prior testimony in front of the disciplinary committee can not be admitted, even though it was legally obtained, then haven't we set a precedent, a road map, if you will, for future judges to avoid what they say in front of the disciplinary committee ever being used against them in impeachment?

MR. TURLEY: I don't see the material advantage to that, but what I would say, Senator, is that the purpose of giving immunity in those proceedings is to say we are not here about criminally charging you. What we are here about is to find out what you did, and we are going to give you immunity. Now --

SENATOR McCASKILL: By the way, that's what we are here for, too.

MR. TURLEY: Yes, that's true, but that's not -- that's not something that has happened a great deal, but I think that this body is materially different from a judicial disciplinary proceeding.

SENATOR KAUFMAN: How are they different?

MR. TURLEY: Well, because this body has the burden that was given to it by people like James Madison.

SENATOR KAUFMAN: But wasn't -- basically, we are facing the same -- do you see any problem with forcing him to give immunity for the judicial board that he's meeting before, do you see any problem with forcing him to testify and giving him immunity?

MR. TURLEY: I personally think that they should not force judges to testify.

SENATOR KAUFMAN: But -- so you would argue that that shouldn't happen either.

MR. TURLEY: Yes, but I don't question that they can do that. But the distinction I would draw, Senator, is that this body is not like -- the disciplinary panel is dealing with a judicial ethics code that changes every single year.

SENATOR KAUFMAN: No, I understand. But it's closer to -- it's not a criminal -- I think it's closer to that. I generally think it is closer to that than it is to a criminal case. I mean, a criminal case, you are getting somebody off the street, you are grabbing them, and you're saying, we are going to take in and try you.

In this case, you have somebody who is working for you, doing a job, and you are going to see whether they are doing the job right. And based on that, you're going to make certain decisions. Isn't our job really much closer to that than it is to the job of a criminal case?

MR. TURLEY: Senator, I would say it is closer, as Lees indicates, to the types of criminal nature proceedings that was described in Lees, but there is one big difference, whether we treat it as criminal or criminal nature or civil, the cases may be analogous, but you are not. You are different. You have the added burden given to you by people like James Madison who told you, we don't want you to change the rules.

We don't want you to make it so easy to strip a court of a judge. And if you add the aggregation of claims plus the appearance of impropriety basis and you add to that, that you can use immunized testimony for the first time in this country's history, then you have --

SENATOR KAUFMAN: I have that. But aren't we really just like the Fifth Circuit committee, and what the Fifth Circuit committee was trying to get at, was he engaging in an argument that was -- he was engaging in something that was bad, should not be done, and isn't that what we are trying to do, too? I don't see this as being like a criminal case, I see this -- or a civil case. I see this as kind of like an employment case, where you have somebody working for you, and you are trying to figure out whether they are doing a good job or not.

And you ask them, okay, look, if you want to keep your job, you have got to come and testify and you got to submit to immunity, or you lose the job. And so it seems to me that is very different. Because when you first started, I was very concerned about the Fifth Amendment thing, but I don't think this is anywhere analogous -- not close to that. I think it's more a situation where we are is where the Fifth Circuit was.

MR. TURLEY: Well, obviously, I should have sat down at the beginning, but what would I argue that it's not like an employment case, in the sense that --

SENATOR KAUFMAN: Excuse me. It's like the Fifth Circuit.

MR. TURLEY: What I would distinguish is that the Fifth Circuit's role and function was completed, the Fifth Circuit sanctioned him for an appearance of impropriety. He has been punished for the appearance of impropriety. He had been punished pretty heavily, and he admitted to it. And that was the function of it, but what is happening here is that same allegation is now being elevated to a removable offense.

SENATOR KAUFMAN: But they made a judgment. Their judgment was that he had done something wrong. Therefore, the process that they used to get there seems to be -- we just have the ability to make a higher sanction, but basically what we are trying to get at seems to me is very -- if not identical, very similar, and I really think it's much different than a criminal or civil --

SENATOR HATCH: Mr. Turley, let me just add to that. The Supreme Court has held that the privilege against self-incrimination does not extend to consequences of a noncriminal nature, including loss of employment. I think that's the Applebaum case. Judge Porteous faces only noncriminal consequences in this instance, which is limited to loss of his office as a Federal judge. Now, why is that not enough to conclude that the privilege against self-incrimination does really not apply here?

MR. TURLEY: Senator Hatch, what I would suggest is two-fold. One is, we are not talking just about a higher sanction. You are not here just to impose tougher punishment.

SENATOR HATCH: Right.

MR. TURLEY: You are here to impose a higher standard, that's the constitutional standard with a unique function, and what would I would suggest about the view of the noncriminal nature of this proceeding --

SENATOR HATCH: But in your filings, you cite Supreme Court precedent that the Fifth Amendment applies in some civil proceedings, you cite the Lees cases, for example, which involved a civil penalty for violating an act of Congress, and in the Boyd case, involved civil forfeiture of a person's property. Now, aren't these very different than this case, which involves impeachment, where the sanctions are not personal, but they are official, limited to removal and possible disqualification from office.

MR. TURLEY: I would say that they are different, but I would say that this is more serious. What this body is thinking of doing is for only the eighth time in the history of this country removing a Federal judge and stripping him of his Article III powers.

SENATOR HATCH: We take our obligations very seriously here, and especially with regard to Federal judges. The House argues that the judicial impeachment proceeding is more like a judicial disciplinary proceeding than a civil forfeiture proceeding. Now, the events that brought us here today actually include such a judicial disciplinary proceeding before the Fifth Circuit. Now, how is a civil forfeiture proceeding a closer analogy to judicial impeachment than a judicial disciplinary proceeding?

MR. TURLEY: Well, first of all, what I would submit is that if you read the statements of James Madison during the Constitutional Convention, and if you can imagine putting yourself in Philadelphia and telling James Madison, isn't it basically like a judicial disciplinary proceeding, I expect, if you read his statements, the answer would be clear.

Judicial disciplinary proceedings deal with a whole range of everything from the minute to a very serious act of misconduct. And they have rules that reflect the fact that they have a broad spectrum of issues with different standards. What Madison and the Framers repeatedly emphasized is they don't want that type of fluidity to apply to Federal judges. What I would submit to you, Madam Chair, is that I am much more concerned about the message going to Federal judges.

SENATOR HATCH: Our Senate impeachment proceedings are very important to us. The Senate voted 92-1 to deny Judge Hastings' motion that the Fifth Amendment's double jeopardy clause applies to impeachment proceedings. Now, are you arguing that the Senate should come to a different conclusion about the self-incrimination clause than it did with regard to the double jeopardy clause?

MR. TURLEY: Yes, I am, Senator Hatch.

SENATOR HATCH: That's what --

MR. TURLEY: I think the double jeopardy clause argument was a bit of a stretch, quite frankly. I didn't really see the merits of that argument.

SENATOR HATCH: Well, I agree with that.

MR. TURLEY: I should quickly sit down, since we're in accord. But I would push it a little further, and that is to say that the difference between what we are arguing and what they argued is we are not just arguing that the Fifth Amendment binds you. We are arguing more that the privilege underneath the Fifth Amendment --

SENATOR HATCH: You're arguing about setting a principle that you think would be a bad principle.

MR. TURLEY: Yes, and that principle.

SENATOR HATCH: You're not really arguing that we can't do it.

MR. TURLEY: Well, we do argue that there is a position -- there is a question whether it should bind you. As you raised in the question, I don't believe the Fifth Amendment is a stranger to impeachment proceedings. But what I'm saying is that this body should first focus on the principle of the privilege that extends way beyond the history of this Republic. And I would suggest that that principle should motivate the outcome in this motion.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Thank you, Mr. Turley, and we will now hear the final rebuttal argument of five minutes from the House manager.

REBUTTAL ARGUMENT OF CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE

ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Thank you, Madam Chairman. First, let me say that with regard to Professor Turley's first argument that never has immunized testimony been admitted in impeachment cases before. Well, there is a reason for that. Never has it been requested to enter immunized impeachment. And I am aware of no impeachment process where this was ever even an issue.

Now, I think it's very important when we talk about principles and not establishing bad precedent that we honor the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution as the Fifth Circuit did.

SENATOR WICKER: Mr. Goodlatte?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Yes, sir.

SENATOR WICKER: Could we require this judge to come forward and testify before these proceedings?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: I think you could, and I think that --

SENATOR WICKER: Do you think that would shock the conscience of the nation as Mr. Turley suggested?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: No, particularly not if you gave him, again, immunity against criminal prosecution as the Fifth Amendment requires. This is not a criminal proceeding. This is a fact-finding activity to determine whether or not he should be removed from office. And then to make a recommendation to the full Senate which would then vote on that.

And you should have available all of the information just as the Fifth Circuit requires in their rules. It says all persons who are believed to have substantial information will be called at a special committee of witnesses, including the complainant and the subject judge. The witnesses may be questioned by the special committee or its counsel.

The subject judge will be afforded the opportunity to cross-examine committee witnesses personally or through counsel. That's the rule. It's not, you can choose whether or not you want to appear. They gave him immunity against criminal prosecution. They honored his Fifth Amendment right against testifying against himself in a criminal matter.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: Is there precedent, though, for us compelling someone. Has this happened before, where we have compelled a judge to appear before the Senate?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: The House has argued that both the House and the Senate have the right to compel various government witnesses to appear before Senate and House bodies. Not in an impeachment case like this, but in other cases, where the House and Senate have wanted to determine information that is of importance to them. And when they have done so, they have often granted immunity to the individual against criminal prosecution in the process of doing so.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: But they haven't compelled one of these judges to appear in an impeachment hearing like this?

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: Not that I am aware of, Senator Klobuchar, but again, I think that it is something that you have an absolute right to do. And it certainly should relate to a situation where he was extended added benefits, not, you know, he was -- this was not a Star Chamber that took place at the Fifth Circuit special committee.

SENATOR KLOBUCHAR: But if we chose not to compel him, let's just say we decided that we didn't need that, we had other evidence, it's not like we are setting a precedent that we can't.

CONGRESSMAN GOODLATTE: No, that's correct, but you also should admit this evidence. Now, I want to comment on another thing that Senator Johanns alluded to earlier. And that is the counsel for Judge Porteous keeps referring to this as just a case about the appearances of impropriety. And I like Senator Johanns and Senator Hatch and number of others of you have already sat through hours and hours and hours of testimony on this. And this case is about far, far more than just the appearance of impropriety. I won't go into the evidence today, but the evidence will reflect that.

But if you rule in favor of Judge Porteous on excluding his own testimony, depriving yourself of some of the most critical evidence here, you will also afford the judge the opportunity to refashion his arguments. In his testimony before the Fifth Circuit, he argued -- he acknowledged that markers used in gambling are debts.

In the argument that they have made before this Committee on one of their motions, they have begun to argue now that they are not debts. So the fact of the matter is, his full record of his testimony should be available to you, to not only impeach his testimony, if he does testify, but also so that you have the full picture in his voice of what took place, and so that he is not allowed in this process to recast what he told the Fifth Circuit when they did indeed discipline him.

Now, when they disciplined him, it is not as Judge Shirley said, the end of the matter for the judiciary. It was sent up to the full Fifth Circuit, they then sent it to the Judicial Conference of the United States, which reviewed this very due process argument, and then forwarded the case to the House of Representatives for consideration of impeachment. That's the full role and that's the full panoply of remedies that the judiciary has in dealing with judges that they think have gone astray.

It's not just that he was reprimanded for an appearance of impropriety. They thought this should come all the way here. And I don't believe that when they sent that to the House of Representatives, when they delivered that package to Speaker Pelosi's office that they intended that the House could consider this, but the Senate could not.

I think that this is something that is very clearly within your jurisdiction, and I would urge you to admit this prior immunized testimony. And I thank you.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Anyone else? Okay. Thank you all very much. Let me make a couple of statements here on the record. First, as to this final -- we are going to go into a closed session now. And that is required by the rules. But I want to make sure that before we do that, I want to talk about this last motion hearing that we just had. You know, the Committee must vote on these immunity requests today in order to have it processed before the evidentiary hearing in September.

Having said that, this Committee will only act on a formal request in the record by any party. The House has indicated in their most recent filing, they may seek to call Judge Porteous. However, they are not formally requesting immunity for Judge Porteous.

It would appear that Judge Porteous's counsel wants immunity for Judge Porteous if he chooses to testify, even voluntarily, but they are not making a formal request of the Committee for immunity for Judge Porteous. Without a formal request by either party, the Committee will not vote on those matters or make a decision in regard to those matters.

So if either party has a specific request they have, they need to make it formally as it relates to the granting of immunity or the not granting of immunity, as the case may be. But we will go ahead and rule today on the motions that are in front of us. Let me put the formal information in the record.

I would like to thank all of you for your time today and for your presentation. We will not issue our rulings today. We will deliberate and hopefully decide today. I think it is important that we try to get this done, since you all need certainty as you plan for the trial in September. The rules and practices of the Senate when sitting on impeachment trials require that the Senate, and in this case, the Committee go into closed session for purposes of deliberating on motions.

Therefore, I do hear a motion under the Senate impeachment rule 20, and rule 24, that the Committee go into closed session for the purpose of deliberation.

SENATOR KAUFMAN: Thank you.

SENATOR McCASKILL: Is there a second?

If there is not any discussion? If so, all in favor say, "Aye."

[Chorus of ayes.]

SENATOR McCASKILL: Opposed, nay? The ayes have it, the motion is agreed to. The Committee will now continue in closed session. At this time, we would request that everyone leave the room. We will take a brief break and be back in two minutes, while the Capitol Police clear the room.

[Whereupon, the instant proceedings were recessed at 3:35 p.m.]

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

Wednesday, August 4, 2010

With due notice, the Committee held a pre-trial motions hearing to receive arguments on several issues. As a preliminary matter, the Committee granted Judge Porteous's outstanding motion to withdraw attorneys Samuel Dalton and Remy V. Starns from his defense team. The Committee then heard arguments on the issue of whether the aggregation of multiple allegations in a single article of impeachment is unconstitutional. Next, the Committee heard arguments on the issue of whether transcripts and records from prior judicial and congressional proceedings should be admitted. Finally, the Committee heard arguments on the issue of whether Judge Porteous's previously immunized testimony before the Fifth Circuit Special Investigatory Committee should be admitted. Forty minutes, evenly divided between each side, were allocated for the argument of each issue.

Following the arguments, the full Committee deliberated in closed session on the motions before it.

It was moved, seconded, and agreed to by ten of the twelve Members present that the Committee deny Judge Porteous's motion to dismiss the articles of impeachment as unconstitutionally aggregated.

It was moved, seconded, and unanimously agreed to that the Committee grant in part and deny in part the House of Representatives motion to admit transcripts and records from prior judicial and congressional proceedings. More specifically, the Committee voted to deem admissible any properly designated portions of testimony before the Judicial Council of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit and the hearings before the House Judiciary Committee Task Force on Judicial Impeachment. The Committee voted to deny the admission of any testimony that was not subject to cross examination by Judge Porteous, which includes both House Task Force depositions and grand jury testimony.

It was moved, seconded, and agreed to by eleven of the twelve Members present that the Committee admit Judge Porteous's previously immunized testimony for its probative value.

It was moved, seconded, and unanimously agreed to that the Committee deny the House's outstanding subpoena request for Judge Porteous. The Committee reserved the right to call Judge Porteous as a witness at the upcoming evidentiary hearings.

Finally, the Committee unanimously adopted three resolutions directing the Senate Legal Counsel to apply to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia for three immunity orders: one for Rhonda Danos, one for Bruce Netterville, and one for Leonard Levenson. The orders will immunize any testimony Danos, Netterville or Levenson may give as witnesses before the Committee or the full Senate from use in prosecutions other than for perjury, giving a false statement or otherwise failing to comply with the court order.

SENATE IMPEACHMENT TRIAL COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, DC 20510-6326

DISPOSITION OF PRE-TRIAL MOTIONS

On August 4, 2010, the Committee heard oral argument on the following five pre-trial matters:

- (1) Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s Motion to Dismiss the Articles of Impeachment as Unconstitutionally Aggregated; or, in the Alternative, to Require Voting on the Specific Allegations of Impeachable Conduct;
- (2) The House of Representative's Notice of Intent to Introduce at Trial Judge Porteous's Testimony Before the Fifth Circuit Special Committee;
- (3) Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s Motion to Exclude the Use of His Previously Immunized Testimony;
- (4) The House of Representative's Motion to Admit Transcripts and Records from Prior Judicial and Congressional Proceedings; and
- (5) Judge G. Thomas Porteous, Jr.'s Motion to Exclude Prior Testimony and Limit the Presentation of Testimonial Evidence to Live Witnesses.

Thereafter, the Committee deliberated in closed session pursuant to Rules XX and XXIV of the Rules of Procedure and Practice in the Senate When Sitting on Impeachment Trials ("Impeachment Rules"). The Committee hereby (1) denies, and declines to refer to the full Senate, Judge Porteous's motion to dismiss; (2) grants the House's request to introduce Judge Porteous's prior immunized testimony; (3) denies Judge Porteous's motion to exclude the use of his immunized testimony; (4) grants in part and denies in part the House's motion to admit transcripts and records from prior proceedings; and (5) grants in part and denies in part Judge Porteous's motion to exclude testimony from prior proceedings. These rulings are made pursuant to Impeachment Rule XI, which states that the Committee proceedings are "subject to the right of the Senate to determine competency, relevancy and materiality . . . but nothing herein shall prevent the Senate from sending for any witness and hearing his testimony in open Senate, or by order of the Senate having the entire trial in open Senate."¹

Impeachment trial proceedings in general, and disposition of these motions in particular, involve some important considerations. First, the purpose, design, and operation of the impeachment trial process differ in fundamental respects from the criminal trial process. Our nation's founders saw impeachment "as a legislative rather than judicial process."² As Alexander Hamilton stated, impeachable offenses "proceed from . . . the abuse or violation of some public trust. They are of a nature which may with peculiar propriety be denominated POLITICAL, as they relate chiefly to injuries done immediately to the society itself."³

To that end, the Constitutional Convention rejected proposals providing for impeachment and removal of public officials by the judiciary, choosing instead to give the sole power to impeach and to try impeachments, respectively, to the House and the Senate.⁴ The Constitution's text reflects this purpose in several ways. It excludes familiar hallmarks of criminal proceedings such as trial by jury,⁵ a unanimous verdict requirement for conviction,⁶ and the possibility of a presidential pardon.⁷ It limits both the persons who may be impeached⁸ and the possible sanctions upon conviction,⁹ and it expressly provides that an impeached officer may be indicted and tried in a separate criminal proceeding.¹⁰ In short, "the Framers did not intend to obligate the Senate to replicate all features of a judicial trial."¹¹ Because of the limited nature of impeachment, the Senate historically has never utilized all of the legal strictures of a criminal trial.

Second, Impeachment Rule XI authorizes the Committee only to "receive evidence and take testimony."¹² As such, only the full Senate may grant a dispositive motion such as a motion to dismiss. The Committee, therefore, lacks jurisdiction to grant a motion to dismiss and may only deny or refer such a motion to the full Senate for consideration.

MOTION TO DISMISS ARTICLES AS UNCONSTITUTIONALLY AGGREGATED

On March 4, 2010, the House unanimously voted to adopt four Articles of Impeachment against Judge Porteous.¹³ Judge Porteous moves to dismiss each Article as unconstitutionally aggregating multiple acts.

Judge Porteous argues that the Articles, as drafted, violate the constitutional requirements that two-thirds of the Senate agree on whether he should be convicted of an impeachable offense in two ways. First, he contends that alleging multiple acts in a single article allows two-thirds of Senators to convict on that article even though less than two-thirds of Senators agree that any individual act is impeachable. Second, he argues that permitting votes on aggregated articles allows Senators to find that the aggregation of the acts, but none of the individual acts themselves, is impeachable. The House opposes Judge Porteous's motion on the basis that the aggregation of allegations does not violate the Constitution, which grants the House substantial discretion in drafting and framing articles of impeachment, and that each Article describes a single scheme or course of conduct supporting removal from office.

The Committee's decision to deny without referral to the full Senate Judge Porteous's motion is consistent with Senate impeachment trial precedent. Judge Porteous points to the impeachment trials of Judges Robert W. Archbald and Halsted L. Ritter to argue that some Senators have disfavored the use of aggregated articles of impeachment. This, however, was not the adopted view in either instance as both judges were convicted on the aggregated articles.¹⁴

More recently, during the Senate vote on the Articles of Impeachment against Judge Alcee L. Hastings, a parliamentary inquiry was made asking, "To find Guilty on this article, does one have to agree with each for the four allegations?" The President Pro Tempore of the Senate responded,

This is for each Senator to determine in his own mind and in his own conscience and in accordance with his oath that he will do impartial justice under the Constitution and law. It is the Chair's opinion, if the Senator in his own conscience and based on the facts as he understands them determines that, on any one of the paragraphs, Judge Alcee L. Hastings has undermined confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary and betrayed the trust of the people of the United States, he should vote accordingly.¹⁵

In declining to refer this motion to the full Senate, this Committee also looks to the impeachment of Judge Walter L. Nixon, Jr. There, Judge Nixon similarly moved to dismiss an impeachment article based on the aggregation of multiple allegations. The Nixon committee declined to refer the motion for two reasons. First, it recognized that the House has substantial discretion in drafting articles of impeachment.¹⁶ Second, the Nixon committee evaluated the article challenged in its proceeding based on whether it (1) gave fair notice of the contours of the charges against the judge and (2) contained an intelligible, essential accusation, thus providing a fair basis for conducting the evidentiary proceedings.¹⁷ The Committee adopts this standard because it is persuasive and not in conflict with the Constitution.

Each of the four Articles against Judge Porteous meets the Nixon standard. Article I alleges judicial misconduct and intentionally misleading statements related to his financial relationship with attorneys Jacob Amato, Jr. and Robert Creely. Article II alleges a corrupt scheme with Louis and Lori Marcotte, the owners of a bail bond business. Article III alleges material false statements and representations under penalty of perjury in Judge Porteous's personal bankruptcy filing. Finally, Article IV alleges material false statements made to obtain Judge Porteous's appointment to the federal bench. The Committee concludes that each Article provides Judge Porteous with fair notice of the contours of the charges against him and makes clear, intelligible allegations. As such, each Article constitutes a fair basis for conducting the evidentiary proceedings.

Furthermore, the Impeachment Rules do not permit Judge Porteous's suggestion that the Senate vote separately on the individual impeachable allegations within each Article. Impeachment Rule XXIII states that an article of impeachment "shall not be divisible for the purpose of voting thereon at any time during the trial."¹⁸ Consequently, the Committee denies Judge Porteous's motion to dismiss and declines to refer it to the full Senate.

USE OF JUDGE PORTEOUS'S PRIOR IMMUNIZED TESTIMONY

On October 29, 2007, Judge Porteous gave testimony, under immunity, before the Special Investigative Committee of the Judicial Council of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit (the "Fifth Circuit") regarding allegations of judicial misconduct. The order compelling and immunizing his testimony, signed by Chief Judge Edith H. Jones, stated that "no testimony or other information that Judge Porteous provides under this order and no information directly or indirectly derived from such testimony or other information shall be used against him in any criminal case, except in a prosecution for perjury, making a false statement, or failure to comply with this order." The House used Judge Porteous's testimony in its impeachment proceedings and intends to use the testimony in the Committee's evidentiary hearings. Judge Porteous moves to exclude this immunized testimony from use before the Senate.¹⁹

The use of prior immunized testimony of an impeached officer in an impeachment trial is an issue of first impression for the Senate. The parties raise two issues regarding the use of immunized testimony: (1) whether the Fifth Amendment guarantee that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself" precludes the use of Judge Porteous's immunized testimony as evidence in impeachment trial proceedings; and, if not, (2) whether compelling prudential reasons nonetheless justify excluding the immunized testimony.

The Committee concludes that Judge Porteous's impeachment trial is not a "criminal case," and therefore, the use of his prior immunized testimony is not barred by either the Fifth ¹⁷ Nixon Report, supra note 16.

¹⁸ Rules of Procedure and Practice in the Senate When Sitting on Impeachment Trials, Rule XXIII.

¹⁹ Judge Porteous also filed suit in the U.S. District Court to enjoin use of his immunized testimony in the House impeachment proceedings. The court dismissed the case, holding that the "Speech and Debate Clause protects the independence and autonomy of the Legislative Branch from judicial intrusion Judicial restraint and comity dictate that this Court refrain from any interference with ongoing proceedings in the Senate." Porteous v. Buron, No. 18 Civ. 09-2131 (RJL) (D.D.C. August 2, 2010).

Circuit's immunity order or the Fifth Amendment.²⁰ This is consistent with Senate precedent regarding the Fifth Amendment's Double Jeopardy Clause. In his impeachment trial, Judge Hastings moved to dismiss the articles of impeachment because, he argued, the Double Jeopardy Clause barred impeachment for the same conduct on which he had been acquitted in a criminal trial. By a 92-1 vote, the Senate denied the motion.²¹ Both the arguments made by Judge Hastings regarding the application of the Double Jeopardy Clause and by Judge Porteous regarding the application of the Self-Incrimination Clause would require concluding that an impeachment trial is a "criminal case" under the Constitution. As explained above, it is not. Therefore, the Fifth Amendment's privilege against self-incrimination does not bar use of Judge Porteous's immunized testimony.

With regard to whether the Senate should exclude this testimony for prudential or policy reasons, the pertinent factors weigh in favor of permitting its use. The immunized testimony was lawfully compelled and obtained by the judiciary in the Fifth Circuit's disciplinary proceedings. The evidentiary record including this testimony was sent to the Judicial Conference of the United States, which unanimously voted to transmit it to the House of Representatives for impeachment consideration. Each Senator should have the opportunity to review Judge Porteous's prior testimony and accord it whatever weight may be appropriate.

The Committee grants the House's motion to use Judge Porteous's prior immunized testimony and denies Judge Porteous's motion to exclude it.²² The full Senate may choose to re-examine this issue as it "determine[s] competency, relevancy and materiality."²³

USE OF EVIDENCE FROM PRIOR PROCEEDINGS

The House and Judge Porteous filed cross motions on the admission of testimony and transcripts from prior judicial and congressional proceedings. The House requests that the complete evidentiary records of the Fifth Circuit judicial disciplinary proceedings and the House Impeachment Task Force ("House Task Force") hearings, as well as all related documentary evidence admitted into the record of those proceedings, be deemed admissible. The House argues that these transcripts include sworn testimony which is part of the public record and will assist the Committee in the evidentiary hearings.

Judge Porteous seeks to exclude all prior testimony, except for use to impeach the credibility of a testifying witness. His request encompasses the federal grand jury proceedings, the Fifth Circuit proceedings, as well as the House Task Force depositions and hearings. Judge Porteous argues that the testimony and transcripts should be excluded because he was not afforded the same Sixth Amendment and due process protections at these proceedings that he would have had in a criminal trial.

As explained above, a Senate impeachment trial proceeding is fundamentally different from a criminal proceeding. As such, Judge Porteous's argument that he should receive the ²⁰ No court has addressed this issue in the context of an impeachment proceeding, but the Supreme Court has held that "the privilege [against self-incrimination] does not extend to consequences of a noncriminal nature, such as threats of liability in civil suits, disgrace in the community, or the loss of employment." See United States v. Apfelbaum, 445 U.S. 115, 125 (1980). As noted above, the Constitution limits the consequences of impeachment and conviction to removal and disqualification from public office, which are clearly of a non-criminal nature.

²¹ Hastings Proceedings, supra note 15, at 53-54.

identical Sixth Amendment and other protections as required in a criminal trial is as unavailing as his argument under the Fifth Amendment's Self-Incrimination Clause.

The Committee's decision to allow use of evidence from prior proceedings is consistent with precedent. The Senate has allowed the admission of prior testimony in other impeachment trial proceedings, including in the impeachment trials of Judge Harry E. Claiborne, Judge Nixon, and Judge Hastings. The committees in those proceedings admitted testimony that had been subject to the opportunity for cross examination. The Claiborne committee admitted select transcripts from Judge Claiborne's second criminal trial.²⁴ The Nixon committee admitted all testimony and exhibits from Judge Nixon's criminal proceeding, as well as all testimony and exhibits admitted in the House impeachment proceeding.²⁵ The Hastings committee also admitted prior testimony that had been subject to cross examination and noted that admitting the prior testimony of witnesses did not preclude calling those witnesses to testify at the committee's evidentiary hearings.²⁶

Permitting the use of prior testimony in which Judge Porteous has had the opportunity for cross examination strikes the appropriate balance between providing fair process for Judge Porteous and giving the Senate access to relevant evidence. Judge Porteous cross examined witnesses in both the Fifth Circuit proceedings and House Task Force hearings but did not have the opportunity to cross examine witnesses in the federal grand jury proceedings or in the House Task Force depositions. The Senate should have the benefit of the sworn testimony from the proceedings that led up to the Senate impeachment trial. Admitting such prior testimony will aid in the deliberations by the full Senate as it weighs the relevance and probative value of the evidence.

²⁶ Report of the Senate Impeachment Trial Committee on the Articles Against Judge Alcee Hastings, S. Hrg. 101-194, pt. 2a at 62 (1989).

Therefore, the Committee grants the House's motion with respect to testimony from the Fifth Circuit and the House Impeachment Task Force hearings, and denies the motion without prejudice as to all related documentary exhibits admitted into the record in those proceedings. The Committee will rule separately on these exhibits should they be offered in the evidentiary hearings. The Committee denies Judge Porteous's motion to exclude prior testimony from the Fifth Circuit proceedings and House Task Force hearings and grants his motion regarding the grand jury testimony and House Impeachment Task Force deposition transcripts.
